THE PREFACE.

THE Reign of Queen ANNE is ſo full of Memorable Events, that it highly deſerves the Attention both of the preſent Age, and of Poſterity: And having, during the whole Courſe of it, and ſome Years after, with no ſmall Induſtry, Labour, and Expence, collected Materials towards a Regular Hiſtory of that remarkable Period of Time, I, at laſt, attempted that great Work, which, with GOD's Bleſſing, I have now brought to a Concluſion.

I SHALL not amuſe the Readers with an Encomium on the Excellence and Uſefulneſs of HISTORY, nor tell them how much the Knowledge of Things paſt is entertaining and inſtructive: This common Topick has already been exhauſted, both by the Ancients (a) and the Moderns: And to go about to convince People of a Truth, which no body denies, were altogether impertinent.

(a) Tully, among others, ſpeaks in the Praiſe of Hiſtory, in this manner:

HISTORIA verò teſtis temporum, lux veritatis, vita memoriæ, magiſtra vitæ, nuntia vetuſtatis, quâ voce aliâ, niſi Oratoris, immortalitati commendatur? Cicero, De Oratore Lib. 2. Cap. 9.

------ Et quod Hiſtoria delectet, quam ſolemus perſequi uſque ad extremum; prætermiſſa repetimus, inchoata perſequimur. Nec verò ſum inſcius eſſe utilitatem in Hiſtoriâ, non modò voluptatem. Quid, cùm fictas fabulas, è quibus utilitas nulla elici poteſt, cum voluptate legimus? Quid, cùm volumus nomina eorum, qui quod geſſerint, nota nobis eſſe; parentes, patriam; multa præterea minimè neceſſaria? Quid, quod homines infimâ fortunâ, nullâ ſpe rerum gerendarum, opifices denique, delectentur Hiſtoriâ? Maximèque eos videre poſſumus res geſtas audire & legere velle, qui à ſpe gerendi abſunt, confecti ſenectute. Idem, De Finib. Bonor. & Mal. Lib. 5. Cap. 19.

NEITHER do I think it proper for me to enumerate the Qualifications, which Tully, Quintilian, Pliny, Lucian, Voſſius, Caſaubon, Scaliger, Le-Vayer, Le-Moine, Rapin, and other, ancient and modern, Criticks require in an Hiſtorian; ſince it were the higheſt Preſumption in me, by ſuch a Recital, to inſinuate I were Maſter of thoſe Perfections. Nor ſhall I, on the other hand, with an awkward Air of Modeſty, court the Favour of the Readers, by diſqualifying my ſelf: The Age we live in is too clear-ſighted to be impoſed upon, by ſuch putid and threadbare Affectations. 'Twere, indeed, Folly in a Man who is really conſcious of his Diſability, either to attempt to write, or to expoſe himſelf in Print. And, after all, let an Author ſpeak well or indifferently of himſelf; let him cringe and cajole as much as he pleaſes; the World will ſtill truſt to their own Judgments alone, in the Cenſure of his Performance.

I WOULD not, however, be underſtood, as if I had the Vanity to think my ſelf, in all Reſpects, equal to my Undertaking: A QUEEN who, at the Head of a great Confederacy, becomes the ARBITRESS of Europe, almoſt as ſoon as ſhe aſcends the Throne; A long, obſtinate War, maintain'd againſt the United Force of France and Spain, both by Sea and Land; and ſupported chiefly by the Wealth and Strength of Great Britain; An uninterrupted Series of Victories, and Triumphs, for Nine ſucceſſive Years, over an Enemy, till then formidable to all Europe; The Terror and Glory of the Britiſh Arms ſpread to the Banks of the Danube; The Empire ſaved; Italy reſcued; Portugal protected; Spain twice almoſt totally conquer'd; Moſt of the Catholick Netherlands recover'd; The Dominion of the Sea effectually aſſerted, and ſecured by important Conqueſts; The Union of England and Scotland, brought about, againſt all Foreign and Domeſtick Oppoſition; Plenty and Riches increaſed, in the Midſt of War; The Publick Tranquillity preſerv'd, without any Bloodſhed, among fierce, contending Parties; Piety and Virtue rewarded; Arts and Sciences encouraged; Trade flouriſhing and extended: Theſe grand and bright Objects, which diſtinguiſh Queen ANNE's Reign, cannot but fire and tempt the Ambition of an Hiſtorian; but make it, at the ſame Time, a very arduous Task, even for the beſt Pens, to write up to the Dignity of ſo noble a Subject. Nor is it, on the other hand, hardly poſſible for the moſt diſcreet Writer, to touch upon ſome dark and ambiguous Tranſactions of the latter Part of that Reign, without claſhing with ſomebody or other; conſidering the different Thoughts that were then, and ſtill are, entertain'd about thoſe Affairs, by jarring Parties, whoſe Prejudices and Animoſities are, by this Time, rather increaſed, than abated.

NEITHER is it leſs difficult, ſo cautiouſly to relate Paſſages in which great Men living, or lately dead, have been concern'd, as not to incur their Diſpleaſure, or provoke their Spleen: Upon this Conſideration it was, that Sir Walter Ralegh forbore meddling with the Hiſtory of his own Times, ſaying, That * whoſoever in writing a Modern Hiſtory, ſhall follow Truth too near, it may chance to ſtrike out his Teeth: And that there is no Miſtreſs or Guide, that has led her Followers, or Servants, into greater Miſchiefs. And yet the ſame grave Author immediately ſubjoins, That he who goes after Truth too far off, loſes ſight of her, and loſes himſelf; and as for him who walks after her at Middle Diſtance, he knows not how to call his Courſe, whether Temper, or Cowardice? On the other hand, a Learned and Judicious Philologer and (b) Stateſman of the laſt Century obſerves; "That it is a hard Matter to write a good Hiſtory; becauſe if "the Author be an Eye-witneſs, he is apt to be drawn to a Party; if not, "he cannot attain a true Knowledge of Affairs.

* See Sir Walt. Ralegh his Preface to his Hiſtory of the World.

(b) Grotius, whoſe Words are theſe:
Difficilis eſt rerum geſtarum narratio, quæ abſentem fugiunt, præſentem trahunt.

THIS

THIS very laſt Reflection however, which, Twenty Years ago, encouraged me to write the Hiſtory of King WILLIAM the IIId, and afterwards the ANNALS of Eleven Years of Queen ANNE, has now determin'd me, notwithſtanding all the Difficulties I have mention'd, to publiſh an entire Hiſtory of this laſt Reign, hoping by a faithful and impartial Relation of Matters of Fact, in a great Meaſure, to make up any Defects, in other Points. I ever paid a Religious Reverence to TRUTH, as one of the moſt eminent Attributes of the Supreme Being: And as TRUTH, on the other Hand, is the chief (a) Perfection of HISTORY, ſo ever ſince I applied my ſelf to this way of Writing, I made it my principal Buſineſs to purſue, and to ſpeak TRUTH, without any Regard to worldly Conſiderations. This I look upon as the Birth-Right and Privilege of an Engliſh Writer: And as I made uſe of it in my younger Years, when private Views might have diſſuaded me from it: I could not anſwer it, either to my own Conſcience, or to POSTERITY, (b) which an Hiſtorian ought principally to conſider, if I ſhould be more cautious in the Decline of a Life, whoſe conſtant Labours have anticipated upon it the Infirmities of Age.

IN this Situation, as I have nothing to hope for, neither have I any Thing to fear; I never was either liſted in, or retained to any Party: And though, in divers Adminiſtrations, I have done conſiderable Services to Men in Power, yet I never receiv'd any Reward from them, becauſe I never would go all the Lengths of Party Leaders, nor proſtritute my Pen to their Paſſions. On the other Hand, as in my Writings I advance nothing for which I have not ſufficient Vouchers, and ſtill pay a due Regard to Perſons, whoſe Birth or Character command Reſpect, even from them who diſapprove their Actions, ſo have I Reaſon not to apprehend the Reſentment of any. Upon the whole Matter, I may claim the chief Qualifications which Lucian requires in an Hiſtorian, whom he wiſhes to be, Fearleſs, uncorrupted by Bribes, a Freeman, a Lover, and a bold Speaker of TRUTH. (c)

BUT theſe Qualifications, though eſſentially neceſſary in an Hiſtorian, are yet of little Uſe to him, unleſs, at the ſame Time, he be rightly inform'd: For how can he write Truth, if he be unacquainted with it? In this Particular, he who treats of his own Times, has a very great Advantage over him that relates Things paſt long before: The latter muſt depend on the Accounts of others, who either through Prejudice or Partiality, Ignorance or Inſincerity, may lead him into Falſhood, notwithſtanding his honeſt Intention to ſpeak Truth; whereas a Man who relates Tranſactions that have happen'd in his Time, and are conſequently freſh in every one's Memory, if he make a tolerable Figure in the World, may, with ſome Pains and Induſtry, not only come at the certain Knowledge of remarkable Events, but even of their true Cauſes.

I KNOW many are of Opinion, That none are duly qualify'd for Hiſtory, but ſuch as have had a Share in the Adminiſtration, and Management of publick Affairs, who being thoroughly acquainted with the true Springs of Actions, are therefore moſt able to write Accounts of them. This Truth I will not deny: But then let it be conſider'd, how few Favourites, Stateſmen, or Commanders, though perhaps excellent in their reſpective Stations and Capacities, are yet either able, or willing to write? And, again, how few of them, that have vouchsafed to give us their Memoirs, have written so impartially, as to deserve the Thanks or Esteem of the Publick? Examples of all these may easily be found, either in this, or the preceding Age: For I have heard of a Secretary of State, who could not write a Letter; of a Prime Minister who could not write true English; and of a General who could hardly write at all. On the other hand, they who are the most able, are generally the most unwilling to write History: Some through supine Indolence; others for want of Leisure; and most for fear of giving Offence, and out of private Regards. Thus the World often expects, in vain, the Memoirs of Persons in publick Stations; or at least till such Time as Family Considerations no longer obstruct their Publication. But then either they are subject to Interpolations from their Editors, or the Memory of the Passages they relate is so far effaced, that they cannot be set right, in case they deviate from Truth.

again,

THE following History will, in a great Measure, escape those Inconveniencies. The Ground-Work of it being, for the most Part, an Abstract of my own Memoirs *, publish'd some Years ago, has already stood the Test; gain'd me the Reputation, at least, of an Impartial Writer; and therefore may pass for Authentick. Now, as no Man had so good a Title to these Memoirs as my self, so the doing my self Justice, by digesting them into a regular History, was one of the Motives to my Undertaking; in hopes, thereby, to prevent, for the future, the ill Usage I receiv'd from the Compiler of the History of England, in Three Volumes in Folio, who made free with about Two Thirds of my History of King WILLIAM, without either a Compliment to me, or the least Alteration, to palliate the Plagiarism. If several Greek †, and other Writers, stand branded among the Learned, merely for Fathering the Works of dead Historians, what Name do they deserve, who, without blushing, rifle and spoil the Living? I know 'tis impossible, either to compile, or write History, without borrowing from others: But then, in such a Case, the Borrower can do no less, than to pay an Acknowledgment to the Lender.

* The Annals of Queen Anne, and the Political State of Great Britain.

† Cedrenus, Eusebius, Theophanus.

THIS Rule of Gratitude and Decency, I have religiously observ'd in all my Historical Writings and Collections, particularly in the ensuing Work, where I constantly quote the Authors, who have supply'd me with any Materials, towards the Superstructure I have raised, on my own Bottom. In relation to the Affairs of Scotland, I must own my self singularly obliged to Mr. Lockhart's Memoirs, which, bating some passionate Reflections, the natural Result of Party-Prejudice, are universally allowed to be excellent, in their Kind.

AS for English Affairs, I ever had in View the Observation of an ingenious and judicious Foreigner ||, That he who sets about to write the History of England, must write the History of Parliaments. And, indeed, whoever considers, what general Influence the Resolutions of both Houses have on the publick Measures of Great Britain, will readily acknowledge the wholesomeness of the Advice. Accordingly, I have made it my Business to relate the Proceedings in Parliament with such Exactness, as, I dare say, is not to be met with in any former Historian: By which Means both English and Foreign Readers, may be better acquainted with the Constitution of a British Senate; and young Noblemen and Gentlemen, who, by their Birth and Fortunes, are entitled to a Place in that great Assembly, may be fitted to make a Figure in it. To this Purpose, I have not only made use of the printed Votes, which are in every Body's Hands, but have had Recourse to the Manuscript Journals of both Houses. And I must own besides, my Obligations to several Publick-Spirited Members, who have either communicated to me many remarkable Speeches on important Occasions, or procured me Opportunities of being an Ear-Witness to their Debates.

|| Mr. de St. Evremond.

As to Military Affairs, and Foreign Tranſactions relating to the Grand Confederacy, I have not wholly depended on printed Relations, which, for the moſt part, are very defective, and always extreme partial. Nor have I laid any Streſs on publick Rejoicings on any remarkable Event of War; becauſe they are generally no more than a political Flory, to amuſe the Vulgar. Relating to this, I remember two merry Stories: Upon the News of the doubtful Battel of Luzzara, the Government at Madrid immediately cauſed Bonefires and Illuminations to be made, and Te Deum to be ſung, in great Solemnity; of which the Imperial Envoy in Portugal was no ſooner inform'd, but, without waiting for a direct Account of the Engagement, he cauſed the like Rejoicings, for a ſuppoſed Victory, to be perform'd at Liſbon, at a Venture; And writing, the ſame Evening, to a Friend about that Matter, ask'd him, How he lik'd his COUNTER TE DEUM? The other Paſſage is yet more comical: A Gaſcoon Officer, going from Flanders to Paris, after an Engagement in which the French Army was worſted, came in the Evening to Amiens; and finding the Mob there carouſing and friſky about their Bonefires, as if their Countrymen had been the Conquerors: Cadedis, ſaid he, in his Country Dialect, Ces Gens-ici ſont de la Nature de la Pierre à fuſil, plus on les bat & plus ils font du Feu: That is, Udsbudikins, Theſe People are of the Nature of Flints, the more they are beat, the more they ſtrike Fire.

To leave Story-telling: Gazettes, News-Papers, State-Relations, and the like, are very dangerous Guides for an Hiſtorian, and ought therefore to be follow'd with a great deal of Circumſpection. For my own Part, I have all along been very cautious how I truſted to thoſe Accounts; and, in order to rectify their Miſtakes, and ſupply their Defects, I have, as to warlike Affairs, conſulted experienced and judicious Officers, who had a Share in the Actions I relate. I own, Military Men are generally very ſhy of telling all they know, for fear of offending their Generals; But I have had the good Fortune to meet with ſome of them, whoſe Publick Spirit raiſed them above thoſe Scruples; and from whom I have learnt many important Truths, about dubious and dark Paſſages, which, as an impartial Hiſtorian, I thought it my Duty to ſet in a true Light. On the other hand, where I could not get ſatisfactory Informations, I forbore entering upon Details, for which I had not ſufficient Vouchers; rather chuſing to give my Readers ſcanty, than unfair and uncertain Accounts.

As for the Cauſes of great Events; the Springs of Political Machines; the Jealouſies and Competitions, the Jars and Cabals of Men in Power; the Riſe and Fall of Favourites and Miniſters; and other COURT-Intrigues, that give Life and Spirit to Hiſtory; Tho' I do not pretend to know all the Secrets of the Anti-Chamber and the Cabinet in the laſt Reign, yet they who are perſonally acquainted with me, will do me the Juſtice to allow, That, tho' not a Courtier, I liv'd many Years in, or on the Skirts of the Court; That as I had a general Acquaintance, ſo I often convers'd with Perſons of the beſt Figure and great Eminence, and was, more than once, employ'd in important Affairs by Men in Power; ſo that I did not want Opportunities of obſerving many nice Paſſages, and to dive into Myſteries that eſcap'd the Notice of leſs prying Spectators. Many Inſtances of what I advance, the Reader will eaſily find in the enſuing Sheets: But I ſhall mention here only the Duke of Marlborough's Diſgrace, and the Change of the Miniſtry in 1710. This Event, which occaſion'd ſo great a Turn in all Affairs, both at Home and Abroad, I hope, I have trac'd up to its true Cauſes: If not, both in this, and in other Particulars, I ſhall be glad to be better inform'd.

THE laſt Negotiation of PEACE, being the moſt conteſted and moſt problematical Tranſaction of the QUEEN's Reign; I have purſued its different Steps with all the Lights I could gather from Authentick Papers, undoubted Intelligence, and my own Obſervations: And as for the various Sentiments which the Contending Parties entertain'd of it, I have faithfully abſtracted them from their Polemical Treatiſes, which, for the moſt part, were compoſed by their Leaders. But then I have cautiouſly avoided all paſſionate Reflections of either Side: For it does not become Hiſtory, to write either an Apology or a Panegyrick; either to proſtitute her ſelf by Adulation, or to ſully her Dignity by Satyr.

BESIDES the Peace of Utrecht, there's another very tender Point, that runs through the whole late Reign, relating to the Deſign of Setting aſide the Hanoverian Succeſſion, and Advancing the Pretender to the Throne. That ſuch a Deſign was actually form'd, and carrying on by a STRONG CABAL, will almoſt demonſtrably appear from the following Hiſtory: But how far they were countenanc'd in it by the Queen, is, and, in my Opinion, ought to be leſt undetermin'd. 'Tis, indeed, the Intereſt of the Jacobites to affirm, as they do, "That Her late Majeſty being troubled with Scruples of Con-"ſcience, and having a natural Affection for a Perſon ſhe look'd upon as "her Brother, had reſolv'd to ſecure the Crown to him after her Death:" But Hiſtory having no ſufficient Warrant for ſuch an Aſſertion, I'm ſure, 'tis not conſiſtent either with good Manners, or Prudence, in the Well-affected to the preſent Happy Settlement, to lay any Streſs upon a Probability, merely ſuggeſted to aſperſe the late Queen's Memory. Arguments that prove too much, as they are fallacious in Logick, ſo may they be dangerous in Politicks; and, like a Piece over-loaded, recoil upon the Shooter.

FOR this very Reaſon, 'tis, in my Opinion, both raſh and impolitick, to involve more People in the Deſign of Setting aſide the Proteſtant Succeſſion, than by Overt-Acts appear to have been engaged in it. Either ſome great Men, who had private Paſſions and Reſentments to gratify; or Court-Buſy-Bodies, and Officious Pick-Thanks, may, perhaps, have thought, and found it their Intereſt, to infuſe wrong Notions of Parties, and to miſrepreſent Perſons that had as good a Title to Favours as themſelves: But whether ſuch a Practice has not rather heighten'd than abated Diſaffection, I leave candid Judges to determine. Thoſe Miſrepreſentations I hint at are the more miſchievous, in that they make deep Impreſſions in the Minds of ſome great Perſons, who have few Opportunities, if any at all, to be better inform'd; and who, through Prejudice, may eſtrange ſome of their beſt Friends. It were therefore to be wiſh'd, that they who have the Power, would imitate the Conduct of thoſe at Helm, in the former Part of the late Reign, who, by improving the natural Inclination they found in their Sovereign, to be Gracious and Kind to all Her Subjects, made our very Jars and Diviſions, in a manner, ſubſervient to the Publick Good: For whilſt both Parties were artfully kept in Expectation of Favours, they only vy'd with one another, who ſhould moſt advance the Glory of ſo Good a QUEEN!

THUS much for the Authentickneſs and Authority of the following Hiſtory: I ſhall only add, That a Man that writes of his own Times, has ſtill another Advantage in Point of Truth, to wit, in relation to CHRONOLOGY. The Neglect of this has led ſome celebrated Hiſtorians into groſs Errors, and made them aſſign ſome Events as Cauſes of Effects that were antecedent to thoſe pretended Cauſes: Which Fault I have carefully endeavour'd to avoid, by an exact Obſervance of Dates.

AS for the Manner of writing Hiſtory, on which ſeveral judicious Men, both among the Ancients and the Moderns, have made excellent Obſervations, I ſhall here ſum up the moſt material; and ſhew, how far I have endeavour'd to follow the Rules of Art, and what Reaſons made me deviate from ſome of them.

IN the Compoſition of Regular Hiſtory, Two Things are principally to be conſider'd; viz. MATTER, and FORM.

I. BY MATTER, are underſtood Hiſtorical Facts and Paſſages; the right Choice of which ſhews the Judgment of the Author, who, in this Particular, ought to be guided by the Nature of the Hiſtory he writes.

HISTORY is either General, as of the World, of a Nation, or Kingdom, and of a Reign: Or Particular, as of a Province, a County, a City, a Faa Family, or of a Great Man: Which laſt goes under the Title of Memoirs, if written by the Perſon principally concern'd in it, or of his Life, if written by another.

NOW, Hiſtory, whether general or particular, ought to contain all that offers of any Importance, with Relation to its principal Object.

THUS the Hiſtory of a County, City, or Family, ought to comprehend all ſuch remarkable Events and Paſſages, as may give us a diſtinct and perfect Knowledge of thoſe different Subjects; and as for the Memoirs or Life of a great Perſonage, nothing ought to be omitted in them, that may bring us acquainted with his Deſcent, Character, various Fortunes and Adventures, Intrigues, Martial Atchievements, or Civil Employments, Virtues, and Vices; nothing, in ſhort, that may ſerve to delineate his Picture in full Length: Since either himſelf, or they who concern themſelves in his Adventures and Fortunes, thought fit to expoſe him to the View of Poſterity.

BUT what's important in a Particular, is not always ſo in a general Hiſtory; becauſe what belongs to the principal Object in the former, is oftentimes of no Conſequence in the latter, where the Dignity of the Subject forbids an Hiſtorian to beſtow the leaſt Attention on minute Particulars, that relate to private Men. For the principal Object of the Hiſtory of a Nation, Kingdom, or Reign, being the Prince and State, this is the Point of View, in which all the Hiſtorical Paſſages ought to center; and private Perſons, ſuch as Miniſters of State, Generals, Admirals, and the like, can have no Place in the Narrative, but ſo far forth as they relate to that Principal Object. An Action perform'd by a Subaltern, or even by a common Soldier, may, indeed, find a Place in the Deſcription of a Battel, when ſuch an Action is, either in its Conſequences, beneficial to the Publick, or ſo ſingular in it ſelf, as to do Honour to the whole Nation; or when it has ſomething in it ſo marvellous and ſurprizing, that the Delight it gives the Reader, makes him Amends for the Irregularity in taking Notice of it.

BY the ſame Reaſon, amorous Intrigues, Jealouſies, and Quarrels among private Perſons, are rather a Blemiſh, than an Ornament to a general Hiſtory; unleſs, as it oftentimes happens, ſuch Incidents have proved the Occaſion of ſome conſiderable Event, in which either the Prince or State were concern'd: For then, inſtead of being Foreign, thoſe private Intrigues and Jars, become eſſential to Hiſtory. But bating ſuch a Caſe, a judicious Writer ought not to admit into a general Hiſtory, any Thing that's minute, foreign, or prepoſterous, much leſs what's improbable, impertinent, or abſurd.

THESE are the principal Precepts that are given for the Subject-Matter of Hiſtory, ſome of which I have endeavour'd to obſerve, and others purpoſely over-look'd.

THE late Duke of MARLBOROUGH, for Inſtance, is univerſally and juſtly allow'd to have been one of the greateſt Commanders this Iſland, or, indeed, Europe, ever produced: But though by his Valour, Prudence, and Abilities, he contributed more than any other Subject, to the Glories of Queen ANNE's Reign, yet he was ſtill but a SUBJECT, and as ſuch, can make but a Second Figure in the Hiſtory of that Reign. To enter into a Detail of his Adventures, and great Actions, before Queen Anne aſcended the Throne, though never ſo ſurprizing and entertaining, would be a ridiculous and unpardonable Violation of the Laws of Hiſtory: And therefore as ſoon as I had brought him upon the Stage, I thought it ſufficient to make him known, by a Sketch of his Character, as a Favourite, a General, and a Stateſman. I afterwards keep him in View, in thoſe Three Capacities, as far as his voluntary Exile; but take no farther Notice of him, 'till I come to the Queen's laſt Sickneſs, when his Grace's Return to England, occaſion'd various Conjectures. It muſt be their Province, who ſhall be entruſted with the MEMOIRS of that Great Man, to do him full Juſtice, in a regular Hiſtory of his whole LIFE.

The PREFACE.

I MAY be cenſured by ſome for being too conciſe; by others, for being too prolix. A Captain of Grenadiers, for Example-Sake, who has diſtinguiſh'd himſelf in the Attack of a Cover'd-way, may, perhaps, expect to have both his gallant Behaviour, and Name recorded: But he muſt conſider, That though he might make a handſome Figure, in a particular Relation, yet he cannot, with any Decency, be taken Notice of in a general Hiſtory, where generally a Siege takes up but very little Space, ſometimes not above Two or Three Lines. The Reaſon of it is obvious in the following Hiſtory: For Queen Anne having, for above Nine ſucceſſive Years, been the Head, and main Support of the Grand Confederacy, the Account of that Period of Time is, as it were, the Hiſtory of all the Military Actions, and Political Tranſactions in Europe: But as the Detail of them would have ſwell'd my Narrative to a prodigious Bulk, I reſolv'd to make the Britiſh Affairs the Principal (as they are to us the moſt important) Subject, and to bring in Military and Foreign Tranſactions, like Epiſodes to the main Action.

SOME ſqueamiſh Criticks, particularly among the French, may find Fault with the large Accounts I give of Parliamentary Proceedings, as tedious and tireſome: But having already accounted for this before, I ſhall obviate another Objection that may be ſtarted, againſt my mentioning the frequent Changes in Places of Truſt and Profit. But as minute as this may appear to be to ſome People, I thought it highly neceſſary to be taken Notice of for Two Reaſons: Firſt, as thoſe Removes ſhew the Riſe and Advancement of eminent Perſons, either by Merit, Favour, or the Prevalency of a Party: Secondly, as they are tacit Indications of ſuch remarkable Turns as happen in Publick Meaſures, and in the very Reſolutions in Parliament, which, as was hinted before, are one of the main Springs of our Political Motions, though generally directed by the Court and Miniſters.

II. AS for the MANNER of Writing, or FORM of Hiſtory, the Criticks agree, that it requires, 1. ORDER, 2. STYLE, 3. a conciſe, exact, clear and lively EXPRESSION; 4. Tranſitions; 5. and ORNAMENTS; ſuch as Speeches, Reflections, and Characters.

THO' it be univerſally acknowledged, that no Hiſtorian ever attain'd Perfection in all theſe, yet whoever goes about writing Hiſtory, ought certainly to endeavour at it; and in order thereto, ſet before his Eyes the beſt Patterns in this Art; ſuch as Thucydides and Xenophon, among the Greeks; Salluſt, Livy, and Julius Cæſar, among the Latins; Mariana, Strada, Buchanan, Thuanus, and ſome others among the Moderns: To whom we may add the Abbot Vertot, a Frenchman, who, in theſe latter Times, has writ Hiſtory, with great Reputation to himſelf, and Honour to his Country. A diligent Peruſal and Study of the Works of thoſe great Maſters, will undoubtedly go a great way towards forming a Man's Taſte and Judgment: And if he have a natural Genius, and tolerable Stock of Learning; and above all theſe, a thorough Knowledge of Mankind, and long Experience of the World, he may attempt to compoſe HISTORY.

1. ORDER, the firſt and moſt eſſential Precept towards it, conſiſts in ranging and diſpoſing each Part of the Subject Matter, in ſuch a proper Manner, as to avoid Confuſion, and to diffuſe through the whole Work, Perſpicuity and Clearneſs, without which Hiſtory miſſes its Aim, viz. Entertainment and Inſtruction. For Confuſion not only fatigues and puzzles the Reader's Attention, but likewiſe jumbles together, and effaces the Traces of what he reads, in his Memory.

IN order to avoid Confuſion, we are told, that the Writer muſt conſider the Matters of Fact he is to relate, which, generally, are of Two Sorts, viz. the more important, with reſpect to the Prince or State, and of leſs Conſequence, relating to private Perſons.

THE firſt require the Hiſtorian's main Attention, and chief Place in his Work; and when ſome of them have a Connection with what has paſs'd in in other States, they muſt be ſo artfully blended with the principal Narrative, as, by their mutual Dependance on each other, to make up one entire Body of Hiſtory. Matters of Fact being thus naturally ranged, are eaſily retain'd.

As for Facts of leſs Importance, and which, therefore, ought not to take up much Room, the Hiſtorian is to uſe his Skill and Judgment, to find them a proper Place, without interrupting the Thread of the main Narrative. Thus Hiſtory will attain UNITY, which is no leſs requiſite in it, than either in Dramatick or Epic Poetry.

TO this Purpoſe, the Hiſtorian muſt conſider the Difference between a CHRONICLE or ANNALS, and REGULAR HISTORY: In the former, the Order of Events is determin'd by Chronology, and placed Month by Month, or Year by Year; ſo that the Diſpoſition, or Preparation towards an Event, happens, ſometimes, to be related in one Year, the Event it ſelf in the next, and the Conſequences of it in the Third. Such a Method renders Chronicles and Annals extream dull and tireſome: For as all Men naturally love to ſee Effects, and Conſequences in their Cauſes, and hate to be kept long in Suſpence, ſo an Epiſode, interrupted by other Facts, loſes all its Beauties (a) and Graces. Wherefore, in ſuch Caſes, which are pretty frequent, an Hiſtorian muſt have more regard to the Continuity and Sequel of Things, naturally depending on one another, than to the Order of Time; and not ſcruple anticipating upon the next Year, when he relates Events that ought not to be divided.

THIS general Rule, however, is liable to Exceptions; as when ſeveral conſiderable Events, independent upon one another, are to be related. To this Purpoſe, I may inſtance in the late Wars in the Netherlands, Germany, Italy, Spain and Portugal; the Sea-Expeditions, the Negotiations of Peace, and the Civil Affairs in Great Britain and Ireland, all which memorable Tranſactions happen'd, for a long Time, in the ſame Year: But in this Caſe, as the Criticks leave an Hiſtorian to his own Judgment, and only recommend Perſpicuity, ſo I muſt leave it to the Cenſure of candid Judges to determine, how I have managed this nice Affair?

2. AS for Hiſtorical STYLE, we are told, it ought to be Noble, and Grave, but, at the ſame Time, ſimple or plain, natural and pure. The Gravity and Dignity of Hiſtory excludes all low and vulgar Expreſſions, mean Jeſts, clenching Witticiſms, trivial Proverbs, and ſuch like Traſh. However, this Rule admits of Exceptions: For in ſome Caſes, a Jeſt, an unexpected Turn of Wit (b), a common Saying, or a ſmart Repartee (c), have a marvellous Effect.

SIMPLICITY baniſhes all Rhetorical Figures, and Amplifications, frequent Metaphors, and Similes, and, in ſhort, all Common Places. Nothing is, indeed, more fatiguing, than an Hiſtorian that writes like an Orator: For Hiſtorical Eloquence lies in a noble Narrative of Actions, in the true Characterizing of Perſons, and in an exact Painting of the Manners and Paſſions, not by lofty and florid Expreſſions, but either by the Effects of thoſe Actions and Paſſions; or by lively and ſhort Reflections, flowing from the Subject it ſelf.

HISTORICAL STYLE muſt alſo be natural, (d) that is, free from all Affectation: WIT and ART ought, indeed, to enliven and animate Hiſtory, but, in ſuch manner, as to be imperceptible. A Narrative full of Antitheſes and Witticiſms, though it may glitter, and pleaſe for ſome Time, yet dazzles the Sight, and fatigues, at long Run. In Reading, as in Converſation, the moſt natural way of Diſcourſe, is the moſt entertaining; and in this the Art of Story-Telling, chiefly conſiſts.

PURITY of STYLE, or LANGUAGE, conſiſts in the right Choice of Words, proper for the Subject, generally underſtood, and uſed by the Learned and the Polite: And in rejecting all obſolete, pedantick, and foreign Expreſſions, unleſs warranted by the Authority of Writers of eſtabliſh'd Reputation, who, alone, have a Right to adopt and naturalize exotick Words.

3. HISTORICAL EXPRESSION, which little differs from Style, ought to be conciſe and exact, clear and lively. By Conciſeneſs, or Brevity, Criticks do not mean the bringing the Narrative into a narrow, but only into a juſt Compaſs: For unleſs the Narrative be juſt and exact, it is lame and (a) obſcure, and not conciſe. Brevity therefore, and Exactneſs, are inſeparable, and conſiſt in retrenching (b) all needleſs Excurſions, minute Circumſtances, trifling Deſcriptions, idle political Reaſonings, luxuriant Reflections, long-winded Phraſes, and Periphraſes, and ſuch awkward and forced Expreſſions, as betray a dry Genius, and a frigid Fancy. In ſhort, an Hiſtorian muſt avoid the Extremes of too great Conciſeneſs on the one Hand, and of Prolixity on the other: For commendable Brevity is the Reſult of Knowledge, Reflection, and Judgment.

CLEARNESS and LIVELINESS of Expreſſion, reſult from Words fitly adapted and ranged, free from Equivocations, and unembaraſs'd by Parentheſes, twiſted Phraſes, and long, tedious Periods.

4. BESIDES all theſe, Hiſtory requires artful TRANSITIONS, which, like Joints and Ligaments in natural Bodies, not only unite the ſeveral Parts of the Narrative, but render them uniform, and make them play together, towards the Entertainment of the Reader. Now, as Tranſitions connect what went before, with what follows, ſo muſt they have ſome Relation to both. They muſt, if I may uſe the Compariſon, be, like Paſſages between the different Apartments of a well-contrived Houſe, eaſy, natural, and agreeable, in order inſenſibly to lead the Reader from one Event to another, and by the Delight he has already felt, engage him to go on farther. The Hiſtorian will put his Reader in that Situation, if, by a judicious Reflection on what has paſs'd, he inſinuates what is to come after: For, by this Means, he will ſtir up the Reader's Curioſity, and make him impatient of having a full View, of what he had but a Glimpſe before. This artful Preparation of Epiſodes, which is ſo beautiful in Dramatick and Epic Poetry, has no leſs Grace in Hiſtory, but requires the greater Skill in the latter, in that Hiſtory admits of no Fictions.

5. HISTORICAL ORNAMENTS, as was hinted before, conſiſt in Speeches, Reflections, and Characters.

THUCYDIDES, Salluſt, Livy, and ſome other Hiſtorians, have given us Examples of ſet Speeches, made either by Politicians in Council, or by Generals, at the Head of their Troops, to animate them to Combat: But tho' ſome of thoſe Speeches be juſtly admired, as excellent Pieces of Oratory, yet are they generally diſapproved, by the moſt judicious Criticks, ancient (c) and modern, as (d) Suppoſititious, or improbable, and therefore claſhing with the eſſential Quality of Hiſtory. But this Cenſure does not affect genuine Speeches, made on ſolemn Occaſions, which either entire, if ſhort and pithy, or by way of Abſtract, give Life and Spirit to the Narrative. And I hope, in particular, that the Reader of the following Hiſtory, will find the Tediouſneſs of our Parliamentary Affairs much relieved, by the Speeches made in both Houſes, on Debates of Importance.

REFLE-

REFLEXIONS, Sentences, and Maxims, are univerſally allow'd to be a very ornamental and inſtructive Part of Hiſtory: But then they muſt not only be noble, generous, virtuous, candid, and impartial; but ought likewiſe to be ſparingly and artfully brought in, as naturally flowing from the Subject. For when they are dogmatically deliver'd, they become Magiſterial Lectures, that tire and diſguſt judicious Readers. To this Purpoſe, a polite (a) Writer among the Ancients has wittily ſaid, "That Sentences ought not to ap-" pear, as it were, emboſs'd in ingenious Compoſures, like Embroidery in " a Garment, but ſhine like a bright Dye embody'd with the Cloth.

AS to CHARACTERS, all Criticks agree, That an Hiſtorian ought ſo well to delineate and characterize the Perſons that make the principal Figure in his Hiſtory, as to make them perfectly known to the Readers. But as ſuch Portraits are rather an eſſential than an ornamental Part of Hiſtory, ſo muſt they not ſtick out like Sign-Poſts, but be dextrouſly woven with the Narrative.

THE Excellency of Hiſtorical, as well as other Pictures, chiefly conſiſting in Reſemblance, they ought therefore to be ſo artfully contriv'd, as that all their Lines and Strokes collected together, give us a compleat Idea of the Perſon they are made to repreſent. On the other hand, in order to make finiſh'd Pieces, the Strokes muſt be free and bold, and the Colours ſtrong and lively.

IN the drawing of his Portraits, the Hiſtorian ought not to give them all the ſame Caſt; but imitate skilful Painters, who, in Hiſtorical Pieces, take care to give every Figure a different Air and Attitude. Nothing is more pleaſing than Variety; nothing more fulſom than Repetition.

WHOEVER pretends to write Characters, ought to be well acquainted with thoſe he deſcribes; either perſonally, or by means of diſcreet and diſcerning Men that had Opportunities to know them; or by Portraits drawn by their Cotemporaries. By this Rule, they who write of Things paſt long before their own Time, can hardly give us true Characters of their principal Perſons: Becauſe, for the moſt part, Hiſtorical Monuments and Records furniſh an Hiſtorian with bare Matters of Fact, Actions and Paſſages, from which he may, indeed, infer that ſuch a Prince, or ſuch a General, were valiant, politick, wiſe, and the like; but cannot either determine the Degrees and Differences of their Courage, Policy, Wiſdom, &c. which alone truly characterize Perſons.

THE drawing of Characters not only requires the utmoſt Skill, but likewiſe the greateſt Caution and Judgment: For as Hiſtorians have an uncontеſted Right to determine (b) the Reputation of eminent Men with Poſterity, ſo ought they to uſe that high Prerogative with unbiaſs'd and unblemiſh'd Integrity; and, like upright Judges, in all dubious Caſes, rather incline to favour, than to cenſure.

THESE are the moſt material Precepts and Obſervations of ancient and modern Criticks, on the Art of writing Hiſtory. As I reduced them into this ſhort Abſtract for my own Inſtruction, ſo I thought fit to prefix it to the enſuing Work; not to make a vain Shew of Literature, but only to acquaint the Readers, who have a Right to ſit as Jurymen upon Authors, by what LAWS Hiſtorians are to be try'd; whereby they may be better qualify'd to judge of the Merit of Performances of this Nature, than they that know nothing of thoſe Laws.

FOR my own Part, I do not pretend to an exact Obſervation of them all; but rather muſt frankly own, that I found it impoſſible to come up to the Idea of Perfection I had form'd to my ſelf. This ingenuous Confeſſion will, I hope, gain me ſome Indulgence; and, on the other hand, I may flatter my ſelf that the Readers will give ſome Grains of Allowance, at leaſt for OMISSIONS, when they conſider the Difficulties I labour'd under. For tho' I have a Right to all the Privileges of an Engliſhman, and therefore am free from the Reſtraints that cramp Writers in Deſpotick Governments: Yet, in good Manners and Decency, which equally bind all Men in polite Nations, in a Hiſtory wherein ſome Great Men yet living are concern'd, I could not fully obſerve the Second Part of Tully's Precept, (c) That an Hiſtorian ought not to dare tell a Lye, nor be afraid of telling the whole Truth. Virtuous Men do, indeed, love TRUTH, and even deſire no other Reward (d); but nothing is more odious than a faithful Hiſtorian, to thoſe that are conſcious of having done amiſs.

UPON this Conſideration, I thought my ſelf obliged to paſs over in Silence ſome remarkable Paſſages relating both to Civil and Military Men; and not to meddle with the Characters of ſome Perſons, who would certainly quarrel with their own Pictures, if drawn by the Life. The ſame Excuſe muſt ſerve me with the Reader, in relation to ſome Great Men who died before the Publication, but not before the Printing of the following Hiſtory; and of whom I might, perhaps, have ventur'd to ſay ſomething more, had I foreſeen their Departure to their long Home.

AS for the Characters of ſome Eminent Perſons, of all Ranks and Profeſſions, that could not be brought into the Body of the Hiſtory, without violating the Rules above-mention'd, the Curious Reader will find them in the Second Part of the APPENDIX. The Firſt Part of it contains ſeveral Authentick Pieces, that ſerve as Vouchers to ſome material Paſſages: And that nothing might be wanting, that lay in my Power, to illuſtrate this Hiſtory, I have ſubjoin'd to it all the MEDALS ſtruck in the Queen's Reign, finely engraved with their Explanations. I know Metallick Monuments are only valued by the Virtuoſi, in proportion to their Age; but then it is to be conſider'd, That what's modern at preſent, ſhall be antique Five Hundred Years hence: And if ancient Hiſtorians had been as careful to hand down to us the Coins of their Times, we ſhould not be in ſo great Uncertainty as we are, about ſome important Points of Chronology.

THE LIFE and REIGN OF Queen ANNE.

JAMES STUART, Duke of York and Albany, Second Son of King Charles I. and, after the Death of his Brother Charles II. King of Great Britain, had by his First Consort, the Lady Anne Hyde, Eldest Daughter of Edward Hyde, Earl of Clarendon, Four Sons, and as many Daughters, viz. Charles of York, Duke of Cambridge, born the 22d of October, 1660, who died at Seven Months Old; James of York, call'd also Duke of Cambridge, born the 12th of July, 1663, who dy'd in 1667; Charles of York, Duke of Kendal, Third Son, born the 4th of July, 1666, and who died in May, 1667; Edgar of York, Duke of Cambridge, the Fourth Son, was born the 14th of September, 1667, and died the 8th of June, 1672. The Four Daughters were, 1. MARY of York, born the 30th of April, 1662, a Princess of great Beauty, and eminent Virtue, who was marry'd to William Henry of Nassau, Prince of Orange, afterwards King William III. of ever glorious Memory, and died on the 28th of December, 1694. 2. ANNE of York, Second Daughter, born at St. James's, on the 6th of February, 166¾. Henrietta of York, Third Daughter, born at Whitehall the 13th of January, 1668, and deceased at Ten Months Old; And Katherine of York, Fourth Daughter, who was born the 9th of February, 1670, and dy'd the 5th of December, 1671. Queen Anne's Pedigree.

The Princess ANNE, whose Life and Reign are the Subject of the ensuing History, was Christen'd at St. James's Palace; her eldest Sister, the Lady MARY, and the Dutchess of Monmouth being her God-Mothers, and Dr. Sheldon, Archbishop of Canterbury her God-Father. On these Two Princesses the Eyes of all English Protestants were wholly fix'd: For King Charles II. their Uncle, neither had, nor was like to have any lawful Issue: And though the Duke of York, their Father, had, about Two Her Education.

* She dy'd in 1671.

Years after the Death of his Firſt * Wife, married Mary of Eſté, Princeſs of Modena, yet both being Papiſts, this Second Marriage did only raiſe a higher Value in the People towards the Princeſſes MARY and ANNE; from the general Hope and Expectation of having the Succeſſion continued from them, whom, with Joy, they ſaw educated in the Principles and Religion of the Church of England, as by Law Eſtabliſh'd. This, next to Providence, was chiefly owing to the Prudence and Forecaſt of their Royal Uncle, and the aſſiduous Care of Dr. Henry Compton, Dean of the Chapel, and afterwards Biſhop of London: A Service that will render his Memory dear to all Proteſtants; and which was, undoubtedly, attended with no ſmall Difficulties, from the Authority, as well as the Bigotry and Superſtition of a Father, who had already found Means to pervert their Mother. And, indeed, when in the Year 1669, the Princeſs Anne, then between Four and Five Years of Age, was ſent into France; the ſame occaſion'd no ſmall Alarm among the People, upon a Surmiſe, That ſhe was gone thither to be bred a Roman Catholick: But this Journey was purely on Account of her Health, her Royal Highneſs having, at that Time, a kind of Defluxion in her Eyes, which the Change of Air, and the Methods there uſed, ſoon removed; and ſhe return'd to England very much improved, both in her Conſtitution, and Perſonal Accompliſhments, to the univerſal Satisfaction. In the Year 1676, ſhe was, with her Royal Siſter, the Lady Mary, confirm'd in the Church of England, in the Royal Chapel at Whitehall, by the ſame worthy Divine who had taken Care of their Education.

Her Marriage.

Upon the Princeſs Mary's being beſtow'd in Marriage on the Prince of Orange, the Duke of York was very preſſing with his Royal Brother, to leave him the Diſpoſal of the Lady Anne, ſince his Majeſty had married her Siſter to a Perſon of his own chuſing. But King Charles II. in order to quiet the Minds of his People, then under juſt Apprehenſions of Popery, thought it more adviſeable to hearken to the Importunities and Remonſtrances of his Council and Parliament; and ſo made it his Care to marry her likewiſe to a Proteſtant Prince. Among others who had been thought on as a proper Match for her, his Majeſty, at length, pitch'd on Prince George of Denmark, Second Son to Frederick III. and younger Brother of Chriſtian V. Kings of Denmark, who in July, 1679, had taken the Engliſh Court, in his Return Home from France; and who Four Years after, at the Deſire of his Brother, (King of Denmark) obtain'd Leave of his Britannick Majeſty to come over to England, to make his Addreſs to the Princeſs, in order to Marriage. His Royal Highneſs arrived at Whitehall on the 19th of July, 1683: And his good Mien and Behaviour made ſuch an Impreſſion on the Princeſs, and the whole Court, that on the 28th of the ſame Month, he was ſolemnly married to her, in the Chapel Royal at St. James's, by Henry Lord Biſhop of London, in the Preſence of the King and Queen, the Duke and Dutcheſs of York, and the chiefeſt of the Nobility. With this Prince the Lady Anne lived many Years in a contented Privacy; enjoying all the Comforts of the moſt entire conjugal Affections. But though this happy Pair were bleſſed with many Children, yet they ſurvived all their Iſſue; of which we may here take a Curſory View.

Her Iſſue.

The Firſt was a Daughter, of whom her Royal Highneſs was deliver'd on the 12th of May, 1684; and being Dead, was privately interr'd. II. Lady Mary, Second Daughter, born at Whitehall the 2d of June, 1685, who died in February, 1686. III. Lady Anne Sophia, Third Daughter, born at Windſor, the 12th of May, 1686, died the February following. IV. WILLIAM, Firſt Son, born at the Royal Palace at Hampton-Court, the 24th of July, 1689, was, at his Baptiſm, declared by King William Duke of Glouceſter; of whom we ſhall ſpeak more at Large. V. The Lady Mary, a Fourth Daughter, was born at St. James's, in the Month of October, 1690, but died ſoon after ſhe was baptized. VI. Finally, George, another Son of this Royal Pair, was born at Sion-Houſe, the 17th Day of April, 1692, but died as ſoon as born.

Her Deportment while ſhe was a Subject.

† Feb. 9. 1684.

While the Princeſs Anne was a Subject, ſhe had, on many Occaſions, a difficult Part to act: Upon the Duke of York's Acceſſion to the Throne, the Prince of Denmark, her Conſort, was, indeed, ſworn of † the Privy-Council: But though King James was ever an indulgent Father to all his Children, and had even a particular Fondneſs for the Lady Anne, yet as ſoon as the Popiſh Counſels began to prevail, her Royal Highneſs became no leſs, if not more obnoxious to the Court, than the Prince and Princeſs of Orange, who not being bleſs'd with Iſſue, were not ſo like to obſtruct the Deſign of ſetting up a Popiſh Succeſſor, as the teeming Princeſs of Denmark. There was a current Report, that whilſt the Queen either was, or pretended to be with Child, the Princeſs Anne, being one Day, at her Majeſty's Toilet, too inquiſitive about that Matter, ſhe receiv'd a ſevere || Check from the imperious Queen; upon which her Royal Highneſs retired from Court; went to the Bath, and ſo could not aſſiſt at the Birth of the pretended Prince of Wales. affirm, * That her Royal Highneſs having miſcarried in the Spring, the King preſs'd her very vehemently to go to the Bath; urging, 'He was ſure that the Waters and 'the Bathing had been ſo beneficial to the Queen, that he could not doubt but they 'would do her a great deal of good.' Upon this, the Princeſs of Denmark ſubmitted to follow his Advice, provided her Phyſicians were of the ſame Opinion; and ſo a Conſultation of them was call'd. Dr. Lower and Dr. Millington were directly againſt it; alledging, They were ſure the Princeſs was not ſtrong enough to undergo a Courſe of Bathing. Dr. Waldegrave was for it; and the King's preſſing it with unuſual Heat, Millington was tamper'd with, and a conſiderable Reward offer'd him, to adviſe the Princeſs to that Journey; but he ſaid, He was to adviſe according to Opinion, and not Direction.

A. D. 1688.

* Dr. Gilbert Burnet, late Lord Biſhop of Sarum.

Upon this, Dr. Scarborough and Dr. Witherly were prevail'd upon to go and aſſure her Royal Highneſs, that nothing could do her more good than the Bath Waters; and their Opinion had the hop'd-for Succeſs. But whether the Indignity beforemention'd, or the King's Importunity, ſupported by the managed Advice of the Phyſicians, was the true Occaſion of the Princeſs Anne's ſetting out for the Bath at that critical Juncture; 'tis certain, that her Royal Highneſs was no ſooner gone, than the Queen, on the ſudden, alter'd her former Reckoning; and inſtead of dating it, as ſhe had done hitherto, from her meeting the King at Windſor, in the Beginning of October, 1687; ſhe began from her meeting him at the Bath, about a Month before. Moreover, the Queen had given out, that ſhe would Lye in at Windſor; and had appointed ſuch Preparations to be made there for her Reception, as that ſhe might go thither on the 14th of July; but now ſhe was determin'd to Lye in at St. James's, and order'd the Apartments to be fitted up with all poſſible Speed.

The Princeſs Anne, whether upon the Advice of her Friends, or becauſe the Bath did not agree with her, ſent word to the Court, that ſhe was reſolv'd to return in Three or Four Days to London. This Advice coming to Whitehall on Saturday the 9th of June, in the Morning, the Queen declar'd ſhe would go at Night to St. James's, and wait for the good Hour there. Nay, ſo very much was her Majeſty's Heart ſet upon going, that ſhe declar'd to thoſe who endeavour'd to defer it, becauſe the Apartments could not be fitted up by that Time, That ſhe had rather lie upon the Boards, than not lie at St. James's that Night; and come what would of it, ſhe was poſitive in her Reſolution to be there. This made many ſuſpect, that the Queen and Popiſh Cabal were in Haſte to compleat the Impoſture, before the Princeſs could be in London, whoſe Preſence might have hinder'd the Cheat, or at leaſt made the Conveyance of it more difficult.

Be that as it will; the very next * Day, being Trinity-Sunday, about Nine in the Morning, when moſt, if not all the Proteſtant Ladies were at Church, the Queen fell into Labour, and was ſoon after ſaid to be deliver'd of a Son. This whole Buſineſs was managed in ſo clandeſtine, myſterious, and precipitate a manner, that not one of thoſe were preſent, whoſe Intereſt it was not to have an Impoſtor put upon the Throne: And when the Princeſs Anne came to Town, ſhe had as little Satisfaction given her as any body of the Queen's real Delivery; which might eaſily have been done by ſhewing her her Majeſty's Breaſt; and the not doing of which, very much increas'd the Suſpicions that were raiſed in the Nation. From that Time, the Prince and Princeſs of Denmark were but coldly receiv'd at Court; which, together with a due Conſideration of their own Intereſt, did not a little incline them to countenance and promote the enſuing Revolution.

How then can I longer diſguize my juſt Concern for " THAT RELIGION, in which I have been ſo happily educated, which my Judg- " ment truly convinceth me to be the beſt, and for the Support of which I am " ſo highly intereſted in my Native Country? And is not England now, by the " moſt endearing Tie, become ſo?

" Whilſt the reſtleſs Spirits of the Enemies of the Reformed Religion, back'd by " the cruel Zeal, and the prevailing Power of France, juſtly alarm and unite all " the PROTESTANT PRINCES of Chriſtendom, and engage them in ſo vaſt an " Expence for the Support of it; Can I act ſo ungenerous and mean a Part, to " deny my Concurrence to ſuch worthy Endeavours, for the Diſabuſing your Ma- " jeſty, by the Reinforcement of thoſe Laws, and Re-eſtabliſhment of that Go- " vernment, on which alone depend the Well-being of your Majeſty, and of the " Proteſtant Religion in Europe? This, Sir, is that irreſiſtible and only Cauſe, " that could come in Competition with my Duty and Obligation to your Ma- " jeſty, and be able to tear me from you; whilſt the ſame affectionate Deſire to " ſerve you continues in me. Could I ſecure your Perſon by the Hazard of my " Life, I ſhould think it could not be better employ'd. And would to God theſe " your diſtracted Kingdoms might receive that ſatisfactory Compliance from your " Majeſty, in all their juſtifiable Pretenſions, as might, upon the only ſure Foun- " dation, that of the Love and Intereſt of your Subjects, eſtabliſh your Govern- " ment, and as ſtrongly unite the Hearts of all your Subjects to you, as is that " of, &c.

The Princeſs of Denmark retires from London.

Upon the King's Return to London, 'twas no ſmall Addition of Grief to him, to find, that his Daughter, the Princeſs Anne of Denmark, was gone away the Night before. When ſhe was firſt miſſing, the People were ſo enrag'd, upon a Suſpicion that ſhe had either been murder'd, or confin'd to the Tower, that, in all Probability, they would have ſacrific'd all the Papiſts to their Reſentment, if this Letter from her Royal Highneſs to the Queen had not been produc'd:

She writes a Letter to the Queen, Nov. 1688.

MADAM,

" I Beg your Pardon, if I am ſo deeply affected with the ſurprizing News of the " Prince's being gone, as not to be able to ſee you, but to leave this Paper to " expreſs my humble Duty to the King and your ſelf; and to let you know that I " am gone to abſent my ſelf, to avoid the King's Diſpleaſure, which I am not able " to bear, either againſt the Prince, or my ſelf; and I ſhall ſtay at ſo great a Di- " ſtance, as not to return before I hear the happy News of a Reconcilement. And " as I am confident the Prince did not leave the King with any other Deſign, " than to uſe all poſſible Means for his Preſervation; ſo I hope you will do me " Juſtice to believe, that I am not capable of following him for any other End. " Never was any one in ſuch an unhappy Condition, ſo divided between Duty " and Affection, to a Father and a Huſband; and therefore I know not what to do, " but to follow One, to preſerve the Other. I ſee the General Falling off of " the Nobility and Gentry, who avow to have no other End; than to prevail " with the King to ſecure their Religion, which they ſaw ſo much in Danger, " by the violent Counſels of the Prieſts; who, to promote their own Religion, " did not care to what Danger they expos'd the King. I am fully perſuaded, " that the Prince of Orange deſigns the King's Safety and Preſervation; and hope " all Things may be compos'd without Bloodſhed, by the Calling of a Parlia- " ment. God grant a happy End to theſe Troubles, that the King's Reign may " be proſperous, and that I may ſhortly meet you in Peace and Safety: Till " when, let me beg you to continue the ſame favourable Opinion that you hitherto " had of, &c.

The King was ſoon after inform'd, That her Royal Highneſs, with the Lady Churchill, and the Lady Berkley, had privately taken Coach at the Biſhop of London's Houſe in Alderſgate-ſtreet; from whence they went directly to Nottingham, attended by that Prelate, the Earl of Dorſet, and about Forty Horſemen. At Nottingham, the Earl of Devonſhire gave her Royal Highneſs a Guard of Two Hundred Men, by whom ſhe was ſafely conducted to Oxford; where Prince George ſoon after met her, with a Detachment of the Prince of Orange's Forces.

Upon King James's Leaving the Kingdom, and Retiring into France, the Prince of Orange iſſued his Circular Letters for the Meeting of the Convention. When they met, the Generality agreed on the Neceſſity of Reſtoring the Fundamentals of the Government, and of bringing back the Engliſh Conſtitution to its firſt and pureſt Original, as the only Means to ſecure their Religion and Liberties againſt Popery, Slavery and Oppreſſion. However, they differ'd not a little in the Mo-

thods of compaſſing thoſe great Ends: For, though all concurr'd in lodging the Adminiſtration of Affairs in the Hands of the Prince of Orange, yet various were their Opinions as to the Title they ſhould beſtow on him; ſome being for making him Regent or Protector, and others, King. Nay, the latter appear'd divided into Three Parties, ſome maintaining, that the Princeſs of Orange, as next Heir, ought to be crowned alone, and the Prince to manage Affairs, as King only in the Right of his Conſort; others being for making his Highneſs King ſingly; and the Majority for advancing both him and his Royal Conſort to the Throne. This laſt Scheme being, in great Meaſure, derogatory to the Princeſs Anne of Denmark's Title to the Crown, next after her Siſter, 'twas juſtly apprehended that her Royal Highneſs, who had a conſiderable Party in both Houſes, would hardly have conſented to it: But, however, this Obſtacle was ſoon after removed; her Royal Highneſs being prevail'd with (chiefly by the Perſuaſion of the Lady *Churchill) to prefer the Publick Good, and the Security of the Proteſtant Religion, before her private Intereſt. Nor had ſhe Reaſon to think her ſelf neglected, by the Advancement of the Prince and Princeſs of Orange to the Throne, ſince thereby the pretended Prince of Wales was poſtponed, who had a prior Title to her ſelf, as well as her Siſter.

The Princeſs Anne conſents to the Prince of Orange's being made King.

Some Months after the Prince and Princeſs of Orange had been declared and proclaimed King and Queen, and the Convention turned into a Parliament, the Commons ſent † up a Bill to the Lords, for declaring the Rights and Liberties of the Subject, and ſettling the Succeſſion of the Crown; which their Lordſhips having conſider'd, they found the latter Part of it defective, no Mention being made in it of her Electoral Highneſs the Princeſs Sophia, Dutcheſs of Hanover; and therefore, amongſt other Amendments, their Lordſhips thought fit to add a Proviſo in her Highneſs's Favour. The Bill thus amended, was  ſent back to the Commons, where a Party was ſo prevailing, that the Houſe diſagreed to their Lordſhips Proviſo; Some Gentlemen alledging, "That a Parliament of England had never determin'd the Degrees of Suc- "ceſſion beyond Two or Three Perſons: That the mentioning the Houſe of Hano- "ver, would give an Opportunity to Foreigners of intermeddling too far in the "Affairs of this Nation: And laſtly, that before the Crown ſhould, by Right, de- "volve to the Princeſs Sophia, ſome of the Catholick Princes, who were neareſt in "Blood, and who by this Clauſe were to be excluded, might turn Proteſtants." The King, who had nothing more at Heart, than to ſee the Crown ſettled in the Proteſtant Line, us'd his utmoſt Endeavours to bring the Commons to a Compliance with the Lords; declaring in Council, That his Queen, and both the Prince and Princeſs of Denmark deſir'd it as well as himſelf. The Lords likewiſe warmly inſiſted on their Clauſe, urging, ‖ "That though in the Inſtrument offer'd to their Maje- "ſties, the Limitation was no farther than to their Perſons; yet in a Law, which "has reſpect to all ſucceeding Ages, and ſettles for ever the Liberties of the Subject, "they thought it reaſonable to carry the Limitation of the Succeſſion of the Crown "farther, than was neceſſary in that Inſtrument in which the Crown was offer'd to "their Majeſties, and which regarded only the Succeſſion of their Poſterity. And "that they could ſee no Danger, nor any ill Conſequence, that might attend a far- "ther Limitation, but rather the contrary: For, in the firſt Place, this would ef- "fectually ſecure the Nation againſt the Danger of having any Papiſt on the Throne, "at any Time hereafter; ſince, among the ſeveral Popiſh Princes, who were in the "Lineal Succeſſion, ſome might be prevail'd on to make a Show of changing their Re- "ligion, if they had a Proſpect of ſucceeding to the Crown; and no Danger being ſo "great, as the having one who is a pretended Proteſtant, but in Truth a concealed "Papiſt, to reign over us: So the moſt effectual way to ſecure our Religion, was to "declare the Succeſſion in a Family that was known to be Proteſtant: And Second- "ly, That it was the preſent Intereſt of England, to do Right to that illuſtrious "Houſe, by limiting the Succeſſion according to the Proviſo: For ſince this Limi- "tation had been propoſed, if it ſhould now be laid aſide, it would look like ex- "cluding of that Houſe, which might provoke them to take Meaſures prejudicial to "the Intereſt of the Nation.

Theſe Reaſons having been deliver'd to the Commons, and ſeveral Conferences paſs'd between both Houſes, without any Effect, Heaven interpos'd to terminate theſe Differences, by bleſſing Her Royal Highneſs, the Princeſs of Denmark, with a Son. He was born on the 24th of July, and Chriſten'd on the 27th, by the Name of William, his Majeſty, and the Earl of Dorſet (on Behalf of the King of Denmark) being God-Fathers, and the Marchioneſs of Halifax God-Mother. At the ſame Time, his Majeſty beſtow'd the Title of Duke of Glouceſter on the Royal Infant; whoſe auſpicious Birth contributed much to diſſipate the diſtant Fears of a Popiſh Succeſſor. Some Days after, 'twas moved in the Houſe of Commons, to advance her Royal Highneſs's Revenue from Thirty Thouſand to Seventy Thouſand Pounds; which Motion, how reaſonable ſoever, conſidering her Highneſs's neceſſary Ex-pences, was nevertheleſs baffled by ſome Members, who thought to make their Court to the King, by increaſing Her Royal Highneſs's Dependance upon him. However, about Five Months after, the ſame Motion was renew'd, and occaſion'd great Debates in the Houſe of Commons. The Lord Eland, Son to the Marquis of Halifax, Mr. Firch, Brother to the Earl of Nottingham, who ſpoke in Favour of Her Royal Highneſs, urged, that Seventy Thouſand Pounds per Annum was as little as could be allow'd her, as it had been repreſented in the former Seſſion. Some Gentlemen would have that Sum reduc'd to Fifty Thouſand Pounds, and others again, being influenced by the King, were for leaving that Matter wholly to his Majeſty's Diſcretion. Mr. Hampden, (Junior,) who a few Days before had warmly ſpoke againſt the Court and Miniſtry, did, nevertheleſs, ſide with this laſt Party, alledging the Danger of ſettling a Revenue on a Princeſs, who had ſo near a Claim to the Crown, independently upon the King, whoſe Title was diſputed by Abundance of Malecontents: And ſupported his Argument by what had paſs'd in Relation to the Queen, on whom it had lately been propoſed to ſettle a Hundred Thouſand Pounds a Year, but which was thought improper, and therefore rejected, though her Majeſty could not be ſuppoſed to have any ſeparate Intereſt from that of her Royal Conſort: However, his Opinion did not prevail, and the Debate was adjourned to the next Day. In the mean Time, the King being unwilling that ſo nice an Affair ſhould be loudly canvaſs'd in Parliament, ſent the Earl of Shrewſbury and Mr. Wharton * to her Royal Highneſs, to perſuade her to rely on his Majeſty's Generoſity: But the Princeſs, who was for a fix'd Settlement, prudently anſwer'd, That ſince that Matter was before the Commons, it muſt e'n take its Courſe, and be determin'd by that wiſe Aſſembly. The Commons having the next Day † reſum'd the Conſideration of that Affair, agreed that the Sum of Fifty Thouſand Pounds ſhould be paid Yearly to her Royal Highneſs out of the Exciſe; which, though leſs than the Princeſs expected, was yet more than the King would have allow'd her.

Debates about the Princeſs Anne's Revenue.

* The late Marquis of that Name.

Theſe Paſſages could not but give ſome Uneaſineſs to the Princeſs Anne, who had Reaſon to expect a more grateful Return, for the Share ſhe, and her Royal Conſort, had in the late Revolution, and in the Prince of Orange's Advancement to the Throne. On the other Hand, her Royal Highneſs's Diſguſt was induſtriouſly fomented and improved by ſome Perſons about her, who were entirely attach'd to the Intereſt of her Abdicated Father; and who did not want Occaſions to inflame her high Spirit. For little or no Notice was taken of Prince George, while he attended the King in Ireland; and upon his Return from thence, his Royal Highneſs was ſtill diſappointed in his Expectation of being made Lord High Admiral; which could not but be reſented by the Princeſs, and inclined her to lay hold on the firſt Opportunity that offer'd to break all Intercourſe with her Royal Siſter. Towards the End of the Year 1691, the Earl of Marlborough was removed from all his Employments: And, whether his Lordſhip was ſuſpected of having intruſted his Lady with an important Secret, which ſhe was ſaid to have revealed to another Lady ‖, who diſcover'd it to the French Court; or for ſome other Reaſon  yet unknown, the Queen ſignify'd to her Siſter, that 'twas not proper the Counteſs of Marlborough, who was her firſt Lady of the Bed-Chamber, ſhould continue near her Perſon. The Princeſs Anne, obſtinately refuſing to part with an old Servant, who, what by her Aſſiduity, what by her Addreſs, and other Endearments, had made her ſelf entire Miſtreſs of her Affection, the King thought fit, not only to forbid the Prince and Princeſs of Denmark coming to Court, but likewiſe to take their Guards from them: Upon which their Royal Highneſſes removed from their Lodgings in the Cock-Pit, to a private †† Houſe at the end of Pickadilly. Endeavours were uſed by ſome diſcreet well-meaning Perſons, to make up this unhappy Diviſion in the Royal Family; and the Good-natured Queen condeſcended ſo far on her Part, that her Royal Siſter being ſoon ‖‖ after in Childbed at Sion-Houſe, her Majeſty went thither to give her a Viſit. Had thoſe about the Princeſs been as wiſe in improving this Opportunity, as they who had adviſed the Queen were in ſtarting it, a Reconciliation might eaſily have been effected: But, whoſe Fault ſoever it was, when her Majeſty came to Sion-Houſe, ſhe was ſo coldly receiv'd, that ſhe was oblig'd to go up through the Back-Stairs to her Siſter's Apartment, unattended by any of her Royal Highneſs's Servants; and when ſhe came to her Bed-ſide, ſhe could hardly get an Anſwer from her. Thus this Viſit rather increaſed than abated the Coldneſs between the Two Royal Siſters; inſomuch that the Princeſs Anne being, ſome Months after, gone to the Bath, the Mayor of that Place was order'd by the Secretary of State not to wait upon her Royal Highneſs to Church, according to Cuſtom.

Nevertheleſs, the Death of that moſt excellent Princeſs, Queen Mary, of ever bleſſed Memory, which happen'd about Two Years after, was moſt ſincerely lamented by her Royal Siſter, who, on this ſad Occaſion, forgot the ſevere Uſage that had oblig'd her to live in an obſcure Retirement, more like a Perſon in Diſgrace, than like the Heir apparent to the Crown. Her Royal Highneſs's Reſentment being quite drown'd in her Grief, ſhe wrote a Letter to the King, " Wherein " ſhe begg'd his Majeſty's favourable Acceptance of her ſincere and hearty Sorrow, " for his great Affliction in the Loſs of the Queen; and did aſſure his Majeſty, ſhe " was as ſenſibly troubled with his Misfortune, as if ſhe had never been ſo unhap- " py as to fall under her Diſpleaſure. Her Highneſs did likewiſe earneſtly deſire " his Majeſty to give her Leave to wait upon him, as ſoon as it would be with no " Inconveniency to him, and without Danger of increaſing his Affliction; that ſhe " might have an Opportunity her ſelf, not only of repeating this, but aſſuring his " Majeſty of her real Intention, to omit no Occaſion of giving him conſtant Proofs " of her ſincere Reſpect, and Concern for his Perſonal Intereſt." This generous Condeſcenſion in her Royal Highneſs, was extremely well received by the King: And the new Archbiſhop of Canterbury, laying hold on this favourable Opportunity to reconcile the Royal Family, repreſented to his Majeſty, both her Royal Highneſs's, and her Conſort's Prudent and Loyal Conduct, during their Receſs from Court; urging, that by their Intereſt, they might have given his Majeſty conſiderable Diſturbance, but that they were ſo far from any ſuch Deſign, that thoſe Members of either Houſe of Parliament, who had Places under their Highneſſes, had always appeared foremoſt in promoting his Majeſty's Intereſt. Theſe Reaſons, together with the Princeſs's Letter, work'd ſo powerfully on the King, that his Majeſty, as a Mark of his Favour and Affection, did immediately preſent her Royal Highneſs with moſt of the late Queen's Jewels; and his Sorrow for the Loſs of ſo good a Wife, was afterwards much alleviated by his Reconcilement to ſo good a Siſter.

Her Letter to King William.

The Royal Family reconciled.

After the Death of his Royal Conſort, King William grew more particularly fond of the Duke of Glouceſter, and, on the 6th of February, 1696, cauſed him to be elected a Knight Companion of the moſt noble Order of the Garter; and on the 24th of July, (being his Birth-Day) he was inſtall'd at Windſor, in Perſon. This illuſtrious Youth, though he was but of a weak and tender Conſtitution, had yet a manly Soul, and a very lively Genius. He began early with the Theory of War; underſtood the Terms of Fortification and Navigation; knew all the different Parts of a ſtrong Place, and Ship of War; and could marſhal a Company of Boys, who had voluntarily liſted themſelves to attend him. He likewiſe took much Pleaſure in Hunting, and in manly Exerciſes; ſo that in the Year 1698, when he was entring on the 10th Year of his Age, his Majeſty thought fit to take him out of the Hands of the Lady Fitzharding, his Governeſs, and to appoint the Earl of Marlborough to be Governor to his Highneſs. At the ſame Time, the King named the Biſhop of Saliſbury to be his Highneſs's Preceptor, having under him Mr. Willis *, Chaplain to his Majeſty, and Mr. Prat, Chaplain to her Royal Highneſs, who taught him the Rudiments of Learning with great Succeſs: But after all the promiſing Hopes this young Prince gave of a longer Life, and the early Virtues and good Qualities that ſhined † in him, he was ſnatch'd away at the Age of Eleven Years and Five Days, to the great Grief of his Royal Parents, the King and Court; and of all the Well-wiſhers to the Proteſtant Religion, and Lovers of their Country: And, indeed, ſo great a Loſs would have been irreparable, had not King William, in his great Wiſdom and Forecaſt, ſoon after procured an Act of Parliament, for ſettling the Succeſſion of the Crown on the moſt illuſtrious Princeſs Sophia, and her Proteſtant Iſſue.

THE REIGN OF Queen ANNE.

KING WILLIAM III. having expired at Kenſington, on Sunday, the Eighth of March, 170½, about Eight a-Clock in the Morning; and both Houſes of Parliament being immediately aſſembled on this extraordinary Occaſion, a Meſſage was by the Lords ſent to the Commons, to acquaint them with his late Majeſty's Death: Whereupon they came to an unanimous Vote, to addreſs the Queen, to condole with her upon this ſad Occaſion, and to congratulate the happy Acceſſion of her Majeſty to the Throne. Then the Lords in a Conference acquainted the Commons, That it having pleaſed Almighty God to take to himſelf the late King William III. of Glorious Memory, and the Princeſs ANNE being the only Rightful and Lawful Queen of theſe Realms, the Lords had thought fit to acquaint the Commons, that Orders were given for Proclaiming her Majeſty that Afternoon. On the other Hand, the Members of the Privy-Council being aſſembled at the Royal Palace at St. James's, her Majeſty ſpoke to them in theſe Words:

A. D. 1702.

King William dies, March 8.

MY LORDS,

Queen Anne's firſt Declaration to the Privy-Council.

" I Am extremely ſenſible of the general Misfortune to theſe Kingdoms, in the " unſpeakable Loſs of the King, and of the great Weight and Burden it brought " in particular, upon my ſelf; which nothing could encourage me to undergo, but " the great Concern I have for the Preſervation of our Religion, and the Laws and " Liberties of my Country: All theſe being as dear to me, as they can be to

A. D. 1702.

" any Perſon whatſoever, you may depend upon it, that no Pains nor Diligence " ſhall ever be wanting on my Part, to preſerve and ſupport them, to maintain " the Succeſſion in the Proteſtant Line, and the Government in Church and State, as " it is by Law eſtabliſh'd.

" I think it proper upon this Occaſion of my firſt ſpeaking to you, to declare my " own Opinion of the Importance of carrying on all the Preparations that we are " making to oppoſe the great Power of France: And I ſhall loſe no Time in " giving our Allies all Aſſurances, That nothing ſhall be wanting on my Part, " to purſue the true Intereſt of England, together with theirs, for the Support of the " Common Cauſe.

" In order to theſe Ends, I ſhall always be ready to aſk the Advice of my Coun- " cil, and of both Houſes in Parliament; and deſirous to Countenance and Employ " all thoſe who ſhall heartily concur and join with me in ſupporting and maintain- " ing the preſent Eſtabliſhment and Conſtitution, againſt all Enemies and Oppoſers " whatſoever.

After this gracious Declaration, the Queen cauſed all the Lords, and others of the late King's Privy-Council, to take the Oaths to her in the ſame Quality; and order'd Two Proclamations forthwith to be publiſhed, one ſignifying her Majeſty's Pleaſure, That all Perſons being in Office of Authority, or Government, at the Deceaſe of the late King, ſhould ſo continue till her Majeſty's further Directions; the other, for the better Obſervance of the Act for laying Duties upon Malt.

The Queen Proclaim'd.

In the Afternoon, the Queen was proclaim'd by the Heralds, with the uſual Solemnity, and the loud repeated Acclamations of the People: Though 'tis remarkable, that this Day afforded a viſible Mixture of Sorrow and Joy; many being apprehenſive that the Death of King William, at this critical Juncture, might be attended with Conſequences fatal to Europe in general, and to the Proteſtant Succeſſion of theſe Kingdoms, in particular.

The Queen's Letter to the Scotch Privy-Council, March 8.

As ſoon as the Queen was proclaim'd, ſhe cauſed a Letter to be written to the Privy-Council of her Kingdom of Scotland, acquainting them, " That it having " pleaſed Almighty God to call out of this Life her Royal and moſt Dearly-beloved " Brother King William, whereby the undoubted Right to the Imperial Crown of the " Kingdom of Scotland, conform to the Act of Settlement, was devolved upon her: And " having (according to the Petition of Right and Grievances) taken and ſigned the Coro- " nation-Oath, in Preſence of ſeveral of her Privy-Council; ſhe thought fit to autho- " rize them to continue to meet, and act as her Privy-Council of that her ancient " Kingdom, until ſhe ſhould ſend them a new Commiſſion, for that Effect. Moreover, " her Majeſty authorized and required them to publiſh an incloſed Proclamation, or- " daining all Officers of State, Counſellors, Magiſtrates, and all other Officers, " Civil and Military, to act in all Things conform to the Commiſſions and Inſtru- " ctions they had from his late Majeſty, until new Commiſſions could be prepared " and ſent down. And her Majeſty on this Occaſion, at her firſt Acceſſion to the " Crown, gave them, and all her good People, full Aſſurance of her firm Reſolu- " tion, during the whole Courſe of her Reign, to protect them in their Religion, " Laws, and Liberties, and in the eſtabliſhed Government of the Church. The next Day, the Houſe of Lords in a Body attended the Queen with an Addreſs, " Moſt heartily congratulating her Majeſty's happy Acceſſion to the Throne; " aſſuring her of their zealous and firm Reſolutions to ſupport her undoubted Right " and Title, and the Succeſſion of the Proteſtant Line, againſt all her Enemies what- " ſoever; being ſenſible their great Loſs was no otherwiſe to be repaired, to them- " ſelves and their Confederates, but by a moſt ſincere and vigorous Adherence to " her Majeſty, and her Allies, in the Proſecution of thoſe Meaſures already entred " into, to reduce the exorbitant Power of France. And humbly deſiring, That for " the Encouragement of her Majeſty's Allies, no Time might be loſt in com- " municating to them her Majeſty's Reſolutions of adhering firmly to the Al- " liances already made, which they ſhould never be wanting, to the utmoſt of " their Power, to enable her Majeſty to maintain." The ſame * Day, the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, with the reſt of the Biſhops then in Town; and on the 10th of March, about Noon, the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, and Common Council of the City of London, waited upon the Queen, to condole and congratulate with her. poſe: And their Example was afterwards follow'd by all the Corporations in her Majeſty's Dominions. The Commons, in a particular Manner, "unanimouſly aſ-
"ſured her, That they would, to the utmoſt, aſſiſt and ſupport her Majeſty on that "Throne where GOD had placed her, againſt the Pretended Prince of Wales, and "all her Enemies: And ſince nothing could conduce more to the Honour and Safety
"of her Majeſty and her Kingdoms, than maintaining inviolably ſuch Alliances as "had been or ſhould be made, for preſerving the Liberties of Europe, and reducing "the Exorbitant Power of France; they aſſured her Majeſty, that they were firmly "reſolv'd, to enable her Majeſty to proſecute that glorious Deſign. And that all "her Subjects might reſt in a full Aſſurance of Happineſs under her Majeſty's Reign,
"they would maintain the Succeſſion of the Crown in the Proteſtant Line, accord"ing to the Limitation in the ſeveral Acts of Settlement; and effectually provide "for, and make good the PUBLICK CREDIT of the Nation." The Queen
"return'd them her hearty Thanks for the kind Aſſurances they gave her, which "could not be more agreeably confirm'd to her, than by their giving Diſpatch to all "their Preparations for the publick Service, and the Support of the Allies." And this good Harmony between the Queen and her Parliament, together with the Reſolution of the Commons about Publick Credit, immediately rais'd the National Funds above their former Value, which upon King William's Death had fallen about Fifteen per Cent.

Addreſs of the Commons.

On the Eleventh of March, the Queen went to the Houſe of Peers, with the uſual Solemnity; and the Commons being ſent for up, and attending, her Majeſty addreſs'd her ſelf to both Houſes in the following Speech:

My LORDS and GENTLEMEN,

The Queen's Speech to both Houſes. March 11.

"I Cannot too much lament my own Unhappineſs in ſucceeding to the Crown ſo
"immediately after the Loſs of a King, who was the great Support, not only
"of theſe Kingdoms, but of all Europe: And I am extremely ſenſible of the Weight
"and Difficulty it brings upon me.

"But the true Concern I have for our Religion, for the Laws and Liberties of "England, for the maintaining the Succeſſion to the Crown in the Proteſtant Line,
"and the Government in Church and State, as by Law eſtabliſhed, encourages me
"in this great Undertaking, which I promiſe my ſelf will be ſucceſsful, by the "Bleſſing of GOD, and the Continuance of that Fidelity and Affection, of which "you have given me ſo full Aſſurance.

"The preſent Conjuncture of Affairs requires the greateſt Application and Diſ-
"patch; and I am very glad to find in your ſeveral Addreſſes ſo unanimous a Con"currence in the ſame Opinion with me, That too much cannot be done for the "Encouragement of our Allies, to reduce the exorbitant Power of France.

"I cannot but think it very neceſſary upon this Occaſion, to deſire you to con-
"ſider of proper Methods towards obtaining of an UNION between England and "Scotland, which has been ſo lately recommended to you, as a Matter that very "nearly concerns the Peace and Security of both Kingdoms.

GENTLEMEN of the Houſe of Commons.

"I need not put you in Mind that the Revenue for defraying the Expences of "the Civil Government is expir'd.

"I rely entirely upon your Affections for the ſupplying it, in ſuch manner as "ſhall be moſt ſuitable for the Honour and Dignity of the Crown.

My LORDS and GENTLEMEN,

"It ſhall be my conſtant Endeavour to make you the beſt Return for that Duty
"and Affection you have expreſſed to me, by a careful and diligent Adminiſtration
"for the Good of all my Subjects. And as I know my own Heart to be ENTIRELY
"ENGLISH, I can very ſincerely aſſure you, there is not any Thing you can ex"pect or deſire from me, which I ſhall not be ready to do for the Happineſs and "Proſperity of England; and you ſhall always find Me a Strict and RELIGIOUS *Ob-
"ſerver of my Word.*

The Commons return'd their Thanks for the Queen's Speech, by ſuch Members of their Houſe, as were of the * Privy-Council: And the next Day the Lords attended her Majeſty with an Addreſs, importing, "That they could not ſufficiently expreſs
"the great Satisfaction they received from her moſt Gracious Speech, truſting in "GOD it would have the ſame Effect Abroad as at Home, equally reviving the "Hearts of her Allies and Subjects; uniting all People, and encouraging their ut-

" had ſhewed for our Religion, the Government in Church and State, and the Succeſſion to the Crown in the Proteſtant Line; the Hazards ſhe had expoſed her " ſelf to, in Concert with his late Glorious Majeſty, for maintaining our Laws and " Liberties, as well as her moſt gracious Aſſurances at this Time, gave her Subjects " ſuch a Confidence in her Promiſes, ſuch a dutiful Affection to her Perſon, ſuch a " Zeal for her Service, as would oblige them to make the utmoſt Efforts to ſupport " her Majeſty under the Weight and Difficulties of the preſent Conjuncture. The " Concern, added their Lordſhips, your Majeſty expreſſes for your Allies, is a further " Obligation laid upon us, who are ſenſible their Preſervation is neceſſary to our " own, and who are as deſirous as ever to ſupport the Character of the Crown of " England, in enabling your Majeſty to maintain the Balance of Europe.

" We cannot make ſuitable Returns to your Majeſty for your moſt gracious Promiſes of a careful and diligent Adminiſtration for the Publick Good, which we " think our ſelves ſufficiently ſecured of, by ſo ſolemn an Engagement under your " Sacred Word. Your Majeſty hath been pleaſed to aſſure us of all we could wiſh, " and recommend to us what we ought to deſire. And we doubt not your pious " Intentions will procure a Bleſſing from Heaven, And your Majeſty may be aſſured, That Reſolutions ſo becoming a Queen of England, cannot but make the " deepeſt Impreſſion upon all Hearts, that are true to the Intereſt of their Country."

The Queen's Anſwer.

To this the Queen was pleas'd to Anſwer, " That it was a great Satisfaction to her " to find, that what ſhe had ſaid had their Lordſhips Concurrence and Approbation: And ſhe was willing to repeat to them, That ſhe ſhould always hold very " exactly to the Aſſurances ſhe had given them." But, notwithſtanding theſe reciprocal Compliments between the Queen and her Parliament, it is obſervable that many were highly offended at this Expreſſion in her Speech, That her Heart was ENTIRELY ENGLISH; which was a glaring Inſinuation, That the late King's Heart was not ſo: Though 'tis certain, he had ſpent moſt of his private Fortune (computed at no leſs than Two Millions Sterling, ready Money) in the Service of the Engliſh Nation: Which may well be thought more than an Equivalent for the Favours and Rewards he beſtow'd on a few Foreigners, who ſettled themſelves in England.

Offence taken at an Expreſſion in her Speech.

The Addreſs of Condoleance and Congratulation of the Biſhop and Clergy of the City of London, having, the ſame * Day, been preſented to the Queen by the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, the Biſhop of London being indiſpoſed, her Majeſty made Anſwer, " She was very well pleaſed with the Marks of their Good-will, and they " might be ſure ſhe ſhould always have a particular Care of the CHURCH:" Which Promiſe ſhe made good through the whole Courſe of her Reign. In the Evening the Duke of Bedford, and the Earl of Marlborough, were elected Knights Companions of the moſt Noble Order of the Garter; and the † next Day, the latter was appointed Captain General of all her Majeſty's Forces in England, or which were to be employ'd Abroad, in Conjunction with the Troops of her Allies.

† March 14.

Some Days ‖ before, purſuant to her own Declaration in Council, and the Lords Deſire in their firſt Addreſs, the Queen wrote a Letter to the States-General of the United Provinces, " Acquainting them with the afflicting News of the Death of her " moſt Dear Brother, of Glorious Memory, which was certainly a very great Loſs " to all Europe, and in particular to their State: But aſſuring them, That as ſhe had " ſucceeded him in the Throne of theſe Kingdoms, ſhe ſhould alſo ſucceed him in the " ſame Inclination to preſerve a conſtant Union and Amity with the States, and " maintain all the Alliances that had been made with them; and likewiſe to concur with them in all the Meaſures that ſhould be neceſſary for the Preſervation of " the common Liberty of Europe, and for reducing the Power of France within due " Bounds; adding, That ſhe ſhould always look upon the Intereſts of England, and " thoſe of their State as inſeparable, and united by ſuch Ties as could not be broke " without the greateſt Prejudice to both Nations." This Letter was tranſmitted to Mr. Stanhope, with new Credentials, as Envoy Extraordinary from England; and that Miniſter having delivered both to the States-General, her Majeſty's Letter was immediately made publick, to diſſipate the Reports induſtriouſly ſpread Abroad by the Emiſſaries of France, that England would not proſecute the Meaſures agreed upon between the late King and his Confederates.

The Earl of Marlborough made Captain-General.

The Queen's Letter to the States General.

The ſurprizing News of King William's Death, caſt the Dutch into deep Sorrow, and juſt Alarms; but the Queen's comfortable Letter made ſo lively an Impreſſion on their Minds, and ſo far recover'd their drooping Spirits, That on the 25th of March, N. S. the States of Holland and Weſt-Friezland, went in a Body to the Aſſembly of the States-General; where, having condoled their irreparable Loſs, they repreſented, " That, in this dangerous Conjuncture, nothing could prove more ef" fectual for their Preſervation, than a perfect Unity, mutual Confidence, and a vi" gorous Reſolution, for the Defence of their Country, and by adhering firmly to " thoſe

" ready to perform their Part, and rather to ſacrifice all their Blood and Treaſure,
" than to ſee their State, their Liberty and their Religion deſtroy'd." This ſeaſonable Reſolution being approv'd and confirm'd by the States-General, the Earl of Marlborough arrived in that critical Juncture at the Hague, with the Character of Ambaſſador-Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary, (which he had received from the late King) in order to enter into a more ſtrict Alliance with the States. The French Reſident, Monſieur de Barre, endeavour'd to break this Negotiation, and for that Purpoſe deliver'd a Memorial to the States-General; but the ſame containing divers Reflections, as well upon the late King, as the former Conduct of the States, and not a few threatning Expreſſions, it had a quite contrary Effect: For the States having given him a very ſmart Reply, went on with their Negotiations; and the Siege of Keyſerſwaert was reſolv'd upon before the Departure of the Earl of Marlborough, who return'd to England on the 5th of April, O. S.

The Earl of Marlborough arrives at the Hague, March 28. N. S.

All this while the Houſe of Commons, with great Zeal and Unanimity, purſued the Affairs recommended to their Conſideration from the Throne. On the 14th of March, they reſolv'd to grant a Supply, for the better Support of her Majeſty's Houſhold, and of the Honour and Dignity of the Crown: And Three Days after they voted further, That towards the ſaid Supply, the ſame Revenues which were payable to the late King, be granted and continued to her preſent Majeſty during her Life, from the Death of his late Majeſty. On the 19th the Commons paſs'd a Bill, for taking and ſtating the Publick Accounts of the Kingdom, and gave Leave for a Bill to be brought in, for enabling her Majeſty to appoint Commiſſioners to treat for an UNION between the Kingdoms of England and Scotland, and appointed Sir Rowland Gwyn, Mr. Secretary Vernon, and Colonel Stanhope to prepare the ſame. Five Days after, Mr. Speaker, and the Members preſent, took the Oath directed in the Act made this Seſſion, For the further Security of his Majeſty's Perſon, and the Succeſſion of the Crown in the Proteſtant Line, and for extinguiſhing the Hopes of the pretended Prince of Wales; according to the Alterations lately agreed to by the Houſe. The ſaid Oath was taken the next and following Days, by other Members; but ſome others declin'd it, and abſented themſelves from the Houſe.

Proceedings of the Commons.

Upon the 30th of that Month, the Queen came to the Houſe of Lords with the uſual Solemnity, and gave the Royal Aſſent to An Act for the better Support of her Majeſty's Houſhold, and of the Honour and Dignity of the Crown; and to ſeveral other publick and private Bills. After this, the Queen made a Speech to both Houſes,
" Returning Thanks to the Commons, in particular, for continuing to her the " ſame Revenue they had granted to the late King; and aſſuring them, That " while her Subjects remain'd under the Burden of ſuch great Taxes, ſhe would " ſtreighten her ſelf in her own Expences, rather than not contribute all ſhe could " to their Eaſe and Relief, with a juſt Regard to the Support of the Honour and " Dignity of the Crown: And that though the Revenue might fall very ſhort of " what it had formerly produced, ſhe would give Directions, that One Hundred
" Thouſand Pounds be applied to the publick Service in this Year, out of the Reve" nue they had ſo unanimouſly given her." This Politick Generoſity wonderfully endear'd the Queen to all her People; and was thankfully acknowledged by Addreſſes from both Houſes of Parliament, to which her Majeſty return'd moſt gracious Anſwers. Theſe mutual Aſſurances of Confidence and Affection being over, the Commons applied themſelves to bring to Perfection the Money-Bills; but ſpent a great deal of Time in relieving ſeveral Perſons, who had petition'd them, in Relation to the Iriſh Forfeitures.

In the mean while, Baron Spanheim, Ambaſſador Extraordinary from the King of Pruſſia, Baron Shutz, Envoy Extraordinary from the Elector of Hanover, and Duke of Zell; Count Wratiſlaw, Envoy Extraordinary, Mr. Hoffman, Reſident from the Emperor; and ſome other Foreign Miniſters, had ſeverally private Audiences, both of the Queen, and of her Royal Conſort, to condole, in the Name of their reſpective Maſters, the Death of the late King; and to congratulate her Majeſty's happy Acceſſion to the Throne. It having been ſeveral Times debated in Council, whether the late King ſhould be publickly or privately buried, it was, at laſt, carried for the latter; and accordingly the Funeral Obſequies of that Monarch were perform'd on Sunday Night, the 12th of April. The Proceeding began from Kenſington, from whence the Royal Corps was carried in an open Chariot, attended with a very large Train of Coaches, of the Servants of the Royal Family, the Judges, the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and great Officers of State. The Pall was born by Six Dukes; his Royal Highneſs Prince George was chief Mourner, ſupported by Two Dukes, and followed by Sixteen of the firſt Earls of England, as Aſſiſtants, and after them, the Gentlemen and Grooms of the Bed-Chamber. On the 17th of the ſame Month, Sir Edward Seymour was admitted into the Privy-Council, where, the ſame Day, her Majeſty was pleaſed to declare her Royal Conſort, Prince George of Denmark, Generaliſſimo of all her Forces, both by Sea and Land, and on the 20th, the Duke of Ormond was appointed Commander in Chief of the Land-Forces to be employed aboard the Fleet. The next * Day, the Queen diſcover'd her Inclination to favour the High-Church or Tory Party, preferably to the Low-Church Men, or Whigs: For having cauſed the Names of ſeveral Perſons, firmly attach'd to the Revolution Principles, (particularly the Lords Somers, and Halliſax, to be left out of the Liſt of her Privy-Council, She cauſed their Places to be fill'd up by the Marquis of Normanby, the Earl of Abingdon, Sir John Leviſon Gower, and John How, Eſq; And at the ſame Time, the Queen deliver'd the Privy-Seal into the Cuſtody of the Marquis of Normanby, for whom her Majeſty retain'd (a) a particular Regard; and the Seal of the Dutchy of Lancaſter, to Sir John Leviſon Gower. By this Time, there appeared to be a Diviſion among the Courtiers, occaſion'd by a Rivalſhip about the Queen's Favour between the Earls of Rocheſter and Marlborough: But though the great Abilities, Integrity, and conſummate Experience of the former, were ſupported by his being a near Relation  to her Majeſty; yet the Earl of Marlborough ſoon got the Aſcendant. It having been moved †† in Council to declare War againſt France and Spain, the Earl of Rocheſter, and ſome other Members, repreſented the Inconveniencies that might attend ſuch a Step; urging, that it was ſafer for the Engliſh to act only as Auxiliaries: But the Earl of Marlborough maintain'd, on the contrary, that it not only became the Honour of the Crown and Nation, to make good the late King's Engagements, but that France could never be reduced within due Bounds, unleſs the Engliſh enter'd as Principals in the Quarrel. This Opinion being ſupported by the Dukes of Somerſet and Devonſhire, the Earl of Pembroke, and ſome others, the Majority of that illuſtrious Aſſembly gave into it, and thereupon her Majeſty order'd a Declaration of War to be drawn up. However, the Queen being willing to have the Advice of her Commons upon this important Affair, Mr. Comptroller, by her Majeſty's Command, laid |||| before them, a Convention between her Majeſty, the Emperor, and the States-General, about declaring War againſt France and Spain: After the Reading of which, the Commons unanimouſly reſolv'd humbly to addreſs the Queen, " To return her Thanks for her Majeſty's communicating to them her " Intentions of declaring War, in Conjunction with her Allies, againſt the French " King and his Grandſon: And to aſſure her, That they would, to the utmoſt, aſ- " ſiſt and ſupport her Majeſty, in carrying on the War.

After his Royal Highneſs's Return to Court, Colonel Churchill was created Baron Churchill of Aymouth in Scotland, and upon that Prince's Acceſſion to the Throne, was made one of the Gentlemen of the Bed-Chamber, Captain of the Third Troop of his Life-Guard, and a Peer of England, by the Title of Baron Churchill of Sandridge in Hertfordſhire. He expreſs'd his Gratitude to his Royal Benefactor, by vying with the moſt faithful of his Servants, in the fixing the Crown upon his Head: Having acted with diſtinguiſh'd Zeal and Alacrity in the quaſhing the Duke of Monmouth's raſh Attempt; and with the ſame dutiful Affection, he afterwards endeavour'd to diſſuade that unfortunate Monarch from purſuing thoſe Counſels, which viſibly tended to his Ruin. But when, from many concurring Circumſtances, the Lord Churchill found King James fully bent upon the Deſign of introducing Popery, and Arbitrary Power, and that he had thereby loſt the Hearts of the Generality of his Subjects, he thought himſelf diſengaged from any Ties of former Obligations, and, in Conſcience, obliged to concert Meaſures with thoſe who invited over the Prince of Orange, and promoted the enſuing Revolution. Upon his leaving King James, the Lord Churchill was declared Lieutenant-General by the Prince of Orange, who as ſoon as he had aſcended the Throne, farther acknowledged his late Service, by making him one of the Gentlemen of his Bed-Chamber, and creating him Earl of Marlborough. His Lordſhip commanded the Engliſh Forces that ſerved that Year in Flanders, under Prince Waldeck; and in the Year 1690, reduced the Towns of Cork and Kingſale in Ireland, with ſurprizing Expedition. The next Year he made the Campaign under King William in Flanders, but, whatever was the Reaſon, was ſoon after removed from all his Employments under the King. He behaved himſelf ſo prudently in his Diſgrace, that he was afterwards reſtored to Favour, conſtituted Governor to the Duke of Glouceſter, and ſerv'd as one of the Lords Juſtices of England, Three Times ſucceſſively, during the Abſence of King William; who being ſenſible of his great Qualifications, both for the Field, and for the Cabinet, appointed him, at laſt, General of the Foot, Commander in Chief of the Engliſh Forces in Holland, and Ambaſſador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary for the Negotiations at the Hague, in which Employments he was continued by the Queen.

To give Poſterity a more particular Idea of that great Man, who is to make ſo ſhining a Figure in this Hiſtory: The Earl of Marlborough was, by Nature, deſign'd for a Favourite; by Fortune and perſonal Merit, raiſed to be a GENERAL; and, by his own Obſervation, and long Experience of Court Intrigues, made a Stateſman: His Perſon was lofty and well made; his Features manly, yet beautiful; his Look gracious and open; his Mien great; his Parts quick; his Memory faithful and exact; his Penetration deep; his Judgment ſolid; his Courage undaunted: He was conſummate in all the Acts of a Courtier, ſupple, affable, ſedate; reſerv'd, both with Friends and Enemies; ſober, averſe to Luxury; and though, in a voluptuous Court, he indulg'd himſelf in ſome Liberties of Life, yet he ſtill preſerv'd a good Reputation with all Men. He was ambitious, but free from Haughtineſs and Oſtentation. His Aſcent was ſo gradual, and ſo long foreſeen, that it appear'd rather a Growth than a Flight; and therefore was the leſs envied, as it ſeem'd the more merited. As a Soldier, he ever was a Man of nice Honour, punctual, vigilant, indefatigable: Before he was advanc'd to the Degree of a General, he had a Courage of the moſt keen Temper, not without ſome Appetite of Danger; and in the moſt perillous Encounters, he had about him an extraordinary Chearfulneſs. When raiſed to the Command of an Army, he expoſed his Perſon as far as Neceſſity required, with the ſame Unconcernment as he did before: And, in a Day of Battel, gave his Orders with all the Clearneſs and Compoſedneſs imaginable; leading on his Troops without the leaſt Hurry or Peturbation, and rallying thoſe that were diſorder'd, without ſharp or ſowre Reproofs, which rather damp than animate the Soldier's Courage. He was an excellent Diſcerner and Purſuer of Advantage upon his Enemy; but preſerv'd Humanity even amidſt the Horrors of the Field, endeavouring to reſtrain the Slaughter which uſually attends Victory, in which he took no greater Delight, than to ſpare the Lives of the conquer'd. He was a ſtrict Obſerver of his Word and Promiſe; and he gain'd the Affections of the Soldiers by his Good-Nature, and of the Officers by his Affability. As a Stateſman, he managed Variety of Buſineſs, either ſingle, or in concert with the Prime Miniſter, with great Dexterity, Eaſe, and Sufficiency. In Council, he never was ſupercilious or aſſuming; but could bear Contradiction without Paſſion, and by cool Argumentation, bring others over to his own Opinion. No Man had ever fewer idle Words; and though he was not Maſter of Oratory, yet in Debates of Importance he always expreſs'd himſelf very pertinently; and by his Temper and Reſervedneſs in Diſcourſe, he ſtill maintain'd his Reputation of a wiſe Man. He had a particular Talent of inſinuating himſelf, himſelf, and gaining upon the Minds of thoſe he dealt with; ſo that no General ever commanded Troops of different Nations with more Eaſe, nor was any Politician more ſucceſsful, in the moſt weighty and arduous Negociations: Which will appear the more ſurprizing, becauſe Liberality was not the brighteſt Virtue that enter'd the Compoſition of this excellent Character. To ſum it up, King William ſaid of this Great Man, that he had the COOLEST HEAD, and the WARMEST HEART he ever knew; which, from ſo good a Judge, might ſeem the greateſt Elogy: Were it not, that, in another Reſpect, what was moſt true of the Earl of Marlborough, could not be ſaid of any other General, either Ancient or Modern, That he never ſat before a Town, which he did not take; nor ever fought a Battel which he did not win. A. D. 1702.

SIDNEY Lord GODOLPHIN, was deſcended of a very ancient Family in Cornwal, whoſe Name, in that Language, ſignifies a White Eagle, which they conſtantly bore, as part of their Arms, even before the Norman Conqueſt. He was the Second Son of Francis Godolphin, created Knight of the Bath at the Coronation of King Charles the IId, by Dorothy, Daughter of Sir Henry Berkeley; and beſides his natural Abilities, improved by a liberal Education, he had the Advantage of entering the World with the Merit of the unſhaken Loyalty and Affection his Family had ſhewn for the Royal Cauſe, during the Civil War. In the firſt Parliament after the Reſtoration, he was choſen Repreſentative of the Borough of Helſton, in Cornwal, and ſerv'd for ſeveral Parliaments, 'till he was call'd up to the Houſe of Peers. In 1678, he was twice ſent Envoy to Holland, upon Affairs of the greateſt Conſequence; and the next Year, on the Removal of the Earl of Danby, he was made one of the Treaſury, which Truſt he diſcharg'd with great Integrity, Diligence and Applauſe. In 1684, he was advanc'd to the Office of one of the principal Secretaries of State, in the Room of Sir Lionel Jenkins; but ſoon after he reſign'd that Place to the Earl of Middleton, and was thereupon made firſt Commiſſioner of the Treaſury, and created Baron Godolphin of Rialton in Cornwal. Upon King James's Acceſſion, he was appointed Lord Chamberlain to the Queen, and afterwards, on the Removal of the Earl of Rocheſter, made again one of the Commiſſioners of the Treaſury. After the Landing of the Prince of Orange, he was one of the Commiſſioners ſent by King James, to treat with that Prince; which nice Employment he diſcharged with wonderful Prudence; ſo that upon King William's Advancement to the Throne, he was ſtill continued one of the Lords of the Treaſury, ſworn of the Privy-Council, and was Four Times one of the Lords Juſtices of England during the King's Abſence. As to his Perſon, the Lord Godolphin was of a middle Stature, well ſet, and of a ſtrong Conſtitution; his Face of a brown Complexion, ſomewhat diſfigured with the Small-Pox, but enliven'd with a quick piercing Eye; and the natural Severity of his Countenance was now and then ſweeten'd with a Smile. He had a prying contemplative Genius; a ſlow, but unerring Apprehenſion; an exquiſite Judgment; few Words, always to the Purpoſe; was temperate in his Diet, and of a very amorous Temper. His ſuperior Wiſdom and Spirit, made him deſpiſe the low Arts of vain-glorious Courtiers: For he never kept Suitors unprofitably in Suſpence; nor promiſed any Thing that he was not reſolv'd to perform: But as he accounted Diſſimulation the worſt of Lying, his Denials were ſoftened by the Frankneſs and Condeſcention, with which he inform'd thoſe he could not gratify. His great Abilities, and conſummate Experience, qualify'd him for a Prime Miniſter; and his exact Knowledge of all the Branches of the Revenue, particularly fitted him for the Management of the Treaſury. He was thrifty, without the leaſt Tincture of Avarice, or Greedineſs of Riches, being as good an Oeconomiſt of the publick Wealth, as he was of his private Fortune. He had, beſides, a very clear Conception of the whole Policy of the Government, both in Church and State, which by the Unskilfulneſs of ſome Men, had, of late, juſtled each other too much. He perfectly knew the Temper, Genius and Diſpoſition of the Engliſh Nation; and though his ſtern Gravity was ſomewhat ſhocking, and ungracious, yet his ſteady and impartial Juſtice recommended him to the Eſteem of almoſt every body; ſo that no Man, in ſo many different publick Stations, and ſo great a Variety of Buſineſs, ever had more Friends, or fewer Enemies. As to Parties, which before and ſince the Revolution diſtracted the Nation, the Earl of Marlborough, and the Lord Godolphin, both by Education and Inclination, were ſtaunch Friends to the eſtabliſh'd Church; by Reaſon and Principle firmly attach'd to the Proteſtant Succeſſion, and as ſuch, inclined to ſide with the Whigs, and to favour the Diſſenters. Theſe were the Two Great Men, whoſe wiſe and ſucceſsful Management of Civil and Military Affairs, raiſed this Reign to a higher Pitch of Glory, than any that ſtands recorded in our Engliſh Annals.

The entire Harmony between the Queen and both Houſes of Parliament, did ſtrangely diſappoint the Diſaffected, who expected nothing but Confuſion upon the late King's Death: And who, to ſhew their Joy at an Accident that had cauſed a general Affliction in moſt Parts of Europe, were wont, in their private Clubs, to drink the Health of SORREL, the Horſe from which his Majeſty had his mortal Fall. Nay, ſo maliciouſly witty was one of their Poets, as to celebrate that Animal in a Latin Epigram: But not contented with theſe ungenerous Inſults, the Diſaffected endeavour'd to blaſt the late King's Memory, and to render his Friends obnoxious, by charging upon him a Deſign of excluding the Princeſs Anne. For King William had no ſooner breathed his laſt, than a Report was induſtriouſly ſpread, "That ſome Papers were found in his ſtrong Box, whereby it appear'd, That he "had laid a Scheme to get the Elector of Hanover declared his immediate Succeſſor: "That in order to effect this, the Troops of Hanover and Cell were to file off to- "wards the Sea-Coaſt of Holland: That ſoon after the King's Return from thence, "a Sham Inſurrection was to be excited either in Scotland or Ireland, to give the "King a colourable Pretence for inviting over the Hanoverian Troops, with their "Prince to command them; and that ſeveral Peers, privy to this Deſign, were to "be made Lord-Lieutenants of Counties, in order to influence the Elections for "Members of a new Parliament." This Report had gain'd ſo far upon the Belief of ſome People, that the City of Norwich, in their Addreſs * to the Queen, did not ſtick to congratulate her Majeſty's moſt happy and peaceable Acceſſion to the Throne, notwithſtanding all the malicious Deſigns and Contrivances uſed to defeat her Majeſty of her undoubted Right.

And order'd, That the "Matter of Fact aforeſaid, and the Reſolution of this Houſe thereupon, be laid be- "fore her Majeſty by the Duke of Bolton, the Earl Marſhal, the Earls of Radnor, "Stamford, and Scarborough, and the Lord Ferrers: And that they do humbly deſire "her Majeſty to order Mr. Attorney-General to proſecute, with the utmoſt Severity "of Law, the Authors or Publiſhers of ſuch ſcandalous Reports. The Lords named in this Order, having waited on the † Queen, ſhe told them, That ſhe was very ready to do any Thing of this Kind, and would give Directions to Mr. Attorney-General, effectually to proſecute the Authors and Publiſhers of ſuch Falſe Reports. The Day || before, a Complaint was alſo made to the Houſe of Peers, of a Paſſage in the Preface of a Book, entituled, The Hiſtory of the late Parliament, &c. which though it did not directly reflect on the late King's Memory, yet manifeſtly tended to caſt an indelible Odium upon his Friends, being couch'd in theſe Words: "And, perhaps, there "was a Thing in Proſpect of deeper Reach than all theſe; which was, that ſhould "it have pleas'd GOD to have ſnatch'd from us the King, on a ſudden, by Chance "of War, or other fatal Accident, during the Tumult of Arms Abroad, and the "Civil Diſorders they had rais'd among us at Home, and a numerous, corrupt, "licentious Party throughout the Nation, from which the Houſe of Commons was "ſometimes not free, they might entertain Hopes, from the Advantage of being at "the Helm, and the Aſſiſtance of their Rabble, to have put in Practice their own "Schemes, and have given us a new Model of Government, of their own Proje- "ction; and ſo to have procur'd to themſelves a laſting Impunity, and to have "mounted their own Beaſt, the Rabble, and driven the ſober Part of the Nation, "like Cattle, before them. That this is no groundleſs Conjecture, will readily "appear to any conſidering Perſons, from the Treatment her Royal Highneſs the "PRINCESS of Denmark, the Heireſs apparent to the Crown, met with all along "from them, and all their Party. They were not contented to ſhew her a conſtant "Neglect and Slight themſelves, but their whole Party were inſtructed to treat her, "not only with Diſreſpect, but Slight: They were buſy to traduce her with falſe "and ſcandalous Aſperſions; and ſo far they carried the Affront, as to make her "at one Time almoſt the common Subject of the Tittle-Tattle of almoſt every "Coffee-Houſe, and Drawing-Room, which they promoted with as much Zeal, Injurious Reflections on the Whigs, in a Preface to the Hiſtory of the laſt Parliament.

" Application and Venom, as if a BILL OF EXCLUSION had then been on the " Anvil. A. D. 1702.

After the Reading of this Paſſage, the Lords ordered the Bookſeller, for whom the ſaid Book was printed, to attend their Houſe, on the next Saturday: But before that Day came, Dr. Drake having own'd himſelf to be the Author of the Book in Queſtion, he was on the 9th of May, examin'd by the Lord Keeper, who aſk'd him what he had to ſay concerning the ſaid Book? The Doctor anſwer'd, He thought he had juſt Reaſon to write what he had writ, he having heard her Highneſs talk'd of diſreſpectively in every Coffee-Houſe; and then he withdrew. After ſome Debate, he was call'd in again, and the Lord Keeper told him, the Houſe was not ſatisfied with what he had ſaid, but thought he trifled, and requir'd him to acquaint the Houſe with the Grounds of his writing the forementioned Paragraph. He anſwer'd, He found it mention'd in divers Anonymous Pamphlets publiſh'd at that Time, and hoped it was no Hurt to anſwer thoſe Pamphlets, and deſir'd Time to recollect what thoſe Pamphlets were; and then withdrew. After ſome Time he was call'd in again, and ask'd whether he could charge any Perſon in the Kingdom, with the Matters aſſerted by him in that Paragraph? And whether he had heard any Perſons ſay, that they could charge any Perſons whatſoever, with the Matters contained in that Paragraph? To theſe Queſtions he anſwer'd, He did not know of any ſuch Perſon; and being further aſk'd, if he had any other Grounds beſides the Pamphlets, and what the Pamphlets were? He ſaid, He had no other Grounds beſides the ſeveral Pamphlets following, viz. The Two Legion Letters, The Black Liſt, The Jura Populi Anglicani, and Toland's Reaſons for inviting over the Princeſs of Hanover. Laſtly, he was aſk'd, Whether in any one of theſe Pamphlets, there was any Thing ſaid about ſetting aſide the preſent Queen? To which the Doctor having anſwer'd, He did not remember there was; and being withdrawn, the Lords took the ſaid Paragraph into Conſideration, and Reſolv'd, That there were in it ſeveral Expreſſions which were Groundleſs, Falſe, and Scandalous, tending to create Jealouſies in her Majeſty of her People, and to cauſe great Miſunderſtandings, Fears and Diſputes among the Queen's Subjects, and to diſturb the Peace and Quiet of the Kingdom. Ordering, at the ſame Time, That her Majeſty's Attorney-General ſhould forthwith effectually proſecute Dr. Drake, for having writ the ſaid Paragraph.

Cenſure paſs'd upon his Book.

Three Days * after, the Lords took into Conſideration Two Paragraphs of a Book, entituled, The true Picture of a Modern Whig, ſet forth in a Dialogue between Mr. Whiglove and Mr. Double, (ſuppoſed to be written by Dr. Davenant) which contain'd the following Expreſſions, viz. " Whiglove, I find we have miſcarried in " one great Deſign, the Train would not take, we were very hot upon it juſt before " the Parliament met, all the Whig Coffee-Houſes rung, how neceſſary it was to " break into the Acts of Settlement, and to exclude—— Double. Mum, Whiglove, " talk no more upon that Subject, I beſeech you: Freſh Orders are iſſued out, and " ſince we are not ſtrong enough to make it go, and that, on the contrary, it " has alarm'd and provok'd all Sorts of Men, we are now directed to ſay, That " never any ſuch Thing was intended by our Party, though, God knows, it was the " Diſcourſe of all our Clubs. Under the Roſe, this was one of thoſe Embrios that " prov'd abortive upon the 30th of December laſt; but though it be not ſeaſonable " to ſtir in it now, never fear our abandoning a wicked Deſign; we never quite lay " aſide any Miſchief: However, ſince it has really opened the Eyes of a great ma- " ny, and weaken'd our Intereſt among ſeveral of our own Side, whom we can- " not work up to be guilty of ſo much Injuſtice; let us take all Occaſions of de- " claring, That we will not violate any of the Acts upon any Account whatſoever; " which we may the more ſafely do, becauſe, you know, 'tis our Principle, not to " think that we are bound by any Proteſtations we make, either in Private, or in " Publick; and 'tis one of the great Advantages we have over the reſt of our Fel- " low-Subjects, that we can fetter the Conſciences of others, while our own are at " perfect Liberty." The Lords, after ſome Debate, paſs'd the ſame Cenſure upon the ſaid Book, as they had paſs'd on part of the Preface of Dr. Drake's Hiſtory.

And cenſured.

Another Complaint was made to the Houſe, on the 16th, of a Book, intituled, Animadverſions upon the Two laſt 30*th of* January Sermons, one preach'd to the Honourable Houſe of Commons, the other to the Houſe of Convocation: In a Letter. After the Reading and Examining ſeveral Paragraphs and Paſſages therein, it was reſolv'd by their Lordſhips, That the ſaid Book, or Pamphlet, was a Malicious, Villainous Libel, containing very many Reflections on King Charles the Iſt, of ever bleſſed Memory, and tending to the Subverſion of Monarchy; and thereupon order'd it to be burnt by the Hands of the common Hangman. Then their Lordſhips took into Conſideration a Printed Sermon preach'd on January 30. 170½, before the Convocation, by Dr. Binks, a Proctor for the Dioceſe of Litchfield and Coventry, wherein the Preacher ſeem'd to make the Sin of the Jews in crucifying our Bleſſed Saviour, much leſs than that of the Engliſh Rebels, in putting to Death King Charles the Firſt: " For, ſays the Doctor, if " with

" with Reſpect to the Dignity of the Perſon, to have been King of the Jews, was " what ought to have ſecur'd our Saviour from Violence: here is alſo one, not only " born to a Crown, but actually poſſeſs'd of it. He was not only called King by " ſome, and at the ſame Time, derided by others for being ſo call'd, but he was " acknowledg'd by all to be a King; he was not juſt dreſs'd up for an Hour or " Two in Purple Robes, and ſaluted with a Hail King, but the uſual Ornaments of " Majeſty were his cuſtomary Apparel." After ſome Debate, the Lords reſolv'd, " That in the ſaid Sermon there are ſeveral Expreſſions that give juſt Scandal and " Offence to all Chriſtian People:" Then it being mov'd to order that Sermon to be burnt, it was carried in the Negative; but at the ſame Time it was order'd that the above-mentioned Reſolution ſhould be communicated to the Biſhop of Litchfield and Coventry, Dr. Binks's Ordinary, whom they left to Cenſure him, according to the Rules of Eccleſiaſtical Courts. In the laſt Place, Complaint being made to the Lords of Two Paſſages in a Pamphlet, entituled, Reaſons for addreſſing his Majeſty to invite into England their Highneſſes the Electoreſs Dowager, and for Attainting and Abjuring the Pretended Prince of Wales: Wherein it was aſſerted, " That it appears " from Hiſtory, That all Free-People have ſet aſide the Children of Tyrants, for " Reaſons of eternal and univerſal Force, as inheriting the Principles and Deſigns " of their Parents, bearing an Affection to their Friends, and owing a Revenge to " their Enemies; and that, whether the Abjuration be Penal or Voluntary, it ſhould " be tender'd to all manner of Perſons not excepting the King's Majeſty, or the " Princeſs of Denmark: For all the Securities we give to them, ſaid the Author, " they owe their Security to us; not that I doubt either of them, but they both of " them very well know, what Stories and Surmiſes our Enemies have been actually " ſpreading to amuſe and intimidate the People; they have whiſper'd horrible " Things of blind and clancular Bargains: But Cæſar's Wife ought to be unſuſpected " as well as innocent." After Examination of that Pamphlet, the Lords reſolv'd, " That there were in it Aſſertions and Inſinuations, ſcandalous and dangerous, tend- " ing to alienate the Affections of the Subjects of this Kingdom from her Majeſty, " and to diſturb the Peace and Quiet of the Kingdom.

Dr. Binks's Sermon cenſured.

Another Pamphlet cenſured.

The War being now declared, both Houſes join'd in an Addreſs to the Queen, wherein they repreſented, " That nothing would more contribute to the effectual " carrying it on, and reducing her Enemies, to the greateſt Streights, than an entire " Prohibition of all Correſpondence with France and Spain, on the Part of the " Allies; and therefore they humbly adviſed her Majeſty to engage the Emperor, " the States-General, and her other Allies, to join with her Majeſty in prohibiting " all Intercourſe between the Subjects of her Majeſty and her Allies, and the Sub- " jects of France and Spain: And alſo to concert ſuch Methods with the States-Ge- " neral, as might moſt effectually ſecure the Trade of her Subjects and her Allies: With the Deſires of which Addreſs her Majeſty readily promiſed to comply: Adding, " She was too much concern'd for the publick Welfare, to omit any neceſſary " Precautions for the Protection of our Trade." On the other Hand, the Lords having made ſome Amendments to a Bill from the Commons, for the Encouragement of Privateers, to which the Commons refuſed their Concurrence; their Lordſhips thereupon, in an Addreſs, repreſented to the Queen, " That the Sea-Preparations " of her Majeſty's Enemies being ſuch, as ſeem'd not to be intended for encoun- " tring and fighting her Royal Navy, but rather for making a Piratical War, " to the Interruption of Commerce, it was, in their Opinion, highly requiſite for " the Publick Service, That her Majeſty would give all poſſible Encouragement to " her Subjects to arm and ſet out private Men of War. And whereas by the Sixth " Article of the Treaty concluded at the Hague, between his late Majeſty, the Em- " peror, and the States-General, her Majeſty was at Liberty to take and ſeize " Lands and Cities belonging to the Spaniſh Dominions in the Indies, and retain the " ſame as her own, their Lordſhips adviſed her Majeſty to grant Commiſſions or " Charters to all Perſons, Bodies Politick or Corporate, who ſhould make Applica- " tion to her Majeſty, and were willing to be Adventurers in making ſuch Acqui- " ſitions in the Indies, ſubject to ſuch Terms and Conditions as her Majeſty ſhould " judge moſt expedient for the Good of her Kingdoms: To which the Queen an- ſwer'd, That ſhe would take all the Care in it ſhe could. Two Days after, her Majeſty went in State to the Houſe of Peers, and gave the Royal Aſſent to ſeveral pub- lick (a) and private Bills; after which her Majeſty made a Speech to both Houſes, wherein wherein having repeated her hearty Thanks for their great Care of the Publick, and the many Marks they had given of their Duty and Affection to her, and recommended to them all the Preſervation of the publick Peace, and a due Execution of the Laws; She told them, She ſhould always wiſh, that no Difference of Opinion among thoſe that were equally affected to her Service, might be the Occaſion of Heat and Animoſities among themſelves; That ſhe ſhould be very careful to preſerve and maintain the Act of Toleration, and to ſet the Minds of all her People at Quiet; but that her own Principles muſt always keep her entirely firm to the Intereſts and Religion of the Church of England, and would incline her to countenance thoſe who had the trueſt Zeal to ſupport it. Then the Lord Keeper, by her Majeſty's Command, prorogued the Parliament to the Seventh Day of July next.

About the middle of May, the Queen was pleaſed to appoint Sir George Rook, Vice-Admiral, and Lieutenant of the Admiralty of England, and Lieutenant of the Navy and Seas of this Kingdom: And, a few Days * after, her Majeſty declared in Council, that ſhe had conſtituted his Royal Highneſs, Prince George of Denmark, Lord High-Admiral of England and Ireland, and of all other her Dominions beyond the Seas. † May 27. Earl of Abingdon Conſtable of the Tower.

In the mean Time, the Naval Preparations in England and Holland were carried on with all poſſible Speed; and as they raiſed the Spirits of the Confederates, ſo gave they no ſmall Alarms to France, Spain, and even Portugal: The Deſign of the intended Expedition having been kept ſo ſecret, that 'twas uncertain which of thoſe Three Kingdoms was moſt threatned. France having ſent a ſtrong Squadron of Men of War into the Weſt-Indies, both to attack the Engliſh Plantations, and to bring Home the Spaniſh Galleons, had no ſufficient Number of Ships left to defend her Coaſts, much leſs any to ſpare to protect thoſe of Spain, whoſe King, in the Beginning of the Spring, was gone to Italy, both to appeaſe the Tumults in the Kingdom of Naples, and to ſhare with the Duke of Vendoſme, the expected Honour of forcing Prince Eugene to repaſs the Mountains of Tirol: And though the King of Portugal gave fair Words to the Imperial Miniſters, and to Mr. Methuen, the Engliſh Envoy, yet his Portugueſe Majeſty began to be apprehenſive, that the Allies, having a formidable Power at Sea, would uſe more prevailing Means than a Negotiation, to make him break his late Engagements with France. On the 30th of May, Sir George Rook, Admiral of the Engliſh Fleet, having hoiſted the Union Flag on Board the Royal-Sovereign, came to Spithead, together with Sir Cloudeſly Shovel, on Board the Queen, and the great Ships that lay at the Nore: And at the ſame Time, Rear-Admiral Fairborne arrived there from Ireland, with a Squadron of Men of War, having on Board Four Regiments of Foot, that were to be part of the Land-Forces, to be commanded by the Duke of Ormond. On the 1ſt of June, his Grace arrived at Portſmouth, accompanied by Sir Henry Bellaſis, who was to ſerve under him, and by Admiral Churchil; and the next Day ‖ Prince George likewiſe ſet out for that Sea-Port. The ſame Day, the Queen went from St. James's to Windſor, having appointed Simon Harcourt, Eſq; to be her Sollicitor-General, and conferr'd the Honour of Knighthood both upon him, and on Edward Northey, Eſq; the Attorney-General. The Day before, out of a juſt Regard to the Laws of Nations, the Queen, by her Royal Proclamation, order'd all Ships, ſtopp'd before the Declaration of War, to be diſcharg'd; and cauſed another Proclamation to be publiſh'd, for the Encouragement of her Ships of War and Privateers. At the ſame Time, her Majeſty renew'd the Commiſſion for the Management of the Cuſtoms; and upon her Return from Windſor, ∴ appointed the Lords Lieutenants, the Commiſſioners of Trade, for Prizes, Stamp and Salt-Duties, and Generals of her Land-Forces; gave Audience to ſeveral Foreign Miniſters; and diſpoſed of many Places and Employments. Earl of Marlborough Maſter of the Ordnance.

Mr. Southwell Secretary of State in Ireland.

Things did not run ſo ſmoothly in Scotland, as they did in England. At the Time of King William's Deceaſe, the Government there was lodg'd in the Hands of Perſons entirely of the Revolution Principles: For the Earl of Marchmont was Lord Chancellor; the Earl of Melvil Lord Preſident of the Council; the Duke of Queenſberry Lord Privy-Seal; the Earls of Seafield and Hyndford, Secretaries of State; the Earl of Selkirk, Lord Regiſter; Adam Cockburne of Ormiſton, Treaſurer-Deputy; Sir John Maxwell of Polock, Juſtice-Clerk; Sir James Stewart, Advocate; and all the Lords of the Treaſury, except the Lord Montgomery, were of the ſame Stamp. But though the Anti-Revolutioners were, in Effect, as much Enemies to Queen Anne's Right to the Crown, as to that of King William, yet they were wonderfully elated at her Acceſſion, and fancied to themſelves a better Title to her Favour, on Account of their Zeal for Epiſcopacy, than Revolution-Men, could pretend to, becauſe moſt part of the latter were for Preſbytery, and the reſt ſo indifferent for Epiſcopacy, that they did not think it ought to come in Competition with the Peace and Quiet of the Nation. The firſt Struggle between theſe Two Parties, was about a Parliament, the ſitting of which, in the Summer, was abſolutely neceſſary, by Reaſon the Funds allotted to ſupport the Army were near expired on King William's Demiſe. The Continuance of the Convention-Parliament, during the whole Reign of that Prince, was complain'd of as a great Grievance, being, indeed, without a Precedent in Scotland, and an Invaſion upon their old Conſtitution, which was an annal Parliament: For their Anceſtors look'd upon it as the beſt Method to ſecure their Liberties; well knowing, that Parliaments of long Continuance are liable to be practiſed upon by a deſigning Miniſtry; and therefore the Country-Party, which took its Riſe from the ill Treatment the Scotch Nation met with in the laſt Reign, about the Buſineſs of Darien, preſs'd much for the diſſolving of that Parliament. On the other Hand, the Revolutioners were afraid to venture upon a new one, leſt the Number of the Country-Party ſhould increaſe, and ſo they uſed their utmoſt Efforts to perſuade the Queen to continue the former, though no Inſtance could ever be given of the ſurviving of a Parliament, after the Deceaſe of the Monarch by whom it was call'd. Hereupon the Duke of Hamilton, Marquis of Twedale, Earl of Marſhal, Earl of Rothes, and a great many of the chief Nobility and Gentry went to London, and repreſented to the Queen the Unreaſonableneſs of ſuch a Project; but her Majeſty did not hearken to their Remonſtrance and Advice; either for fear of irritating the Preſbyterian Party, whoſe Power was magnify'd to her, or becauſe they were more ſubmiſſive to the Engliſh Miniſtry. Her Majeſty being prevail'd upon to continue the former Parliament, a Proclamation was iſſued, appointing it to meet on the 9th of June, 1702; and James Duke of Queensberry, was named High-Commiſſioner to repreſent her Majeſty therein; being a Perſon of good Parts, eaſy Addreſs, and Affability; but extream obnoxious to the Anti-Revolutioners, who becauſe he was the firſt Scotch Peer that left King James, from whom his Father and himſelf had receiv'd many Favours, afforded him no better Epithets, * than of Proto-Rebel, ungrateful Deſerter, void of Honour, Loyalty, Juſtice, Religion, and Ingenuity, the Ruin and Bane of his Country, and the Averſion of all Loyal and true Scotch Men.

Before the Parliament met, Endeavours were uſed to temper and allay the Ill-Humours of the Country-Party: In order to which, the Queen wrote a Letter to the Parliament, in Anſwer to their Letter to the late King, in Relation to the Buſineſs of Darien, and concerning the Union with England. In this Letter her Majeſty declar'd, "That it was her firm Purpoſe and Reſolution to maintain the Sovereignty "and Independency of that her ancient Kingdom, againſt all Invaſions or Encroach-"ments whatſoever; that ſhe ſhould be ever equally tender of the Rights, Prerogatives and Liberties of the Crown, and Kingdom of Scotland, as of thoſe of the "Crown and Kingdom of England, and that ſhe ſhould make it the chief Deſign of "her Reign, to govern both, according to their reſpective Laws and Liberties, "and to avoid all Occaſions of Miſunderſtanding and Differences betwixt them. "That for this End, ſhe ſhould think it her Happineſs to eſtabliſh an Union be-"tween the Two Kingdoms, upon an equal and juſt Foundation: And the Parlia-"ment of England having ſhewn ſo good Inclinations towards this Union, her Ma-"jeſty expected that they (the Parliament of Scotland) would do nothing on their "Part that could obſtruct a Deſign ſo uſeful for the Security and Happineſs of both. "That Orders were given by the late King, that none of the Subjects of Scotland "ſhould be impreſs'd from on Board Scotch Ships, by the Engliſh, for the Sea Ser" vice; and that ſhe had taken effectual Methods, and would give ſuch Orders as " ſhould be neceſſary, for the full Protection of her Subjects in that Kingdom, in " this Matter; and for the Encouragement of Commerce between the Two Nations. " That ſhe did heartily regret the great Loſſes and Diſappointments, which the Com- " pany Trading to Africa and the Indies, had ſuſtain'd, in carrying on their Deſigns " in ſettling a Colony in America, which alſo had been a great Prejudice and Loſs to " the whole Kingdom: And therefore ſhe ſhould concur in any Thing that could " reaſonably be propos'd for their Reparation and Aſſiſtance; and that ſhe ſhould " endeavour to promote the Trade, not only of that Company, but of the whole " Nation; and ſhould do every Thing that was in her Power, for the Welfare and " Proſperity of her People. A. D. 1702.

The Parliament being met at Edinburgh, on the 9th of June, in Purſuance of her Majeſty's laſt Adjournment, the Duke of Hamilton demanded to be heard, and tho' deſir'd by the Lord Chancellor to ſit ſtill, 'till the Queen's Commiſſion was read, and the Houſe conſtituted, yet he perſiſted, and ſaid, both in his own Name, and in Behalf of the other Members who adher'd to him, " That they were all heartily " glad at her Majeſty's happy Succeſſion to the Throne of that Kingdom, not meer- " ly on the Account that it was her undoubted Right by Deſcent, but likewiſe " becauſe of the many Perſonal Virtues, and Royal Qualities her Majeſty was en- " dow'd with, which gave them Grounds to hope, that they ſhould enjoy, under " her auſpicious Reign, all the Bleſſings that could attend a Nation, which had a " gracious and loving Sovereign, united with a dutiful and obedient People. That " they were reſolved to ſacrifice their Lives and Fortunes in Defence of her Maje- " ſty's Right, againſt all her Enemies whatſoever: But that, at the ſame Time, " as they acknowledg'd their Submiſſion to her Majeſty's Authority, they thought " themſelves bound in Duty, by Virtue of the Obedience they owed to the ſtand- " ing Laws of the Nation, and becauſe of the Regard they ought to have for the " Rights and Liberties of their Fellow-Subjects, to declare their Opinion, as to the " Legality of that Meeting, that they did not think themſelves warranted by Law, " to Sit and Act any longer as a Parliament; and that by ſo doing, they ſhould " incur the Hazard of their Lives and Fortunes, if ever their Proceedings ſhould " come to be queſtion'd by a ſubſequent Parliament. Then his Grace read a Paper, containing theſe Words: Foraſmuch as by the Fundamental Laws and Conſtitution of this Kingdom, all Parliaments do diſſolve by the Death of the King or Queen, except in ſo far as innovated by the 17*th* Act, 6*th Seſſion of King* William's Parliament, impowering the Parliament laſt in Being, at his Majeſty's Death, to meet and act what ſhould be needful for the Defence of the true Proteſtant Religion, as now by Law eſtabliſh'd, and maintaining the Succeſſion to the Crown, as ſettled by the Claim of Right, and for preſerving and ſecuring the Peace and Safety of the Kingdom: And now ſeeing that the ſaid Ends are fully ſatisfied by her Majeſty's Succeſſion to the Throne, whereby the Religion and Peace of the Kingdom is ſecur'd; we conceive our ſelves not warranted by this Law, to Meet, Sit, or Act, therefore do diſſent from all that ſhall be done and acted, and thereupon take Inſtrument. The Duke having accordingly taken Inſtruments, he went out of the Houſe, but without giving in his Paper; to which, however, the Clerk-Regiſter, and Seventy Nine of the Members, adhered, and likewiſe took Inſtruments, and withdrew. And as they all paſs'd from the Parliament Houſe to the Croſs-Keys Tavern near the Croſs, they were applauded by the loud Acclamations of an infinite Number of People, of all Ranks and Degrees.

The Parliament of Scotland meets June 9.

Eighty other Members adhere to his Proteſt, and withdraw from the Houſe.

Notwithſtanding the Seceſſion of ſo many Members, the Duke of Queensberry's Commiſſion, to be her Majeſty's High-Commiſſioner this Seſſion was read, as was alſo her Majeſty's Letter to the Parliament, declaring, in the firſt Place, the Reaſons of this Meeting; and her Majeſty's firm Reſolution to maintain and protect her Subjects in the full Poſſeſſion of their Religion, Laws and Liberties, and of the Preſbyterian Government of the Church: Then acquainting them with the juſt Cauſes of declaring War againſt the French King; and earneſtly recommending to them, both the providing competent Supplies for maintaining ſuch a Number of Forces as might be neceſſary for diſappointing the Enemy's Deſigns, and preſerving the preſent happy Settlemint: And the Conſideration of an Union between the Two Kingdoms of England and Scotland, which was recommended to them by the late King. The ſeveral Points of this Letter, were enforced by the Speeches of the Duke of Queenſberry, Lord High-Commiſſioner, and of the Earl of Marchmont, Lord High-Chancellor; and the Parliament being met again Two Days after, * they proceeded to appoint Committees for Security of the Kingdom, for controverted Elections, for drawing up an Anſwer to her Majeſty's Letter, and for Reviſing the Minutes. Then Overtures were received for the following Acts, viz. An Act recognizing her Majeſty's Royal Authority; An Act of adjourning the Court of Judicature, call'd the Seſſion; An Act declaring this preſent Meeting of Parliament to be a lawful and free Meeting of Parliament, and diſcharging any Perſon to diſown

On the other Hand, the Diſſenting Members, of whom Duke Hamilton was the Chief, having prepared an Addreſs to the Queen, to juſtify their Proceedings, and ſent up the ſame by the Lord Blantire, her Majeſty poſitively refuſed to receive it, though ſhe was pleaſed to allow his Lordſhip Acceſs to her Royal Perſon. After mature Deliberation on this nice Affair, her Majeſty reſolv'd to own and maintain this preſent Seſſion of Parliament, and the Dignity and Authority of the ſame, and of her High-Commiſſioner, againſt all Oppoſers: Which ſhe ſignified to the Parliament in a Letter, dated at St. James's, the 17th of June, that was read in the Houſe on the 23d. In the mean Time, the Parliament went on, and on the 19th of June, An Act for a Supply of Ten Months Ceſs upon all Land Rents, receiv'd the Royal Aſſent: But when this Tax came afterwards to be levied, near one half of the Scotch Nation refuſed to pay the ſame; ſo that in many Places, the Government was obliged to uſe forcible Methods to raiſe it. It is alſo obſervable, That, ſome Days before, Alexander Bruce was expell'd the Houſe, upon Account of a Speech, wherein, among other Things, he affirm'd, That Preſbytery was inconſiſtent with MONARCHY: And the Dean and Faculty of Advocates having paſs'd a Vote among themſelves, in Favour of the Proteſtation and Addreſs of the Diſſenting Members, declaring they were founded upon, and in the Terms of the Laws of that Kingdom, were upon that Account, charg'd and proſecuted by the Lord Advocate before the Parliament; where, after ſeveral long Debates upon the Matter, they were ſeverely reprimanded: But it had been much better for the Government, they had not taken any Notice of it, for the Nation was enrag'd to ſee a Learned and Venerable Society attack'd for declaring their Opinion in a Point of Law, which ſo nearly concern'd the Foundation and Conſtitution of the Parliament, and conſequently the Liberty and Right of the Subject. On the 25th of June, the Royal Aſſent was given to an Act for enabling her Majeſty to appoint Commiſſioners for an Union between the Two Kingdoms: Though ſome Members diſſented from it, becauſe they could not get a Clauſe inſerted in it, about the Preſbyterian Church Government.

The Queen reſolves to maintain the Authority of this Parliament.

Further Proceedings of this Parliament.

The Dean and Faculty of Advocates reprimanded.

Act for an Union paſs'd.

The Succeſſion to the Crown having been ſettled in England, by Two Acts of Parliament, on the moſt ſerene Houſe of Hanover, after her Majeſty and her Iſſue, in the Proteſtant Line, and nothing of this Nature having been done in Scotland, the Earl of Marchmont thought it proper to propoſe it at this Time, and contrary to the Advice of his Friends, and even the Commands of the Lord Commiſſioner, preſented the Overture of an Act for Abjuring the pretended Prince of Wales, &c. But though ſuch as continued in the Houſe, were unanimous enough in other Points, yet they could not agree in this: And the Party who oppoſed the ſettling of the Succeſſion at this Time, alledging, that it would rather prove an Obſtacle, than an Encouragement to the intended UNION, having attempted to admit the Diſſenting Members into the Houſe for their Aſſiſtance; the Lord High-Commiſſioner, fearing the Conſequences, thought fit, on the 30th of June, to adjourn the Parliament to the 18th of Auguſt; having return'd them Thanks for their Chearfulneſs and Unanimity in their Proceedings. It may, ſays a Scotch ‖ Writer, be thought ſtrange that this Act, for Settling the Succeſſion, did not paſs currently in ſuch a made-up Meeting, and when ſuch eminently zealous Revolutioners were at the Helm of Affairs, and acted without any Controul. I preſume, adds he, the Reaſons were, Firſt, the Commiſſioner had no Inſtruction therein; Secondly, The Uncertainty how Affairs would go in England, the Queen being but newly come to the Crown, and not well fix'd in the Throne; and they foreſaw they might expect little Thanks, if ſhe afterwards ſhould favour the Intereſt of the diſtreſſed Royal Family. And I have Reaſon to believe, that the Queen, and her Engliſh Miniſtry, were then inclined to keep the Succeſſion in Scotland open, as a Check and Awe upon the Whigs, and Family of Hanover: And laſtly, (as they pretended afterwards in England) that Parliament's Title to act being controverted, and having ſo little Authority in the Nation, it was not thought fit to venture upon it a Matter of ſo great Importance. As ſoon as the Parliament was adjourn'd, the Leading Men of the different Parties haſten'd to London, to make their ſeveral Repreſentations of Things to the Queen, and her Engliſh Miniſters.

The Queen being impower'd by Acts of Parliament, of both Kingdoms, to nominate Commiſſioners for treating about an UNION between England and Scotland, her Majeſty appointed the following Perſons for England, viz. Thomas Lord Archbiſhop ſhop of Canterbury; Sir Nathan Wright, Knight, Lord Keeper of the Great-Seal of England; Thomas Earl of Pembroke and Montgomery, Lord Preſident of the Council; John Marquis of Normanby, Lord Keeper of the Privy-Seal; William Duke of Devonſhire, Lord Steward of her Majeſty's Houſhold; Charles Duke of Somerſet, Maſter of the Horſe to her Majeſty; Edward Earl of Jerſey, Lord Chamberlain to her Majeſty; Charles Earl of Burlington; Daniel Earl of Nottingham, one of her Majeſty's Principal Secretaries of State; Lawrence Earl of Rocheſter, Lord Lieutenant of Ireland; John Earl of Marlborough, Captain-General of all her Majeſty's Forces, and Maſter-General of the Ordnance; Richard Earl of Scarborough; the Lord Biſhop of London; Sir Charles Hedges, the other Principal Secretary of State; Sir John Holt, Chief-Juſtice of the Queen's-Bench; Sir Thomas Trevor, Chief-Juſtice of the Common-Pleas; Sir John Leviſon Gower, Baronet, Chancellor of the Dutchy of Lancaſter; Sir Chriſtopher Muſgrave, Baronet; Sir John Cook, Doctor of Laws; Robert Harley, Eſq; Charles Godolphin, Eſq; Samuel Clarke, Eſq; and Stephen Waller, Doctor of Laws. The Commiſſioners of Scotland, were the Dukes of Queenſberry and Argyle; the Marquiſſes of Annandale and Lothian; the Earls of Seafield, Hyndford, and Leven; the Viſcounts of Tarbat and Stair; the Lord Gallway, the Lord Boyle, Sir James Steward, Advocate; Sir George Maxwell, Lord Preſident; Sir James Smallet; Sir Archibal Douglas; Sir David Dalrymple; Sir Patrick Johnſtown, Provoſt of Edinburgh; Mr. Montgomery, Provoſt of Glaſcow; Mr. Scrimſer, Provoſt of Dondee; and the Provoſt of Aberdeen. Dr. Charles Davenant, a Civilian, was appointed to be Secretary to the Engliſh Commiſſioners; and Robert Pringle to the Scotch. The firſt Time they met, was on the 22d of October, at the Cock-Pit, where, after the Reading of both Commiſſions, the Lord Keeper made the following Speech. A. D. 1702. Their firſt Meeting.

My LORDS,

" WE, the Commiſſioners for England, do, with great Satisfaction, meet your " Lordſhips on this Occaſion; hoping, that by this Congreſs, the great " Buſineſs for which her Majeſty has been pleaſed to grant thoſe Commiſſions, may " be happily effected: That England and Scotland, already united in Alliance under " one Head, the Queen, may, for ever hereafter become one People; one in Heart " and mutual Affections; one in Intereſt; one in Name, and in Deed; a Work, " which if it can be brought to paſs, promiſeth a laſting Happineſs to us all. With " great Sincerity we deſire this UNION, and we meet your Lordſhips with Hearts " fully determined to enter upon ſuch Conſultations, and into ſuch Meaſures with " your Lordſhips, as are proper for bringing the ſame to the deſired Concluſion. " On our Part, nothing ſhall be wanting that may conduce to a happy Period of " this Great Work.

To this the Duke of Queenſberry made Anſwer, " That the UNION of the Two " Kingdoms had been much deſired, both before, and ſince their being under one " Sovereign, and, he hoped, it was reſerved to her Majeſty, for the Glory of her " Reign, to finiſh the Deſign which had been often attempted by her Royal Pre- " deceſſors. That he did conſider this UNION to be highly advantageous for the " Peace and Wealth of both Kingdoms, and a great Security for the Proteſtant Re- " ligion every where: And he could aſſure their Lordſhips, both for himſelf, and " the other Lords Commiſſioners for Scotland, that they met their Lordſhips with " great Regard and Honour to their Perſons, and with ſincere Intentions to advance " this great Deſign, and to accommodate any Difficulties that might ariſe in the " Treaty, upon fair and reaſonable Terms.

There not being a Quorum of the Scotch Commiſſioners arrived in Town, their Meeting was adjourn'd, by a Letter from the Queen, to the 10th of November. About the 20th of the ſame Month, they met again, and notwithſtanding ſome previous Objections made by the Lord Keeper, againſt the Validity of the Scotch Commiſſion, they fully adjuſted the Preliminaries, of which, this was one of the moſt conſiderable, viz. " That nothing agreed on amongſt themſelves ſhould be " binding, except it be ratified by her Majeſty, and the reſpective Parliaments of " both Nations; and that except all the Heads propoſed for the Treaty were agreed " to, no particular Thing agreed on ſhould be Binding." Then the Lord Keeper propoſed, on the Part of the Engliſh, That the Two Kingdoms ſhould be inſeparably united into one Monarchy, under her Majeſty, and her Heirs and Succeſſors, and under the ſame Limitations, according to the Acts of Settlement; and his Grace the Duke of Queenſberry propoſed, on the Part of the Scots, That both Nations ſhould be united in one Monarchy, and one Parliament, with a mutual Communication of Trade and Privileges. The Propoſal of the Engliſh was eaſily agreed to; and the Queen, to make

A. D. 1702. Things go on with more Eaſe and Unanimity, was pleas'd, on the 14th of December, to make the following Speech to the Commiſſioners of both Nations.

My LORDS,

The Queen's Speech to the Commiſſioners.

"I Am ſo fully perſuaded, that the UNION of my Two Kingdoms will prove "the Happineſs of both, and render this Iſland more formidable than it has "been in Ages paſt; that I wiſh this Treaty may be brought to a good and ſpee-"dy Concluſion. I am come to know what Progreſs you have made in it; and "I do aſſure you, nothing ſhall be wanting on my Part, to bring it to Per-"fection.

After reading the Procedure, her Majeſty retired. Five Days before, the Lords Commiſſioners for Scotland, deliver'd in Propoſals to the Lords Commiſſioners for England, in Subſtance as follows; viz. 1. "That there ſhould be a free Trade "betwixt the Two Kingdoms, without Diſtinction. 2. That both ſhould be liable "to an equal Impoſition for Export and Import, and that a Book of Rates ſhould "be adjuſted for both. 3. That the Subjects and Shipping of both Kingdoms have "an equal Freedom, as to the Plantation Trade, and be under the ſame Regula-"tion. 4. That the Act of Navigation, and all other in both Kingdoms, incon-"ſiſtent with the ſaid Propoſals, be repeal'd. 5. That neither of the Kingdoms be "burthened with the Debts contracted by the other before the Union, and that the "Equality of Impoſition in the Second Propoſal be underſtood, with an Exception "of the Impoſitions laid on and appropriated by the Parliament of England, for "Payment of their Debts; or, if an Equality of Impoſition on Trade be thought "neceſſary, that there be allowed to Scotland an Equivalent. 6. That the former "Propoſals were made without Prejudice to the Companies or Manufactures of "either Kingdom, which are referr'd to the further Conſideration and Progreſs of "this Treaty. On the 16th of December, the Lords Commiſſioners for England de-livered to the Lords Commiſſioners of Scotland, ſome Conſiderations upon thoſe Pro-poſals, as a Subject Matter of Debate: As to the firſt Article, the Lords Commiſ-ſioners of England agreed, That there ſhould be a free Trade for the Commodities of the Growth, Product and Manufacture of both Kingdoms, with an Exception as to Wooll and Sheep-Fells, and with equal Duties on Home Conſumption reſpectively; and that the Maſters, Mariners, and Goods of Scotland, be under the ſame Penalties as thoſe of England. To the Second, they deſired it might be added, That the Impoſition and Pro-hibition ſhould be the ſame in both, as to the Import and Export. To the Third their Lordſhips ſaid, That the Plantation Trade was the Property of England, and of ſuch Conſequence, as not to be communicated, till the other Particulars, which ſhould be thought neceſſary to the Union were adjuſted; And that in this Article there ſhould be Proviſion made, that Scotchmen be liable to be preſs'd in the Time of War for her Majeſty's Ser-vice. To the Fourth, they agreed that the Act of Navigation be accommodated to the UNION. To the Fifth, They thought it contradicted by what was agreed in the Second, and ſaid, there was no Duty on Trade, except ſome of the Funds of the Civil Government, but what was appropriated to pay Publick Debts; and though thoſe Debts were contracted by a long War, entred into more particularly for the Preſervation of England, yet Scot-land had taſted the Benefit of that War, by the Oppoſition made to the Growth of the Power of France; and that Scotland would be abundantly compenſated for that Burden by a compleat Union, which could not be eſtabliſh'd with Equality, unleſs there were the ſame Duties in both Kingdoms on Foreign and Home Conſumption; but how the Money ariſing from thence in Scotland ſhould be applied, or what Equivalent ſhould be allowed the Scots, the ſame might be ſettled when their Lordſhips came to propoſe what Proportion Scotland ſhould bear of the Publick Burthen, for the Support of the Government in Peace and War. And as to the Sixth Propoſal, they deſired it might be further explain'd. At the ſame Time, the Commiſſioners for Scotland deliver'd in their Propoſals for pre-ſerving the Rights and Privileges of their Company Trading to Africa and the In-dies; which put a ſtop to the Progreſs of this Treaty.

Progreſs of the Treaty ſtopp'd.

It may ſeem ſtrange, that there was no mention made, all this while, about Reli-gion, the main Point that divided the Two Nations, and the Rock on which the Project of uniting them had formerly ſplit: But the Commiſſioners, like wiſe Negotiators, were willing to feel one another's Pulſes in ſmall Matters, before they touch'd the grand Difficulty. The Scotch Epiſcopal Clergy were not ſo cautious: For taking this to be a favourable Juncture to get into their Livings again, they preſented the following Addreſs to the Queen, towards the latter End of December.

"We,

A. D. 1702.

" We your Majeſty's moſt humble, dutiful, loyal, and moſt obedient Subjects, " look on it as no ſmall Bleſſing, to have a Queen of our ancient Race of Kings, " who has always been a Pattern of Virtue, and a conſtant Support and Owner of " the true Reformed Orthodox Religion; and who, ſince her coming to the Crown " of her illuſtrious Anceſtors, has ſhewn ſuch good and generous Inclinations to " make all her Subjects live happily, that we have preſum'd, moſt humbly to " addreſs your Majeſty, to take into your Royal Conſideration, the Condition of " the Subjects of the Epiſcopal Perſuaſion in this Kingdom. It is not unknown to " your Majeſty, the hard Meaſures and Diſcouragements they met with of late " Years, particularly thoſe of the Clergy, though they have always behaved " themſelves (as their Principles oblige them to do) peaceably and ſubmiſſively to " Supreme Authority.

The Scotch Epiſcopal Clergy's Addreſs to the Queen.

" May it therefore pleaſe your Sacred Majeſty, to take thoſe into your Royal " Protection, and give Liberty to ſuch Pariſhes, where all, or moſt of the Heretors " and Inhabitants are of the Epiſcopal Perſuaſion, to Call, Place, and give Bene- " fices to Miniſters of their own Principles, which the Preſbyterians themſelves can " have no Reaſon to complain of; for, if the Plurality they pretend to, be true, " by this Act of Grace, neither their Churches nor Benefices are in Hazard; which " Favour will oblige us more and more, out of Gratitude, as well as Duty, to ſend " up our Prayers to Almighty God, that the ſame good Providence which placed " your Majeſty upon the Throne, and has bleſſed the beginning of your Reign " with ſuch glorious Succeſs, may preſerve your Majeſty for a Bleſſing to theſe " Lands, and that we may never want a true Proteſtant, of the ſame Royal Blood, " to govern us, while Sun and Moon endure.

Whilſt theſe Things paſs'd in England and Scotland, the Dukes of Hanover and Zell, purſuant to the Meaſures concerted between them, and the late King William, made an Incurſion into the Principality of Wolfembuttle, in order to diſarm the Dukes of that Name, who, brib'd by French Money, had preſumed to raiſe conſiderable Forces in the Heart of the Empire, againſt the Empire it ſelf. This ſucceeded ſo well, that after the Elector of Hanover had made himſelf Maſter of ſeveral ſtrong Poſts in that Principality, he block'd up Wolfembuttle, the Capital City. At this Time Two Brothers, Rodolphus and Anthony held the Regency; the latter, whether out of Principle of Honour or Avarice, was unwilling to forſake a Friend, who had ſo well paid him, and from whom, perhaps, he expected greater Advantages; or out of meer Obſtinacy, ſhew'd no Inclination to break his Alliance with France: And though the Duke of Holſtein Ploen us'd all his Endeavours to perſuade him to his true Intereſt, he could never bring him to hearken to Reaſon. But Rodolphus, whether terrified by the impending Danger, or being ambitious to have the ſole Government of the Principality, began to think of coming to an Accommodation. Accordingly a Negotiation was ſet on Foot, which ended in an Agreement between the Dukes of Hanover and Zell, and Rodolphus Auguſtus of Wolfembuttle, to this Effect, viz. " That Duke Anthony Ulric ſhould be excluded from the Regency, that Rodolphus " Auguſtus ſhould take the Government into his own Hands, and quit his Engage- " ments with France; and on the other Side, that the Elector of Hanover, and Duke " of Zell, ſhould take into their Service One Thouſand Four Hundred Foot, of the " Troops of Wolfembuttle, which were rais'd with French Money, and withdraw " their own Forces out of the Principality." About the ſame Time the Town of Keyſerſwaert, which the Elector of Cologn had put into the Hands of the French, was inveſted by the Emperor's Auxiliary Troops (belonging to the King of Pruſſia, the States of Holland, and the Elector Palatine) the Siege of the Place being committed to the Conduct of the Prince of Naſſau Saarbruck, whilſt Prince Lewis of Baden was aſſembling an Army on the Upper-Rhine, in the Neighbourhood of Croon-Weiſſemburg and Lauterburgh, in order to cut off the Communication of Landau and Straſburgh, and the Country of Alſace.

Poſture of Affairs Abroad.

The Confederates ſeem'd now to begin a War with infinite Diſadvantage: For whereas, formerly, not only all Spain, but the united Force of the whole Empire, and, for a conſiderable Time, the Duke of Savoy, acted in Concert with England and Holland againſt the common Enemy; a Prince of the Houſe of Bourbon now ſat on the Spaniſh Throne; a French Army had over-run the State of Milan, and to this Army the Duke of Savoy (engag'd with France, by the double Match of his Two Daughters) had join'd his Forces. Of the Nine principal Members of the Empire, Two, the Electors of Bavaria and Cologn, had declar'd for France; and the latter had admitted French Forces into all his fortified Towns, under the ſpecious Name of Troops of the Circle of Burgundy. A Third, the Elector of Saxony, King of Poland, was contending with Sweden and the diſcontented Poles, for his unſettled Crown,

A. D. 1702. Crown, and was thereby hinder'd from ſending his full Proportion of Troops againſt France. The Emperor had ſent his veteran Forces, under the Command of his beſt General, Prince Eugene, to keep the French at a Bay in Italy; and all the Spaniſh Towns frontiering upon Holland, were garriſon'd with French Soldiers. But notwithſtanding all theſe apparent Diſadvantages, yet from the wiſe and ſteady Counſels of England, the right Management of her Majeſty's Treaſury, the juſt Meaſures concerted by the Earl of Marlborough with Foreign Powers, the Valour and Reſolution of the Confederate Troops, and the Experience and good Conduct of their Commanders, good Politicians ſoon foreſaw, that the Allies would, at laſt, be an Over-match for France.

The Siege of Keyſerſwaert was carried on with great Difficulties, occaſion'd by the rainy Weather, and the frequent Opportunities the French had to ſupply the Garriſon with freſh Men and Proviſions, whereby the Beſieged were embolden'd to make vigorous Sallies. On the other Hand, the Earl of Athlone, with a ſmall Army, conſiſting chiefly of Dutch Troops, lay encamp'd at Clarenbeck, between Nimeguen and Cleve, obſerving the French, who lay at Zanten, under the Command of the Duke of Burgundy, and the Direction of the Mareſchal Boufflers; and Count Tallard, with a flying Camp, having hover'd for ſome Days about Duſſeldorp, poſted himſelf on the other Side of the Rhine, over-againſt the Camp before Keyſerſwaert, from which he very much incommoded the Quarters of the Pruſſians. At the ſame time General Coehorn, being ſent with a Body of Ten Thouſand Men into Flanders, to demoliſh the Lines between the Two Forts, St. Donat and Iſabella, was ſo ſucceſsful in his Enterprize, that after he had taken Middleburg, a ſmall Town in the Spaniſh Territories, which the French had begun to fortify, and made himſelf Maſter of Fort St. Donat; in a few Days he levell'd thoſe Lines, the raiſing of which had coſt the Enemy many Months, with great Labour and Expence; and obliged the greateſt Part of the Chaſteleny of Bruges to pay Contribution to the Confederates. As for Prince Lewis of Baden, he was concerting Meaſures for the Siege of Landau, which he kept in a manner block'd up: But Prince Eugene being diſappointed of the Reinforcement the Court of Vienna had promis'd him, and he ſo much wanted, his Highneſs was forc'd to raiſe the Blockade of Mantua; and to abandon ſeveral Poſts to the numerous Forces of France, headed by the Duke of Vendoſme. Such was the Poſture of Affairs Abroad, when the Earl of Marlborough arriv'd the Second Time this Year at the Hague, where he was declared by the States Commander in Chief of the Army. This perhaps was at firſt intended as a meer Compliment to the Queen of Great Britain, but proved, in the Sequel, to be the Reſult of no leſs Prudence than Policy: For as nothing, at this Juncture, would more endear the Hollanders to her Majeſty, than the additional Honour they beſtow'd on her General, ſo it ſoon appear'd, that no Perſon was better qualified than his Lordſhip, for the Supreme Command of an Army.

General Coehorn's Expedition.

The Earl of Marlborough arrives at the Hague, and is declared Commander in Chief of the Army.

Before the Earl of Marlborough acted in his Military Capacity, he was obliged, in the Quality of Ambaſſador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary, to ſtay ſome Days at the Hague, in order to ſettle ſeveral important Matters, towards the carrying on the War with equal Vigor, and mutual Confidence; but yet all his Repreſentations, and preſſing Inſtances prov'd ineffectual to engage the Dutch in a total Prohibition of Commerce and Correſpondence with France and Spain, which, indeed, might have proved more diſadvantageous to the United Provinces, than to the Enemy. In the mean Time, the Counterſcarp of Keyſerſwaert being taken * by Storm, the Town capitulated, and ſurrendred Six Days † after. On the other Hand, Marſhal Boufflers being join'd by Count Tallard, reſolv'd to make a bold Attempt upon Nimeguen, and proceeded in it ſo far, that the Inhabitants look'd upon themſelves as loſt; the rather becauſe their Governor, Count Naſſau, had taken no manner of Precautions for their Security. But the more couragious among them, and, in Particular, Monſieur Durand, a French Miniſter, ſo animated the reſt, that by their Labour they ſupply'd the want of Horſes and Carriages; haul'd the Cannon out of the Arſenal, and planted One Hundred and Sixty on the Walls, ready to fire againſt the Enemy. The Engliſh and Dutch Army that lay encamp'd in Brabant, under the Command of the Earl of Athlone, upon the firſt Advice of this March, broke up, and took the proper Meaſures to intercept the Enemy, which, by their Expedition, they effected, coming into the Neighbourhood of Nimeguen half an Hour before the French could get up, and thereby ſav'd the Town; which taken, would have given the Eemy free Entrance into the United Provinces. Hereupon the Earl of Marlborough repair'd to Breda, from whence he ſent what Detachments he could ſpare from that Place, and other Garriſons, to the Camp at Nimeguen, where his Lordſhip arrived on the 2d of July, N. S. He had no ſooner put himſelf at the Head of the Confederate Army, than Mareſchal Boufflers, who, by his advancing to the very Gates of Nimeguen, had alarm'd not only only that Town, but all the United Provinces, was obliged to fly in his Turn; ſo that the Duke of Burgundy, who was ſent to that Army to learn how to fight, learn'd nothing from Mareſchal Bouffiers, but how to avoid an Engagement. The Earl of Marlborough finding it impoſſible to bring the French to a Battel, reſolv'd to diſpoſſeſs them of the Places they held in the Spaniſh Gelderland, whereby the free Navigation of the Maeſe was interrupted, and the moſt important Town of Maeſtricht, in a manner, block'd up: And according to this Reſolution, having reduc'd Venlo, Ruremonde, and Stevenſwaert, he ended that glorious Campaign by the Conqueſt of the City and Citadel of Liege *.

The Dutch refuſe to prohibit all Commerce with France and Spain.

His glorious Campaign.

* Oct. 29. N. S.

Some Time before, Monſieur Melac, Governor of Landau, being reduced to the laſt Extremity, and deſpairing of Relief from Mareſchal Catinat, who had aſſembled an Army in Alſatia for that Purpoſe, ſurrendred † that important Place to the King of the Romans, upon honourable Terms, after a Siege of near Three Months. This Succeſs proved the greater, in that the Elector of Bavaria, bribed by Money, and large Promiſes from France, and encouraged by Catinat's Motion, had, a few Days before, thrown off the Maſk, and ſurprized Ulm, the Capital of Suabia, and an Imperial City. Hereupon the Imperial Diet at Ratiſbon immediately reſolv'd to declare War againſt the King of France, and, as the Confederates call'd him, the Duke of Anjou. As for the Elector of Bavaria, the Diet requeſted the Emperor to proceed againſt him, according to the Conſtitution of the Empire; to uſe his Authority for recovering the City of Ulm, and to require the Elector to abſtain from all Attempts of the like Nature for the future. On the other Side, the Elector of Bavaria ſent a kind of Manifeſto to the Two Circles of Suabia and Franconia, intimating, "That he would never ſuffer "them to be at Reſt, till they had accepted a Neutrality during the War wherein "the Emperor was engag'd, and which did not concern the Empire, but only the "Houſe of Auſtria; requiring them withal, to deſiſt from intermeddling with Fo-"reign Affairs: But little Streſs was laid on this Writing. While Care was taken to hinder the Duke of Bavaria's Conjunction with the French, it likewiſe fell out, that Three Diſpatches were intercepted, the one from Mareſchal Catinat to the Elector, the other Two from the Elector to the Mareſchal, whereby it appear'd, that the Bavarians had a Deſign to penetrate into Briſgou with Ten Thouſand Men, and to have poſted themſelves upon the Rhine, near Hunningen; with ſeveral other important Diſcoveries of the Elector's clandeſtine Contrivances to embarraſs the Emperor's Affairs. Hereupon the Miniſters of the Two Electors of Cologn and Bavaria were forbid appearing any more at the general Diet; and, at the ſame Time, the Miniſter of the latter proteſted againſt the Reſolution of the Diet to declare War againſt the French King, and the Duke of Anjou, alledging, "That an offenſive "War like this, ought to be reſolv'd upon by common Conſent, and not by Plu-"rality of Voices: To which it was anſwer'd, That the King of France had attack'd the Empire, by invading, not only in his own, but in the Name of the Duke of Anjou his Grandſon, ſeveral Fiefs of the Empire in Italy, the Archbiſhoprick of Cologn, and the Dioceſe of Liege, as alſo by diſturbing the Trade of the Rhine, and committing ſeveral other Hoſtilities, which render'd this War Defenſive, and not Offenſive, on the Empire's Side. The Emperor was not wanting in exhorting the Duke of Bavaria to return to his Duty; but neither good Advice, Promiſes, nor Threats, had any Effect upon his Electoral Highneſs: For as ſoon as he had made himſelf Maſter of Ulm, he march'd towards the Foreſt-Towns, with Deſign to join a numerous Detachment of the French Army: But ſeeing no likelihood of ſucceeding in this Attempt, by Reaſon of the timely Precautions the Swiſſers took to ſecure the Paſſes, which, by ancient Treaties, are committed to their Cuſtody, he retreated back again to his own Country. As for the Empire's Declaration of War, it was publiſh'd, and notify'd to the Cardinal of Lamberg, the Emperor's Commiſſioner, on the 30th of September, (N. S.) by the Direction of the Elector of Mentz, in the Name of the Diet of Ratiſbon. By this Time, Prince Lewis of Baden, having ſent away conſiderable Detachments, to hinder the Conjunction of the Bavarians and French, lay at Friedlingen, with only a ſmall Reſerve of about Eight Thouſand Men; of which the Marquis of Villars having Intelligence, he thought it a favourable Opportunity to attack the Germans, being much ſuperior in Number. The Succeſs of the Engagement was doubtful for ſome Time; but the Imperial Cavalry being put into the utmoſt Confuſion and Diſorder, Prince Lewis had no other Thoughts, than to make the beſt Retreat he could: But his Infantry, not in the leaſt diſcouraged by being deſerted by the Horſe, fell in with the French Foot with ſuch an undaunted Bravery, that they broke their Ranks, and drove them into a Wood adjoining, through which they purſued them almoſt as far as Hunningen: And then Prince Lewis, having remain'd a few Hours on the Field of Battel, continued his March towards Stauffen. Though the Loſs was pretty equal on both Sides, yet the French Court cauſed Te Deum to be ſung for the Victory, and raiſed their General to the Dignity of a Mareſchal of France: But the Germans claim'd the Honour of the Day with juſter Reaſon, ſince they hindred the Enemy from joining the Elector of Bavaria; and Prince Lewis being ſoon after reinforc'd with Fifteen Thouſand Men, obliged the French to repaſs the Rhine. While theſe Things paſs'd in Germany, Prince Eugene of Savoy, with the Imperial Forces, much inferior to the French, under the Duke of Vendoſme, and the Spaniards under King Philip, remain'd in a defenſive Poſture, till the middle of Auguſt, when the Enemy endeavouring to ſurround and cruſh him with their Numbers, his Highneſs made a bold Stand, attack'd them at Luzzara, and drove them from the Field of Battel: This gave the Imperialiſts Occaſion to claim the Victory; but the French and Spaniards ſeem'd to have a better Title to it, by making themſelves Maſters of Luzzara the next Day, and driving the Germans from ſeveral Poſts, before the End of the Campaign.

Whilſt theſe Things paſs'd on the Continent, the Confederate Fleet was not idle. It conſiſted of Fifty Ships of the Line of Battel, Thirty Engliſh, and Twenty Dutch; the firſt commanded by Sir George Rook, having under him Vice-Admiral Hopſon, and the Rear-Admirals Fairborne, and Graydon; the other under the Command of Lieutenant-Admiral Allemond, Admiral Callemburgh, Vice-Admiral Vandergoes, Vice-Admiral Pieterſon, and Rear-Admiral Baron Spar; with near Fourteen-Thouſand Land-Forces on Board the Tranſports, viz. Nine Thouſand Six Hundred Sixty Three Engliſh, and Three Thouſand Nine Hundred Twenty Four Dutch; the firſt commanded by Sir Henry Bellaſis, Lieutenant-General, Sir Charles Hara, and Lord Portmore, Majors-General, and the Colonels Seymour, Hamilton, and Mathews Brigadiers; and the Dutch by Major-General Spar, and Brigadier Baron Palandt: The whole under the Command of the Duke of Ormond. On the 19th of June, the Fleet weigh'd from Spithead, and came to an Anchor at St. Hellens, in order to ſail with the next fair Wind. Three Days after *, Rear-Admiral Fairborne, and Rear-Admiral Graydon were detach'd from thence with Sixteen Men of War, and Two Fireſhips, Engliſh, and a Squadron of the Dutch, (in all Thirty Sail) upon a ſecret Expedition; and on the 23d, the Prince of Heſſe d' Armſtad, ſail'd in the Adventure Frigat for Liſbon. On the 25th, Sir John Munden, who had been ſent out with a Squadron of Men of War to intercept a French Squadron commanded by M. du Caſſe, return'd to St. Hellens, without having been able either to hinder the French from getting into the Groyne, or to fight them there. The Queen bore this Diſappointment ſo impatiently, that a Commiſſion was afterwards ſent down to enquire into Sir John Munden's Conduct; and though he was † acquitted by a Court-Martial, yet her Majeſty being inform'd that he had been favour'd by his Captains, ſhe thought fit to lay him aſide; wherein ſhe was applauded by every body. For though Sir John had behav'd himſelf gallantly on all other Occaſions, and even acted to the beſt of his Knowledge in this, yet the leaſt Appearance of Miſconduct, deſerves Cenſure in the beginning of a new Reign, when a vigorous inflicting of Puniſhments, contributes no leſs to the Eſtabliſhment of a Throne, than an equal and generous Diſpenſation of Rewards.

Account of the Confederate Fleet, and Land-Forces.

* June 22.

† July 13. Sir John Munden try'd, and acquitted, but laid aſide, Auguſt 9.

On the 1ſt of July the Confederate Fleet ſail'd from St. Hellens, ſteering their Courſe for Cadiz, and having met with Calms, and contrary Winds, it was the 12th of Auguſt, before they came to an Anchor in the Bay of Bulls, about Two Leagues from that City. Sir Thomas Smith, Quarter-Maſter-General, having view'd and ſounded the Shore on the Backſide of the Iſle of Leon, in which Cadiz ſtands, and reported, that there were Two very convenient Bays to make a Deſcent, the Duke of Ormond vehemently inſiſted, in a Council of War, upon the landing in that Iſle, in order to a ſudden and vigorous Attack of the Town, where the Diſorder and Conſternation were ſo great, that in all Probability the Enterprize would have been attended with Succeſs. But many, eſpecially the Sea-Officers, oppoſing the Duke's Motion, it was reſolv'd, That the Army ſhould firſt take the Fort of St. Katherine, and Port St. Mary, in order to facilitate their nearer Approach to Cadiz. Accordingly, the Land-Forces were ſet on Shore in the Bay of Bulls, and made themſelves Maſters of Rota, Fort St. Katherine, and Port St. Mary, which rich Town being abandon'd by the Inhabitants, was ranſack'd and plunder'd, both by the licentious Soldiers, and by ſome greedy Officers, contrary to the Advice of Mr. Methuen, the Engliſh Envoy in Portugal, who in a Letter ‖ to the Duke of Ormond, told his Grace, That the Point of greateſt Importance, was to inſinuate to the Spaniards, and ſhew, by his Proceeding, that he came not as an Enemy to Spain, but only to free them from France, and give them Aſſiſtance to eſtabliſh themſelves under the Government of the Houſe of Auſtria. By this Time the Gariſon of Cadiz had recover'd their Surprize, and were conſiderably reinforc'd; and the Confederates having having in vain attempted the Fort Matagorda, Proviſions growing ſcarce with them, and the Sea-Officers repreſenting the Danger of ſtaying any longer in thoſe Seas, the Duke of Ormond, though not without great Reluctancy, was forc'd to conſent to the re-imbarking of the Land Forces, which was done on the 14th, 15th and 16th of September.

Unſucceſsful Attempt upon Cadiz.

Some Time before, the News of the Arrival of the French Squadron under Monſieur Chateau-Renault, with the Spaniſh Galleons, in the Harbour of Vigo, being brought to England, Orders were immediately diſpatch'd to Sir George Rook, to attempt the taking or deſtroying of them; and Sir Cloudeſly Shovel was order'd upon the ſame Attempt, with another Squadron of Men of War. But before theſe Orders could reach the Grand Fleet, Sir George Rook, in his Return towards England, having ſent * the Eagle, Sterling-Caſtle, and Pembroke, to water in Lagos-Bay, Mr. Beauvoir, the Chaplain of the laſt of theſe Ships, went aſhore in the Town of Lagos, and meeting with a Gentleman in the Streets, whom, by ſeveral Circumſtances, he judg'd to be no Portugueze, he accoſted him in French, which the other, (who prov'd to be the French Conſul) returning in a very obliging Manner, invited him to ſtay at his Houſe. The Chaplain, extremely willing to embrace this Offer, continu'd there for Two Nights, during which, the Conſul, in their ſeveral Converſations, could not forbear to boaſt of his Maſter's Strength at Sea, and at laſt gave ſome Hints of the Arrival of the Galleons on that Coaſt. On the 24th, Mr. Beauvoir being ready to re-imbark, and underſtanding that a Gentleman was arriv'd in that Town, bound for the Fleet, with Letters to the Prince of Heſſe and Mr. Methuen, (who were gone from the Fleet to Liſbon ſome Time before) he invited him to go aboard the Pembroke, without taking the leaſt Notice of their Departure before. The Gentleman having gladly accepted this Invitation, and told him, juſt as they were leaving the Shore, that Mr. Chateau-Renault was arrived at Vigo, with Thirty Men of War, and Twenty Two Galleons, and that he was ſent by the Imperial Miniſter to the Grand Fleet; they went together aboard the Pembroke, where Captain Hardy, her Commander, being inform'd, as well by Mr. Beauvoir, of what he gather'd from the French Conſul, as by the other Gentleman, concerning what he knew of the [redacted] he ſet Sail the next Morning, in Queſt of the Grand Fleet, which, at laſt, [redacted]t with, on the 6th of October. Having imparted his Intelligence to the [redacted] Admiral, the latter communicated the ſame to the Dutch; whereupon it was reſolv'd to attempt the deſtroying of the French and Spaniſh Ships at Vigo. Accordingly, the Fleet came to an Anchor the 11th, againſt that Place, almoſt unperceived by the Enemy, by reaſon of the hazy Weather; and finding that the French and Spaniſh Ships were carried up beyond a narrow Streight, defended by a Caſtle on the other Side, and certain Platforms, well provided with Cannon, beſides a ſtrong Boom about it, made with Maſts, Cables, and Chains, it was reſolv'd, in a Council of War, that ſince the whole Fleet could not ſafely go up to the Place where the Enemy's Ships lay, a Detachment of Fifteen Engliſh, and Ten Dutch Men of War, with all the Fireſhips, Frigats, and Bomb-Veſſels, ſhould go upon that Service, with all the Flag-Officers aboard them, whilſt part of the Land Forces were to make a Deſcent, and to attack the Fort on the South Side of Rodondela.

* Sept. 22. Mr. Beauvoir's Diſcovery of the Spaniſh Galleons being at Vigo.

Purſuant to this Reſolution, the Duke of Ormond having landed Two Thouſand Five Hundred Men, Two Leagues from Vigo, on the South Side of the River, without the leaſt Oppoſition; his Grace order'd the Grenadiers to advance to the Fort at the Entrance of the Harbour, which they did with ſuch Chearfulneſs and Reſolution, that having made themſelves Maſters of a Platform of Thirty Eight Pieces of Cannon, they purſued the French to the very Gates of the Caſtle, or Stone-Tower, and attack'd them ſo vigorouſly, that Monſieur Sorel, their Commander, deſpairing of holding the Place, attempted to fight his way through the Engliſh, Sword in Hand. But no ſooner had they opened the Gate, than the Grenadiers ruſhing in, made themſelves Maſters of the Caſtle, and took Three Hundred French Seamen, and Fifty Spaniards Priſoners. Whilſt theſe Things were tranſacting aſhore, the Squadron deſign'd for this Expedition advanc'd briſkly towards the Boom, and after being ſtopp'd by a little Calm, Vice-Admiral Hopſon in the Torbay, broke, amidſt the Enemies Fire, through the Boom, where he received divers Broad-Sides from the Bourbon and Hope, Two French Men of War, placed within the Boom. The reſt of Vice-Admiral Hopſon's Diviſion, and that of the Dutch Vice-Admiral Vandergoes, bearing at the ſame Time upon the Boom, were becalm'd, and conſequently ſtuck, ſo that they were forced to cut their way through it, except their Admiral, who hit the ſame Paſſage through which Vice-Admiral Hopſon had enter'd before. The latter, in the mean while, being boarded by a Fireſhip, was in great Danger of being burnt, had not the Fireſhip been blown up too ſoon; notwithſtanding ſtanding which, he received conſiderable Damage in his Rigging; and many of his Men, during the firſt Conſternation, threw themſelves over-board, in hopes to ſave themſelves, but were moſt of them drown'd, whilſt the reſt behaved themſelves ſo well as to preſerve the Ship. The French Admiral ſeeing the Boom cut in Pieces, the Platform and Caſtle in the Enemies Hands, the Bourbon taken, and the whole Confederate Squadron ready to fall among them, order'd his own Ship to be ſet on Fire; and his Example being follow'd by all the reſt, afforded a moſt dreadful Spectacle to the Spaniards, as well as to the French. Whilſt they were thus buſy'd in the Deſtruction of their own Fleet, the Engliſh were as careful in preſerving it, not without tolerable good Succeſs; ſeveral, as well of the Men of War as of the Galleons, being taken, viz. Ten French, and Three Spaniſh Men of War, among whom Seven were ſo diſabled, as to be bulged or ſunk; and of Thirteen Galleons, Nine were taken, Four by the Engliſh, and Five by the Dutch; the reſt being burnt, with Nine French Men of War, and Three Scoutſhips. What made this Victory the more conſiderable, was its being gain'd with inconſiderable Loſs, there being not above Forty Men kill'd, and Ten wounded, of the Land-Men, in this Action, and very few of the Sea-Men, except thoſe that were drown'd of Vice-Admiral Hopſon's Ship. As to the Cargo aboard this Fleet, which was computed at Twenty Millions of Pieces of Eight, in Silver and Gold, beſides Merchandizes, about Fourteen Millions of it were taken out before by the Enemy, the reſt was either taken by the Engliſh and Dutch, or left in the Galleons that were ſunk or burnt. The Goods were valued at Twenty Millions of Pieces of Eight more, of which one Fourth Part only was ſaved by the Enemy, near Two deſtroy'd, and the reſt taken by the Confederates; beſides a great Quantity of Plate, and other rich Commodities, concealed for the uſe of private Perſons in the Galleons, and a great deal of other Plate, belonging to the French Officers, found at Rodondella, of which the Duke of Ormond took Poſſeſſion the next Morning. The 14th, it was propoſed by the Duke to attack Vigo, with an intent to Winter there, in caſe the Admiral could leave ſufficient Proviſions, and ſuch a Number of Ships as ſhould be thought requiſite; but the Admiral declaring, that he could not leave above Five or Six Weeks Proviſions, and about Six Frigats, that Deſign was laid aſide. The 16th, Sir Cloudeſly Shovel having joined the Confederate Fleet with Twenty Nine Sail, the La[illegible]orces reimbark'd the next Day; and the 19th, Sir George Rook, and Vice-Admi[illegible] Hopſon, with Ten Engliſh Men of War more, ſet Sail for England, leaving Sir Cloudeſly Shovel with the reſt near Vigo, to deſtroy the Enemies Ships that were run aſhore; which being effected, he alſo ſteered his Courſe for England, where the Fleet arriv'd (after having been ſeparated by a Storm at the Entrance of the Channel) the 17th of November. Ten Days before, * Sir George Rook, with his Squadron, came into the Downs, and the ſame Day, at Four in the Afternoon, the Duke of Ormond landed at Deal, and having given the neceſſary Orders for the diſembarking and quartering the Forces, went that Night to Canterbury, and arrived at London the next † Day; was receiv'd with deſerv'd Marks of Favour by her Majeſty, and with the loud Acclamations of the People; his Grace's, and Sir George Rook's Succeſs at Vigo, having ſilenced the various Diſcourſes, and ſtifled the Murmurings about the Miſcarriages before Cadiz. We may take Notice, that the Queen gave a noble Gratuity to the Lord Shannon, and to Captain Thomas Hardy, who were ſent Expreſs by the General, and Admiral, with the firſt Account of their proſperous Attempt; and that, beſides a Preſent of a Thouſand Guineas, her Majeſty conferr'd the Honour of Knighthood on that Sea-Captain. Some Time before, Sir Henry Bellaſis, and Sir Charles Hara, were, by the Queen's Orders, put under Arreſt, for having, by their Example, promoted and encouraged the Plundering of Port St. Mary: But upon the Report of the Generals appointed to examine into that Matter, Sir Henry Bellaſis only was afterwards found ‖ guilty, and diſmiſs'd from her Majeſty's Service; and Sir Charles Hara was cleared, and his Suſpenſion taken off. Some Time before, a Proclamation was iſſued out, for Diſcovery and Recovery of all ſuch Goods, Plate, and other Effects, as contrary to her Majeſty's and the Duke of Ormond's expreſs Commands, were plunder'd or embezzled at Port St. Mary's, or from the Galleons taken at Vigo, and put on Board her Majeſty's Men of War, and other Veſſels: But this Proclamation had little or no Effect.

Having thus far attended the Confederate Forces, both by Land and Sea, let's now reſume the Thread of Britiſh Affairs. The Parliament of England was, in Courſe, to determine Six Months after the Demiſe of the late King: But before that Time expired, the Queen thought fit to exert her Royal Prerogative, and to iſſue out ∴ a Proclamation for diſſolving this preſent Parliament, and declaring the ſpeedy calling another, to be holden at Weſtminſter, the 20th of Auguſt next. his publick Audience, both of the Queen, and of her Royal Conſort; and about this Time her Majeſty diſpoſed of ſeveral important Poſts and Employments. Among the reſt, the Earl of Ranelaugh was conſtituted Receiver and Paymaſter-General of her Majeſty's Forces; William Blaithwaite, Eſq; Secretary at War; the Lord Walden Commiſſary-General of the Muſters; Major-General Erle, Governor of Portſmouth; the Duke of Somerſet, Maſter of the Horſe to her Majeſty; and the Earl of Pembroke, Lord Preſident of the Privy-Council, in his Grace's Room. Upon this laſt Change, * the Queen in Council, made an Order againſt the Selling of Offices and Places in her Houſhold and Family: But it was ſhrewdly obſerv'd, that this was done after abundance of Places had been purchaſed from the Favourite Counteſs. On the other Hand, the Queen put a Mark of Diſfavour on Thomas Lord Wharton, by revoking and † determining the Letters Patents, whereby his Lordſhip had been conſtituted Chief-Juſtice in Eyre on this Side Trent, in the Ninth Year of the late King's Reign.

In the mean Time, the Elections for the enſuing Parliament were carried on with great Warmth and Contention, though with viſible Advantage on the Side of the Church, or Tory-Party, which was, in great Meaſure, owing to the Countenance and Encouragement they receiv'd from the Court. On the 6th of Auguſt the Queen thought fit, by Proclamation, to prorogue the Parliament, which was to have met on the 20th of that Month, to the 8th of October next enſuing; and Three Weeks after, her Majeſty ſet ‖ out from Windſor towards Bath, in Company with her Royal Conſort, who being indiſpoſed of an Aſthma, was, by his Phyſicians, adviſed to uſe the Waters of that Place. The Royal Pair lay the firſt Night at Oxford, where the Univerſity chearfully laid hold on that Occaſion, to teſtify their Loyalty and Affection to the Queen. The next ∴ Day, her Majeſty honour'd the Univerſity with her Royal Preſence in Convocation, where their Orator having preſented their Duty and Thanks, ſhe aſſured them of her Favour and Protection; and that ſhe ſhould always have a particular Regard to this great Body, ſo conſiderable in it ſelf, and ſo uſeful both in Church and State. At the ſame Time ſeveral noble and honourable Perſons were made Doctors of Law, viz. the Duke of Somerſet, Maſter of the Horſe to her Majeſty, and Chancellor of the Univerſity of Cambridge; the Earl of Jerſey, Lord-Chamberlain of her Majeſty's Houſhold; the Earl of Sandwich, Maſter of the Horſe to the Prince; the Lord Delawar, Groom of the Stole to his Royal Highneſs; Mr. Bertie, Vice-Chamberlain to her Majeſty; Sir Benjamin Bathurſt, Cofferer of her Majeſty's Houſhold; Sir John Waller, Baronet; Sir Simon Harcourt, her Majeſty's Sollicitor-General; William Bromley, Eſq; one of the Members of Parliament for the Univerſity; Henry St. John, Eſq; Edward Nicholas Eſq; Treaſurer to the Prince; and Charles Scarborough, Eſq; one of the Clerks of her Majeſty's Board of Green-Cloath. From the Convocation-Houſe the Queen went to the Theatre, where a fine Conſort of Vocal and Inſtrumental Muſick was performed, and Poems recited by Mr. Oately and Mr. Reſtoff, Gentlemen Commoners of Baliol-College, and Mr. Bilſon, Gentleman Commoner of New-College. After this, her Majeſty was pleaſed there to accept of a ſplendid Banquet prepared for her Entertainment; which being over, and the uſual Preſents made to her Majeſty of a Bible and Common-Prayer-Book, and a Pair of Gloves; and to his Royal Highneſs, of a Book of the Antiquities of Oxford, the Prints of the Colleges, and a Pair of Gloves; her Majeſty once more expreſſed her Satisfaction in their Loyalty, and took Coach for Cirenceſter. From Oxford her Majeſty was attended by the Earl of Abingdon, and ſeveral other Gentlemen, to the utmoſt Bounds of that County; and then her Majeſty was met by Samuel Ecclin, Eſq; High-Sheriff, with a great Number of Gentlemen, Clergy, and Freeholders of the County of Glouceſter. Here John How, Eſq; preſented the Sheriff to her Majeſty, who conferred the Honour of Knighthood upon him the ſame Night, at Cirenceſter, at the Houſe of Thomas Maſters, Eſq; where her Majeſty took up her Lodging. On the 28th, the Queen left Cirenceſter, and not far from thence, was waited upon by the Duke of Beaufort, and a great Number of Gentlemen, Clergy-Men, and others, by whom her Majeſty, the Prince, and their Retinue, were magnificently entertained. About Eight the ſame Night; her Majeſty arrived at Bath, where ſhe was receiv'd with all poſſible Demonſtrations of Loyalty, Duty, and publick Joy; as ſhe was likewiſe, at Briſtol, which City ſhe honour'd with  her Royal Preſence, upon an Invitation from their Magiſtrates. Three Days †† after her Return to Bath, her Majeſty ſigned a Proclamation for further proroguing the Parliament from the 8th to the 20th of October. On the 25th of September, the Baron of Widman, Envoy Extraordinary from the Elector of Bavaria, had a private Audience both of the Queen and Prince, at the Bath; which Place her Majeſty left on the 8th of October, and, with her Royal Conſort, arrived the 10th at Windſor. The Parliament of England meets, Oct. 20.

On Wedneſday, the 20th of October, the Parliament met at Weſtminſter, and the Queen being come to the Houſe of Lords, and ſending for the Commons, the Lord Keeper ſignified to them her Majeſty's Pleaſure, that they ſhould proceed to the Choice of a fit Perſon to be their Speaker: Whereupon the Commons return'd to their Houſe, and made unanimous Choice of Robert Harley, Eſq; a Perſon who had before acquitted himſelf of that arduous Office to the general Satisfaction; and who being, the next Day, preſented to the Queen, her Majeſty was pleaſed to approve his Election; and then made the following Speech to both Houſes.

Robert Harley, Eſq; choſen Speaker of the Commons, Oct. 21.

My LORDS and GENTLEMEN,

The Queen's Speech to both Houſes, Oct. 21.

" IT is with great Satisfaction I meet this Parliament, which I have ſummon'd to " aſſiſt Me in carrying on the Juſt and Neceſſary War in which We are en- " gaged: I have call'd You together as early as was conſiſtent with your Conve- " nience, in coming out of your ſeveral Countries; and I aſſure my ſelf of ſuch " Evidences of your Affection to Me, and of your Zeal for our Common Cauſe, as " will not only give Spirit and Forwardneſs to Our own Preparations, but ſuch Ex- " ample and Encouragement to our Allies, as, by God's Bleſſing, cannot fail of a " good Effect, for the Advantage of the whole Confederacy.

" I have met with ſo many Expreſſions of Joy and Satisfaction, in all the Coun- " tries through which I have lately had Occaſion to paſs, that I cannot but look " upon them as true Meaſures of the Duty and Affection of the reſt of my Sub- " jects.

Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons,

" I muſt deſire you to grant me ſuch Supplies, as will enable me to comply both " with our particular Treaties and Engagements already made, and ſuch others as " may be neceſſary for the Encouragement of our Allies, and the proſecuting the " War, where it ſhall moſt ſenſibly affect our Enemies, and be moſt effectual for " diſappointing the boundleſs Ambition of France.

" And that my Subjects may the more chearfully bear the neceſſary Taxes, I de- " ſire you to inſpect the Accounts of all the Publick Receipts and Payments; and " if there have been any Abuſes or Miſmanagements, I hope you will detect them, " that the Offenders may be puniſh'd, and others be deterr'd by ſuch Examples, " from the like Practices.

" I muſt obſerve to you with ſome Concern, That the Funds given by the laſt " Parliament, have, in ſome Meaſure, fallen ſhort of the Sums propos'd to be rais'd " by them; and though I have already paid and apply'd to the Publick Service, " the Hundred Thouſand Pounds which I promis'd to the laſt Parliament, yet it " has not ſupply'd that Deficiency.

My LORDS and GENTLEMEN,

" I cannot without much Trouble take Notice to you, of the Diſappointment " We have had at Cadiz. I have not yet had a particular Account of that Enter- " prize, nor of all the Difficulties our Forces may have met with there; but I have " had ſuch a Repreſentation of Diſorders and Abuſes committed at Port St. Mary's, " as hath obliged me to give Directions for the ſtricteſt Examination of that " Matter.

" I am earneſtly deſirous, for all our Sakes, that this may prove a ſhort Seſſion. " However, I hope you will find Time to conſider of ſome better and more effe- " ctual Method to prevent the Exportation of Wooll, and to improve that Manu- " facture, which is of ſo great Conſequence to the whole Kingdom; on my Part, " nothing ſhall be omitted for its Encouragement.

" I am firmly perſuaded, that the Love and good Affection of my Subjects, is " the ſureſt Pledge of their Duty and Obedience, and the trueſt and juſteſt Sup- " port of the Throne; and as I am reſolv'd to defend and maintain the Church, as " by Law eſtabliſh'd, and to protect you in the full Enjoyment of all your Rights " and Liberties; ſo I rely upon your Care of Me; My Intereſts and yours are in- " ſeparable; and my Endeavours ſhall never be wanting, to make you all Safe " and Happy.

* Oct. 23. Congratulatory Addreſſes of both Houſes.

Two Days * after, the Lords preſented their Addreſs of Thanks for her Majeſty's Speech, wherein, in Particular, They congratulated the glorious Succeſs of her Arms, and

and her Allies, under the Command of the Earl of Marlborough: And on the 24th, the Commons waited alſo upon the Queen with a loyal and affectionate Addreſs, wherein, among other Things, they ſaid, That the late Diſappointment at Cadiz did the more affect them, becauſe it gave her Majeſty ſo much Trouble: But that this Misfortune could not make them forget, that the Protection and Security of their Trade, the vigorous Support of her Allies, and the wonderful Progreſs of her Arms, under the Conduct of the Earl of Marlborough, had ſignally RETRIEVED the ancient Honour and Glory of the Engliſh Nation. It is obſervable that the Word RETRIEVED occaſioned * a great Debate in the Houſe of Commons, ſeveral Members alledging, that it implied a Reflection on the late King's Memory, and therefore they inſiſted to have the Word MAINTAIN'D put inſtead of it: But upon a Diviſion, One Hundred and Eighty Voices were for the Firſt, and Eighty only for the latter: Which ſhew'd, that the Tory Party had a vaſt Majority in the Houſe. The ſame Day that the Commons preſented their Addreſs, they unanimouſly voted a Supply; and, on the 30th, reſolv'd, That Forty Thouſand Seamen be employ'd for the next Year's Service, at Four Pounds a Man per Menſem: and that One Hundred Twenty Nine Thouſand Three Hundred and Fourteen Pounds, be allowed for the Ordinary of the Navy. The Day before, upon an Invitation from the Lord-Mayor and Aldermen, the Queen honour'd the City of London with her Royal Preſence, and was † ſplendidly entertain'd at Dinner in Guild-Hall: And to compleat the publick Joy, the very † next Day, the Lord Shannon brought the agreeable News of the Duke of Ormond's and Sir George Rook's Succeſs at Vigo. Five Days after ‖, Mr. Secretary Hedges acquainted the Commons, That her Majeſty had appointed Thurſday, the 12th Inſtant, to be obſerv'd in London and Weſtminſter, as a Day of publick Thankſgiving to Almighty God, on Occaſion of the great Succeſſes of her Majeſty's Arms, and thoſe of her Allies, and particularly that of her Troops under the Conduct of the Earl of Marlborough, that of the Forces under the Command of the Duke of Ormond at Vigo, and alſo for the extraordinary Succeſs of the Fleet under the Command of Sir George Rook: That for the greater Solemnity on that Day, her Majeſty would be pleaſed to go to St. Paul's Church, as had been accuſtomed in former Times in this Kingdom, to return Thanks to Almighty God for the ſignal and great Succeſs, in which not only her Majeſty, but all her Subjects were ſo highly concern'd; and that her Majeſty had given neceſſary Orders for providing convenient Places in the ſaid Cathedral, for the Members of that Houſe, as well as for the Houſe of Lords.

Two Days ∴ after, they reſolv'd, Firſt, That the Proportion of Land-Forces to act in Conjunction with the Forces of the Allies for making good the Alliances, be Forty Thouſand Men, conſiſting of Thirty Three Thouſand Foot, and Seven Thouſand Horſe and Dragoons: Secondly, That the Sum of Three Hundred and Fifty Thouſand Pounds be granted, for the maintaining of Guards and Gariſons for the Year 1703, (including Five Thouſand Men to ſerve on Board the Fleet;) and, Thirdly, The Sum of Seventy Thouſand Nine Hundred Seventy Three Pounds, for Land-Service, to be perform'd by the Office of Ordnance for the Year 1703. On the 10th they alſo reſolv'd, to grant Eight Hundred Thirty Three Thouſand Eight Hundred Twenty Six Pounds, for maintaining the Forty Thouſand Land-Forces; and Fifty One Thouſand Eight Hundred Forty Three Pounds, for her Majeſty's Subſidies to her Allies: And at the ſame Time, the Commons unanimouſly voted their Thanks to the Duke of Ormond, and Sir George Rook, for the ſignal Services by them perform'd. Now becauſe the Prince of Denmark had, ſome Days before, been very ill of a kind of Lethargy, the Commons alſo reſolved to addreſs her Majeſty, to congratulate his Royal Highneſs's Recovery. Two Days  after, the Solemnity of publick Thankſgiving was perform'd in London and Weſtminſter, and the Queen went in great State to the Cathedral Church of St. Paul's, attended by both Houſes of Parliament, the great Officers of State, the Judges, and other publick Officers. The Duke of Ormond being the Staff-Officer in Waiting, was in one of her Majeſty's Coaches, (together with the Duke of Somerſet) and as his Grace had the largeſt Share in the Triumph of this Day, ſo had he the loudeſt Acclamations from the People: And, the next Day, being come to the Houſe of Lords, the Lord Keeper return'd his Grace Thanks, in the Name of the Peers, for his ſignal Services perform'd at Vigo. Two Days * after, the Commons proceeded to take into Conſideration the Complaint of Sir John Packington, againſt the Biſhop of Worceſter, and Mr. Lloyd, his Son: Sir John, in his Place, acquainted the Houſe, " That he had reduc'd the Matter of the ſaid Complaint into ſeveral Heads; which he having read, and the Witneſſes to the reſpective Heads being ſeverally call'd and examin'd, the Houſe did unanimouſly reſolve, That Sir John Packington had, by Evidence, fully made out the Charge which he exhibited againſt the Lord Biſhop of Worceſter: That it " appear'd to the Houſe, that the Proceedings of William Lord Biſhop of Worceſter, " his Son, and his Agents, in order to the hindring the Election of a Member of " the County of Worceſter, had been Malicious, Unchriſtian, and Arbitrary, in " high Violation of the Liberties and Privileges of the Commons of En- " gland; that an humble Addreſs be preſented to her Majeſty, that ſhe would " be graciouſly pleas'd to remove William Lord Biſhop of Worceſter, from " being Lord Almoner to her Majeſty; and order'd Mr. Attorney-General to pro- " ſecute Mr. Lloyd, the Biſhop of Worceſter's Son, for his ſaid Offences, after his " Privilege as a Member of the Lower Houſe of Convocation was out." The Lords, alarm'd at this warm Proceeding of the Commons, againſt a Member of their illuſtrious Aſſembly, and one eminently conſpicuous for his Piety, and Learning, did, on the 19th, agree upon an Addreſs to the Queen, wherein they humbly took Leave to repreſent to her Majeſty, " That it is the undoubted Right of every " Lord of Parliament, and of every other Subject of England, to have an Opportu- " nity of making his Defence, before he ſuffer any ſort of Puniſhment; and there- " fore humbly deſir'd her Majeſty, That ſhe would be pleaſed not to remove the " Lord Biſhop of Worceſter, from the Place of Lord Almoner, nor to ſhew any " Mark of her Diſpleaſure towards him, till he were found guilty of ſome Crime, " by due Courſe of Law." This Addreſs being preſented to the Queen, on the 20th, her Majeſty made Anſwer, That ſhe agreed that every Peer and Lord of Parliament, and indeed every other Perſon, ought to have an Opportunity of being heard, to any Matters objected againſt him, before he be puniſh'd. That ſhe had not yet received any Complaint of the Biſhop of Worceſter, but ſhe look'd upon it as her undoubted Right, to continue or diſplace any Servant attending upon her own Perſon, when ſhe ſhould think proper. The ſame Day the Lords unanimouſly reſolv'd and declar'd, " That no " Lord of that Houſe ought to ſuffer any ſort of Puniſhment, by any Proceedings of " the Houſe of Commons, otherwiſe than according to the known and ancient " Rules and Methods of Parliament." But, on the other Hand, Sir Edward Seymour, Comptroller of her Majeſty's Houſhold, having attended the Queen with the Reſolution and Addreſs of the Commons, for the removing the Biſhop of Worceſter from being Lord Almoner to her Majeſty, ſhe was pleaſed to anſwer, " That " ſhe was very ſorry that there was Occaſion for this Addreſs againſt the Biſhop of " Worceſter; and that ſhe would order and direct, that he ſhould no longer continue " to ſupply that Office:" For which Anſwer, the Houſe returned her Majeſty their moſt humble Thanks; And thus the pious and learned Prelate, fell a Sacrifice to the Reſentment of the prevailing High-Church Party, for being too warm a Stickler for their Antagoniſts. On the other Hand, Sir George Rook, who was in great Eſteem with the Tories, was ſworn of the Privy-Council; and having, on the 21ſt, taken his Place in the Houſe of Commons, the Speaker gave him the ſolemn Thanks of the Houſe, to which Sir George return'd a very grateful Anſwer. This being done, Mr. Secretary Hedges deliver'd to the Commons a Meſſage, ſigned by the Queen, importing, " That her Majeſty, conſidering that there was but a very " ſmall Proviſion made for the Prince her Huſband, if he ſhould ſurvive her Maje- " ſty; and that ſhe was reſtrain'd from increaſing the ſame, by the late Act of " Parliament for ſettling her Revenue, thought it neceſſary to recommend the " making a further Proviſion for the Prince to their Conſideration." The Com- " mons having afterwards †, conſider'd of this Meſſage, reſolv'd, That the Yearly " Sum of One Hundred Thouſand Pounds be ſettled on his Royal Highneſs, in Caſe he ſhould ſurvive her Majeſty. The Earl of Marlborough being by this Time arrived ∴ from Holland, Sir Edward Seymour, at the Head of a Committee appointed by the Commons, waited upon his Lordſhip with the Thanks of that Houſe, for the great and ſignal Services by him perform'd for this Nation: To which the Earl modeſtly anſwer'd, That nothing could add to the Satisfaction he took in the Queen's moſt gracious Acceptance of his hearty and ſincere ſincere Endeavours for the Publick Service, but the obliging and favourable Senſe which that Houſe was pleaſed to expreſs of them; of which Honour no Man could be more ſenſible than himſelf; and that our Succeſs was chiefly to be imputed to GOD'S Bleſſing upon her Majeſty's happy Conduct, and the great Bravery of her own Troops, and thoſe of her Allies. The Queen was no leſs pleaſed than the Commons with this artful Anſwer; and Three Days after *, her Majeſty declared before a Committee of Council, That ſhe was ſo ſatisfied of the Services of my Lord Marlborough to the Publick, and to her Self, both in the Command of the Army, and the entire Confidence he had ſettled between her and the States-General, that ſhe intended to make him a Duke. Nor did the Queen's Favour ſtop here: For on the 10th of December, a Meſſage from her Majeſty was deliver'd to the Commons, importing, That ſhe had thought fit to grant the Title of a Duke of this Kingdom to the Earl of Marlborough, and to the Heirs Male of his Body, and alſo a Penſion of Five Thouſand Pounds per Annum, upon the Revenue of the Poſt-Office, for the Support of this Honour, during her Majeſty's natural Life. That if it had been in her Power, ſhe would have granted the ſame Terms in the Penſion, as in the Honour; and that ſhe hoped they would think it ſo reaſonable in this Caſe, as to find ſome proper Methods of doing it. This Meſſage occaſion'd great Debates in the Houſe; and Sir Chriſtopher Muſgrave, among the reſt, did not ſtick to ſay, That he would not derogate from the Duke's eminent Services, but that he was very well paid for them; and thereupon took Notice of the profitable Employments enjoy'd by his Grace, and his Dutcheſs. There being no Likelihood of the Commons complying with the Queen's Deſire, her Majeſty ſent † them another Meſſage, acquainting them, That the Duke of Marlborough had declined her Majeſty's Meſſage to them: But, however, the ſame Day, the Commons being in a grand Committee, a Motion was made for an Addreſs, containing the Reaſons why they could not comply with her Majeſty's firſt Meſſage. This Motion being agreed to the next ‖ Day, the Addreſs was drawn up, and, on the 21ſt of December, preſented to her Majeſty; importing in Subſtance, That it was to their inexpreſſible Grief, that the Commons found any Inſtances where they were unable to comply with what her Majeſty propoſed to them; but they begg'd Leave to lay before her Majeſty their Apprehenſions of making a Precedent for the Alienations of the Revenue of the Crown, which had been ſo much reduced by the EXORBITANT GRANTS of the laſt Reign: And that they were infinitely pleaſed to obſerve by her Majeſty's gracious Acceptance of the Duke of Marlborough's Services, that the only way to obtain her Favour, was to deſerve well from the Publick. The Queen anſwer'd, ſhe ſhould always think her ſelf much concern'd to reward thoſe who deſerved well of her, and of the Publick; on which Account ſhe beſtow'd ſome Favours on the Duke of Marlborough, and was glad to find they thought them well placed. But notwithſtanding theſe ſoothing Compliments on both Sides, the Queen, and her Two Favourites, were nettled to the Quick at their Diſappointment; and bitter Sarcaſms (a) were paſs'd on this Tranſaction, by the Satyrical Wits of that Time.

His Anſwer.

The Queen's Anſwer.

Some Time before, the Commiſſioners for publick Accounts, by Order of the Commons, having made ſtrict Enquiries into the Earl of Ranelagh's Accounts, as Paymaſter-General of the Army, and drawn up a Narrative, wherein they charg'd him with great Miſmanagements: His Lordſhip, on the laſt Day of November, preſented to the Houſe his Anſwer to the ſame; of which the Commons order'd, "That the Commiſſioners of Accounts ſhould have a Copy; and appointed the "3d of December, for them to deliver their Reply to his Lordſhip's Anſwer. The Commiſſioners having punctually obey'd this Order, the Houſe reſolv'd, ∴ That they ſhould have Power to examine the Accounts of the Paymaſter-General of the Army, although the ſame had been deliver'd to former Commiſſioners, or that they had been paſs'd by the Auditors of the Impreſt. The next Day  the Commons proceeded to receive the Proofs of the ſaid Commiſſioners, to the ſeveral Articles of their Narrative, and of the Earl of Ranelagh's Anſwer to the ſame, and reſolv'd, "That it appear'd to the Houſe, that his Lordſhip had given great "and unneceſſary Delays in his Proceedings before the ſaid Commiſſioners." The 5th of December, the Houſe went upon the ſame Affair; and on the 7th, after a full Hearing of both Parties, it was unanimouſly reſolv'd, "1. That it appear'd "to the Houſe, that the Seven Commiſſioners appointed by Act of Parliament "for taking, examining, and ſtating the Publick Accounts of the Kingdom, had "very good Ground for making their Obſervations in their Narrative, or Repre-"preſentation laid before the Houſe. 2. That all Monies iſſued to the Paymaſter-

Acts paſs'd Dec. 23.

On the 23d of December, the Queen went to the Houſe of Lords, and gave the Royal Aſſent to an Act for granting to her Majeſty a Land-Tax for carrying on the War againſt France and Spain, and to Two private Bills.

Proceedings of the Commons.

The ſame Day the Queſtion was put, whether Prince George's Servants ſhould be capacitated to ſit in Parliament, which was carried, by a great Majority, in the Affirmative; and the Bill to empower her Majeſty to ſettle a Revenue on his Royal Highneſs, order'd to be engroſs'd.

Motion for a Bill to reſume King William's Grants carried.

Then Sir Edward Seymour, Comptroller of the Queen's Houſhold, mov'd, That Leave might be given to bring in a Bill, for Reſuming all Grants made in King William's Reign, and applying them to the Uſe of the Publick; which being carried by a Majority of One Hundred and Eighty Voices, againſt Seventy Eight, Mr. Walpole mov'd, That all the Grants made in the Reign of the late King James, ſhould be reſumed likewiſe, which paſs'd in the Negative. This being over, Sir John Holland made a Motion, and the Queſtion was put, That Leave be given to bring in a Bill, for the more free and impartial Proceedings in Parliament, by providing, That no Perſon whatſoever in Office or Employment, ſhould be capable of ſitting in Parliament: Which paſs'd alſo in the Negative; and, the prevailing Party procur'd an Order, for the bringing in a Bill for the more free and impartial Proceedings in Parliament, by providing, That no Perſon ſhould be choſen a Member of the Houſe of Commons, but ſuch as have a ſufficient real Eſtate: Which done, the Houſe adjourn'd to the Fourth of January next enſuing.

Bill order'd for the more free and impartial Proceedings in Parliament.

The Parliament adjourn'd.

When the Commons met again, upon a Meſſage from the Queen * importing, That the States-General had renew'd their Applications to her Majeſty, to aſſiſt them in this Time of their Danger, with an Augmentation of her Forces, as the only Means to diſappoint the great and early Preparations of the French: It was reſolv'd, That Ten Thouſand Men be hired for an Augmentation of the Forces to act in Conjunction with the Allies; but upon Condition that there be an immediate ſtop put to all Commerce and Correſpondence with France, on the Part of the States-General. This Reſolution being form'd into an Addreſs, and laid before the Queen, her Majeſty anſwer'd, She made no doubt but that Condition would be approved, ſince it was ſo abſolutely neceſſary for the Good of the whole Alliance; and that ſhe ſhould ſend that Night Directions to her Miniſters in Holland, to concur with the States in providing the Troops accordingly. The Lords alſo addreſs'd the Queen on the ſame Subject, and to the ſame Effect; to which the Queen return'd much the like Anſwer. The chief Reaſon why both Houſes inſiſted upon an immediate Prohibition of all Commerce and Correſpondence with France and Spain, was the great Difficulty the Court of France labour'd under, at this Juncture, to make Remittances of Money to their Forces in Italy, and to the Elector of Bavaria in Germany; which, indeed, the French could not do, without the Aſſiſtance of the Engliſh, Dutch, and Geneva Merchants: As appear'd by a Diſcovery made about this Time by the Earl of Nottingham, Principal Secretary of State, of an unlawful Intercourſe of Bills of Exchange, between ſome French Bankers at Paris, and ſome London Merchants.

* Jan. 4. The Commons vote 10000 Men of Augmentation, Jan. 5.

Both Houſes Addreſs the Queen to engage the States to prohibit all Commerce with France and Spain.

The Act of Parliament paſs'd the firſt Year of King William and Queen Mary, in favour of Proteſtant Diſſenters, was a great Eye-Sore to ſome of the High-Church Party, chiefly becauſe it ſtrengthen'd the Hands of the well-affected to the Proteſtant Succeſſion: And therefore they reſolved to improve the firſt Opportunity that ſhould offer, to render that Law ineffectual. This could hardly be expected, as long as the Great Deliverer of theſe Nations ſat upon the Throne; but he had not been laid many Months in the Grave, when upon Pretence that Sir Humphrey Edwin, Lord-Mayor of London, in the Year 1697, went once to a Conventicle with the City Sword, Mr. William Bromley (on the 4th of November, 1702) made a Motion for the bringing in a Bill for preventing Occaſional Conformity, which was order'd to be brought in accordingly, by Mr. Bromley, Mr. St. John, (afterwards Lord Boling-

Bill for preventing Occaſional Conformity order'd to be brought in by the Commons.

Bolingbroke) and Mr. Anneſley, afterwards Earl of Angleſey. Upon its Second Reading, * the ſaid Bill was committed to a Committee of the whole Houſe; but a Motion being made, and the Queſtion put, "That the ſaid Committee have Power to "receive a Clauſe, for the exempting Diſſenters from ſuch Offices as cannot, by "Law, be executed without receiving the Sacrament, according to the Uſage of the "Church of England; it paſs'd in the Negative. Towards the End of that Month, the Commons read the ſaid Bill a Third Time, paſs'd it, and ſent it to the Lords, who, on the 9th of December, 1702, ſent it back to the Lower Houſe, with ſeveral Amendments. At the ſame Time, their Lordſhips being apprehenſive, that the Commons would not give their Concurrence to the ſaid Amendments; and might, as they had done on other Occaſions, tack their Bill to ſome Money-Bill, their Lordſhips therefore made a Vote, That the annexing any Clauſe to a Money-Bill, was contrary to the Conſtitution of the Engliſh Government, and the Uſage of Parliament: And ordered this Vote to be added to the Roll of the ſtanding Orders of their Houſe. On the other Hand, the Commons having read the Lords Amendments, agreed to ſome of them, and diſagreed to others; and on the 12th of December, appointed a Committee to draw up Reaſons to be offer'd to the Lords at a Conference, for diſagreeing to ſuch of their Lordſhips Amendments, as the Houſe had diſagreed to. The ſaid Reaſons being prepar'd accordingly, the Commons, on the 17th, deſir'd a Conference with the Lords, to which their Lordſhips having readily agreed, the Managers of the Commons deliver'd their Reaſons to the Lords, and left the Bill, and Amendments with their Lordſhips. On the 8th of January, 170$\frac{2}{3}$, the Lords ſent a Meſſage to the Commons, to deſire a new Conference the next Day, at Twelve a-clock in the Painted-Chamber, upon the Subject-Matter of the laſt Conference, upon the Bill entitled, An Act for preventing Occaſional Conformity, which was readily granted. The Managers for the Commons having met the Lords at the Conference, their Lordſhips inſiſted upon all their Amendments to the Bill; which being reported to the Commons by Mr. Bromley, and his Report taken into Conſideration on the 11th of January, the Queſtion was put, That the Houſe ſhould inſiſt upon their diſagreeing with the Lords in the ſaid Amendments, and carried in the Affirmative. Thereupon it was reſolv'd, That a free Conference be deſir'd with the Lords upon the Subject-Matter of the laſt Conference: To which their Lordſhips having readily agreed, and appointed the ſame to be on the 16th of the ſame Month, in the Painted-Chamber; the Commons order'd, That their Members who manag'd the laſt Conference, viz. Mr. Bromley, Mr. St. John, Mr. Finch, Mr. Sollicitor-General, and Sir Thomas Powis, ſhould manage the ſaid Free Conference, and ſeveral others were added to them.

* Nov. 17.

The Bill ſent to the Lords, who make ſeveral Amendments to it. The Lords Vote againſt Tacking of Bills.

A Free Conference between both Houſes thereupon, Jan. 16.

The Managers of the Commons, who open'd the Conference, inſiſted on their Diſagreement to the Lords Amendments, and urged many plauſible Arguments for the Bill, in general; as, "That this Law was only to reſtrain a very ſcandalous "Practice, which is a Reproach to Religion, gives Offence to all good Chriſtians, "and to the beſt among the Diſſenters themſelves. That this Bill enacted nothing "new, and was only intended to make the Laws in Being (viz. the Corporation, "and Teſt Acts) more effectual. That the Commons thought this Bill abſolutely "neceſſary to prevent thoſe Miſchiefs, which muſt prove deſtructive to the "CHURCH and MONARCHY. That an Eſtabliſh'd Religion, and a National Church "are abſolutely neceſſary, when ſo many ill Men pretend to Inſpiration, and when "there are ſo many weak Men to follow them. They frankly declared, That as, "upon the Revolution, the laſt Reign began with an Act in Favour of the Diſſenters, "ſo the Commons deſired, in the beginning of her Majeſty's Reign, an Act might "paſs, in Favour of the Church of England; that the Laws which had been evaded, "might now be effectually enforced; and that thoſe Men might be kept out of "Offices, who never wanted the Will, when they had the Power to deſtroy the "CHURCH. And pretended, that this Bill did not, in any Reſpect, intrench on "the Act of Toleration, or take from the Diſſenters any one Privilege they had by "Law; or give any one Privilege to the Church of England, which was not (at "leaſt) intended her by the Laws, as they then ſtood.

On the other Hand, the Managers for the Lords (viz. the Duke of Devonſhire, Lord Steward, the Earl of Peterborow, the Biſhop of Saliſbury, the Lord Somers, and the Lord Halifax,) maintain'd the Alterations made in the Bill; and ſpoke againſt the Bill it ſelf. "They own'd it, indeed, to be a Scandal to Religion, that "Perſons ſhould conform only for a Place; but they did not think going to a Meeting to be Malum in ſe, the Diſſenters being Proteſtants, and differing from the "Church of England only in ſome little Forms; wherefore the Lords thought Loſs "of Office, and a reaſonable Fine, a ſufficient Puniſhment, without an Incapacity, "which is too great a Penalty for any Offence that is not Capital. That the

"Diſſenters

A. D. 1702.

" Diſſenters were not ſo obnoxious to the Government, as when the Corporation Act " was made, but were well-affected to the preſent Conſtitution, and hearty Ene- " mies to the Queen's and Kingdom's Enemies. That the Lords did not think fit " to bring any greater Hardſhips upon the Diſſenters, ſince greater Advantages had " accrued from the Act of Toleration, which had much contributed to the Security and " Reputation of the Church of England, and produced a good Temper among the " Diſſenters. That as the Lords were ſenſible, That gentle Meaſures are moſt proper, " and have been moſt effectual towards increaſing the Church, and diminiſhing the " Number of Diſſenters; ſo they apprehended, that ſome Parts of this Bill had an " Air of Severity improper for this Seaſon. That if this Bill did enact nothing " new, there would not be ſuch a Conteſt about it. That though Occaſional Con- " formity ought always to have been eſteem'd a Crime, yet the Practice was new; " and the Lords did conſent to a Puniſhment, but would proportion the Penalty to " the Offence: But that the Commons gave up this Argument, when they propoſed " for new-invented Crimes, new-invented Puniſhments. That as the Commons " needed not to be aſhamed of Deſigns ſo laudable, as the Preſervation of the " Church of England, and Monarchy, ſo the Lords concluded their Deſires of ſecu- " ring the Toleration Act, the Peace and Quiet of the Kingdom at Home, and the " Intereſt of the Nation Abroad, would meet with a fair Conſtruction, eſpecially " when they hoped the Church was ſo well ſecured by her Doctrine, by the good " Laws of the Realm, and the Protection of ſo Pious a Queen, aſſiſted by a Par- " liament ſo well affected to the Church and State. That the Lords not only al- " low'd the Neceſſity of an Eſtabliſh'd Religion, and a National Church, but being " likewiſe of that National Church, they could never be wanting to thoſe Meaſures " they thought proper to ſecure it; and though by the firſt Appearance, the Mem- " bers of the Houſe of Commons might ſeem, upon this Occaſion, the moſt zealous " Champions to the National Eſtabliſhment, yet the Lords thought the only Con- " teſt between them was, which ſhould moſt befriend and take Care of the Church; " the one would procure a haſty, ſettled Submiſſion, not ſo much to be depended upon; " the other would obtain for her a more gradual, but a ſafer Advantage over thoſe that " diſſent from her. That the Lords did not well underſtand the Inference, That as " upon the Revolution, the laſt Reign began with an Act in Favour of the Diſſenters, " ſo the Commons did deſire, in the beginning of her Majeſty's Reign, an Act might paſs " in favour of the Church: The Lords conceiving that both Reigns began upon the " ſame Bottom and Foundation; and that as in this Reign, her Majeſty had been " pleaſed to give Gracious Aſſurances as to Liberty of Conſcience, ſo in the laſt, the " Church ever met with Protection and Support. That the Intereſt of both Parties " was to ſupport the Church againſt her Enemies: That it was hard, as well as un- " true, to ſay of the Diſſenters, They never wanted the Will, when they had the Power, " to deſtroy the Church and State; ſince in the laſt and greateſt Danger the Church " was expoſed to, they joined with her, with all imaginable Zeal and Sincerity, " againſt the Papiſts, their common Enemies, ſhewing no Prejudice to the Church, " but the utmoſt Reſpect to her Biſhops, when ſent to the Tower: And that ever " ſince they had continued to ſhew all the Signs of Friendſhip and Submiſſion to the " Government of Church and State. That, in Truth, formerly the Diſſenters had " been Seditious, and in Arms and Oppoſition to the State and Church, but it was " the Effect of Perſecution; and that even then, they were open and avowed Ene- " mies; but that Toleration and Tenderneſs had never miſs'd of procuring Peace and " Union, as Perſecution had never fail'd producing the contrary Effects. That the " Lords could not think the Diſſenters could properly be call'd Schiſmaticks, ſince they " did not differ in any Eſſential Point: That ſuch an Opinion allowed, would bring a " heavy Charge upon the Church of England, who by a Law had tolerated ſuch a " Schiſm: That Connivance hath been uſed to Schiſmaticks, but publick Allowance " was never given to ſuch; and the Churchmen having allow'd Communion with " the Reformed Churches Abroad, profeſſing Calviniſm, it muſt follow, they held " them not guilty of Schiſm. That this Bill inflicted a Second Puniſhment on " thoſe who fled from France for their Religion; who ſought a very improper Re- " fuge amongſt thoſe that muſt think them guilty of Schiſm, and muſt uſe them " accordingly; which might be uſed as an Argument to juſtify even the Perſecu- " tion in France. That the Lords could not depart from the Clauſe relating to the " Dutch and Walloon Churches, ſo long eſtabliſhed among us, leſt it ſhould give " great Diſguſt and Offence to our Allies Abroad; and, at the ſame Time, forfeit " the greateſt Character can be given a Church, that of Tenderneſs and Charity to " Fellow-Chriſtians; the contrary Practice being what is ſo much abhorred amongſt " Roman Catholicks. That the giving a Vote for a Repreſentative in Parliament, " is the Eſſential Privilege whereby every Engliſh-Man preſerves his Property; and " that whatſoever deprives him of ſuch Vote, deprives him of his Birthright. That A. D.

" the Lords were of Opinion, the Diſſenters ſhould have Liberty of Conſcience, 1702.
" but agreed to the further Meaſure propoſed by the Commons to allow neither " Diſſenters, nor Occaſional Conformiſts, any Share in the Government; but they " took this to be the great Security for the Eſtabliſhed Religion, that all who ſit
" in the Houſe of Commons muſt be Churchmen; and the Difference between a " Churchman choſe by Churchmen, and choſe by Diſſenters, is only this, that the " former will be for uſing ſeverer, the other gentler Means, for bringing the Diſſen-
" ters into the Church. That as for this Occaſional Conformity, the Lords did not go
" about to excuſe, or to defend it; but they who had obſerv'd the Progreſs of thoſe
" Matters, and had born a large Share in theſe Controverſies, muſt acquaint the " Commons, that it was no new Practice invented to evade a Law: That it had " been both the Principle and Practice of ſome of the moſt eminent among the " Diſſenters, ever ſince St. Bartholomew's, in the Year 1662. That it was known,
" that Baxter and Bates did ſtill maintain it, and that ſeveral Books had been writ
" about it: And as the fierceſt of the Diſſenters, who intended to keep up a Wall of " Partition between them and the Church, had oppoſed it much; ſo the Party of all
" the Diſſenters, that came neareſt the Church, and of whom the greateſt Numbers
" were come over to it, were thoſe that pleaded for it: Nor was it a certain Infe" rence, that becauſe a Man receives the Sacrament in the Church, he can therefore " conform in every other Particular. That there was a very Learned and Famous
" Man that liv'd at Saliſbury, Mr. Tombs, who was a very zealous Conformiſt in all " Points, but in one, Infant-Baptiſm; ſo that the receiving the Sacrament, did not " neceſſarily import an entire Conformity in every other Particular, no more than
" a Man who can ſubſcribe to the Two firſt Articles of our Religion, that are indeed
" the main ones, is by that concluded to aſſent to the reſt of the Thirty Nine: That " it was likewiſe to be remembred, that after St. Bartholomew, in 1662, Occaſional
" Conformity was a Step that carried many much further: From Occaſional Confor- " mity, it grew to a conſtant Conformity, if not in the Perſons themſelves, yet in " their Children; ſo the Lords now ſaw ſome deſcended from Occaſional Conformiſts,
" eſpouſe the Cauſe of the Church with much Zeal: For which Reaſons the Lords
" did conceive the Penalties in this Bill to be exceſſive and unreaſonable. That the " Practice of Occaſional Conformity was almoſt of the ſame Date with the Act of " Uniformity, and practiſed by many of the Diſſenters, who had no Thoughts of " Offices, and had been a Means of bringing ſeveral Perſons entirely from Meet- " ings; however, the Lords were willing to make it impoſſible for ſuch Men to " keep in Offices, becauſe Hypocrites would make uſe of ſuch a Liberty; but they " were not willing to ruin Perſons utterly, on Account of a Practice that many " well-meaning Men had been and might be led into, and which they thought " tended naturally to bring them over entirely to the Church. That as for the " Clauſes about the Foreign Proteſtants, there was great Reaſon to give them all
" juſt Encouragement; for as they had brought among us many new Manufactures, ſo
" they had carried them ſo far, that of late Years we had exported to the Value of a Mil- " lion of Woollen Manufactures more than was done in King Charles's Reign, before they " came among us; and the putting them under Apprehenſions or Diſcouragements,
" might be a Means to drive them to a Country where they were ſure of an entire " Liberty, viz. Holland.

The Managers of the Commons, by way of Reply, ſaid, That the Lords had agreed to the greater Part of this Bill, and therefore ſhould confine themſelves, and ſpeak only to their own Amendment. That no Time could be more ſeaſonable for this Bill than the preſent, becauſe the Church was now in no Danger of Popery, or Fanaticiſm; but good Laws are to be made for Poſterity, and may be obtained moſt eaſily in the beſt Reigns. That the Right of Election of Members to ſerve in Parliament, is in thoſe that are concerned in the Government of the Corporations; and if they ſhould by this Bill be turned out of their Employments, and conſequently loſe their Votes in the Elections, yet it cannot be ſaid, they loſe their Birthrights, becauſe no Man is born a Magiſtrate. That the Commons Penalty bore a juſt Proportion to the Offence, and that all above One Hundred Pounds, was for an obſtinate perſiſting in the Crime; urging, That the Offender could not be guilty through Inadvertency, but knowingly and willingly. That the Teſt Act gives a much greater Penalty (viz. Five Hundred Pounds) than that in this Act to the Informers; beſides, that Act brings the Offender under very great Diſabilities. That ſome of the Lords Arguments had been ſo irregular, as to defend Occaſional Conformity; and that the Commons Managers were ſurprized to hear a Prelate (the Biſhop of Sarum) ſpeak in Defence of ſuch a Practice. Thereupon they left the Bill with the Lords, and ſaid, they hop'd their Lordſhips would not let the Publick loſe the Benefit of ſo good a Law, The Free Conference being thus broke up, and the Managers return'd to their reſpective Houſes,

The Free Conference unſucceſsful.

A. D. 1702. Houſes, the Lords adhered to all their Amendments, except the Fifth, relating to Corporations: And on the 25th of January, their Lordſhips having taken into Conſideration, what Method was to be uſed in returning the Bill to the Houſe of Commons, ſince the Lords adher'd to moſt of their Amendments, order'd that the Lords Committees, who were the Managers of the Free Conference on that Bill, ſhould the next Day ſearch Precedents relating to this Matter. Four Days after the Lord Steward * having reported from that Committee, That their Lordſhips found the Bill was to be deliver'd at a Free Conference, ſometimes with, and ſometimes without Reaſons, the Queſtion thereupon was propos'd and put, Whether the Lords ſhould agree with the Commons, that the Clauſe relating to Corporations ſhould ſtand Part of the Bill? This being carried in the Affirmative, a Meſſage was ſent to the Commons, to deſire a Free Conference on the 1ſt of February. The Commons readily comply'd with this Meſſage, and the Managers of both Houſes being met accordingly on the appointed Day, the Lords deliver'd the Bill to the Commons, and acquainted them, That the Lords had receded from one of their Amendments, and adher'd to all the reſt. Four Days † after, the Commons having taken the Report of the firſt Free Conference into Conſideration, order'd the ſame to be entred into their Journal, and Reſolv'd, That they did adhere to their diſagreeing with the Lords in the Amendments made by their Lordſhips. On the other hand, the Lords, a few Days after, order'd their Proceedings in Relation to that Affair, to be printed; whereupon the Commons reſolved to publiſh theirs likewiſe.

Proceedings of the Commons in Relation to publick Accounts.

By this Time the Commons were entred upon an Affair that made a great Noiſe, and did very much increaſe the Diſagreement which the Occaſional Conformity Bill had occaſion'd between the Two Houſes of Parliament. On the 18th of January, Mr. St. John, from the Commiſſioners of Publick Accounts, preſented to the Houſe of Commons a general State of Receipts and Iſſues of the Publick Revenue, between the Feaſts of St. Michael, 1700, 1701, and 1702, with Obſervations thereupon; which having been taken into Conſideration the following Days, and Mr. Bridges, one of the ſaid Commiſſioners, having, on the 25th, preſented to the Houſe an Account both of the Loans and Payments on the Votes of that Houſe in February, 1700, and of the Produce of the Twenty Five per Cent. on French Goods, and the Application of the ſame, it was then reſolv'd, That the borrowing of Money, and ſtriking Tallies with Intereſt unneceſſary, before the publick Occaſions required the ſame, had been one Reaſon of the great Debt which lay upon the Nation: And that the applying of the publick Money to the Uſe of the Civil-Liſt, which was otherwiſe provided for, was another Cauſe of that great Debt. The next Day Colonel Bierly, from the ſaid Commiſſioners, preſented to the Houſe their Report, purſuant to an Order of the Houſe, by which they were directed to examine the Auditor, and other Officers of the Exchequer, relating to the paſſing of the Accounts of the Publick Money, and to lay before the Houſe what they ſhould find to be the Cauſe that the Accounts were not annually and duly paſs'd, according to the Laws in that Caſe, and through whoſe Default it had happen'd. This Report, and ſeveral Paragraphs of the Commiſſioners Obſervations being read, the Houſe reſolv'd, "1. That Charles Lord Halifax, "Auditor of the Receipt of the Exchequer, had neglected his Duty, and was guilty "of a Breach of Truſt, in not tranſmitting the Impreſt-Rolls Half-yearly to the "King's Remembrancer, according to the Act made in the Seſſion of Parliament "held in the 8th and 9th Year of his late Majeſty's Reign, Intituled, An Act for "the better Obſervation of the Courſe anciently uſed in the Receipt of Exchequer. "2. That the allowing Accomptants the Charges of Law-Suits to determine the Right of "their Offices, was a Miſapplication of the Publick Money. 3. That the Auditors of the "Impreſt had been guilty of a great Neglect of their Duty, in not certifying to the King's "Remembrancer, the Neglect of the ſeveral annual Accounts, that the Proceſs might go out "againſt them; and, 4. That there had been a general Miſmanagement of the Publick "Money, by not obliging Accomptants to make up their Accounts, and by continuing Re- "ceivers in ſeveral Counties, contrary to Law, who had neglected to make up their Ac- "counts in due Time, which had been a great Abuſe of the Publick, and another Cauſe of "the great Debt that lay upon the Nation." On the 27th, the Commons having proceeded in the further Conſideration of the Obſervations of the Commiſſioners of Publick Accounts, reſolv'd, 1. That the Money impreſt out of the Exchequer for the Service of the Publick, ought to be kept by the reſpective Officers in their own Cuſtody, until the ſame ſhall be paid to the Uſes for which it was directed. 2. That Charles Lord Halifax, Auditor of the Receipt of Exchequer, had been guilty of a Breach of Truſt, in not examining every Three Months the Tellers Vouchers for the Payments upon the Annuities, which he allowed in his Weekly Certificates, according to the foremention'd Act of Parliament. 3. That the Reſolutions relating to the Lord Halifax, be laid before her Majeſty; and, 4. That an Addreſs be preſented to her Majeſty, That ſhe would be pleas'd to give Directions to the Attorney-General to proſecute him for the ſaid Offences. Five Days * after, Colonel Granville acquainted the Houſe, that the Queen had been pleas'd to ſay, That ſhe would ſend to the Attorney-General, and give him her Directions, purſuant to this Addreſs. The ſame † Day, the Commons reſum'd the adjourn'd Debate, upon the laſt Obſervation of the Commiſſioners for Publick Accounts, and the Reſolutions of the 4th and 7th of December laſt, relating to the Earl of Ranelagh, being read, it was reſolv'd, That the ſaid Earl being guilty of a high Crime and Miſdemeanor, in miſapplying ſeveral Sums of the Publick Money, be expell'd the Houſe; and that an Addreſs be preſented to her Majeſty, upon the Narrative, Repreſentation and Obſervations of the ſaid Commiſſioners, and upon the Reſolution of the Houſe of Commons thereupon, and upon the Debate of the Houſe.

† Feb. 7.

The Earl of Ranelagh expell'd the Houſe of Commons.

On the other Hand, the Lords, before whom Mr. King, Secretary to the Commiſſioners of Accounts, had, on the 15th of January, laid an Account of the general State of the Receipts and Iſſues of the Publick Revenue, from the Feaſt of St. Michael, 1700, to the ſame Feaſt in 1702, with their Obſervations thereupon, order'd ‖, That the Commiſſioners of Accounts ſhould lay before their Lordſhips, what further Obſervations they had made in Relation to the ſaid Accounts. The next Day, the Lords took the Book of Publick Accounts into Conſideration, and read the firſt Paragragh of the Commiſſioners Obſervations; which relating to the Lord Halifax, his Lordſhip was heard thereto. Then Mr. Gregory King delivered at the Bar the Commiſſioners of Accounts further Obſervations; and at the ſame Time, the Queen's Remembrancer laid before their Lordſhips, the Impreſt Rolls tranſmitted to him ſince November, 1699. This done, a Committee was appointed to conſider of the Obſervations deliver'd firſt to their Lordſhips from the Commiſſioners of Accounts, and it was order'd, That the Queen's Remembrancer ſhould, the next Day, bring before the ſaid Committee, the Impreſt Rolls tranſmitted to him ſince the 20th of April, 1697, being the Time from which the Act commenced; and, Secondly, That the Commiſſioners for Publick Accounts ſhould have Notice, that their Lordſhips had appointed a Committee to conſider of their Obſervations. On the 3d of February, Mr. Barker, Deputy to her Majeſty's Remembrancer, brought the other Impreſt Rolls, as ordered the Day before, which were delivered to the Committee; and the Duke of Somerſet reported from the ſaid Committee, That they had taken the firſt Obſervation into Conſideration, in Relation to the Auditor of the Exchequer: That though the Commiſſioners of Accounts had Notice of the Committee's Sitting, yet none of them attended; and therefore the Committee was of Opinion, that a Meſſage be ſent to the Houſe of Commons, that they might have Leave to attend: Which Meſſage was ſent ∴ accordingly. On the 5th, the Commons having taken the ſame into Conſideration, appointed a Committee to inſpect the Journals, and to ſearch Precedents relating to what had been done upon the Lords deſiring Members of the Houſe of Commons to attend the Houſe of Lords, and in relation to the Lords inſpecting and examining Accounts. And the ſame Day  the Duke of Somerſet made the following Report.

The Lords Proceedings in Relation to the Publick Accounts.

 Feb. 5. Report of the Lords Committee.

" The Committee appointed to conſider of the Obſervations in the Book of Ac" counts delivered into this Houſe, have made ſome Progreſs in conſidering the " ſaid Obſervations, and take Leave to acquaint the Houſe, That they have exa" mined into the firſt of thoſe Obſervations; and alſo the further Obſervations de" livered into this Houſe the 2d Inſtant, relating to the tranſmitting the ordinary
" Impreſt Rolls to the Queen's Remembrancer: They have inſpected ſeveral of the " Original Impreſt Rolls, delivered into the Houſe by Mr. Barker, Deputy to her
" Majeſty's Remembrancer: They alſo examined divers Officers of the Exchequer,
" and others upon Oath, and do find, That by the ancient and uninterrupted Courſe of
" the Exchequer, Two Impreſt Rolls are to be made out for each Year; the one compre-
" hending all ſuch Sums Impreſt from the end of Trinity-Term, to the end of Hilary-
" Term; the other containing all ſuch Sums from that Time, to the end of Trinity-
" Term; which Rolls are commonly call'd Half-yearly Rolls, though improperly:
" They find, that by the ancient Courſe of the Exchequer, theſe Impreſt Rolls, be" ing made out by the Auditor of the Receipt, are to be delivered by him to the " Clerk of the Pells, whoſe Duty it is to examine and ſign them; and this being " done, the Clerk of the Pells delivers them to the Remembrancer. This Uſage
" was by degrees diſcontinued in the Reign of King Charles the Second; and the " Remembrancer, or his Agent, uſed to come to the Office of the Auditor of the " Receipt, and take away the Impreſt Rolls from thence immediately: But in the " Time when the Earl of Rocheſter was Treaſurer, the Ancient Uſage was re-
" ſtored, and he did order that the Impreſt Rolls ſhould be carefully examin'd, and " ſign'd by the Clerk of the Pells, before they ſhould be tranſmitted to the Re-
" membrancer; and accordingly ſince that Time, the ancient Cuſtom has been ob-
" ſerv'd, as well before, as ſince the Act of Parliament made in the Eighth and

" Ninth

" Ninth Year of his late Majeſty, For the better Obſervation of the Courſe anci-
" ently uſed in the Receipt of the Exchequer: That is to ſay, The ſaid Half-yearly
" Rolls, when made out, and ſigned by the Auditor, have been by him tranſmitted
" to the Clerk of the Pells; and when the Clerk of the Pells has examin'd and ſign'd
" them, he, or his Deputy, has delivered them to the Remembrancer; and this ap" pears by the Remembrancer's Endorſement upon the Rolls. The Committee
" finds, that Charles Lord Halifax, has been Auditor of the Receipt from the end
" of November, 1699; ſince which Time, Six Impreſt Rolls have been tranſmitted
" to the Remembrancer; and there is a Seventh Roll now under Examination of " the Office of the Pells, and no other Roll can be prepared till after the Twelfth
" of this Inſtant February. Upon the whole Matter, the Committee are humbly of " Opinion, That Charles Lord Halifax, Auditor of the Receipt of the Exchequer,
" hath perform'd the Duty of his Office, in tranſmitting the ordinary Impreſt
" Rolls to the Queen's Remembrancer, according to the ancient Cuſtom of " the Exchequer, and the Direction of the Act VIII and IX Gulielmi III.
" and that he hath not been guilty of any Neglect, or Breach of Truſt,
" upon that Account." This Report being read, as alſo the Examinations taken upon Oath by the Committee, and the Dates and Endorſements of the ſeveral Impreſt Rolls deliver'd by Mr. Barker, the Queſtion was put, Whether this Houſe would agree to the Opinion of the Committee in this Report? Which being carried in the Affirmative, it was reſolved and declared by the Lords Spiritual and Temporal in Parliament aſſembled, That Charles Lord Halifax, Auditor of the Receipt of the Exchequer, hath perform'd the Duty of his Office, in tranſmitting the ordinary Impreſt Rolls to the Queen's Remembrancer, according to the ancient Cuſtom of the Exchequer, and the Direction of the Act VIII and IX Gulielmi III. Regis, Entituled, An Act for the better Obſervation of the Courſe anciently uſed in the Receipt of the Exchequer; and that he hath not been guilty of any Neglect or Breach of Truſt upon that Account. At the ſame Time, the Lords order'd their Proceedings in this Affair to be forthwith printed and publiſh'd.

The Lord Halifax clear'd by the Lords.

The honourable Acquittal of the Lord Halifax, did reliſh but ill with the Commons, who, on the 12th, order'd their Committee to ſearch the Journals of the Houſe of Lords, and report their Lordſhips Proceedings, in Relation to the Obſervations of the Commiſſioners of Accounts. Purſuant to this Order, Colonel Granville did, the next Day, report to the Houſe, what the Committee had found, both in the Lords Journals relating to this Affair, and in the Journals of the Houſe of Commons, relating to what had been done upon the Lords deſiring Members of the ſaid Houſe to attend the Houſe of Lords; and in Relation to the Lords inſpecting and examining publick Accounts. This Report being read, the Commons ordered the ſame Committee to draw up what was proper to be offer'd to the Lords, at a Conference upon the Subject-Matter of their Lordſhips Meſſage the 4th Inſtant, which the Committee did accordingly in this Manner. " The Commons cannot comply with your
" Lordſhips Deſires, contain'd in your Meſſage of the 4th Inſtant, becauſe the " Commons are ſtill of the ſame Opinion, as was deliver'd to your Lordſhips in " February, 1691, at a Free Conference upon the ſubject Matter of the Amend" ments made by the Lords, to the additional Bill, for the appointing and en" abling Commiſſioners to examine, take and ſtate the publick Accounts of the " Kingdom, when they deſired to know the End your Lordſhips would propoſe
" to your ſelves, by an Enquiry into the Publick Accounts: For ſhould any Miſap-
" plication of Money, or Default of Diſtribution appear in the Accounts, your " Lordſhips cannot take Cognizance thereof originally, or otherwiſe, even in your " judicial Capacity, than at the Complaint of the Commons: And ſhould a Fai" lure, or want of Money appear, it is not in your Lordſhips Power to redreſs it:
" For the Grant of all Aids is in the Commons only; or if there be any Surplu" ſage, the Commons only can apply it to the Charge of the enſuing Year. But " ſhould the Commons give Leave to the Commiſſioners to attend your Lordſhips,
" no Information they can give againſt any Perſon whatſoever, can entitle your " Lordſhips either to acquit, or condemn. Yet ſince this Meſſage, the Commons
" find in your Lordſhips Journals a Reſolution, declaring, That Charles Lord
" Halifax, Auditor of the Receipt of the Exchequer, has perform'd the Duty of his " Office, &c. which looks to the Commons, as if your Lordſhips pretended to give
" a Judgment of Acquittal, without any Accuſation brought before your Lordſhips,
" and conſequently without any Tryal. And that which makes your Lordſhips
" Proceeding yet more Irregular, it tends to prejudging a Cauſe which might regu" larly have come before you, either originally by Impeachment, or by Writ of " Error from the Courts below. And therefore the Commons can ſee no Uſe of ſaid Reaſons to their Lordſhips. The Lords, not a little provok'd by the Reaſons of the Commons, came, on the 18th, to the following Reſolutions: Firſt, That the Lords have an undoubted Right (which they can never ſuffer to be conteſted) to take Cognizance originally of all Publick Accounts, and to enquire into any Miſapplication or Default in the Diſtribution of Publick Monies, or into any other Miſmanagement whatſoever. Secondly, That the Lords, in their Enquiry into the Examination of the Obſervations of the Commiſſioners of Accounts, in Relation to Charles Lord Halifax, and in their Reſolution thereupon, had proceeded according to the Rules of Juſtice, and the Evidence that was before them. And Thirdly, That the Commons, in their Reaſons delivered at the laſt Conference, had us'd ſeveral Expreſſions and Arguments highly reflecting, and altogether Unparliamentary, tending to deſtroy all good Correſpondence between the Two Houſes, and to the Subverſion of the Conſtitution.

The Queen apprehending the Conſequence of theſe Differences between the Two Houſes, ſent ‖ a Meſſage to the Lords, by the Earl of Nottingham, to deſire them ‖ Feb. 22.
to make a quick Diſpatch with the Buſineſs before them: And the ſame Day their Lordſhips communicated the fore-mention'd Reſolutions to the Commons, at a Conference which their Lordſhips had deſired, and appointed. The Commons having the next ∴ Day, taken the ſame into Conſideration, reſolv'd, That a Free Conference be deſired with the Lords, upon the Subject-Matter of the Two laſt Conferences; and order'd their Managers to conſider of what Heads were fit to be gone upon at the ſaid Free Conference, which they accordingly did, and the ſaid Heads were as follows, viz. " 1. That no Cognizance the Lords can take of the Publick
" Accounts, can enable them to ſupply any Deficiency, or to apply any Surpluſage
" of the Publick Money. 2. That the Lords can neither acquit or condemn any " Perſon whatſoever, upon any Enquiry ariſing originally in their own Houſe.
" 3. That the Attempt the Lords have made to acquit Charles Lord Halifax, Audi" tor of the Receipt of the Exchequer, is Unparliamentary, and not warranted by " any Precedent: And the Reſolution thereupon, plainly contrary to what appears " on the Records themſelves. 4. That the Conference deſir'd by the Commons,
" was, in order to preſerve a good Correſpondence between both Houſes, by offering
" Reaſons to prevent the Lords from proceeding in a Caſe which they had no Pre" cedent to warrant; and the Commons expreſſing the Conſequences they appre-
" hended might follow from that Reſolution, was neither Reflecting nor Unparlia-
" mentary, or tending to deſtroy the good Correſpondence between the Two Hou-
" ſes, and much leſs to the Subverſion of the Conſtitution; and 5. That the Lords
" delivering at a Conference their Reſolutions, inſtead of Reaſons, in Anſwer to
" the Reaſons of the Commons, is not agreeable to the ancient Rules and Methods
" of Parliament, obſerved in Conferences between the Two Houſes." Theſe Heads ∴ Feb. 23.
being reported  by Colonel Granville, and then read and approved by the Houſe,  Feb. 25.
a Meſſage was ſent to the Lords to deſire a Free Conference with their Lordſhips, who appointed the ſame immediately in the Painted-Chamber, and named the Lord Steward, the Earl of Carliſle, and the Lords Herbert, Halifax, and Ferrer, to be their Managers.

A Free Conference between both Houſes, Feb. 25.

The Managers for the Commons, at the Head of whom was the ingenious and learned Mr. Finch, open'd the Particulars which they had in Direction to inſiſt on: Adding, " That when they acquainted their Lordſhips, that the expreſſing the Con-
" ſequences which they apprehended might follow from their Lordſhips Reſolutions,
" it was not a Charge upon their Lordſhips, that they intended that Conſequence;
" but they would have been very glad their Lordſhips would have been pleas'd to " have let them know, what Uſe was to be made of it, or what they intended by
" it: And concluded, that if their Lordſhips did controvert any of theſe Points,
" they were ready to maintain them." The Lords made no Anſwer to any of theſe Particulars, ſave to the Matter of the Reſolution relating to the Lord Halifax, upon which they acknowledg'd, That they were no Court of Enquiry to form any Accuſation: That their Proceedings, in Relation to that Lord, was no Tryal; nor was their Reſolution any Judgment or Acquittal; but that he might ſtill be proſecuted, as before: But that which gave Occaſion to that Proceeding, was the Reſolution of the Houſe of Com- mons, which they found in the Printed Votes, reflecting upon a Member of their Houſe, and thereupon they thought fit to give their Opinion, which they did in their Legiſlative Authority.

The Managers for the Commons replied, " That their Lordſhips having in their " Reſolutions declar'd, That they had proceeded according to the Rules of Juſtice, " and the Evidence that was before them, the Commons could put no other Inter- " pretation upon it, than that it was intended as a Judgment: And no Judgment " could be made, where there was no Accuſation; and if it was not a Judgment, " they could not imagine what it did tend to. As to their Lordſhips delivering " their Opinion: That it was againſt the Rules of any Court, that any Judge what- " ſoever ſhould deliver an Opinion in a Cauſe that might come before him, and " that this Matter might hereafter come judicially before their Lordſhips. That " there was a great Difference between the Reſolution of the Commons, and the " Vote of the Lords: That the Vote of the Houſe of Commons was but in order " to a Proſecution, which they can never Vote, without declaring the Crime, " and they can never come to be Judges of it: That the Houſe of Commons is " the Grand Inqueſt of the Nation, and every Grand-Jury that finds Billa Vera up- " on an Indictment, does by that declare the Man Guilty: But that the Lords " have a judicial Capacity, and their Reſolution, before an Accuſation brought, " is prejudging the Cauſe that may come regularly before them. As to the Obſer- " vation the Commons made, That the Lords had not examin'd the reſpective " Times of tranſmitting the Impreſt Rolls to the Queen's Remembrancer: The " Commons Managers ſaid, That as their Lordſhips Reſolutions was no Judgment, " ſo this Conference was no Tryal. But to ſhew the Miſtake of their Lordſhips " Reſolution, they obſerv'd the Date upon the ſeveral Impreſt Rolls that had been " tranſmitted to the Remembrancer, and that they apprehended there were ſtill " Two wanting; That the Three laſt that were tranſmitted, came not to the Re- " membrancer till January laſt, the Two firſt on the 23d, the laſt on the 27th: " And that the firſt of theſe Three Impreſt Rolls was Money Impreſt to the 21ſt of " February, 1700; and ſaid to be in the firſt Year of Queen Anne; which ſhewed, " that the Roll was ſo far from being examined or tranſmitted in Time, that it " was not made up till ſince her Majeſty came to the Crown. That as the Cuſtom " formerly had been, to ſet down the Time of the Examination of thoſe Rolls, " ſince Mr. Charles Montague came in to be Auditor, he ſet down the Month, but " not the Day: And ſince the Lord Halifax was Auditor, he had ſet down neither " Month nor Day; and that by his Example, on the Three laſt Impreſt Rolls, the " Clerk of the Pells had put down no Time at all.

To this the Lord Halifax, in his own Defence, replied, " That the Lords Reſo- " lution was well founded, ſince they had the Rolls themſelves before them, and " Proof upon Oath: That by the Words of the Act, the Auditor was to tranſmit " the Impreſt Rolls to the Remembrancer Half-Yearly, according to the uſual Courſe " of the Exchequer; which is Eight Months, and Four Months; that it was not his " Duty to tranſmit them immediately to the Remembrancer, becauſe he was to " ſend them to the Clerk of the Pells, who is to examine and ſign them. That " it cannot be imagin'd the Auditor ſhould be tied to a certain Time, to tranſ- " mit the Rolls to the Remembrancer, becauſe they muſt firſt go through another " Hand; and he never took it, there was any Occaſion to put down the Time he " examin'd them, for that would appear from the Time of the Delivery, and Date " of the Roll. That there was one examin'd by the Clerk of the Rolls the 4th of " July, which he did not take to be the Auditor's Fault, but to be the Duty of the " Clerk of the Pells to deliver them. That every body knew the great Trouble " that had been given in his, as well as other Offices, by the Commiſſioners of Ac- " counts; and that no Loſs had happen'd by not tranſmitting theſe Rolls, no Pro- " ceſs having been iſſued forth for many Years upon them. The Commons Ma- nagers anſwer'd, " That though Half-Yearly ſhould be taken for Eight Months, and " Four Months, yet by that they muſt be tranſmitted Twice a Year, and ſo he " had fail'd in his Duty, in that Reſpect. That to conſtrue the ancient Courſe of " the Exchequer, in the Act of Parliament, to be meant, that the Clerk of the Pells " ſhould tranſmit the Rolls, was a direct Contradiction to the Act, that ſays, the " Auditor ſhall do it. That the ancient Courſe of the Exchequer having not been " obſerv'd, was the Occaſion of making that Law; and that they thought Laws " were to be obſerv'd. That, indeed, no Proceſs could iſſue till the Rolls were " tranſmitted, and poſſibly might be the Ground the Accounts had been ſo long " unpaſs'd, to the Prejudice of the Publick: And that his Lordſhip's Apprehenſion, " there was no Loſs to the Publick, by not tranſmitting the Rolls, might probably " be the Reaſon of his Lordſhip's neglecting his Duty. Here the Free Conference broke up; and the Members being return'd to their reſpective Houſes, the Commons order'd their Managers to draw up a Report of the ſaid Free Conference; and then a Motion was made, That the Votes of the Houſe ſhould not be printed, and that this might be a ſtanding Order; which being carried in the Affirmative, occaſion'd various Diſcourſes both in the City and Country. The Lords, on the contrary, order'd their Proceedings, in Relation to the Occaſional Conformity Bill, and the Publick Accounts, to be forthwith printed; whereupon the Commons reſolv'd to publiſh theirs likewiſe. A. D. 1703. The Commons Vote againſt Printing of their Votes.

A Week before, the Report of the Lords Committee appointed to inſpect Sir George Rook's Papers, having been maturely conſider'd in a full Houſe, their Lordſhips reſolv'd, "That Sir George Rook had done his Duty, purſuant to the Councils "of War, like a brave Officer, to the Honour of the Engliſh Nation." The ſame Day the Commons read a Second Time, an ingroſſed Bill from the Lords, For the better carrying on the preſent War by Sea and Land in the Weſt-Indies, and committed the ſame: But Two Days * after, a Debate ariſing about the Speaker's leaving the Chair, to conſider of the ſaid Bill in a Grand Committee, the Debate was adjourn'd until the 29th of that Month, and ſo the Bill was loſt: As was alſo a Bill from the Commons, "For the more free and impartial Proceedings in Parliament, by providing, "That no Perſon ſhall be choſen a Member of the Houſe of Commons, but ſuch as have a "ſufficient real Eſtate," which the Lords rejected on the 22d, to the great Satisfaction of the Merchants, and Money'd Men. The ſame † Day, for the Reaſon before-mention'd, the Queen having ſent a Meſſage to the Commons by Mr. Secretary Hedges, wherein ſhe deſir'd, they would give all poſſible Diſpatch to the Buſineſs there depending, it was reſolv'd, that an Addreſs be preſented to her Majeſty, humbly to lay before her, That the Commons had already diſpatch'd all the neceſſary Buſineſs before them. Sir George Rook honourably clear'd, Feb. 17. * Feb. 19. † Feb. 22.

While the Occaſional Conformity Bill was depending, Daniel De Foe, the Author of a ſharp Satyr, publiſh'd Two Years before, and call'd The True-Born Engliſhman, either to exaſperate the Parliament againſt the Non-Conformiſts, or as others would have it, to turn into Ridicule the immoderate Zeal of the High-Church Party, publiſh'd a ſcandalous and ſeditious Pamphlet, intituled, The Shorteſt Way with the Diſſenters: Wherein, after many bitter Reflections upon them, and their Principles, he ſaid, "That the Repreſentatives of the Nation had now an Opportunity, and "perhaps the only one they ſhould ever have, to ſecure the Church of England, and "deſtroy her Enemies, under the Favour and Protection of a True Engliſh Queen: "That this was the Time to pull up this Heretical Weed of Sedition, that had ſo "long diſturb'd the Peace of the Church, and poiſon'd the good Corn: That if it "ſhould be objected, that this renewing Fire and Faggot, would be Cruelty, and "accounted barbarous; he anſwer'd, That 'tis Cruelty to kill a Snake, or a Toad, "in cold Blood, but the Poyſon of their Nature makes it a Charity to our Neigh-"bours to deſtroy thoſe Creatures, not for any perſonal Injury receiv'd, but for "Prevention; not for the Evil they have done, but the Evil they may do: And "that as Serpents, Toads and Vipers, are noxious to the Body, and poiſon the "ſenſitive Life; ſo the Diſſenters poiſon the Soul, corrupt our Poſterity, enſnare "our Children, deſtroy the Vitals of our Happineſs, our future Felicity, and con-"taminate the whole Maſs; and therefore they are to be rooted out of this Nation, "if ever we would live in Peace, ſerve God, and enjoy our own." The ‖ Commons having taken theſe dangerous Inſinuations into Conſideration, order'd the ſaid Book to be burnt by the Hands of the common Hangman, and the Author to be proſecuted. The ſame ∴ Day, the Lords rejected a Bill from the Commons, concerning the Sale of the Hoſpital of the Savoy: And as for the Bill for reſuming King William's Grants, it was dropp'd by the Commons themſelves. All the other publick Bills being ready, the Queen went  to the Houſe of Lords, to give them her Royal Aſſent; which done, her Majeſty made the following remarkable Speech to both Houſes of Parliament. The Shorteſt Way with the Diſſenters, order'd to be burnt, and its Author proſecuted. ‖ Feb. 25. ∴ Feb. 25. My LORDS and GENTLEMEN,

"I Return you my hearty Thanks for the great Diſpatch you have given to the "publick Affairs in this Seſſion, which is an Advantage extremely material "at all Times, and I hope we ſhall find the Fruit of it this Year, in the Forward-"neſs of our Preparations. The Queen's Speech to both Houſes.

"I am to thank you, Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons, in Particular, for the "great Supplies with which you enable me to carry on the War: It ſhall be my "Care to have them ſtrictly applied to the Uſes for which you have deſign'd them, "and to the beſt Advantage for the Publick Service: You have repoſed great Con"fidence

A. D. 1703.

" fidence in me, by allowing ſo unuſual a Latitude as you have done, in the Clauſe " of Appropriation: I ſhall improve all Opportunities, in the Uſe of it, for the " Honour and true Intereſt of the Nation.

" I muſt further take Notice to you, That the Readineſs you have ſhewn in the " Proviſion made for the Prince, is a very ſenſible Obligation to Me.

My LORDS and GENTLEMEN,

" I deſire and expect from you, That you make it your Buſineſs in your ſeve- " ral Countries, to continue and preſerve the Quiet and Satisfaction of all My " Subjects: I hope that ſuch of them, as have the Misfortune to diſſent from the " Church of England, will reſt ſecure and ſatisfied in the Act of Toleration, which " I am firmly reſolv'd to maintain: And that all thoſe who have the Happineſs " and Advantage to be of our Church, will conſider, that I have had my Educa- " cation in it, and that I have been willing to run great Hazards for its Preſerva- " tion; and therefore they may be very ſure I ſhall always make it my own par- " ticular Care to encourage and maintain this Church, as by Law eſtabliſh'd, and " every the leaſt Member of it, in all their juſt Rights and Privileges; and upon " all Occaſions of Promotions to any Eccleſiaſtical Dignity, I ſhall have a very " juſt Regard to ſuch as are eminent and remarkable for their Piety, Learning, and " conſtant Zeal for the Church; that by this, and all other Methods which ſhall " be thought proper, I may tranſmit it ſecurely ſettled to Poſterity.

" I think it might have been for the Publick Service, to have had ſome further " Laws for reſtraining the great Licenſe which is aſſumed, of publiſhing and " ſpreading ſcandalous Pamphlets and Libels; but as far as the preſent Laws will " extend, I hope you will all do your Duty, in your reſpective Stations, to prevent " and puniſh ſuch pernicious Practices.

" Above all other Things, I do recommend to you Peace and Union among your " ſelves, as the moſt effectual Means that can be deviſed, to diſcourage and defeat " the Deſigns of our Enemies.

" I muſt not conclude without acquainting you I have given Directions, That " my Part of all the Prizes which have been, or ſhall be taken during this War, " be applied entirely to the Publick Service; and I hope my own Revenue will " not fall ſo ſhort, but that I may be able, as I deſire, to contribute yet further to " the Eaſe of my People.

Parliament adjourn'd.

After which the Lord Keeper (by the Queen's Command) prorogued the Parliament to Thurſday, the 22*d of* April next.

Whilſt theſe Things paſs'd in Europe, there happen'd ſome remarkable Actions in the Weſt-Indies. Admiral Bembow, who commanded in chief in thoſe Seas, ſail'd on the 11th of July from before Port-Royal, with a Deſign to join Rear-Admiral Whetſtone: But having Advice, on the 14th, by the Colcheſter and Pendennis, who that Day join'd him, that Monſieur Du Caſſe, with a French Squadron, was expected at Leogann, on the North-Side of Hiſpaniola, he ply'd for that Port, came before the Town on the 28th, and burnt a French Ship of Eighteen Guns, under their Fortifications. The 29th, the Admiral came before Petit Guaves, and on the 2d of Auguſt, ſail'd from thence, and arrived on the 5th in the Bay of Cape Donna Maria, where receiving Advice, that Monſieur Du Caſſe was gone to Carthagena, and from thence to Porto-Bello, he ſail'd on the 10th of Auguſt, ſtretch'd over towards the Coaſt of Santa Martha, near which Place, on the 19th, in the Morning, he ſpy'd Ten Sail to the Eaſtward, and ſoon perceiving them to be Frenchmen, he reſolv'd to attack them. Some of his Ships being Three or Four Miles aſtern, the Admiral made a Signal for Battel, and went with an eaſy Sail, that the others might come up, and ſteer'd with the French, who made to the Weſtward along the Shore, under their Two Topſails. There was of them Four ſturdy Ships, from Sixty Six to Seventy Guns, one great Dutch-built Ship of Thirty or Forty Guns, and one ſmall Ship full of Soldiers, the reſt were a Sloop, and Three ſmall Ships. The Admiral had diſpoſed the Line of Battel as follows, viz. the Defiance, Pendennis, Windſor, Breda, Greenwich, Ruby, and Falmouth, and being uneaſy to ſee ſome of his Ships ſo long coming up, and in Diſorder, and obſerving that the Defiance and Windſor did not make any Haſte to come into their Station, he ſent to them to make more Sail. The Night approaching, the Admiral ſteer'd along Side of the Enemy, and endeavour'd to keep near them, though not with a Deſign to attack them, before the Defiance was abreaſt of the headmoſt Ship; but before this was done, the Falmouth in the Rear, attack'd the Flemiſh Ship; the Windſor the Ship abreaſt of her; as alſo did the Defiance. Soon after, the Admiral was oblig'd to do the ſame, having re-

Engagement between Admiral Bembow and Mr. Du Caſſe, Aug. 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, and 24.

ceiv'd the Fire of the French Ship a-breaſt of him; the Defiance and Windſor, after they had receiv'd Two or Three Broad-Sides from the Enemy, went out of the Line, out of Gun-ſhot: Whereupon the Two Sternmoſt Ships of the French lay upon the Admiral, which very much galled his Ship, the Ships in the Rear not coming up as they ought. It was Four a Clock when the Engagement begun, and continued till it was Dark. The Admiral perceiving the French would decline Fighting if they could, reſolv'd to purſue them; and believing, that if he led himſelf on all Tacks, the other Captains, for Shame, would not fail to follow a good Example, he order'd the following Line of Battel, viz. Breda, Vice-Admiral Bembow, and Captain Fogg; Defiance, Richard Kirby; Windſor, John Conſtable; Greenwich, Cooper Wade; Ruby, George Walton; Pendennis, Thomas Hudſon; Falmouth, Samuel Vincent. A. D. 1703.

The 20th, at break of Day, the Admiral was within Gun-ſhot of the Enemy; but the other Ships (except the Ruby alone, which was up with him) were Three, Four, and Five Miles a-Stern. At Two in the Afternoon, the Sea-breeze coming up, the Enemy got into a Line, making what Sail they could; the other Ships not coming up, the Breda, with the Ruby, ply'd their Chaſe-Guns on them till Night, when they left off, but kept them Company all Night. The 21ſt, at Day-light, the Admiral being on the Quarter of the Second Ship of the Enemies, and within point-blank Shot, the Ruby being a-Head of him, the French Ship fired at the Ruby, which the Ruby return'd; the Two French Ships which were a-Head fell off, being little Wind, brought their Guns to bear on the Ruby; the Breda brought her Guns to bear on the French Ship, and ſhatter'd her very much, which oblig'd her to tow off: But the Ruby was likewiſe ſo much ſhatter'd in her Maſts, Sails, and Rigging, that the Admiral was oblig'd to lie by her, and ſend Boats to tow her off. This Action held almoſt Two Hours, during which, the Rear Ship of the Enemy's was abreaſt of the Defiance and Windſor, who never fired one Gun, though within point-blank. At Eight a Clock in the Morning, a Gale of Wind ſpringing up, the Enemy made what Sail they could, and the Admiral chaſed them, in hopes to come up with them, being then a-breaſt of the River Grandy. At Two that Afternoon, the Admiral got abreaſt of Two of the Sternmoſt of the Enemy's Ships, and, in hopes to diſable them in their Maſts and Rigging, he began to fire on them, as did ſome of the Ships a-Stern; but lying abreaſt of them, they pointed wholly at him, which galled his Ship much in her Rigging, and diſmounted Two or Three of the lower Tire Guns: However, the Admiral made what Way he could after the French, who uſed all the Shifts poſſible to evade Fighting. The 22d, at Day-light, the Greenwich was about Three Leagues a-Stern, though the Signal for the Line of Battel was never ſtruck Night nor Day, the reſt of the Ships indifferently near, (except the Ruby) the Enemy about a Mile and Half a Head. At Three in the Afternoon, the Wind came to the Southward, which before was Eaſterly: This gave the Enemy the Weather-Gage; but in Tacking, the Admiral fetch'd within Gun-ſhot of the Sternmoſt of them, (firing at each other) but his Line being much out of Order, and ſome of his Ships Three Miles a-Stern, nothing more could be done. In the Night the Enemy was very uneaſy, altering their Courſes very often between the Weſt and North. The 23d, in the Morning, the Enemy was about Six Miles a-head of the Admiral, and the great Dutch Ship ſeparated from them out of Sight: At Ten a Clock the Enemy tack'd, the Wind then at Eaſt-North-Eaſt, but very variable. The Admiral fetch'd within point-blank Shot of Two of them, paſſing Broadſides at each other: Soon after he tack'd, and purſu'd them what he could. The Ruby being diſabled, the Admiral order'd her for Port-Royal. At Eight this Night, the Engliſh Squadron was about Two Miles Diſtance from the Enemy, they ſteering South-Eaſt, and very little Wind, then at North-Weſt, and variable, the Admiral ſteer'd after them, but all his Ships (except the Falmouth) fell much a-Stern: At Twelve the Enemy began to ſeparate. The 24th, at Two in the Morning, the Admiral came up within Call of the Sternmoſt, and fired a Broadſide, with Double and Round alow, and Round and Patridge aloft, which the French Ship return'd: At Three a Clock, by a Chain-Shot, the Admiral's Right Leg was broke to Pieces, and he was carried down, but preſently ordered his Cradle on the Quarter-Deck, and continued the Fight till Day, when appeared the Ruins of a Ship of about Seventy Guns, her Main-yard down, and ſhot to Pieces, her Fore-top Sail Yard ſhot away, her Mizen-Maſt ſhot by the Board, all her Rigging gone, and her Sides bored to Pieces with double-headed Shot. The Falmouth aſſiſted in this Affair very much, but no other Ship: Soon after Day, the Admiral ſaw the other Part of the Enemy coming towards him, with a ſtrong Gale of Wind Eaſterly: And at the ſame Time, the Windſor, Pendennis and Greenwich, a-Head of the Enemy, came to Leeward of the diſabled Ship, fired their Broad-ſide, paſs'd her, and ſtood to the Southward: Then the Defiance following 'em, came alſo to Leeward of the diſabled Ship, and fired part of her Broad-Side. The diſabled Ship did not fire above Twenty Guns at the Defiance, before ſhe put her Helm a-weather, and run away right before the Wind, lower'd both her Top-Sails, and ran to Leeward of the Falmouth, (which was then a Gun-ſhot to Leeward of the Admiral, Knotting her Rigging) without any Regard to the Signal of Battel. The Enemy ſeeing the other Two Engliſh Ships ſtanding to the Southward, and expecting they would have tack'd and ſtood with them, they brought to with their Heads to the Northward; but ſeeing thoſe Three Ships did not tack, bore down upon the Admiral, run between the diſabled Ship and him, and firing all they had, ſhot his Main-Topſail-Yard, and ſhattered his Rigging much, none of the other Ships being near him, nor taking any Notice of the Battel Signal. Hereupon the Captain of the Breda fired Two Guns at thoſe Ships a-Head, in order to put them in mind of their Duty: And on the other Hand, the French ſeeing this great Diſorder, brought to, and lay by their own diſabled Ship, remann'd her, and took her in a Tow. The Breda's Rigging being much ſhattered, ſhe lay by till Ten a Clock, and being then refitted, the Admiral ordered the Captain to purſue the Enemy, who was then about Three Miles Diſtance, and to Leeward, having the diſabled Ship in a Tow, ſteering North-Eaſt, the Wind at South-South-Weſt. The Admiral, in the mean Time, made all the Sail after them he could, the Battel Signal being ſtill out: But the Enemy taking Encouragement from the cowardly Behaviour of ſome of the Engliſh Captains, the Admiral ordered Captain Fogg to ſend the Captains to keep their Line, and to behave themſelves like Men. Hereupon Captain Kirby came on board the Admiral, and preſſed him very earneſtly to deſiſt from any further Engagement, which made the Admiral deſirous to know the Opinion of the other Captains; and accordingly he ordered Captain Fogg to make the Signal for all the other Captains to come on Board: Moſt of them concurring with Captain Kirby, in his Opinion not to fight, and the Admiral not being able to prevail with them to come to any vigorous Reſolutions, thought it not fit to venture any further: Though at this Time he was a Broad-ſide of the Enemy, and had a fair Opportunity of fighting them, the Maſts and Yards in a good Condition, and few Men killed, except thoſe on board the Breda.

Four Captains try'd for Cowardice, &c.

After this unfortunate Action, Admiral Bembow return'd to Jamaica, where, on the 6th of October, he iſſued out a Commiſſion to Rear-Admiral Whetſtone, and ſome Captains, to hold a Court-Martial, for the Tryal of Captain Kirby, Captain Conſtable, Captain Wade, and Captain Hudſon, who were charged with Cowardice, Breach of Orders, and Neglect of Duty, in the late Engagement with Monſieur Du Caſſe, off of Carthagena. The Court-Martial begun on the 8th, held for Four Days; and upon full Proof, Captain Kirby, and Captain Wade, were ſentenced to be ſhot to Death, but the Execution reſpited till her Majeſty's Pleaſure ſhould be known. Captain Conſtable was cleared by his own Officers, and Men, of Cowardice; but the other Crimes being proved againſt him, he was caſhier'd from the Queen's Service, with Impriſonment during her Pleaſure: And as for Captain Hudſon, he died ſome Days before the Tryal. Captain Vincent, Commander of the Falmouth, and Captain Fogg, Captain of the Admiral's Ship, were alſo tried for ſigning a Paper with Captain Kirby, and the reſt, againſt engaging the French, when there was ſo fair an Opportunity, with Probability of Succeſs: But upon their alledging, that they did it only becauſe they were perſuaded, conſidering the cowardly Behaviour of thoſe Captains, that, upon another Engagement, they would wholly deſert, and leave the Admiral in the Breda, and the Falmouth, a Prey to the Enemy; and upon the Character given by the Admiral, and others, of their great Courage, and gallant Behaviour in the Battel, the Court thought fit only to ſuſpend them from their Employment in her Majeſty's Service; but withal, that their Suſpenſion ſhould not take Place, till the High-Admiral's Pleaſure ſhould be known. The Queen was pleaſed to confirm the Sentence paſs'd upon the Captains Kirby, Wade, and Conſtable, who were ſent to England on board the Briſtol Man of War; and upon their Arrival * at Plymouth, the Two firſt were immediately ſhot to Death.

Captain Kirby and Captain Wade ſhot to Death.

Admiral Bembow dies, Nov. 4. 1702.

His Character.

Admiral Benbow took very much to Heart his late Diſappointment, and having languiſh'd for ſome Time, died, at laſt, of the Wound he receiv'd in the Engagement, being extremely lamented, as one of the braveſt and moſt experienced Sea-Officers that England ever bred. He was born at Shrewſbury, in the County of Salop, and educated in the Free-School there: And though the Family of the Bembows were none of the meaneſt, yet were they ſo reduc'd for their Loyalty, that he was bound Prentice to a Waterman. Afterwards he us'd the Seas, then was ſent up for a Privateer into the Weſt-Indies, and at length attain'd to be Maſter of the Attendance at Deptford, Deptford, wherein he continued for ſome Years. In the late War, he was employ'd in the bombing of the Sea-Coaſt Towns of France, whereby he became a Rear-Admiral; and he rais'd himſelf to that Reputation and Eſteem with his late Majeſty, that he was ſent Admiral of a Squadron of Men of War to the Weſt-Indies. He was a Man of ſuch Temperance, as can hardly be found, or ought, indeed, to be expected in one of his Profeſſion; nor was he leſs to be commended for his Charity, ſince he beſtow'd a conſiderable Yearly Benevolence, on the Pariſh-Church wherein he was born. As for his Military Virtues, he was bold and daring, and undaunted in the moſt preſent Dangers. He lov'd his Country beyond his Life; and the Loſs of his Leg, (which he had cut off, after his late Action) as he expreſs'd himſelf in a Letter to his Wife, did not trouble him half ſo much, as the villainous Treachery of ſome of the Captains under him, which hindred him from totally deſtroying the French Squadron. He was about Fifty Years Old, when he died. A. D. 1703.

Succeſs of the Engliſh in America.

Not long after, Colonel Robert Daniel arrived at Port-Royal from Carolina, brought an Account, that Colonel Moor, Governor of that Plantation, marched from Charles Town in Carolina, with Five Hundred Men, in order to attack a Colony of the Spaniards, about Three Hundred Miles diſtant, called St. Auguſtin, near the Gulph of Florida: That he ſoon poſſeſs'd himſelf of the Town, the Inhabitants deſerting it, and retiring with their beſt Effects into a ſtrong Caſtle, ſurrounded by a very deep and broad Moat, in which Place they had laid up Proviſions enough to laſt them Four Months, and that they defended themſelves there very obſtinately: That it being impoſſible to take this Caſtle by Storm, Colonel Moor had cauſed it to be block'd up; and ſent Colonel Daniel to Port-Royal, to borrow a Mortar, and ſome Shells to bombard it, and doubted not but he ſhould, by that Means, ſoon force them to ſurrender. If this Expedition had ſucceeded, it would have greatly contributed to the Security of Carolina, there being no other Place from whence they could afterwards be diſturbed, except a ſmall Settlement, which the French call, The Palliſadoes, about Two Hundred Miles farther into the Country, to the Weſtward: But ſome French and Spaniſh Galleons being arriv'd at St. Auguſtine's Port, before the Return of Colonel Daniel, Colonel Moor was obliged to raiſe the Blockade, and to return to his Government by Land, after having burnt the Ship in which he was come. Some Time before, the ſame Letters brought Advice, that ſome Frigats of Engliſh Privateers attack'd a Place call'd Toulon, on the Continent, about Ten Leagues from Carthagena, which they took, plundered, and burnt: From whence they ſailed to Caledonia, went up the River Darien, and conſorting with the Indians, were carried by them in Twelve Days March to the Gold Mines at Santa Cruz de Cana, near Santa Maria. The 9th Day of their March, they fell within an Out-Guard of Ten Men, which the Spaniards had at ſome Diſtance from the Place, of whom they took Nine, but the other eſcaping, gave Notice at the Mines of their Approach, whereupon the richeſt of the Inhabitants retired from thence with their Money and Jewels. However, the Engliſh Party, which conſiſted of about Four Hundred Men, being come up, took the Fort, and poſſeſs'd themſelves of the Mines, where there remained about Seventy Negroes, whom they ſet to Work, and continued there Twenty One Days, in which Time they got above Eighty Pound Weight of Gold Duſt. They alſo found ſeveral Parcels of Plate, which the Inhabitants had buried at their leaving that Place. The Engliſh, at their Departure, burnt all the Town, except the Church, and returned to their Sloops, bringing away the Negroes. Some went further up the River in their Sloops, having a Deſign upon another Gold Mine, called Chocoa; and Two of the Sloops, commanded by Captain Plowman, and Captain Grandy, ſail'd towards Cuba, landed near Trinidado, and with One Hundred and Fifty Men took the Town, burnt a great Part of it, and brought off a very conſiderable Booty.

Vice-Admiral Graydon meets with Four French Men of War, notwithſtanding which he purſues his Voyage.

On the 13th of March, 170$\frac{3}{4}$, Vice-Admiral Graydon, in the Reſolution, with Three other Ships of War; to wit, the Montague, Nonſuch, and Blackwall, the Tranſports with Brigadier Columbine's Regiment, ſome Store-Ships and Merchant-Men bound to the Weſt-Indies, ſailed from Plymouth, and Five Days after, in the Latitude of Forty Seven Degrees, Thirty Minutes, met with Four French Men of War under Mr. du Caſſe. Captain Cleveland, who commanded in the Montague, engaged the Sternmoſt for ſome Time; but upon his firſt firing, the Vice-Admiral made a Signal to call him off, being under Orders not to loſe any Time in his Paſſage, by chaſing, or ſpeaking with any Ships whatſoever, the contrary Winds having kept him in Plymouth much longer than was intended, and the Service upon which he was bound, very much requiring his Preſence, and the Regiment that was with him.

Co'onel Codrington's unſucceſsful Expedition to Guadalupa.

On the 7th of March, Colonel Codrington, Governor of her Majeſty's Leeward Iſlands in America, came with the Land Forces under his Command, on board a Squadron of her Majeſty's Ships, with divers Privateers, and other Veſſels, before the

A. D. 1703.

the Iſland Guadalupa, receiving ſeveral Shot from the Shore, though without any great Miſchief. The Colonel ſtood off till the 10th, waiting for the Maidſtone, and the ſmall Veſſels that carried the Proviſions and Ammunition. Upon the 12th, Colonel Byam, with his own Regiment, and Two Hundred of Colonel Whetham's Men, landed by break of Day, at a Place called Les Petits Habitants, where they met with ſome Oppoſition, but ſoon conſtrain'd the Enemy to retire. About Nine in the Morning, Colonel Whetham landed in a Bay to the Northward of a Town called La Bayliffe, where he met a vigorous Reſiſtance of all the Enemies Forces, poſted in very good and advantageous Breaſt-Works, plying the Engliſh with their great and ſmall Shot; yet notwithſtanding all their Fire, the Engliſh march'd up to their Entrenchments, with their Muſkets ſhoulder'd, not firing a Shot, till they could come to lay the Muzzles of their Guns upon the Enemies Breaſt-Works. Here they had Three Captains kill'd, before they could make themſelves Maſters of the Enemies Entrenchments; which they did about Noon, and in an Hour after of La Bayliffe, of the Jacobine's Church, which the Enemy had fortify'd, and Ten Pieces of their Cannon. About Two, the Engliſh took a Platform with Three Pieces of Cannon, and a Redoubt with One. At Night, Four Hundred of the Engliſh, and the Marine Regiment, attack'd the Jacobine Plantation, and Breaſt-Work, all along the Jacobine's River, which the Enemy quitted upon the firing of Two Volleys only of Small-ſhot upon 'em. The next Day the Engliſh poſſeſſed themſelves of the Great Town, called Baſſe-Terre, where they continued ſome Time, ſending out Parties to burn and deſtroy the Enemies Houſes, Works, Sugar-Canes, and Proviſions thereabouts, and then laid Siege to the Fort and Caſtle of the ſame Place; but either for want of Proviſions, or a ſufficient Number of Forces to carry on the Enterprize, the Colonel was ſoon after obliged to give it over.

Titles and Honours conferr'd on ſeveral Perſons of the High-Church Party.

To return to England. The Day * after the Queen enter'd on the Second Year of her Reign, ſhe was pleaſed to diſtinguiſh, by higher Titles of Honour, ſeveral Perſons, who had before diſtinguiſh'd themſelves by their eminent Zeal for the Church of England, and her Majeſty's Service: The Marquis of Normanby was created Duke of the ſame Name, to which the Title of Duke of Buckinghamſhire was afterwards added; John Granville, Eſq; was made Baron Granville of Potheridge, in the County of Devon; Heneage Finch, Eſq; an eminent Lawyer, Baron of Guernſey, in the County of Southampton; Sir John Leviſon Gower, Baron Gower of Sittenham, in the County of York; Francis Seymour Conway, Eſq; Baron Conway of Ragley, in the County of Warwick, with a Remainder to his Brother, Charles Seymour, Eſq; and John Harvey, Eſq; Baron Harvey of Ickworth, in the County of Suffolk. Two Days after †, ſome Promotions were made in the Navy; the Marquis of Carmarthen being advanc'd from the Poſt of Vice-Admiral of the White, to that of Vice-Admiral of the Red Squadron of her Majeſty's Fleet; John Graydon, Eſq; from Rear-Admiral of the White, to Vice-Admiral of the ſame Squadron; and John Leake, Eſq; from Rear-Admiral of the Blue, to be Vice-Admiral of the ſame Squadron. At the ſame Time, George Byng, Eſq; was appointed to be Rear-Admiral of the Red; Thomas Dilks, Eſq; Rear-Admiral of the White, and Bazil Beaumont, Eſq; Rear-Admiral of the Blue.

Whilſt the Queen continued beſtowing moſt of her Favours on the Church-Party in England, ſome Alterations were made in Scotland, in Favour of the Anti-Revolutioners, and Epiſcopalians, which wonderfully elevated their Spirits, and no leſs alarm'd the Preſbyterians. The Earl of Marchmont Chancellor, Earl of Melvil Preſident of the Council, Earl of Selkirk Lord Regiſter, Adam Cockburne of Ormiſton, Treaſurer-Deputy; Sir John Maxwell of Pollock, Juſtice-Clerk; Earl of Leven, Governor of the Caſtle of Edinburgh; and the Earl of Hyndford, one of the Secretaries of of State, were all laid aſide. On the other Hand, the Duke of Queenſberry, and the Lord Viſcount Tarbat, were made Secretaries of State, and the Earl of Seafield removed from thence, and made Lord Chancellor; the Marquis of Annandale, Preſident of the Council; the Earl of Tullibardin, (afterwards Duke of Athol) Lord Privy-Seal; the Lord Boyle, Treaſurer-Depute; Mr. Roderick Mac-Kenſey, of Preſton-Hall, Juſtice-Clerk; Sir James Murray of Philiphaugh, Lord Regiſter; and the Earl of March, Governor of Edinburgh Caſtle: And though all theſe, excepting the Earl of March, at or ſince the Revolution, had been deeply enough engaged, againſt the Intereſt of the Exiled Royal Family, yet the Duke of Queenſberry, and his Two Dependants, the Lord Boyle, and Sir James Murray, pretended now to be quite of another Mind; the Marquis of Annandale, Earl of Seafield, and Viſcount Tarbat, valued themſelves upon having, once in their Lives, oppoſed King William; and the Marquis, every body believed, would, if kindly dealt with, go along with the prevailing Party. But before this Change in the Miniſtry was perfected, the Scantineſs of the Funds provided by the laſt Parliament, and the Difficulties in collecting them, rendred it abſolutely neceſſary to call a New Parliament, to ſit in the Spring of the Year 1703. Hereupon the Earl of Seafield, then Secretary of State, came down from London to Scotland, to influence the Elections, which, by a Concurrence of ſeveral Accidents, were ſo managed, that a greater Number of Men of Anti-Revolution Principles were choſen, than had been known in any Parliament ſince the Reſtoration. At the ſame Time, the Duke of Hamilton, and ſome others, who had been the greateſt Perſecutors of the Preſbyterians, ſet up for Patrons of the Epiſcopal Clergy, and obtain'd from her Majeſty the following Letter to the Privy-Council of Scotland.

The Queen's Letter to the Privy-Council of Scotland.

Right Truſty and Right Well-Beloved Couſins and Councellors, &c. we Greet you well. Having by our Royal Commiſſion of this Date, eſtabliſh'd you to be our Privy-Council in our ancient Kingdom of Scotland, in an entire Confidence of your Prudence, Experience and Loyalty, and eſpecially of your Firmneſs to the Reformed Proteſtant Religion: We do, in the firſt Place, recommend to your Care, the Church now eſtabliſh'd by Law, in its ſuperior and inferior Judicatures, ſuch as Seſſions, Preſbyteries, Synods, and General Aſſemblies; as alſo, in the Exerciſe of their Holy Functions, and in what concerns their Perſons and Benefices. We are informed, that there are many Diſſenters within that Kingdom, who, albeit they differ from the eſtabliſh'd Church in Opinion, as to Church Government and Form, yet are of the Proteſtant Reformed Religion, ſome of which are in Poſſeſſion of Benefices, and others exerciſe their Worſhip in Meeting-Houſes. It is our Royal Pleaſure, that they ſhould be directed to live ſuitably to the Reformed Religion, which they profeſs, ſubmiſſively to our Laws, decently and regularly with Relation to the Church eſtabliſh'd by Law, as good Chriſtians and Subjects; and in ſo doing, that they be protected in the peaceable Exerciſe of their Religion, and in their Perſons and Eſtates, according to the Laws of the Kingdom: And we recommend to the Clergy of the eſtabliſh'd Diſcipline, their living in Brotherly Love and Communion with ſuch Diſſenters. In the next Place, we recommend to you the Protection of all our Civil Judicatures, and the Execution of our Laws, for the good of our People; and that you direct our Sheriffs, and Juſtices of the Peace, to diligent Execution of the Laws, in ſo far as is committed to them. And in the Third Place, The Security and Peace of the Kingdom; and for this End, that you will take ſpecial Inſpection of the Diligences done by our High-Land Commiſſioners. We recommend likewiſe to you, to enjoin the Obſervation of thoſe Laws which tend to the Encouragement of Trade and Manufactories, for the Good and Profit of our People, whoſe Proſperity and Safety is our greateſt Concern. That our Forces within the Kingdom obſerve Diſcipline, and occaſion no Grievance to our other Subjects: And for this End, it is our Royal Pleaſure, and we have given our ſpecial Orders to our Theſaury, for paying them exactly and timouſly, according to our Eſtabliſhment. We doubt not that the Funds appointed for their Pay, by us, and our Parliament, (whoſe Authority we are firmly reſolv'd to ſuſtain) will be duly paid in by all who are liable thereto; and if any ſhall fail therein, to evite the Inconveniencies, by the Soldiers want of Pay, it is our Royal Pleaſure, that you cauſe ſuch Execution to be made uſe of, for timely inbringing thereof, as is preſcribed by our Laws; and if there be any undutiful Oppoſition made by whatſomever Perſon and Perſons, to thoſe our juſt Commands, we require of you, to call them before you in Legal Manner, and to puniſh the Guilty, as accords by Law. We expect your Information from Time to Time, of what occurs in our and our People's Concerns; and that they may know theſe our Royal Intentions and Affections to them, you ſhall cauſe Print and Publiſh, this our Letter, in ſuch Manner as is uſual; and ſo we bid you heartily Farewell.

A. D. 1703. Given at our Court of St. James's, the 4th Day of February, 170$\frac{1}{2}$, and of our Reign the First Year.

By her Majesty's Command,

TARBAT.

Encouraged by some Expressions in this Letter, and her Majesty's repeated Assurances, That she would maintain the Church of England, and even the least Member of it, in all their just Rights and Privileges, the Episcopal Clergy of Scotland framed an Address, to which they procured many Subscriptions, and which Dr. Skeen, and Dr. Scot, introduced by the Duke of Queensberry, lately appointed * High Commissioner, and by the Lord Viscount Tarbat, presented † to her Majesty, as follows:

* March 4.

† March 13. Address of the Episcopal Scotch Clergy.

DREAD SOVEREIGN,

WE your Majesty's most dutiful and obedient Subjects, and most humble Supplicants, being deeply sensible that the Divine Goodness hath raised your Majesty to the Throne of your Royal Ancestors, as a Nursing-Mother to the true Church of God, for the Support and Preservation of the Religion, Laws and Liberties of all your Dominions; and now, especially, that it is a remarkable Blessing to this your Majesty's ancient Kingdom of Scotland, (in the present deplorable Circumstances of this National Church) do presume to offer our most humble and most sincere Congratulations upon your Majesty's Accession to the Crown.

And beg Liberty to lay before your Majesty, the sad Condition of the afflicted Episcopal Clergy, who in the Year 1688, and 1689, and some Years after, the truly Ancient and Apostolical Government of the Church by Bishops, were deprived of, and put from the Exercise of their Sacred Offices and Possessions of their Livings, and thereby reduced to great Extremity and Want.

During the Continuance of which suffering State, many worthy Ministers of the Gospel have been taken away by Death; and we, whom it hath pleased God to continue in Life, have laboured to sweeten the Bitterness of our Tryals, by a Christian and peaceable Submission and Resignation to his Will.

And in Truth and Gratitude we are obliged to acknowledge, that many of us, in a great Measure, owe our Lives to the Charity and Beneficence of such of your Majesty's good Subjects, as thought it a Disgrace to Christianity, that a Society of Men consecrated to the Altar, in the Service of Christ, should perish in a Christian Kingdom, for want of Bread.

So now that it hath pleased Almighty God to place your Majesty upon the Imperial Throne of these Dominions; the Relief and Advantages which all your Loyal Subjects do enjoy, from the benign Influence of your Majesty's auspicious Government, encourageth us, your Majesty's most humble Supplicants, under the present Distress, and miserable starving Conditions of many of our numerous Families, to implore that Princely Commiseration, and matchless Clemency, which have ever been congenial and peculiar to the Blood-Royal, and are eminently lodged in your Sacred Person.

Humbly beseeching that your Royal Bounty and Indulgence may be extended to us in such Manner, and by such Methods, as your Majesty in your Princely Wisdom shall think fit, that we may find our selves more and more obliged devoutly to pray, that your Years may be many, and your Reign Glorious.

The Queen's Answer.

To this Address the Queen was pleased to return the following gracious Answer: I take the Expressions of your Duty and Loyalty very kindly, and you may be assured of my Protection, and of my Endeavours to supply your Necessities, as far as conveniently I can: And I doubt not but you will continue in your Duty; and I command you to live in Peace and Christian Love with the Clergy who are invested with the Church-Government in that our ancient Kingdom.

The next Thing the Enemies of the Revolution improv'd to their own Advantage, was a Proclamation of Indemnity of the 6th of March, 170$\frac{2}{3}$, graciously issued by her Majesty, to make the Minds of her Subjects easy: Which they interpreted so much in their own Favour, that considerable Numbers of them came over to Scotland from St. Germans, and other Parts of France, though they had forfeited their Lives, by corresponding with the Enemy, and practising against the Government in King William's Reign. Some of them pretended to be New Converts; and, together with others at Home, that had stood out all King William's Time, they qualify'd themselves to sit in Parliament, by taking the Oaths to her Majesty. The Anti-Revolutioners being proud of this Acceſſion of Strength, thought themſelves in a Condition to preſcribe Terms to the Government, and carried Matters with an unaccountable Height. A. D. 1703.

Anti-

Nor did their Confidence terminate in humbling the Preſbyterians of Scotland, but they flatter'd themſelves alſo with the Hopes of depreſſing the Revolution Party of the Church of England: This they were prompted to expect by a North Country Clergyman, turn'd out in 1694, for refuſing the Oaths to King William; whom they had ſince employ'd to be their Agent at London, and who, upon the Death of that Prince, in a Letter to one of his Friends in Scotland, expreſs'd himſelf thus: The Church of England was ſo much out of Order during the late Reign, that it will take ſome Time to put Matters right, which her Majeſty is firmly reſolv'd to do with all convenient Haſte. Thus they endeavour'd to propagate a Belief, that the Queen was their Friend, while the greateſt Part of them not only refus'd to ſwear Allegiance to her, but ſome of thoſe that had taken the Oaths, made no Scruple openly to confeſs, That they ſwore to her only as Tutrix, or Regent, during the Minority of her Brother. By all this it is eaſy to perceive, that the whole Kingdom of Scotland was in a Ferment at the ſitting down of the Parliament: The Country Party, which conſiſted of a few Cavaliers, and diſguſted Preſbyterians, and of whom the Duke of Hamilton, and the Marquis of Tweedale, were Leaders, inſiſted ſtill upon the Redreſs of thoſe Grievances which the Country labour'd under in the former Reign: The Presbyterians in general, and others of Revolution Principles, who were principally headed by the Duke of Argyle, were alarm'd by the bold Proceedings of the Anti-Revolutioners, or Cavaliers, of whom the Earl of Hume was the Chief; divided the Country-Party among themſelves: For moſt of them, in the late Reign, being Revolutionmen, they were jealous of the new Acceſſion of Anti-Revolutioners, and therefore it was not poſſible for them to concert Meaſures together. Theſe Jealouſies were heightned by new Diſcoveries, which the Anti-Revolutioners had made of their Sentiments in Council, and elſewhere, viz. That they were againſt ratifying the ſeveral Steps of the Revolution, and the Proceedings of King William's Parliament on that Head, but thought beſt to paſs it over, as a Thing extraordinary, and out of Courſe: And alledg'd, That all Parties might be ſafe enough under the Shelter of her Majeſty's general Indemnity. On the other Hand, the Revolutioners, well knowing, that according to the old Conſtitution of that Kingdom, general Pardons granted out of Parliament, afford but little Safety, when queſtion'd in Parliament, deſpis'd that Motion; and thought fit to leave thoſe to plead the Indemnity, who believ'd they needed it; but not conceiving themſelves to be of that Number, reſolv'd upon a Parliamentary Ratification of the Revolution. This they judg'd to be the moſt effectual way to prevent After-Blows from the oppoſite Party, whoſe Deſigns became more ſuſpicious, by their inſiſting on a Diſſolution of the Gariſon of Innerlochy, which was a great Curb upon the Popiſh Highlanders, and Prelatiſts of the North, the great Strength of the Anti-Revolution Party.

Before we proceed, it will not be amiſs to give our Readers a Sketch of the Characters of ſome of the principal Leaders in the firſt Seſſion of the new Scotch Parliament: And that I may do it with more Juſtice to Truth, and leſs Envy to my ſelf, I ſhall only abſtract ſome of the Portraits that have been drawn, with great Applauſe, by a Gentleman * of that Nation: But which, however, muſt be peruſed with this Caution, that he was a great Stickler for, and therefore partial to the Jacobite, which he calls the Loyal-Party. The Duke of Queensberry's Character has already been taken Notice of: As for James Earl of Seafield, "He was the Son and "Heir of the Earl of Finlater, then yet living. In his younger Years, his Fa- "ther's Fortune being very low, and his elder Brother alive, he was bred a Law- "yer, and enter'd and practiſed as Advocate with good Reputation. In the Con- "vention, 1689, he was much taken Notice of, upon account of a Speech, wherein "he aſſerted, That King James had not forfeited his Crown; but he did not long "continue in thoſe Principles: For by William Duke of Hamilton's Management, "he accepted the Place of Sollicitor to King William, which he enjoy'd ſeveral "Years, and thereby got a fair Eſtate. In the Year 1696, he was call'd to Court, "to be one of the Secretaries of State; and ſerved King William ſo faithfully, that "he conſented to every Thing that was demanded of him, though to the Detri- "ment of his own Country, particularly in the Affair of Darien, which drew up- "on him the Hatred of all thoſe who wiſh'd well to that Undertaking. He was "believed to be well-affected to King James, but had ſo mean and ſelfiſh a Soul, "that he wanted both Reſolution and Honeſty to adhere to his Principles; which "evidently appear'd from his changing Sides ſo often, and cleaving to that Party "he found riſing. The Cavaliers were willing to excuſe, at leaſt extenuate his firſt "Faults, by Reaſon of the Lowneſs of his Circumſtances; but after he had raiſed

" tion, they would never forgive him for abandoning them, after he had aſſured
" them, That the Queen was reſolved to take their Cauſe in Hand, truſt the Govern- " ment to their Management, and take Care both of the diſtreſſed Royal Family and Church;
" and with horrid Aſſeverations, and ſolemn Vows, had proteſted, he would join, and ſtand

" yer; a juſt Judge; courteous and good-natured, but withal, ſo entirely abandon'd
" to ſerve the Court Meaſures, that he ſeldom or never conſulted his own Inclina-
" tions. As he thus devoted his Honour and Principles, ſo he likewiſe eaſily de" ſerted his Friend, when his Intereſt led him to it; a notable Inſtance of which " was his Ingratitude to Sir James Ogilvy of Boyn, and his Family, who had been " at the Charge of his Education both at Home and Abroad; and who being a " Lord of the Seſſion in King James's Time, patronized him when he entred
" Lawyer.

By the artful Management and Inſinuations of the Earl of Seafield, the Cavaliers were, in many Places, prevail'd with to elect Preſbyterians, and to oppoſe thoſe of their own Principles; and being thus divided in the beginning, it was no wonder they made not a greater Figure in the enſuing Parliament. But the principal Cauſe of this was, the Difference and Pique between the Dukes of Queenſberry and Hamilton: For whilſt the firſt was at the Helm, the other could not be induced to concur in thoſe Meaſures the Queen propoſed, though attended with much Advantage to the Cauſe he had always ſtood up for, and wiſh'd well to.

" William, in favour of her Son, they were accordingly beſtow'd upon him. His " Education was ſuitable to his Birth: But he excelled principally in Martial Exer-
" ciſes, as Riding and Fencing. After his Return from Travel, he remain'd for the " moſt Part at Court, where he was a Gentleman of the Bed-Chamber, and in " great Favour both with King Charles and King James; being appointed by the Firſt
" Envoy Extraordinary to the Court of France, to congratulate the Birth of the

But his greateſt Failing lay in his being ſomewhat too " ſelfiſh and revengeful, which Diſpoſitions he carried in all his Deſigns, and did, " ſeveral Times, prejudice the Cauſe for which he contended. As for the Marquis of Tweedale, the other chief of the Country-Party, the Scotch * Gentleman after whom I copy, affords him no better Character, than, " That he was a well- " meaning, but ſimple Man; who was made a Tool by thoſe he truſted.

" Archibald, Firſt Earl, afterwards Duke of Argyle, in outward Appearance, was a " good-natured, civil and modeſt Gentleman; but his Actions were the Reverſe, " being capable of the worſt Things to promote his Intereſt, and altogether ad- " dicted to a looſe Life. He was not cut out for Buſineſs, only applying himſelf to " it, ſo far as it tended to ſecure his Court Intereſt, from whence he got great Sums " of Money to laviſh away upon his Pleaſures: But when he ſeriouſly ſet himſelf " about an Affair of Importance, no Man was more capable, or could more quickly, " and with greater Solidity and Judgment diſpatch it, than himſelf: So that, for " want of Application, a great Man was loſt. He was ever an Enemy to the Stuart " Family, and came over with the Prince of Orange into England, though King " James had given him ſome Hopes of being reſtored to his Eſtate, which his Fa- " ther had forfeited: But what elſe could be expected from a Man, who (to curry " Favour with King James) had renounc'd his Religion, and turn'd Papiſt? Not- " withſtanding this, and his conſtant vicious Life and Converſation, he was the " Darling of the Preſbyterians, being deſcended from, and the Repreſentative of a " Family that ſuffer'd for the Cauſe, and of great Power in the Country; and him- " ſelf ſo far engaged in the late Revolution, that they were confident he would " never venture to leave them. Thus he made a great Figure amongſt them, and " they ſupported one another.

See Scotch Memoirs, p. 44.

" Though the Earl of Hume did not expreſs himſelf with any tolerable ſhare of " Eloquence, yet was he a Maſter of a ſound Judgment, and clear Conception; and " had a particular Talent in procuring Intelligence of his Adverſaries moſt ſecret " Deſigns, and thereby gave his Friends an Opportunity to thwart. This pro- " ceeded from his being eſteem'd by People of all Parties, on account of his ſted- " dy Honeſty and Integrity, both in private and publick Matters. He had given " evident Proofs, that no Temptation could ſeduce him, in the leaſt, from pro- " ſecuting, and adhering, with the utmoſt Vigor, to what he own'd to be his Prin- " ciple and Opinion; and was ſo faithful to the Royal (exiled) Family, that he " ſuffer'd much upon that Account, and was more rely'd upon by the Cavaliers, " than any other. His Reputation was ſo well eſtabliſh'd, that he kept his Party " in Awe, and obliged them to ſuſpend their private Grudges, and join cordially " in one Meaſure.

" John, firſt Marquis, then Duke of Athol, made no great Figure in the firſt " Part of his Life: And when he convened his Friends, Followers, and Vaſſals to " oppoſe the Lord Dundee, the ſame being a Work contrary to their Inclinations, " few join'd with him, and ſo he, ſoon after, quitted the Field. In the Year 1699, " he was made one of King William's Secretaries of State, and afterwards his Com- " miſſioner to a Parliament, and was all that Time a moſt zealous Preſbyterian. Be- " ing diſguſted at Sir Hugh Dalrymple's being made Preſident of the Seſſion, and " not Sir William Hamilton of Whitlow, whom he had recommended, and finding " his Collegue, the Earl of Seafield, had much more Intereſt, both with King Wil- " liam, and his Favourite the Earl of Portland, than himſelf, he reſigned his Office, " and returning to Scotland, he join'd with the Country Party, and continu'd a lead- " ing Man among them, till after Queen Anne's Acceſſion to the Throne, when he " was made Lord Privy-Seal. In this Parliament he trimm'd 'twixt Court and Ca- " valiers, and 'tis probable would have continu'd ſo, had not the Duke of Queenſ- " berry trump'd up the Plot upon him, which did ſo exaſperate him againſt the " Court, that he join'd entirely with the Cavaliers, and from being a Friend to the " Revolution, and an Admirer of King William, he became, all of a ſudden, a vio- " lent Jacobite, and took all Methods to gain the Favour and Confidence of the " Cavaliers; which, in ſome Meaſure, he obtain'd, particularly in the Shires of " Fife, Angus, Perth, and other Northern Parts, and thereupon affected extreamly " to be the Head of that Party, and out-rival the Duke of Hamilton; yet notwith-

He was extream " wary in any dangerous Project; and 'twas thought that his too great Concern for " his Eſtate in England occaſion'd a great deal of Lukewarmneſs in his Oppoſition to " the Union, and Unwillingneſs to enter into ſeveral Meaſures that were propoſed " to prevent the ſame. But his greateſt Failing lay in his being ſomewhat too " ſelfiſh and revengeful, which Diſpoſitions he carried in all his Deſigns, and did, " ſeveral Times, prejudice the Cauſe for which he contended. As for the Marquis of Tweedale, the other chief of the Country-Party, the Scotch * Gentleman after whom I copy, affords him no better Character, than, " That he was a well- " meaning, but ſimple Man; who was made a Tool by thoſe he truſted.

" Archibald, Firſt Earl, afterwards Duke of Argyle, in outward Appearance, was a " good-natured, civil and modeſt Gentleman; but his Actions were the Reverſe, " being capable of the worſt Things to promote his Intereſt, and altogether ad- " dicted to a looſe Life. He was not cut out for Buſineſs, only applying himſelf to " it, ſo far as it tended to ſecure his Court Intereſt, from whence he got great Sums " of Money to laviſh away upon his Pleaſures: But when he ſeriouſly ſet himſelf " about an Affair of Importance, no Man was more capable, or could more quickly, " and with greater Solidity and Judgment diſpatch it, than himſelf: So that, for " want of Application, a great Man was loſt. He was ever an Enemy to the Stuart " Family, and came over with the Prince of Orange into England, though King " James had given him ſome Hopes of being reſtored to his Eſtate, which his Fa- " ther had forfeited: But what elſe could be expected from a Man, who (to curry " Favour with King James) had renounc'd his Religion, and turn'd Papiſt? Not- " withſtanding this, and his conſtant vicious Life and Converſation, he was the " Darling of the Preſbyterians, being deſcended from, and the Repreſentative of a " Family that ſuffer'd for the Cauſe, and of great Power in the Country; and him- " ſelf ſo far engaged in the late Revolution, that they were confident he would " never venture to leave them. Thus he made a great Figure amongſt them, and " they ſupported one another.

See Scotch Memoirs, p. 44.

" Though the Earl of Hume did not expreſs himſelf with any tolerable ſhare of " Eloquence, yet was he a Maſter of a ſound Judgment, and clear Conception; and " had a particular Talent in procuring Intelligence of his Adverſaries moſt ſecret " Deſigns, and thereby gave his Friends an Opportunity to thwart. This pro- " ceeded from his being eſteem'd by People of all Parties, on account of his ſted- " dy Honeſty and Integrity, both in private and publick Matters. He had given " evident Proofs, that no Temptation could ſeduce him, in the leaſt, from pro- " ſecuting, and adhering, with the utmoſt Vigor, to what he own'd to be his Prin- " ciple and Opinion; and was ſo faithful to the Royal (exiled) Family, that he " ſuffer'd much upon that Account, and was more rely'd upon by the Cavaliers, " than any other. His Reputation was ſo well eſtabliſh'd, that he kept his Party " in Awe, and obliged them to ſuſpend their private Grudges, and join cordially " in one Meaſure.

Ubi Supra, p. 214.

" John, firſt Marquis, then Duke of Athol, made no great Figure in the firſt " Part of his Life: And when he convened his Friends, Followers, and Vaſſals to " oppoſe the Lord Dundee, the ſame being a Work contrary to their Inclinations, " few join'd with him, and ſo he, ſoon after, quitted the Field. In the Year 1699, " he was made one of King William's Secretaries of State, and afterwards his Com- " miſſioner to a Parliament, and was all that Time a moſt zealous Preſbyterian. Be- " ing diſguſted at Sir Hugh Dalrymple's being made Preſident of the Seſſion, and " not Sir William Hamilton of Whitlow, whom he had recommended, and finding " his Collegue, the Earl of Seafield, had much more Intereſt, both with King Wil- " liam, and his Favourite the Earl of Portland, than himſelf, he reſigned his Office, " and returning to Scotland, he join'd with the Country Party, and continu'd a lead- " ing Man among them, till after Queen Anne's Acceſſion to the Throne, when he " was made Lord Privy-Seal. In this Parliament he trimm'd 'twixt Court and Ca- " valiers, and 'tis probable would have continu'd ſo, had not the Duke of Queenſ- " berry trump'd up the Plot upon him, which did ſo exaſperate him againſt the " Court, that he join'd entirely with the Cavaliers, and from being a Friend to the " Revolution, and an Admirer of King William, he became, all of a ſudden, a vio- " lent Jacobite, and took all Methods to gain the Favour and Confidence of the " Cavaliers; which, in ſome Meaſure, he obtain'd, particularly in the Shires of " Fife, Angus, Perth, and other Northern Parts, and thereupon affected extreamly " to be the Head of that Party, and out-rival the Duke of Hamilton; yet notwith-

" ſtanding this, he ſtill courted and preſerved his Intereſt with the Preſbyterian Mi-
" niſters, profeſſing to be firm to their Kirk-Government, hearing them in the " Churches, and patronizing them much more than thoſe of the Epiſcopal Perſua-
" ſion, which induced many to doubt the Sincerity of his Profeſſions in State Mat" ters. But thoſe who had Opportunities to ſift him, found that he was very " frank and chearful to enter into any, though the moſt deſperate Meaſures in the " Years 1706, and 1707, to obſtruct the Union, and the Hanoverian Succeſſion; be" cauſe, perhaps, he had but a ſmall Eſtate, and could not expect to make ſo great " an Appearance after the Union, as if the Kingdom of Scotland remained: But be
" the Reaſons what they will, certain it is, he would have gone to the Field, rather " than that it ſhould have paſs'd, had others been as forward as himſelf. He was
" of great Significancy to any Party, eſpecially the Cavaliers, becauſe he had a " mighty Power, and when upon a Loyal Bottom, could raiſe Six Thouſand of the " beſt Men in the Kingdom, well armed, and ready to ſacrifice all they had for " the King's * Service. He was endow'd with good natural Parts, though by Rea-
" ſon of his proud, imperious, haughty, paſſionate Temper, he was no ways capa" ble to be the leading Man of a Party, which, however, he aim'd at. After he " betook himſelf to the Cavaliers, he much affected Popularity; but it was ſtill at" tended with ſuch an awkard unpleaſant Air, his kindeſt Addreſſes were never " taking: He was Selfiſh to a great Degree; and his Vanity and Ambition ex" tended ſo far, that he could not ſuffer an Equal, and did therefore thwart the " Duke of Hamilton's Meaſures. He was reputed very Brave, but Hot and Head-
" ſtrong; and though no Scholar, nor Orator, yet he expreſs'd his Mind very hand-
" ſomely on publick Occaſions.

Character of Viſcount Tarbat, afterwards Earl of Cromarty. Ubi Supra, p. 67, &c.

" George, Viſcount of Tarbat, afterwards Earl of Cromarty, was the moſt fickle and " unſteddy Man in the World. He had ſworn all the contradictory Oaths, and " comply'd with all the oppoſite Governments that had been on Foot ſince the " Year 1648, was an humble Servant to them all, 'till he got what he aim'd at,
" though often he did not know what that was: He was full of Projects, and never " rejected one, provided it was new. Since the Revolution, (though he had a large " Share in carrying it on) he pretended to favour the Royal (Exiled) Family, and
" Epiſcopal Clergy: Yet he never did one Action in Favour of any of them; ex" cepting that upon his being made Secretary to Queen Anne, he procured an Act
" of Indemnity, and a Letter from her, recommending the Epiſcopal Clergy to the " Privy-Council's Protection. But this proceeded not from a Deſire and Deſign of " ſerving them, but rather from ſome Political Views; for no ſooner did Queen
" Anne deſert the Tory-Party, and Maxims, but his Lordſhip turn'd a great Whig,
" join'd with Tweedale's Party, to advance the Hanoverian Succeſſion, in the Parlia" ment of 1704, and was, at laſt, a zealous Stickler, and Writer in Favour of the " Union. He was certainly a good-natur'd Gentleman, Maſter of an extraordinary
" Gift of pleaſing, and diverting Converſation, and well accompliſh'd in all kinds
" of Learning; but, withal, ſo extreamly whimſical, and unſettled, that he was " never to be much rely'd upon, or valu'd; yet he made a great Intereſt in the " Parliament with many of the Northern Members. Though his Brother, Mr.
" Roderick Mackenzy, of Preſton-Hall, was not altogether ſo Chimerical as his Lord-
" ſhip, yet in their Politicks they ſeldom differed: And though he ſtill pretended a " greater Zeal for the Service of the Royal Family, than his Lordſhip did, yet both " proved alike faithful at the latter End.

Character of Mr. Fletcher of Salton. Ubi Supra, p. 68, & ſeq.

" Andrew Fletcher, of Salton, in the firſt Part of his Life, did improve himſelf to " a great Degree, by Reading and Travelling: He was always a great Admirer of " both ancient and modern Republicks, and therefore the more diſpleas'd at ſome
" Steps which he thought wrong in King Charles the Second's Reign, whereby he " drew upon himſelf the Enmity of the Miniſters of that Government, to avoid " the evil Conſequences of which, he went abroad. His Enemies Malice ſtill con" tinuing, he was upon ſlight, frivolous Pretences, ſummon'd to appear before the " Privy-Council, and their Deſigns to ruin him being too apparent, he was ſo en-
" rag'd, that he concurr'd, and came over with the Duke of Monmouth, when he " invaded England; upon which he was outlaw'd. He afterwards came over with " the Prince of Orange: But that Prince was not many Months in England, before
" Mr. Fletcher ſaw his Deſigns, upon which he left him, and ever after hated, and " appeared as much againſt him, as any in the Kingdom. Being elected a Parlia" ment-Man, in the Year 1703, he ſhew'd a ſincere and honeſt Inclination towards " the Honour and Intereſt of his Country. The Thoughts of England's domineer-
" ing over Scotland, his generous Soul could not brook: And as the Indignities and " Oppreſſion his Native Country lay under, gaul'd him to the Heart, ſo in his " learned and elaborated Diſcourſes, he expoſed them with undaunted Courage, and " Pathetical Eloquence. He was bleſs'd with a Spirit that hated and deſpiſed what" ever was mean, and unbecoming a Gentleman, and was ſo ſtedfaſt to what he " thought right, that no Hazard, nor Advantage, no, not the univerſal Empire,

" could tempt him to yield or deſert it: And in all his Life, he never once purſued
" a Meaſure with the Proſpect of any By-end to himſelf, any further than he judg'd
" it to be for the common Benefit and Advantage of his Country. He was Maſter
" of the Engliſh, Latin, Greek, French, and Italian Languages, and well verſed in
" Hiſtory, the Civil Law, and all Kinds of Learning; and as he was univerſally
" accompliſh'd, he employ'd his Talents for the good of Mankind. He was a ſtrict
" and nice Obſerver of all the Points of Honour, and his Word ſacred; as brave
" as his Sword, and had ſome Experience in the Art of War, having, in his youn" ger Years, been ſome Time a Volunteer, both in the Land and Sea-Service. In " his Travels he had ſtudied, and came to underſtand the reſpective Intereſts of the " ſeveral Princes and States of Europe. In his private Converſation, he was " affable to his Friends, ſhy of thoſe he thought Enemies to their Country; and " free of all manner of Vice. He had a penetrating, clear and lively Apprehen-
" ſion, but ſo extreamly wedded to his own Opinions, that there were few he could " endure to reaſon againſt him; and did, for the moſt part, ſo cloſely and unalte" rably adhere to what he advanc'd, (which was frequently very ſingular) that he " would break with his Party, before he would alter the leaſt Jot of his Scheme
" and Maxims; and therefore it was impoſſible for any Set of Men, that did not " give up themſelves to be abſolutely directed by him, to pleaſe him, ſo as to car" ry him along in all Points. And thence it came to paſs, that he often in Par" liament ſtuck cloſe to the Country Party, and was their Cicero. He was, no doubt,
" an Enemy to all Monarchical Governments, at leaſt he thought they wanted to be " much reformed; but his Averſion to the Engliſh and the Union, was ſo great, that
" in Revenge to them, he would have ſided with the Royal Family; for he liked,
" commended, and converſed with High-Flying Tories, more than any other Set of " Men, acknowledging them to be the Beſt Country-Men, and of moſt Honour, In" tegrity and Ingenuity. To ſum up all, he was a learned, gallant, honeſt, and " every other way well accompliſh'd Gentleman; and if ever a Man propoſes to " ſerve and merit well of his Country, let him place his Courage, Zeal and Con-
" ſtancy, as a Pattern before him, and think himſelf ſufficiently applauded and " rewarded, if he obtain the Character of being like Andrew Fletcher of " Salton.

Theſe were the Perſons who made the principal Figure in the enſuing Seſſion of Parliament: But before we come to their Proceedings, we muſt (with the Scotch Writer * above quoted) obſerve, that 'twas no wonder the Cavaliers were elevated,
" when the Duke of Queenſberry, and the other Miniſters, aſſured them of the Sin" cerity of the Queen's and their Deſigns to ſerve and promote their Intereſt, and " that they ſhould have a large Share in the Management of Affairs, and a Tole-
" ration granted to the Epiſcopal Clergy: And, that in Requital, nothing was re" quired of them in Parliament, that ſhould ratify what had paſs'd ſince the Year
" 1689; but only to aſſert the Legality of the laſt Parliament, recognize her Ma-
" jeſty's Title, and grant Subſidies for the Support of the Army.

The Scotch Parliament meets, May 6.

On the 6th of May, (the firſt Day of the meeting of the Parliament) the Ceremony of Riding from her Majeſty's Palace of Holy-Rood-Houſe, to the Parliament-Houſe, was perform'd with the uſual Solemnity; all the Members being on Horſe-back, and the Nobility in their Robes, and rich Foot-mantles. The Duke of Queenſberry being ſat on the Throne, and his Commiſſion read, the following Letter from her Majeſty to the Parliament was preſented by his Grace, and read as follows:

Their Proceedings.

ANNE R.

My LORDS and GENTLEMEN,

" WE thought to have brought you ſooner together in this Meeting of Parlia" ment, but the great and weighty Affairs wherein we have been en" gaged this Winter, were a neceſſary Hindrance.

" We have on ſeveral Occaſions given you, and all our good Subjects, Aſſurance
" of our firm Reſolution to maintain and protect them in their Religion, Rights
" and Liberties, as at preſent eſtabliſhed by Law.

" And if there be any Thing elſe wanting for the Satisfaction of our People,
" and the Security of that our ancient Kingdom, we ſhall be always ready to have
" it timouſly provided for and ſupplied.

You

A. D. 1703.

" You ſee that we continue engaged in a great and neceſſary War, for the De" fence of the Proteſtant Religion, and the Preſervation of the Liberties of Chriſten-
" dom; and we hope you will be careful to guard againſt all Dangers that this War
" may threaten: For which end, We recommend to you more particularly, the " Conſideration of the State of our Forces, Forts and Gariſons, that they be duly
" and ſufficiently maintained, and the neceſſary Supplies granted for that Effect,
" and all kept in ſuch Order, as may be moſt conducing to the Eaſe, as well as Safe" ty of the Country.

" We alſo recommend to your Care, that Trade be encouraged, and all Methods
" taken for the Advancement thereof, either by amending former Laws, or making " new ones, or any Thing elſe that may be found needful and expedient for the Be" nefit of the Kingdom.

" It hath been, and ſhall always be our chief Study and Endeavour, to eſtabliſh
" and ſecure the Peace, and promote the Good of that our ancient Kingdom: And " therefore we do expect your Concurrence and Aſſiſtance for ſuch good and great " Ends: And that you will proſecute them with that Wiſdom, Prudence, and Una" nimity, as may moſt tend to our common Advantage and Satisfaction; but chief" ly, that effectual Means may be laid down, for promoting of Religion, Virtue,
" and true Piety, and ſuppreſſing Vice and Immorality, and providing for the " Poor.

" We have appointed our Right Truſty, and entirely beloved Couſin and Coun-
" ſellor, James Duke of Queenſberry, to be our Commiſſioner, to repreſent our Roy" al Perſon in this Seſſion of Parliament, being well ſatisfied that the Experience
" that both We and You have had of his great Abilities and Fidelity in his former " Diſcharge of this Truſt, will fully commend our Choice, and render him to you " acceptable.

" This being your firſt Meeting, and we having recommended nothing but what " is for your own Security and Welfare, we confidently expect a ſuitable Return,
" and a dutiful and chearful Concurrence in what we propoſe; and that all Diffe" rences and Animoſities laid aſide, you will with Concord and Diligence bring " Matters to ſuch a happy Concluſion, as ſhall eſtabliſh a laſting Union between " us and our People: So we bid you heartily farewel. Given at our Court at " St. James's the 30th Day of March, 1703, and of our Reign the Second " Year.

By her Majeſty's Command,

TARBAT.

Then her Majeſty's Commiſſioner made the following Speech.

My LORDS and GENTLEMEN,

" HER Majeſty has been graciouſly pleaſed to give ample and frequent Aſſu-
" rances to maintain and protect the Religion, Laws and Liberties of this
" her ancient Kingdom, and the preſent Conſtitution of the Church: If any Thing
" be wanting for the Eaſe and Satisfaction of her Majeſty's good Subjects, I am ſuf" ficiently inſtructed, and impowered in what may be thought expedient to be " propoſed for that End.

" The cloſe Conjunction of the Two Monarchies, which in their Turns have " deſign'd to enſlave Europe, and extirpate our Religion, made it juſt and neceſſary
" for her Majeſty to be engag'd in the War; and her early Appearance gave Life
" and Vigor to the Confederacy, and particular Encouragement to the Proteſtant
" Princes and States: God has hitherto bleſs'd the Arms of her Majeſty, and her " Allies, with glorious Succeſs, both by Sea and Land; ſo that there is a ſtop put " to the Victories, and a Check given to the encroaching Power of France.

" It cannot but be great Satisfaction to us, to be under the benign Government
" of a Proteſtant Queen: We enjoy the Comforts of Peace, and feel neither the " Effects of Tyranny, nor the Diſorders of War, in which ſo many are involv'd:
" But we ought not to be too ſecure; and it were to tempt our Enemies to form
" Deſigns, or make Inſults againſt us, if they ſee us in no Condition of De" fence.

" All her Majeſty propoſes to you, is for your ſelves, without mingling any par" ticular Concern of her own; it is to continue the Proviſion for the Forces on the " Eſtabliſhment, and to furniſh and repair the Forts and Gariſons, which is ſo ne-
" ceſſary, that I cannot doubt of your ready Compliance with her Majeſty's Deſires:
" And your Chearfulneſs in it will be very acceptable to her Majeſty, obſervable

" to the World, and a great Evidence of your Loyalty and Affection, which will " add much to the Value of what you offer. A. D. 1703.

" The Decay, and preſent low Condition of Trade requires your prudent and " ſpecial Conſideration; her Majeſty, on her Part, is willing to concur with you, " in any Thing that may contribute to encourage and reſtore it, either by making " new Laws, or amending the preſent ones.

My LORDS and GENTLEMEN,

" It has pleas'd her Majeſty to honour me with a Character to repreſent her Roy- " al Perſon in this Seſſion of Parliament; I am very ſenſible of the great Weight " and Difficulties which do attend that Truſt, but my Encouragement is from the " Confidence I have of her Majeſty's Goodneſs, in believing my Sincerity and " Zeal for her Service, and that in her Royal Wiſdom, ſhe is ſo careful of her Peo- " ple, that I am not charg'd with any Thing that can be conſtructed to be againſt " the Intereſt of the Kingdom, which gives me Aſſurance of your hearty Concur- " rence, and I ſhall very faithfully report what Services are done by every Perſon " to her Majeſty and the Nation.

This Speech was inforc'd by another from the Earl of Seafield, Lord High-Chancellor; and then the Draught of an Act for Recognizing and aſſerting her Majeſty's Authority, and her undoubted Right and Title to the Imperial Crown of Scotland, was offer'd by the Duke of Hamilton, read, and by unanimous Conſent, order'd to be read a Second Time. This done, the Houſe was adjourn'd for ſome Days; and ſo they return'd to her Majeſty's Palace, where the Lord Commiſſioner had prepared a noble Entertainment. At one End of the Room was a Table raiſed Two or Three Steps, where his Grace ſat alone, and was ſerved at Table by the Duke of Argyle, as Maſter-Houſhold, who gave the firſt Glaſs kneeling, the Earl of Mar ſerv'd as Carver, the Earl of Lowdon as Cupbearer, the Lord Boyle as Comptroller, and Sir William Enſtruther, Baronet, as Under Maſter-Houſhold. Down from the Commiſſioner's Table, there was a Table about One Hundred and Twenty Foot long, where the Nobility, Barons, and Burgeſſes ſat.

Act to recognize the Queen's Title.

Nine Days after *, the Chancellor mov'd, that the Duke of Hamilton's Overture ſhould receive a Second Reading, in order to be paſs'd; but before it went to the Vote, the Queen's Advocate offer'd a Clauſe, by which it ſhould be Treaſon to impugn or quarrel her Majeſty's Right and Title to the Crown; or her Exerciſe of the Government from her actual Entry to the ſame. This Clauſe being read, it was urg'd by ſome, that it was diſhonourable to her Majeſty, becauſe it imply'd that the Houſe were giving her Majeſty an Indemnity for the Actings and Exerciſe of her Power, ſince her Acceſſion to the Throne. It was anſwer'd, That the Words meant only in general, her Majeſty's Right to exerciſe her Power; to which it was reply'd, That whatever was the Meaning of thoſe who had offer'd the Clauſe, yet the Words could admit of no ſuch Meaning, unleſs either the laſt Part of the Clauſe were entirely cut off, or that the Words, her Exerciſe of the Government, were alter'd thus, her being in the Exerciſe of the Government. To this again it was anſwered, in behalf of the Clauſe, That by the late Queen Mary's Death, without Heirs of her Body, the Right of Succeſſion came to the Queen, upon the Proſpect of King William's Death, ſeeing, by the Entail, ſhe was to ſucceed before any Children of his Body: But that the Right of Exerciſe did never accrue to her, until his actual Death, and her Majeſty's actual Acceſſion; and that therefore it was proper, not only to recognize her Right to the Succeſſion, but alſo to recognize her actual Exerciſe, and to ſecure both, by a Sanction of Treaſon. To this it was anſwer'd, by the Duke of Hamilton's Friends, That theſe Two Rights ſpoke of did not import any other, than the apparent Right of an Heir before or after his immediate Predeceſſor's Death; the firſt of which does naturally vaniſh upon the Exiſtence of the Second. That the Act, as at firſt offer'd, did fully recognize theſe, and all manner of Rights which were or could be in her Majeſty's Perſon; but that the Clauſe now offer'd, did moſt diſhonourably ſuperadd a Ratification and Sanction of her Majeſty's Exerciſe, and muſt point at one of theſe Three Things: Firſt, Either it ſuppoſed that there had been ſomething Lame and Defective in her Majeſty's Rights and Title above-mention'd, which had been, ſince her actual Succeſſion, ſupply'd by her Majeſty's Acts of Adminiſtration and Exerciſe, and therefore her Exerciſe was propos'd to be ratify'd towards validating her infirm Title: But as there was not the leaſt Defect in her Majeſty's Right and Title, therefore this Clauſe was unneceſſary and dangerous. That, in the Second Place, the Clauſe inſinuated that her Majeſty, ſince her Acceſſion, had exerciſed ſome Acts of Adminiſtration, to indemnify which, a Vote of this Houſe ſeem'd neceſſary: That whatever might be charged upon the Miniſtry, it was the higheſt Indignity done to her Majeſty, to expoſe her Exerciſe of her Royal Power to the leaſt Suſpicion by ſuch a Clauſe. And in the laſt Place, That no other Reaſon could be given for the Tenaciouſneſs of the Miniſtry, in promoting a Clauſe ſo diſhonourable to the Queen: But that they themſelves muſt be conſcious, that contrary to Law, they had been inſtrumental in adviſing her Majeſty to exerciſe ſome Acts of Adminiſtration, ſuch as the calling together of the late Parliament, which had continu'd during all the Time of the late Reign, and promoting in it, ſome Commiſſions, Laws and Powers, beyond the Limitations which determined the Being, and circumſcribed the Power of that Parliament: And being ſenſible that this their Advice might very juſtly rebound upon themſelves, they ſhuffled in this diſhonourable Clauſe; hoping, under the Name of her Majeſty's Exerciſe, to ſhelter themſelves: But that whatever might become of this Clauſe, at this Time, it was hop'd the Wiſdom of this Houſe would, in due Time, paſs a proper Cenſure on thoſe Advices, which were like to diſcompoſe her Majeſty's Quiet, and endanger the Welfare of the Nation. My Lord Chancellor, ſaid the Duke of Hamilton, in the Concluſion, "I had the Honour to "offer this Act recognizing her Majeſty's Authority, Right and Title. I was very "hopeful that ſo dutiful an Act would have paſs'd the Vote of this Houſe with all "imaginable Chearfulneſs; and I am both ſorry and ſurpriz'd to find any Thing "thrown in, which can create the leaſt Demur in it. But let them anſwer for it, "who are the Authors." After a long Debate, it was again moved, that inſtead of theſe Words, her Exerciſe of the Government, the following Words might be added, viz. her being in the Exerciſe of Government. But by the Concurrence of the Cavaliers, it was carried by a conſiderable Majority, that the Clauſe brought in by the Advocate, be added to the Act.

* May 19. The Act recognizing her Majeſty's Title paſs'd.

Four Days after *, the Commiſſioner gave the Act the Royal Aſſent: But before that was done, the Duke of Hamilton deſir'd, "That it ſhould be remembred, that "at paſſing this Act, it was expreſly declar'd, that the meaning of the Advocate's "Clauſe could affect only the Queen's Exerciſe of her Government, and not the "Actings of her Miniſtry: And therefore, that whatever Challenge might be given "afterwards to the Illegality of the Actings of the late Parliament, might not be "conſider'd as a Violation of this Act." After the Act had receiv'd the Royal Aſſent, the Earl of Hume preſented the Draught of an Act for a Supply: But before the ſame was read, the Marquis of Tweedale ſaid, he had an Overture to make to the Houſe, which he hop'd would, by reaſon of its Importance, be preferr'd to all other Buſineſs. After ſome Debate, it was agreed that both theſe Overtures ſhould be read, provided that nothing ſhould be ſpoke to either: And accordingly the Act for Supply was read, as was afterwards the Marquis of Tweedale's Overture, for a Reſolve of Parliament, That before all other Buſineſs, the Parliament ſhould proceed to make ſuch Conditions of Government, and Regulations in the Conſtitution of this Kingdom, to take Place after the Deceaſe of her Majeſty, and Heirs of her Body, as ſhould be neceſſary for the Preſervation of their Religion and Liberty: Both which Overtures were ordered to lye upon the Table.

Overture to regulate the Government.

Many blamed the Cavaliers for complying with the Court in the Act of Recognition, which, however, they did in Expectation of being intruſted with the Adminiſtration of Affairs; the Duke of Queenſberry having, on that Occaſion, renew'd his Engagements to ſtand firm by them, and inform the Queen what ſignal Services they had done: Whereupon, in a full Meeting, they unanimouſly reſolved, That the Earl of Hume ſhould, the next Day, make the Motion for a Supply. But this good Correſpondence did not laſt long; and the Commiſſioner's Deportment ſoon induced the Cavaliers to ſuſpect his Sincerity. 'Tis hard to determine whether he did, from the Beginning, deſign to deſert the Cavaliers, or whether he was ſeriouſly embark'd with them? A Scotch Writer † of great ‖ Weight, is of the latter Opinion, and, upon the Credit of a Perſon of undoubted Authority, informs us, that the Reaſon why the Duke of Queenſberry changed, was as follows. On the Day the Earl of Hume was to move for a Supply, his Grace call'd a Council, and acquainted them of it; with which all agreeing, they adjourn'd with a Deſign to ſupport the Earl of Hume's Motion. A few Minutes after, the Duke of Argyle, Marquis of Annandale, and Earl Marchmont, waited upon his Grace; and withdrawing privately with him, told him, "They had that Morning a Meeting with a conſiderable "Number of Parliament Men, wherein it was reſolv'd to move for an Act ratifying the Revolution, and another the Preſbyterian Government, and preſs to have "them preferr'd to the Act of Supply, which they were certain to carry; but firſt "they thought it fit to acquaint his Grace with the Deſign, and aſk his Concurrence." The Commiſſioner begg'd them to forbear, urging, he now had an Opportunity of obtaining a Supply, which if he let ſlip, he might never have again; and promiſed, that as ſoon as this was over, he would go into whatever they propoſed.

poſed. But the others refuſed to comply, being rather willing that there ſhould be no Supply granted at all, than that it ſhould proceed from the Cavaliers. And thus they left the Commiſſioner, who being in the utmoſt Perplexity, durſt not puſh the Act of Supply, knowing the Duke of Hamilton, and his Party, would join the Duke of Argyle, and his Friends, and ſo the Act would be rejected. On the other Hand, the Commiſſioner foreſaw, what Sir James Murray of Philiphaugh, his Confident, had, that very Morning, intimated to him, viz. That if he ſupported the Duke of Argyle in his Deſigns, the Cavaliers would leave him, whereby his Intereſt would be much diminiſh'd, and he be obliged to depend on the Duke of Argyle, Marquis of Annandale, and other Revolutioners and Preſbyterians. While he was thus embarraſs'd, and in Suſpence, the Duke of Argyle, who had more Intereſt with him than any other Perſon, ſoon return'd, and, in a private Converſation, repreſented to him the Improbability of his ſucceeding by the Methods he was then upon; and dextrouſly awaked his Jealouſy of the Duke of Hamilton, who, notwithſtanding what had happen'd of late, had more Intereſt with the Cavaliers than any other, and who, as ſoon as they had gain'd their Point, was like to become their Chief. This, together with the Terror of the Duke of Argyle, and the Marquis of Annandale's leaving him, ſo powerfully wrought upon the Commiſſioner, that from that Moment he reſolv'd to deſert the Cavaliers; but, the better to carry on his Deſigns, he alſo reſolved to diſſemble, as much as poſſible, with them: Which, however, avail'd him but very little.

On the 26th of May, the Commiſſioner from the Throne told the Houſe, "That "having now ſat Twenty Days, he did not doubt but they were all convinced, "That the preſent State of Affairs required a competent Supply for maintaining "the Army. That the Act offer'd a Week before for that Purpoſe, had ever ſince "lain upon the Table; wherefore he deſired it might now be read; and that he "did promiſe, they ſhould have full Time afterwards allow'd them to go on other "Buſineſs. Notwithſtanding this Speech, it was urged againſt the entring upon a Supply, that the Houſe had reſolved to diſcuſs the remaining controverted Elections, before any other Matter of Conſequence. But ſome Members finding that the further Conſideration of the Elections was not yielded to, they moved that the Overture made by the Marquis of Tweedale upon the 13th, ſhould be taken into Conſideration. Upon this the Debate turn'd into a Competition, Whether the Act of Supply, or this Overture, ſhould firſt take Place? In behalf of the Overture, was urged the great Importance of it; and in behalf of the Subſidy, the Neceſſity of it, and the Commiſſioner's Promiſe, that after the firſt reading of the Supply Act, there ſhould be Time afterwards given for other Buſineſs. To this a Member anſwer'd, "That "he had all the Deference imaginable for the Lord Commiſſioner's Aſſurances, and "doubted not but the whole Houſe had the ſame; but he doubted mightily that "his Grace could be Maſter of himſelf in that Point." Who knows, added he, but that after all his Grace's good Purpoſes, the Treaſurer of England may cauſe to adjourn the Houſe, when he ſhall think it fit, notwithſtanding all the Aſſurances which the Miniſtry can give. It is too well felt, That the Influence of Foreign Counſels, from one Corner of the World or other, have determin'd Scots Affairs for theſe many Years; and there is no Appearance of diſcontinuing theſe Practices. He concluded, That from the Matter of this Overture might ariſe ſuch Settlements, as might make a Scotch Nation ſtand upon Scotch Bottom; and therefore it was fit to prefer the Conſideration of it to any other Buſineſs whatſoever. Upon this the Commiſſioner ſaid, "That he had heard a Mem-"ber expreſs ſomething that pointed at the Treaſurer of England; that he own'd "the Honour of his Lordſhip's Acquaintance; but that he had the Honour likewiſe "to ſerve a great Queen, whoſe Commands alone he obey'd; and that he could "further give all poſſible Aſſurance, That the Treaſurer of England neither had "meddled, nor did meddle in the leaſt with Scotch Affairs." Hereupon another Mem-"ber ſaid, "That ſeeing both the Scotch Secretaries were attending the Parlia-"ment, and that there was no Scotchman with the Queen, who knew Scotch Affairs, "and had the Character and Acceſs to repreſent them, therefore Scotch Affairs muſt "be laid before the Queen by Engliſh Hands, by which Means many great Mi-"ſtakes muſt be made in thoſe Affairs, through their being unacquainted with thoſe "Matters; and that if any body ſhould further diſpute the Influence of Foreign "Counſels upon Scotch Affairs, there ſhould be unanſwerable clear Documents pro-"duc'd to prove it: And therefore he did Second the Motion that the Overture be "gone into." Another Member ſaid, That he heard a Speech from the Throne, ſignifying, that the Parliament had now ſat Twenty Days, and therefore recommending to the Members to make ſome Progreſs in the Subſidies, with a Promiſe that they ſhould have Time allowed them afterwards to go upon other Buſineſs. That as to the firſt Part he did acknowledge, that this was the Twentieth Day ſince the Parliament ſat down: But at the the ſame Time, he did wonder to hear that obtruded from thoſe who had the Power of Adjournments, and who had allow'd the Houſe only Seven Sederunts in theſe Twenty Days; and more eſpecially, conſidering that the Sederunts had been ſo very ſhort, the Parliament having never met before Two, Three, or Four in the Afternoon, contrary to the Method of all preceding Parliaments. That as to the Promiſe, that the Members ſhould have Time allowed them afterwards to go upon other Buſineſs, he begg'd Leave to ſay, That there were very many freſh Inſtances, which might ſufficiently demonſtrate how little Regard was to be had to ſuch Promiſes, made by Gentlemen from the Throne. That he ſhould mention but one in the Parliament 1700, where the moſt ſolemn Promiſes were made from the Throne, in open Parliament, that after paſſing the Subſidies, the Houſe ſhould have all the Time they could demand for other Matters; and yet no ſooner was an Act brought in, for ſtating and reviſing the publick Accounts (which was one of the chief Aims of that Parliament) but the Parliament was immediately adjourn'd. Upon this the Commiſſioner ſaid, " That though that Gentleman who ſpoke laſt, did not name him, " yet he found he pointed at him, for he had the Honour to repreſent his late Ma- " jeſty, as his Commiſſioner at that Time; but he deſir'd it might be remembred, " That that ſame Parliament did ſit Three Weeks after the Subſidy was granted." To this the Member anſwer'd, That it was not his Deſign to point his Expreſſions againſt any Man, and if his Expreſſions did reflect upon her Majeſty's Repreſentative, or any body elſe, he was very ſorry for it; but what he had inſtanced, was Matter of Fact. Another Member brought in another Inſtance of the abrupt Adjournment of that Parliament. And another urged, " That it muſt ſtill be freſh in every Man's Memory, that In- " ſults were made upon the Sovereignty and Independency of this Nation, in the " Matter of their late Trading Company, both before their Settlement in Darien, " by the Legal Actings of the Scotch Parliament, and by the ſcandalous Memorials " given in by the Engliſh Reſident at Hamburgh, moſt falſly repreſenting the Scotch " Company as private Perſons, having no Authority: As alſo by the ſaid Reſident's " uſing threatning Denunciations and Expreſſions againſt the Hamburghers, if they " ſhould enter into any Trading Society with them. And likewiſe, after that " Company was ſettled in Darien, by their moſt barbarous and inhuman Execution " of ſome Proclamations iſſued out againſt them. That whether theſe moſt injurious " Stretches were calculated really for the Sake of the Engliſh Intereſt or Trade, (as " was pretended) or rather for the Sake of an Intereſt altogether Foreign to this " Iſland, it was not proper here to diſpute; but that it was very certain, that this " had rais'd an inſuperable Jealouſy in the Scotch Nation, which could not fail, " ſome Time or other, to break forth into Conſequences dangerous to both Nations: " And therefore he did concur with thoſe noble and worthy Members in promoting " the Overture, from which he ſhould expect, that ſome Laws ſhould be en- " acted, towards regulating the Adminiſtration and Government at Home, as might " deliver a Scotch Prince and Miniſtry from Foreign Influence, and might thereby " compoſe theſe hurtful Jealouſies, in all Times coming, to the mutual Peace and " Quiet of the whole Iſland." After a long Debate, it was mov'd, either to go upon reading the Act of Supply, for the Firſt Time, or upon the Marquis of Tweedale's Overture? It was urg'd by a Member, That ſeeing the Reſolve was in general Terms, therefore it would be more ſatisfactory to the Houſe, that thoſe who promoted the Overture, ſhould reduce it into particular Acts, and then the Houſe would be more capable to judge, whether to proceed upon them, or upon the Supply. This was Seconded by the Duke of Argyle, and immediately upon this, her Majeſty's Advocate offer'd an Act, which, he ſaid, he hop'd would pleaſe all Parties. Againſt reading of this Act it was urg'd, That no particular Act relative to the Overture, ought to be read, until the Overture was firſt admitted by the Houſe: But after ſome Time ſpent in this Matter, it being very late, the Debate was adjourn'd by Conſent, till the next meeting of Parliament.

On the 28th of May, the Debate being reſumed, touching the Competition betwixt the Subſidy and the Marquis of Tweedale's Overture, the Miniſtry endeavour'd to wave it, and to enter upon the Conſideration of the remaining controverted Elections; but the Overture was inſiſted on. After ſome Debate, the Marquis of Athol, in Conſequence of that Overture, did offer an Act for the Security of the Kingdom, in Caſe of her Majeſty's Deceaſe, which he deſir'd to be read. It was objected, that no ſingle Act in the Terms of the Overture could be offered, 'till firſt the Houſe ſhould give their Opinion, whether they would enter into the general Reſolve contain'd in the Overture, or not? Therefore it was again inſiſted on, that the Series of Buſineſs ſhould be determin'd, by entring into the Overture. After ſome further Debate, and angry, warm Speeches, it was at length yielded to, without a Vote, that the Houſe ſhould reſolve to determine the Series of the Buſineſs, according to the Terms of the Overture: Whereupon the Marquis quis of Athol clear'd the Preference to the Act of Security, ſeeing it had been firſt offer'd: But before it was read, the Duke of Argyle offer'd his Act, ratifying the late Revolution, and all the Acts following thereupon: Mr. Fletcher, An Act containing ſeveral Limitations upon the Succeſſor, after the Death of her Majeſty, and the Heirs of her Body. The Earl of Rothes, An Act, That after her Majeſty's Death, and failing Heirs of her Body, no Perſon coming to the Crown of Scotland, being at the ſame Time King or Queen of England, ſhould, as King or Queen of Scotland, have Power to make Peace or War, without the Conſent of Parliament: The Earl of Marchmont, An Act for ſecuring the true Proteſtant Religion, and Preſbyterian Government: And Sir Patrick Johnſon, An Act allowing the Importation of all Sorts of Wines, and other Foreign Liquors: All which Acts were plac'd, and order'd to lye on the Table. A. D. 1703. Several Acts offer'd, and read.

On the 1ſt of June, An Act for a Toleration to all Proteſtants in the Exerciſe of Religious Worſhip, preſented by the Earl of Strathmore, being read, a Repreſentation was offer'd againſt it, in the Name, and at the Appointment of the late general Aſſembly, importing, in Subſtance, "That there could not be a juſt Ground to deſire or "grant a Toleration to thoſe of the Epiſcopal Perſuaſion, ſeeing there was never, in "any Nation, a Toleration allow'd, where there was no Pretence of Conſcience "againſt Joint-Communion. That in Scotland, the People had no Scruple in their "Conſciences againſt Communion and Worſhip with the legal eſtabliſh'd Church, "till, of late, in ſome Places, they had been practiſed upon, and divided by Pre-"latick Miniſters. That Difference in Opinion about Church-Government, is not "ſufficient Reaſon for Separation in Worſhip. That to grant a Toleration to that "Party, in the preſent Circumſtances of Church and State, muſt unavoidably "ſhake the Foundation of their preſent happy Conſtitution; overthrow thoſe Laws "upon which it was ſettled; needleſly diſturb that Peace and Tranquility which "the Nation had enjoy'd ſince the late Revolution; diſquiet the Minds of her Maje-"ſty's beſt Subjects; increaſe Animoſities, Confuſions, Diſcord, and Tumults; ener-"vate Diſcipline, open a Door to Vice, Popery, and other Errors, and bring the "Nation into the ſame, or worſe Miſeries and Miſchiefs from which it had been "mercifully deliver'd. Concluding, in ſhort, They were perſuaded, That to enact a Toleration for thoſe of that way, (which God of his infinite Mercy avert) would be to eſtabliſh Iniquity by a Law, and would bring upon the Promoters thereof, and their Families, the dreadful Guilt of all thoſe Sins, and pernicious Effects that might enſue thereupon. The Promoters of the Toleration finding by this Repreſentation, that it was like to meet with great Oppoſition, agreed, not to inſiſt upon it, leſt thereby they ſhould offend, and loſe many, who, at preſent, ſided with them againſt the Court. Act for a Toleration. Repreſentation againſt it.

After the reading of the ſaid Repreſentation, there was offer'd, An Act for a Triennial Parliament; An Act incapacitating Perſons having Penſions not annex'd to Offices, all Officers in the Army, and thoſe employ'd in the Cuſtoms or Exciſe, to have a Vote as Members of Parliament, in impoſing of publick Burdens; An Act ratifying all the Privileges formerly granted to the Company trading to Africa, and the Indies, with ſeveral other Acts relating to Trade: All which were read, and order'd to lye upon the Table. The Act for ſecuring the Preſbyterian Government, was alſo read, and order'd to be mark'd a firſt Reading: And the Act for Security of the Kingdom, as offer'd by the Marquis of Athol, was not only read, but likewiſe order'd to be printed. Two Days * after, the Act for ſecuring the Proteſtant Religion, and Preſbyterian Government, was again read, and after the Addition of ſome Exceptions relating to the Allowance given to Miniſters, the whole Act was put to the Vote. Many Members argued againſt it, but none with more Mettle than Sir David Cunningham of Milcraigg, who urged, That it was uncharitable to affirm, as this Act did, That the Preſbyterian Government was the only Church of Chriſt. To this the Marquis of Lothian reply'd, That the Clauſe was right; ſince he was ſure the Preſbyterian Government was the beſt Part of the Chriſtian Religion; which ſet all the Houſe in a merry Temper. However, the Act paſſed: But it was evident, that the Preſbyterian Party was not ſo conſiderable as imagined; and that if the Queen had been as Epiſcopal in Scotland, as in England, ſhe might eaſily have overturn'd Preſbytery. For, ſays a Scotch † Writer, at this Time the Houſe conſiſted of about Two Hundred and Forty Members, Thirty of whom voted againſt the Act, and Eighty Two were Non-Liquets ‖, which laſt were all Epiſcopal, but choſe to be ſilent, either becauſe there was not then a form'd Deſign againſt Preſbytery, or in order to pleaſe the Court: So that, properly ſpeaking, there was not a Plurality of above Sixteen Voices for the Act. When this was over, the Act for the Toleration was again read, whereupon there enſued a very warm Debate, touching a Letter ſent by her Majeſty to the Privy-Council, ſome Months before; but thoſe who deſign'd to appear for the Toleration, finding that this Heat and Oppoſition was principally Several Acts offer'd and read.

rais'd by ſome of the Miniſtry, and their Dependents, they dropp'd the Debate, and did not preſs the Toleration.

The Cavaliers expoſtulate with the Duke of Queensberry. Scotch Memoirs, Ubi Supra, p. 46.

As ſoon as the Cavaliers perceived that the Duke of Queenſberry's Friends and Dependents appear'd againſt the Act of Toleration, and for the Act ratifying the late Revolution, and the Act for ſecuring the Preſbyterian Government, they immediately concluded they were betray'd; and thereupon ſent Four of their Number, viz. the Earls of Hume and Strathmore, George Lockhart of Carnwath, Eſq; and James Ogilvy of Boyne, to repreſent to him, how much they were ſurprized to find his Friends behave after ſuch a Manner: And that they hoped his Grace would remember his Vows and Promiſes, and how they had ſerv'd the Queen. The Matter of Fact he could not deny: So he excuſed it, as Neceſſity to pleaſe ſuch of the Miniſtry as differ'd from him in Opinion, leſt otherwiſe the Queen's Affairs ſhould ſuffer Prejudice; and then he renew'd his former Promiſes, with the moſt ſolemn Oaths and Proteſtations. "They reply'd, they believ'd this would not ſatisfy thoſe who had "ſent them; and that neither his Grace, nor the Queen, could blame them to look "to themſelves, ſince it was plain he was embark'd with a Party, and had enter'd "into Meaſures quite contrary to the Conſtitution agreed to between him and "them." Having made their Report to their Conſtituents, 'twas unanimouſly reſolv'd by the Cavaliers, not to enter into any Concert with the Court, or any other Party, but to ſtand by themſelves firm to one another, and jointly to proſecute ſuch Meaſures only, as by the Plurality ſhould be eſteem'd for the Intereſt of their Country. This Engagement they all faithfully perform'd, during this whole Seſſion, except only the Earls of Belcarras and Dunmore, who adher'd to the Court, though they ow'd all they had, and much they had ſquander'd away, to King Charles, and King James; and therefore the Cavaliers taxed them with the higheſt Ingratitude. Hitherto they claim'd more Merit than others among that Party, eſpecially the firſt, who had been ſome Time, ſince the Revolution, in France, and not many Years before this Time, obtain'd Leave to come Home. He had, indeed, ſome Pretence for the Part he now acted, having a numerous Family, and little to ſubſiſt them, but what the Court beſtow'd: But the other was thought inexcuſable, having above Five Hundred Pounds a Year of his own, and yet ſold his Vote for a yearly Penſion which the Queen had given his Lady ſince the Revolution. The Truth is, neither of them had any further Ambition, than how to get ſo much Money as ſupply'd their daily Carrouſing; ſo that no Party was either much Gainer or Loſer by their Defection. But let us proceed:

Debate about it.

On the 7th of June, the Parliament proceeded to conſider the Duke of Argyle's Act, which conſiſted of Three Clauſes: The Firſt, "Ratifying, approving, and "perpetuating, the Firſt Act of King William and Queen Mary's Parliament, declaring, that the Three Eſtates then met together, were a lawful and free Parliament. The Second, declaring, That it ſhould be High-Treaſon for any Perſon "to diſown, quarrel or impugn the Authority of the ſaid Parliament. And, in "the Third Place, further ſtatuting and declaring, that it ſhould be High-Treaſon "in any of the Subjects in that Kingdom, to quarrel, impugn, or endeavour, by "Writing, or malicious and adviſed Speaking, or other open Act or Deed, to alter or "innovate the Claim of Right, or any Article thereof." The Two firſt Clauſes were agreed to without any great Oppoſition, but the Third raiſed a very warm Debate. It was alledg'd for the Clauſe, that many Libels had been ſpread, reflecting on the Claim of Right, and tending to unhinge the preſent happy Settlement: To which it was anſwer'd, "That there were ſtanding Laws, by which the Authors of ſuch Li"bels might be puniſh'd; but that the Import of ſuch a general and peremptory "Clauſe, would be of moſt dangerous Conſequence: That it would fetter Men in "their common Converſation, which though never ſo innocent, might, by theſe "Words, endeavour by Writing, or Speaking, bring all the Subjects, whether in the "Miniſtry, or not, into daily Snares: And, in ſhort, that it would bind up the "Government, and the Wiſdom of the Nation it ſelf, in all ſucceeding Ages, "from making ſuch Alterations and Reformations, as, in courſe of Time, and va"rious Circumſtances of Things, ſhould be judged neceſſary." To this Purpoſe, James More of Stennywood, ſaid, "That he was ſure, and every body knew, that "the Shire of Aberdeen, which he had the Honour to repreſent, was of the Epiſco"pal Perſuaſion; and if after this Act was paſs'd, his Countrymen ſhould, in diſ"charge of their own Conſciences, in a regular Way, addreſs the Sovereign, or "Parliament, (which, by the Claim of Right, is the Privilege of every Subject,) "for a Rectification of the preſent Preſbyterian Eſtabliſhment, which, in his Opi"nion, was neither infallible nor unalterable, he deſired to know, whether or no ſuch "an Addreſs ſhould import Treaſon? To this Sir William Hamilton of Whitlow, anſwer'd, That, indeed, this Act did not preclude addreſſing for a Toleration: But he was of Opinion, that if after it were paſs'd into a Law, any Perſon ſhould own, that he thought Preſbyterian Government was a wrong Eſtabliſhment, and that Epiſcopacy ought to be reſtor'd, ſuch a Perſon ought to be guilty of High-Treaſon. This occaſion'd a long and warm Debate, wherein the Dangers that would ariſe from this Act, both to the Government, and the Subject, were fully laid open: But yet the Queſtion for approving the Act, was carried in the Affirmative, though there were Sixty Members againſt it, and many Non-Liquets; and amongſt them the Lord Viſcount Tarbat, the Marquis of Athol, the Lord Juſtice Clerk, and ſome of their and of the Commiſſioner's Friends, who, at this Time, began to break with the Court, and join with the Cavaliers. A. D. 1703. The Act approved.

Two Days * after, the Draught of An Act enjoying the Aſſurance, was preſented by the Earl of Melvil, and read; as was alſo, the Draught of An Act againſt the impoſing of any Oaths or Declarations, other than thoſe already appointed by Law, given in by the Marquis of Athol. Then the Act for Security of the Kingdom, being taken into Conſideration, many Speeches were made, recommending to the Members to proceed in that Matter with the utmoſt Caution and Deliberation. "Among the "reſt, the Lord Belhaven made a Deduction of the ſeveral Projects, which, from "Henry the VIIth's Time, had been ſet on Foot, towards uniting the Two King-"doms, with an Enumeration of the Inſtances of Decay in the Scotch Nation, ſince "their Kings reſided in England; and of the Opportunities they had loſt of ma-"king good Terms for themſelves, by the artful Offers of an Union made to them "by their Neighbours, to lull them aſleep; concluding, that by this Act they had "it in their Power to provide againſt any further Diſappointments." After the Houſe had enter'd upon Conſideration of ſome Clauſes of the ſaid Act, it was repreſented, That before any further Progreſs could be made, in eſtabliſhing a future Succeſſion, it would be neceſſary to reſcind the Second Act of the Third Parliament of King Charles the IId, Eſtabliſhing the Succeſſion of the Crown in the next of Blood in the Royal Line, of whatſoever Religion: Whereupon the Queen's Advocate drew out of his Pocket, An Act ready drawn, for reſcinding the ſaid Act, ſo far as the ſame was inconſiſtent with the Claim of Right, and the preſent Settlement made in King William's Time. Againſt this it was urged, That by the Claim of Right all Popiſh Succeſſors being excluded, they ſhould by this Clauſe determine the Succeſſion to be lodged in the Family of HANOVER, who were the neareſt Proteſtants of the Royal Blood. And though the Generality of the Preſbyterians, and all the Miniſtry, (the Three above-named † excepted) preſs'd to have this Act read the firſt Time, yet it was carried by a conſiderable Majority, that it ſhould lie on the Table. * June 9. Act of Security. Act in behalf of the Houſe of Hanover waved. † Viz. Marquis of Athol, Lord Viſcount Tarbat, and Lord Juſtice Clerk.

The next Four or Five Sittings were ſpent in controverted Elections; and on the 30th, An Act was paſs'd, to abrogate the Pain of Death and Confiſcation, againſt Authors of Slanders, and Libels; ordaining, that for the future, the Puniſhment of ſuch Crimes be only arbitrary, according to the Tranſgreſſion, by Fine, Impriſonment, and Baniſhment, &c. The ſame Day an Order was made, "That a Book publiſh'd by the "Title of Hiſtoria Anglo-Scotica, by Dr. Drake, a Phyſician, and dedicated to "Sir Edward Seymour, containing many falſe and injurious Reflections upon the "Sovereignty and Independency of the Scotch Crown and Nation, ſhould be burnt "by the Hands of the common Hangman. A Book call'd Hiſtoria Anglo Scotica, order'd to be burnt.

On the 1ſt of July, the Act for the Security of the Kingdom being read, a Member moved for inſerting in it ſuch Preliminaries, in Caſe of a Succeſſor not of the Queen's own Body, as ſhould ſufficiently ſecure the Scotch Nation againſt the Misfortunes ariſing from the Influence of Foreign Counſels. This was ſeconded by a great many Members; and after ſome Debate, it was agreed, that the Act ſhould be gone upon Paragraph by Paragraph. The next Day, the Conſideration of the ſaid Act was reſumed; and it being reſolv'd that the Eſtates of the Nation ſhould meet upon the 20th Day after the Queen's Deceaſe; It was further reſolv'd, That the Government ſhould be lodg'd in the Hands of the Eſtates upon the ſaid 20th Day. On the 5th of July, the Act for Security was further conſider'd, and a Clauſe added, excluding Papiſts from being Members of the Eſtates. The next Day another Clauſe was offer'd, "That no Engliſhman, or Foreigner, having a Scots Title, "and not having an Eſtate of 1000 l. Sterling yearly Rent within this Kingdom, "ſhall, in the Event aforeſaid, have Place and Vote in the Meeting of Eſtates." Againſt this Clauſe, it was urg'd by the Marquis of Athol, That the Privilege of Peerage belong'd to ſome by Birth, and to others by immediate Creation. That in the firſt of theſe Caſes, the private Birthright of ſome Noblemen might be injur'd; and in the other, the Prerogative ſeem'd to be impair'd. To this it was anſwer'd, Firſt, That this Clauſe was no encroaching upon the Property and Birthright of thoſe Peers, who were to be excluded at that Time, ſeeing the Excluſion was for that Time alone, at which there was an Affair to be negotiated, which was purely a Progreſs of the Act for Security of the Kingdom.

Scotch Concern; viz. The Chuſing of a Succeſſor for the Kingdom of Scotland. Secondly, That Poſſeſſion and Property is the true Title for Repreſentation: And tho' the Crown, which is the Fountain of Honour, be not reſtrain'd to diſpenſe Titles according to that Rule, yet in this very nice Caſe, there could be no Exception made againſt excluding thoſe from Voting, who not only had no Poſſeſſion or Intereſt in Scotland to repreſent, but who, on the contrary, had Poſſeſſion and Intereſt elſewhere, which might claſh with the Intereſt of the Scotch Nation. Thirdly, That in the Affair which was to be the Subject-Matter of the Conſideration of that Meeting of the Eſtates, (viz. the Nominating a Succeſſor) the Engliſh were already predetermin'd, and pre-engag'd in their own Choice. And tho' it ſhould prove to be the Intereſt of Scotland, not to enter into the ſame Nomination with England; yet thoſe predetermin'd Peers, who had Eſtates in England, would never riſque them, to give a fair Vote for the Intereſt of Scotland, where they had no Eſtate to loſe; and therefore the Clauſe was inſiſted on, as proper. After ſome Debate, the Clauſe was put to the Vote, and carry'd in the Affirmative: But before Voting, the Marquis of Athol proteſted, That this Vote might not prejudice the undoubted Right of all Scots Proteſtant Peers: To which Proteſt, ſeveral other Peers adher'd. Then there was an Oath offer'd to be taken by the Members, at the Meeting of Eſtates, to maintain the true Reform'd Religion, and the Claim of Right: Againſt which it was urged by the ſame Peer, "That he had formerly offer'd an Act againſt all Oaths, except-"ing the Oath of Allegiance; and that he now inſiſted upon the ſame Overture; "for which he gave ſeveral Reaſons; particularly, That the framing a Multipli-"city of Oaths, did, in general, ſerve for no other Purpoſe, than to bind up honeſt "Men, and to give the Wicked more Liberty: And, as to the preſent Caſe, what "was offer'd, might ſerve only to enſnare the Conſciences of Proteſtants, who "might, perhaps, differ only in ſome outward Forms." Hereupon there was an Acquieſcence in the Houſe, that the Act ſhould be firſt gone through; and if afterwards any Motions of Oaths were offer'd, they ſhould then be taken into Conſideration. On the 7th of July, the Act being proceeded in, it was mov'd, That ſuch Limitations as ſhould be thought neceſſary to be put upon the Succeſſor, might be conſider'd; and particularly, the Act touching Peace and War was inſiſted upon to be inſerted: Which occaſion'd a great Debate, and many Speeches. It was urg'd on the one Hand, That this Act was only calculated for eſtabliſhing a Power to adminiſter the Government in the Caſe of the Queen's Death, and to name a Succeſſor; and that tho' it might come properly under the Compaſs of this Act, to limit the Power of the Succeſſor, yet that ſuch Limitations ſhould be referr'd to the Wiſdom of that Meeting of Eſtates. In Behalf of the Limitations, it was urg'd, That by her Majeſty's Letter, the Nation was encourag'd to expect her Majeſty's Concurrence with all Things that ſhould be propos'd for their Liberties, and the Security and Welfare of that her Ancient Kingdom; and that from the Commiſſioner's and Chancellor's Speeches, they had further Encouragement for ſuch Hopes. Thereupon the Commiſſioner ſaid, He did not expect that her Majeſty's Letter ſhould have been here commented on, and Conſequences drawn from it, as if her Majeſty had reſolv'd to condeſcend to any Limitations offer'd upon her ſelf or her Succeſſors: For he did not think her Majeſty meant any ſuch Thing. To this a Member reply'd, "That her Majeſty's Speech was very gra-"cious and very plain; and that without any the leaſt Comment, it pointed at gra-"tifying her Nation in all Things, that ſhould be propos'd for their Liberties, and for the "Satisfaction, Security and Welfare of her People. That he ſaw no Limitation offer'd, "either upon her Majeſty, or upon the Heirs of her Body; but that ſome deſign-"ing Stateſmen amongſt Foreigners, had influenc'd and over-aw'd the Scots Govern-"ment and Miniſtry to abandon the Scots Intereſt: That therefore the Parliament "might juſtly be blam'd, if they ſhould not, at this Time, lay hold of her Ma-"jeſty's Gracious Offer, and of the preſent happy Opportunity, in ſettling ſuch Con-"ditions of Government within themſelves, and ſuch Limitations upon the Suc-"ceſſor, after her Majeſty's Demiſe, and failing Heirs of her Body, as might in "Time coming remove theſe Jealouſies, which are now grown to ſuch a Height, "as to endanger the Peace of both Kingdoms." This was back'd by another Member, who ſaid, "That he always thought, and was now fully convinc'd, that "whatever came from the Throne, did proceed from the Influence of Engliſh Coun-"ſels." Upon this, ſeveral Members about the Throne interrupted the Member, inſinuating, that theſe harſh Expreſſions were pointed againſt them, and not to be ſuffer'd: Which ſet the Houſe into a Flame; many Members remonſtrating, in very angry Terms, that this was a Breach of Privilege, and demanding, that the Member might be allow'd to ſpeak without Interruption, and explain himſelf. Silence being order'd, the Member added, "That it would not be difficult for him "to explain himſelf; that he ſpoke not as a Slave, but as a Freeman. That he had "all

" all the Deference imaginable for her Majeſty, and her Repreſentative; but that " the Love and Duty he ow'd to his Country, did oblige him to ſay what he had " ſaid. And that beſides the frequent and too palpable Inſtances which might have " been brought in of that Influence for many Years paſt, he had a freſh Inſtance of " Suſpicion, from a Letter lately ſent down from the Treaſurer of England, gi- " ving Directions to the ſame Purpoſe, as he had now heard from the Throne. " That the barbarous Treatment the Nation met with in the Matter of Darien, " and a more recent Inſtance of the Contempt the Engliſh have for the Scotch Na- " tion, in neglecting to ask their Advice before they nam'd their own Succeſſor, " were ſufficient to demonſtrate, that the Engliſh look'd upon the Scotch Nation " in a State of abſolute Dependance upon them. That he thought, what he had " now heard from the Throne, was a ſufficient Warning to the Scotch Nation, that " nothing could relieve them from the Slavery of that Influence, but a firm Reſo- " lution of withdrawing themſelves from under the Government of an Engliſh " Prince, after her Majeſty's Deceaſe, and failing Heirs of her Body." Againſt this it was again urg'd, " That the Settling of Limitations upon the Succeſſor, were " more proper to be done by that Parliament, or Meeting of Eſtates, which ſhould " name the Succeſſor; and that the whole Act of Security might perhaps be loſt, if " it ſhould be cramp'd by ſuch Limitations." After ſome other Speeches, it was carry'd by a Majority of 26 Voices, not to proceed to the Limitations on the Succeſſor, in this Act.

On the 9th of July, there was another long and warm Debate, upon the Motion, That the Act touching Peace and War, ſhould come under Conſideration, next after the Act of Security was finiſh'd; which was carry'd in the Affirmative, by 43 Votes. Then the Act of Security was further proceeded on; and upon a Debate relating to the Regency, in caſe the Succeſſor to be named were under Age, it was reſolv'd to refer that Matter to the Wiſdom of the Meeting of the Eſtates. Five Days after *, the Clauſe empowering the ſaid Eſtates to declare a Succeſſor to the Crown of the Royal Line, and of the Proteſtant Religion, being taken into Conſideration, it was moved, that theſe Words ſhould be added, Of the true Proteſtant Religion, as by Law eſtabliſh'd within this Kingdom: Againſt which it was urged, That the Coronation-Oath was a ſufficient Teſt to engage the Succeſſor (being a Proteſtant) to maintain the Church as by Law eſtabliſh'd. To this it was anſwer'd, " That ſince the Wiſ- " dom of this Houſe had thought fit to exclude Papiſts, who profeſs'd the Doctrine " of Tranſubſtantiation, from having any Acceſs to a Scots Government; ſo he did " ſee no Reaſon, why Lutherans, who profeſs the Doctrine of Conſubſtantiation, ought " not likewiſe to be excluded. And more eſpecially conſidering, that by this means " the Family of Hanover would fall to be excluded, which was both proper and ne- " ceſſary, conſidering that the Engliſh had nam'd that Family for their Succeſſor: " For he ſaw plainly, that the Scotch Nation muſt reſolve to be in continual Sla- " very, if they ſhould go into the ſame Nomination with England, unleſs they had " ſuch Conditions of Government ſettled within themſelves, as might ſecure their " Liberty and Trade; of which he ſaw no great Appearance at this Time, ſince it " was evident from ſeveral Struggles within theſe few Days, that the Miniſtry " were in Concert with the Miniſtry of England, to continue the Nation of Scotland " under the ſame Slavery as formerly; and therefore he did ſecond that Clauſe, and " would ſecond any other Clauſe whatſoever, which might put the Scotch Nation " under a diſtinct Government from that of England, ſeeing they could not obtain " ſuch reaſonable Terms, as might make them eaſy under one and the ſame Succeſ- " ſor. Upon this Occaſion, Mr. Grant inform'd the Houſe, That he had Inſtructi- ons from the Barons of the Shire of Inverneſs, whom he repreſented, not to enter into any Terms of Succeſſion, the ſame with England, unleſs firſt there ſhould be ſuch Conditions of Government, and Terms of Union of Trade, previouſly concerted, paſs'd and ratify'd by the Parliaments of both Kingdoms, as ſhould put the Scotch Nation upon an equal Foot with their Neighbours. After ſome Debate, the Queſtion was ſtated, either add the Words offer'd to the Clauſe, or reſt upon the Security by the Coronation-Oath: And it was carry'd for the latter.

* July 14th.

On the 16th of July, a further Progreſs was made in the Act of Security, and the following Clauſe was offered by the Earl of Roxburgh, —— Providing the Succeſſor to be named by the Meeting of the Eſtates (in the Event mention'd in the Act) be not the Succeſſor to the Crown of England: Unleſs that in this Seſſion of Parliament, there be ſuch Conditions of Government ſettled and enacted, as may ſecure the Honour and Independency of the Crown of this Kingdom, the Freedom, Frequency, and Power of Parliaments, and the Religion, Liberty and Trade of the Nation from the Engliſh or Foreign Influence. It was urged againſt the Clauſe, that it imported Limitations upon the Succeſſor, which had been by a former Day's Vote excluded out of this Act: To which it was anſwer'd, That by this Clauſe, there was no Limitation deſign'd to be brought into this Act, but the Clauſe did only, in general, ſecure a Capitulation, for ſome proper Conditions of Government, to be ſettled in this Seſſion of Parliament, in Caſe the Nation ſhould think fit to name the ſame Succeſſor with England, in the ſame Manner as the other Day's Reſolve had made a Capitulation for the Act of Peace and War in Particular. It was again objected, That as this Clauſe was conceiv'd, the making of the Conditions of Government was too peremptorily reſtrain'd to this Seſſion of Parliament: And therefore it was moved, that inſtead of this Seſſion of Parliament, it ſhould be, in this, or any other Seſſion of Parliament. To this it was anſwer'd, "That it was evident to all honeſt Scotchmen in that Houſe, what a great "Struggle they had for their Liberties, and what a continued Oppoſition they met "with from their own Miniſtry, who held their Places and Preferments from the "Hands of thoſe very Men, againſt whoſe Influence they deſign'd to ſecure them-"ſelves. That it was no leſs evident, that thoſe who at preſent appear'd for the "Honour and Intereſt of the Scotch Crown and Nation, propos'd nothing but what "was ſupported by plain and open Reaſoning; whilſt others, from a moſt baſe and "ſervile Principle of preſerving their Places and Penſions, oppos'd ſuch generous and "juſt Deſigns, without any fair Reaſoning or Argument; but were forc'd to deviſe "ſuch Shifts and Pretences, as might ſerve to amuſe the ſequacious Multitude. That "whilſt the Members were deſigning to ſecure a Capitulation, for ſettling ſuch "Conditions of Government, as might anſwer no leſs important Ends than the Ho-"nour and Safety of the Scotch Crown, relieving of their Nation from Slavery, and "thereby to extinguiſh the Jealouſies, which muſt, for all future Ages, make both "Nations uneaſy: That when they were projecting ſuch good Things, with all ima-"ginable Diſpatch, in this Parliament, they were told of an Expedient for a new "Delay, by turning them off to ſome future Parliament; which, upon the whole "Matter, aim'd at nothing leſs than an entire Diſappointment of thoſe generous "Deſigns. And therefore, he hop'd, the Wiſdom of the Houſe would enter imme-"diately into the Clauſe, as at firſt offer'd." The Queſtion being put, Add the Clauſe, Yea, or No? ſome Members threw in a great many new Expedients, which occaſion'd a great many warm Speeches; and it being late, and the Houſe in great Heat and Confuſion, ſeveral Members preſs'd for a Delay. The Chancellor ſeconded this Motion, adding, That this Debate ſhould be reſum'd the next Sitting, nothing intervening; and, by the Commiſſioner's Order, adjourn'd the Parliament for Four Days. Upon this Adjournment, the Houſe was in an Uproar and Combuſtion; ſome Members remonſtrating, that the Adjourning them in the Middle of a Debate, without either a Vote or Acquieſcence of the Houſe, but meerly upon a Motion made by ſome Members for a Delay, was a manifeſt Breach of the Liberty of the Subject, and Privilege of Parliament: And thereupon a great many Members immediately proteſted againſt the Adjournment as illegal, took Inſtruments thereof, and fram'd an Addreſs to her Majeſty, which was ſign'd that very Night by about Sixty Members, and by Fifteen or Twenty next Morning.

On the 20th of July, it was moved, That the Proteſtation enter'd the former Day againſt the Adjournment of the Parliament, as a Breach of Privilege, and Interruption of their Reaſoning, ſhould be mark'd in the former Day's Minutes; which was oppos'd by the Lord Chancellor. After a long and warm Debate, touching the Forms, and Conſequence of Proteſtations in general, and the Import of an Act of King James the VIth, and the Article of Claim of Right, mention'd in particular, at length the Matter was thus compounded; viz. That the Chancellor ſhould add to what he ſaid, That there was no manner of Deſign by that Adjournment, to encroach upon the Privilege of the Parliament; and that this being digeſted together, ſhould be printed and publiſh'd. This was agreed to, as a ſufficient Vindication of the Privileges of the Members in Parliament, and both ended the Debate, and put a ſtop to the Addreſs. The next * Day, the Houſe went upon the Conſideration of the Clauſe offer'd by the Earl of Roxburgh: but after reading it, there was another Clauſe offer'd by her Majeſty's Advocate, as follows: ——Providing, That after her Majeſty's Deceaſe, without Heirs of her Body, the ſame Perſon ſhall in no Event be capable to be King or Queen of both Kingdoms of Scotland and England, unleſs a free Communication of Trade, the Freedom of Navigation, and the Liberty of the Plantations be fully agreed to, and eſtabliſh'd by the Parliament and Kingdom of England, in Favour of the Kingdom and Subjects of Scotland, at the Sight, and to the Satisfaction of this, or any enſuing Parliament of Scotland, or the ſaid Meeting of Eſtates. After this Clauſe was read, it was moved, That it ſhould be added to the Act of Security, inſtead of the Clauſe offer'd by the Earl of Roxburgh; and this Motion was ſeconded by all the Miniſtry, and their Dependants. After a long Debate, ſome urging to have the Clauſe offer'd, touching the Con- ditions of Government, added to the Act of Security, others inſiſting to have the Clauſe touching Communication of Trade, added; at length a Member ſaid, That he did not well underſtand what Benefit the Nation might reap by a Communication of Trade with England; but that ſeeing the Miniſtry did ſo much preſs it, he therefore mov'd that both the Clauſes ſhould be join'd, and added to the Act of Security; and the Queſtion was moved, add both Clauſes, Yea, or No! The Miniſtry fearing that this might be carried in the Affirmative, propoſed a new State of the Queſtion, viz. Proceed, or Delay? Which being put accordingly, it was carried for Delay, by Three Voices only. A. D. 1703.

On the 26th of July, after a long Debate, the Two Clauſes of Conditions of Government, and Communication of Trade with England, were order'd to be added to the Act of Security, by a Majority of Seventy Two Voices: But the Lord Preſident of the Council proteſted againſt that Vote. Several other Clauſes were afterwards offer'd; and, notwithſtanding the ſtrong Oppoſition from the Miniſtry, added to the Act, which, on the 13th of Auguſt was read, and approved by a Majority of Fifty Nine Voices. On the 16th and 17th, ſeveral Members made Speeches, deſiring the Lord Commiſſioner, with all Deference to her Majeſty's Negative, to give the Royal Aſſent to the ſaid Act; but his Grace ſtill declined it.

On the 18th and 19th of Auguſt, the Houſe went upon the Act touching Peace and War; and a Clauſe was offer'd, That no Forces ſhould be brought into the Kingdom, or tranſported out of it for Foreign Service, without Conſent of Parliaments; but the Conſideration of it was not inſiſted on. The 20th, freſh Inſtances were made to the Commiſſioner by a great many Members, that he would paſs the Act of Security, which would encourage the Members to go the more chearfully upon the Matter of Subſidies: And it was alſo repreſented, that the Negative to any Act approved in Parliament, had never been aſſerted before the Year 1660. Five Days after, it was moved, that the Houſe ſhould go upon the Conſideration of ſome Overtures for ſecuring the Liberties of the Nation, conformable to the Tenor of the grand Reſolve, enter'd into the 28th Day of May: Againſt which it was urg'd, That, according to the Terms of that Reſolve, the Houſe had already made conſiderable Progreſs in the Matter of Religion and Liberty; that Trade was next in Order, and that the low Condition of the Royal Boroughs, did ſufficiently ſhew the Neceſſity of making ſome Proviſion for Commerce. Thereupon ſeveral Acts for Trade were offer'd, and read that Day, and at the next * Meeting, viz. the Act in Favour of the Company Trading to Africa and the Indies; the Act againſt Importation of Iriſh Victual; the Act prohibiting the Exportation of Engliſh and Iriſh Wooll, till next Seſſion of Parliament; and the Act allowing the Importation of all Sorts of Wines, and other Foreign Liquors. The Three Firſt of theſe Acts were order'd to be mark'd a firſt Reading, without any Oppoſition, but ſome Members urg'd, "That "the Fourth and laſt ought to be thrown out, as laying a Foundation for a Com- "merce very prejudicial to the Intereſt and Trade of the Nation: That this was "found to be ſo by a very exact Enquiry made in Parliament within theſe Three "Years, when the State and Balance of Trade with France had been moſt delibe- "rately look'd into; in Purſuance of which Enquiry, there was an Act paſs'd in "the Parliament 1700, Prohibiting the Importation of French Wines; that when that "Law was made, the Kingdom of Scotland was in Peace with France; that beſides "the Reaſons which were then given againſt that Trade, as diſadvantageous to the "Nation, it was alledg'd, That the French had taken away from the Scotch, ſome "ancient Privileges and Immunities, for which Reaſon they did then prohibit the "Importation of French Wines, thereby to oblige the French to reſtore to them thoſe "Privileges; that this was done in Time of Peace, when the Scotch knew they "might have an Opportunity of treating with the French upon that Head: And if "they ſhould now take off that Reſtraint, and ſet that Trade a-going in Time of "War, when Law prohibits them to enter into any Treaty with the French, this "were not only to abandon all Thoughts of regaining thoſe Privileges, but were "likewiſe to proſtitute their Character, as a Nation unworthy to be treated with, "and therefore moved, that the Act might be thrown out. It was urged by one of the Miniſtry, that it was very well known, that the Cuſtoms on Wines was the chief Fund for the Civil Liſt, and unleſs the Importation of French Wines were reſtor'd, the Government could not be ſupported, conſidering that the Funds were now very far deficient. Thereupon a Member deſired to know, what was meant by the Support of the Government? Is this (ſaid he) to provide a Farm, or Collection of Cuſtoms, by the Places and Produce of which, the Boroughs are to be bribed, to give their Votes in Parliament? Adding, That the Practices in Relation to this Matter were ſo ſcandalous, that he ſhould think it the Intereſt of the Miniſtry to prevent all Occaſion of Diſpute about it. Another Member ſaid, "That he heard a great deal ſpoke of the Deficiency of "the Debates about the Act for importing French Wines.

" the Civil Liſt, and, indeed, he thought it no Wonder that it ſhould be ſo. That " ſince her Majeſty's happy Acceſſion to the Throne, there was a Set of ſufficient " Gentlemen, who offer'd to farm the Cuſtoms at a very good Rate, and he knew " that they actually carried the Farm at a publick Auction, but that, ſome way or " other, this Farm was ſubverted, and the Cuſtoms put upon the Foot of Collection, " into the Hands of the Royal Burroughs. That the Reaſon of this was very " plain: In the one Caſe, the Farm-Duty was a Liquidate Sum, and could not have " been eaſily embezzled, and the collecting of the Cuſtoms muſt have been in the " Hands of the Farmers, and their own Servants: But now the Collection was put in " the Hands of ſo many of the Royal Burroughs, who were Members of Parlia- " ment, and the Produce of the Cuſtoms being huddled up betwixt them and the " Treaſury, did ſerve as a Fund for other Bribes, and ſuch like Services. That he " did not think that ever there was ſo barefac'd, and ſo ſcandalous a Piece of Con- " duct, in any Miniſtry in the World; and it was no wonder that they were made " Slaves, when ſuch Artifices durſt be adventur'd upon: That this was no leſs than " to bribe Members to lay on Cuſtoms and Supplies, and to ſquander theſe Cuſtoms and " Supplies amongſt thoſe who had laid them on; and thus her Majeſty's Treaſury " was pillaged, and the Trade of the Nation proſtituted. That, however, ſeeing " the Support of the Government, and the Deficiency of the Funds was ſo much " talk'd of, he ſhould make an Offer, which ſhould demonſtrate that he was very " ready to ſupport the Civil Liſt; and ſo he moved, That the Funds, and the Experce of " the Civil Liſt, might be laid before the Houſe: And that a ſufficient Fund might be " raiſed by a Land-Tax, or any other certain way for clearing that Expence, without the " Burthen of an Act ſo deſtructive to the Trade of the Nation, and ſo derogatory to her " Majeſty's Honour." The Overture being ſeconded by a great many, there was a Speech made by one of the Miniſtry, repreſenting the great Benefit which would ariſe to the Kingdom in general, and to the Towns in particular, by the French Trade; and concluding, That unleſs that Act were paſs'd, the Subjects might plow up their Towns, and burn their Ships. To this a Member anſwer'd, " That ſince " he heard ſuch harſh Expreſſions as theſe come from about the Throne, for no " other Reaſon, but to amuſe and miſlead the Burroughs with pretended Advan- " tages of Trade, the Members muſt take the Liberty to tell their Mind the more " freely: That he did openly aver, that it was plain to all this Houſe, that the " Nation was ruin'd in all its Concerns, both of Liberty and Trade, by the moſt " treacherous Artifices of thoſe who were in the Miniſtry." Upon this ſome about the Throne ſaid, That theſe Expreſſions ought to be taken Notice of. To which the ſame Member anſwered, That he heard it murmur'd about the Throne, that his Expreſ- ſions ought to be taken Notice of; but he defy'd any Body to take Notice of them; for they all knew too well, that what he had ſpoke was a certain Truth. It was again urged in Behalf of the Act, That upon further Enquiry it would be found, that the Trade with France was a Trade beneficial to the Nation, becauſe the French took Scotch Goods in return for their Wines: So that after a long and angry Debate, the Act was order'd to be mark'd a Firſt Reading.

Acts to ſettle the Succeſſion on the Houſe of Hanover.

The 6th of September had been appointed for private Buſineſs; but immediately after reading the Minutes, the Earl of Marchmont deſir'd Leave of the Houſe to withdraw an Act containing ſeveral Limitations upon the Succeſſor, which had been lately preſented by him, but had not yet been read. His Deſire being granted, as ſoon as his Lordſhip had withdrawn that Act, he begg'd Leave to preſent ano- ther in its Room, which he deſired might be read. This was, An Act to ſettle the Succeſſion on the Houſe of Hanover: And as his Lordſhip had not ſignified what the Import of it was, no body oppoſed his Motion for the Reading of it; but when the Clerk came to that Paragraph, where it ſubſtitutes the Princeſs Sophia, &c. no ſooner were thoſe Words out of his Mouth, but the whole Houſe was in a Flame. Some moved to have the Overture burnt; others to have the Marquis who offer'd it, call'd to the Bar, and others to have him ſent to the Caſtle: After the Houſe had ſhew'd a general Diſſatisfaction againſt the Thing; at Length the Chancellor pro- cur'd Silence, and the Clerk was ordered to read it through: And the Earl of Marchmont deſired it might be marked a Firſt Reading, and was ſeconded by the Marquis of Lothian, and another Member. But they were ſo warmly oppoſed, that there was not a Vote demanded; and the Earl of Marchmont propoſed only, that the Overture might be mark'd in the Minutes, expreſſing the Import of it; urging, That the Minutes ought always to record the Matter of Fact, as paſs'd in Parlia- ment. This was warmly oppoſed by a Member, who ſaid, That though it is both Cuſtomary and Proper, that every Thing which is moved in the Houſe, be marked in the Minutes; yet the Act now offer'd by the Earl of Marchmont, ought to be diſtinguiſh'd by ſome particular Mark of Indignation from this Houſe, ſeeing the Generality of the Mem- bers had ſufficiently ſhewn their Sentiments, in Relation to the Nomination of a Succeſſor, and had ſo frequently, in this Seſſion, declared it to be their Opinion, that the Nation was at preſent in a very improper State for nominating a Succeſſor the ſame with England: And therefore the beſt he could ſay in behalf of this moſt unſeaſonable Overture, was to move, that it might be buried in Oblivion, and not mark'd in the Minutes. Another Member ſaid, That he heard an Act offer'd, which ſeem'd to contain ſome Things inconſiſtent with the Act of Security, which had lately paſs'd the Vote of the Houſe; and it was not unlikely, that the Jealouſy which the Members had contracted, that this Act of Security was not to receive the Royal Aſſent, did prompt them to find out new Acts to ſupply it. That he did very plainly foreſee, that this would promote the Jealouſy which this Nation had already contracted againſt their Neighbours; And therefore he moved, that the Lord Chancellor might, as the Mouth of the Houſe, addreſs her Majeſty's Repreſentative to give the Royal Aſſent to that Act. A great many did ſecond this Motion: And the Earl of Marchmont ſtill inſiſting to have his Act marked in the Minutes, as a Privilege naturally due to all Overtures: The Queſtion was ſtated, Mark the Overture in the Minutes, Yea, or No? And it was carried in the Negative by Fifty Seven Votes.

Inſtances made in vain for obtaining the Royal Aſſent to the Act of Security.

On the 9th of September, it was repreſented by a Member, "That this Parliament had now ſat very long, and after a vaſt Expence of Money, Time and Pains, had at length paſs'd an Act for the Security of this Nation: And as it would be ſome Recompence to the Members, to ſee that Act receive the Royal Aſſent, ſo it would, no doubt, be very ſatisfactory to the Nation: And therefore he begg'd, that her Majeſty's Commiſſioner would give the Royal Aſſent to the Act." This was ſeconded by a great many Members, and at length a Motion was made, that the Houſe ſhould addreſs her Majeſty to give the Royal Aſſent. Againſt this it was urged, That the Parliament had already done their Part, by voting the Act, and what remained to be done, was the Queen's Part; and that there was no need for addreſſing, ſeeing it was notified to the Queen, that the Parliament had voted the Act. To this it was anſwer'd, "That though the Members had ſo far done their Duty, by voting this Act, yet it would ſeem that there was ſomewhat further incumbent upon them: That he did not doubt but that it was made known to her Majeſty by her Miniſtry, that this Act had paſs'd the Vote of the Houſe: But that every body knew very well, that Courtiers never fail to repreſent the Black-ſide of Things, and therefore he concurr'd in that Motion of ſeconding the former Vote of the Houſe, by a dutiful Addreſs to her Majeſty." After ſome further Debate, and ſeveral warm Speeches, it was repreſented by the Marquis of Tweedale, that it was ſomewhat too haſty to addreſs her Majeſty for her Aſſent, until the Houſe knew from the Commiſſioner, whether he was already inſtructed for that Purpoſe; and therefore he begg'd that the Commiſſioner would declare his Intentions. A great many Members did again ſecond this Motion, and preſs'd that the Commiſſioner would give the Houſe ſo much Satisfaction, as to let them know, whether or no, he was inſtructed to paſs this Act? But his Grace did not think fit to give any Anſwer in the Matter. Thereupon another Member ſaid, "That he had ſeldom ſeen any Benefit from Addreſſes, and for that reaſon he was very little concern'd, whether this Houſe did at preſent addreſs her Majeſty, or not: That he thought the Acts which the Houſe had voted, were but very ſlender Fences for the Security of the Nation: That the Nation's Caſe was deſperate, and the Proviſions muſt be ſuitable. That he found ſome People were too forward in promoting the Succeſſion of the Houſe of Hanover, and others that of the Prince of Wales: And that they were both contented to ſacrifice their own, and their Nation's Liberty, rather than not accompliſh their Deſigns. That he did conſider it as a very melancholy Proſpect for this Nation, that they were not to expect either of thoſe Two Succeſſors, but at the Rate of being Slaves, not to their Princes, but to their Neighbours; for ſuppoſing, that upon the one Hand this Nation ſhould ſubmit either willingly, or by Commiſſion, to the Succeſſor of England, without ſuch Conditions of Government within themſelves, as ſhould ſecure them againſt the ſole Influence of the Engliſh Miniſtry upon their joint Prince, in that Caſe they were no better than Slaves: Or if, on the other Hand, the Scotch ſhould force their Succeſſor upon the Engliſh, without ſecuring to themſelves the Conditions before-mention'd, they muſt ſtill reſolve to be under the ſame Dependance, when Conquerors, as when conquer'd. And therefore, that it was abſolutely neceſſary for them to ſettle ſuch Conditions of Government, as might place them in a reaſonable State of Freedom and Security, whoſoever might be the Succeſſor: And that to this Purpoſe he did offer an Act, which might anſwer thoſe Ends." The firſt Draught ran thus, Our Sovereign Lady, with Advice and Conſent of the Eſtates of Parliament, Statutes and Ordains, That after the Deceaſe of her Majeſty, (whom God long preſerve) and failing Heirs of her Body, no one ſhall ſucceed to the Crown of this Realm, that is likewiſe Succeſſor to the Crown of

A. D. 1703.

England, but under the Limitations following; which, together with the Coronation Oath, and Claim of Right, they ſhall ſwear to obſerve: That all Places and Offices, both Civil and Military, and all Penſions formeyly conferr'd by our Kings, ſhall ever after be given by Parliament: That a new Parliament ſhall be choſen every Michaelmas Headcourt, to ſit the 1ſt of November, thereafter, and adjourn themſelves from Time to Time, 'till next Michaelmas; and that they chuſe their own Preſident. That a Committee of Thirty Six Members, choſen by, and out of the whole Parliament, without Diſtinction of Eſtates, ſhall, during the Intervals of Parliament, under the King, have the Adminiſtration of the Government, be his Council, and accountable to Parliament; with Power, on extraordinary Occaſions, to call the Parliament together.

After the Act was read, the Member ſaid, " That he had not in this Act made " any Nomination of a Succeſſor, and it was his Opinion, that this Nation was not, " at preſent, in a Condition for ſuch a Nomination; but ſeeing there was a great " Zeal amongſt ſome, for promoting the Succeſſion of Hanover, and no leſs amongſt " others, for promoting that of the Prince of Wales; therefore, to ſatisfy both, he " had another Act ready to offer, but which he need not read, ſeeing it was the " very ſame with what was already offer'd in every Circumſtance, excepting only, " that it had a Blank in it, for nominating a Succeſſor. That he moved, that the " Members might go to work, and paſs this Act; and immediately after that, let " each Party try their Strength, and let the ſtrongeſt carry the Nomination, and fill " up the Blank, according to the Mind of the Plurality. That thus far he begg'd " Leave to declare his own Opinion, that he had rather concur in nominating the " moſt rigid Papiſt, with theſe Conditions of Government, than the trueſt Proteſtant with- " out them." This Motion was ſeconded by ſeveral Members; but others urged againſt it, That the Houſe was now in the middle of an Act of Trade, which ought to be finiſh'd before any other Buſineſs. After ſome Debate, and a great many new Inſtances to the Commiſſioner, to give the Royal Aſſent to the Act of Security, a Member ſaid, " That he found this Houſe was to get no Satisfaction from her Ma- " jeſty's Commiſſioner at this Time: And it ſeem'd the Nation was to expect as " little Good; and therefore, the next beſt Courſe was to prevent Damage as much " as was poſſible. That it was to be noted, that there were lately ſome Meetings " betwixt ſome Subjects of both Kingdoms, in which ſeveral Matters were agitated, " in Relation to an Union between the Two Nations: That he ſhould not deſcend " to an Enquiry into the Nature of the Powers, by Virtue of which, the Subjects " of Scotland did meet upon ſuch a Treaty. That thoſe Things might be ſpoke to in " due Time: But at preſent he humbly conceived, there were Two Things worthy " the Conſideration of this Houſe: The one was, that ſeeing ſuch a Treaty had " been enter'd upon by ſome of the Subjects of this Nation, it ſeem'd ſtrange that " nothing of that Sort had all this Seſſion of Parliament been laid before this " Houſe; and therefore he moved, that it be now laid before the Houſe, to be " conſidered by the Members. The other was, that ſeeing there were a great many " Things to be ſaid in Relation to that Treaty, which might be more ſeaſonably " taken Notice of at another Time, therefore he moved, that a Stop might be " put to any further Procedure in that Matter." This Motion was ſeconded by a great many Members: And after ſome Debate, there was a Motion made and acquieſced to, without a Vote, That the Progreſs and Advances made in the ſaid Treaty, might be laid before the Parliament next Sederunt, and declar'd by a Vote of Parliament, That the Commiſſion granted for the ſaid Treaty, was determin'd, and extinct: And that there ſhould be no new Commiſſion for treating of any Union betwixt the Kingdoms of Scotland and England, without Conſent of Parliament. After this was over, a great many Members preſs'd the Commiſſioner to give the Royal Aſſent to the Act of Security, but no Anſwer was made from the Throne: And at length a Member ſaid, that ſeeing ſo much had been ſaid without an Anſwer, it was better to leave the Commiſſioner to his Reflections; that perhaps he would be ready to comply againſt next Day: And that therefore he moved the Houſe ſhould proceed to finiſh the Wooll Act, which was accordingly gone upon, put to the Vote, and approved. The next Day * the Commiſſioner ſpoke as follows.

* Sept. 10.

My LORDS and GENTLEMEN,

The Commiſſioner's Speech to the Parliament.

" IT was with great Uneaſineſs to me, that I was forc'd to be ſilent yeſterday' " when ſo many did appear earneſt that I ſhould ſpeak. I have all the Inclina- " tion in the World to give you full Satisfaction; but I thought, that I ought not " to be preſs'd to give the Royal Aſſent, or to declare my Inſtructions in Parlia- " ment, which I had made known to many Noble and Worthy Members, beſides " the Queen's Servants.

" Now

" Now that theſe Inſtances are let fall, and that you have proceeded to other Buſineſs; to teſtify how willing I am to give you Contentment, in any Thing that " is in my Power; I tell you freely, that I have received her Majeſty's Pleaſure, " and am fully empower'd to give the Royal Aſſent to all the Acts voted in this " Seſſion, excepting only that Act, entitled, An Act for the Security of the Kingdom; " you may eaſily believe, that requires her Majeſty's further Conſideration. At " the ſame Time, her Majeſty expects you will mind your own Safety, in making " neceſſary Proviſions for the Troops upon the preſent Eſtabliſhment; and that you " will put the Trade and Cuſtoms on that Foot, that the Civil Liſt may be ſup- " ported: And I intreat your Lordſhips to finiſh theſe as quickly as poſſible, that this " Seſſion may be put to a ſpeedy and happy Concluſion. A. D. 1703.

Freſh Inſtances made for Paſſing the Act of Security.

The Commiſſioner having ended his Speech, a Member ſaid, " That had it been " ſpoke in the Beginning of the Seſſion, it might have ſav'd a great deal of Labour " and Expence; for this was plainly to tell the Parliament, That all their Buſi- " neſs was to raiſe a Subſidy for the Army, and Cuſtoms for the Civil Liſt; and " then the Seſſion ſhould be happily concluded by an Adjournment." Upon this, a great many Speeches enſued, and the former Day's Argument was reſum'd. It was urg'd, " That the Third Act of the Firſt Seſſion of the Firſt Parliament of King " Charles the IId, (which is the only Act upon which the Negative is founded) was " only made to obviate a Practice, which had been uſurp'd by the Eſtates in the " Time of the late Rebellion, of making Laws by their own Vote, and promul- " gating ſuch Votes, as having the Authority of Laws, without the Royal Aſſent: " And therefore, by the ſaid Act it is declar'd, That the Royal Aſſent is neceſſary and " eſſential, to give the Force of a Law to a Vote of the Houſe; but from thence it " could not be inferr'd, that the Aſſent could be refus'd to an Act offer'd, and ſo- " lemnly paſs'd the Houſe; and that, till of late, the Negative had never been " interpos'd, and that but in very few Caſes." After ſome Debate, a Motion was made to addreſs her Majeſty, That ſhe would be pleas'd to gratify the Houſe, in giving her Royal Aſſent to the Act: Againſt which it was urg'd, (as in the former Day) That the Houſe had already done their Part, by Voting the Act; and that her Majeſty's Servants had acquainted her Majeſty therewith." Thereupon a Member ſaid, " That he ſhould not enquire, whether or no the Prince can interpoſe the " Negative? He would allow that it might be interpos'd; and that if the Nation " had been ſo happy as to have had her Majeſty's Preſence upon that Throne, where " in Perſon ſhe might have ſeen the Deliberation and ſolemn Deportment of her " Grand Council, and might in Perſon have received their Advice; if ſhe had after- " wards refus'd the Royal Aſſent, the Houſe muſt have ſubmitted, and believ'd " that her Majeſty, in her Princely Wiſdom, had of Her ſelf made ſuch Obſer- " vations, as oblig'd her to exert her Prerogative of refuſing the Royal Aſſent. But " ſeeing her Majeſty was not preſent, the Parliament muſt impute her Majeſty's " Refuſal, not to the Reſult of her own Obſervation, but to the ſiniſter Inſinuati- " ons of a Handful of Men, who, after they were over-rul'd by the Reaſonings, " and over-power'd by the Votes of the Grand Council of a Scotch Nation here be- " low, had moſt baſely betray'd the Mind of their Nation above, by ſending their " Whiſpers to ſome deſigning Stateſmen of our Neighbouring Nation, to whom, it " was very well known, they were to give an Account of their Proceedings." Another Member added, That tho' ſome honeſt, well-meaning Men might, perhaps, have been offended at ſome Expreſſions us'd in the Beginning of this Seſſion, and at ſome Overture then made, as tending to leſſen her Majeſty's Prerogative and Honour, and as tending to break that good Underſtanding, which, above all Things, ought to be cultivated between the Two Nations: Yet he did now firmly perſuade himſelf, that ſeveral Paſſages, which had occurr'd in the Progreſs of this Parliament, and particularly, that one now before the Houſe, would entirely blow off all thoſe Prejudices, open the Eyes of ſuch honeſt Men amongſt his own Countrymen, and convince the moſt wilful amongſt his Neighbours, that ſo long as the Scotch Nation was in this unſtable, deſperate State, her Majeſty's Government ſhould be very uneaſy, and the mutual Peace of both Nations very uncertain. After ſome further Debate, the Queſtion was put, Addreſs, or proceed to other Buſineſs? and it was carry'd—— Proceed to other Buſineſs, by Twelve Voices. After this, Mr. Pringle, who had been Secretary to the Treaty of Union, was order'd to lay the Minutes of that Treaty before the Houſe, againſt their next Sitting.

On the 12th of September, it was mov'd, That ſeeing the Royal Aſſent had been refus'd to the Act of Security, therefore it was proper to go upon further Overtures, for the Security of the Nation upon the Event of the Queen's Demiſe. Againſt this it was urg'd, That the Houſe had concluded, by a late Reſolve, to go

A. D. 1703. go upon Overtures for Trade: To which it was anſwer'd, That this laſt Reſolve had been enter'd into, after the Act of Security had paſs'd the Vote of the Houſe, and whilſt it was not doubted that the Royal Aſſent would be given to it; but that now the Royal Aſſent being refus'd, the Houſe did naturally recur to the State of their firſt Grand Reſolve, enter'd into the 28th Day of May. To this it was again reply'd, That the Act of Security was now, indeed, laid aſide; but perhaps it might afterwards receive the Royal Aſſent, when her Majeſty had farther conſider'd of it: And that beſides this Act of Security, there were ſome other very valuable Acts paſs'd, in Conſequence of that Grand Reſolve; ſuch as the Act ſecuring Preſbyterian Government; the Act ratifying the Claim of Right, &c. To which Acts the Royal Aſſent was now promis'd by her Majeſty's Commiſſioner: And therefore it was now high Time to go upon ſome further Acts for Trade. After a long and warm Debate, the Queſtion being put, To proceed either upon the Act for Limitation, or upon Overtures for Trade? it was carry'd for the latter, by a Majority of Eleven Voices. This Vote being over, the Act for importing Wine was read; and the Queſtion for approving it being inſiſted on, the Marquis of Tweedale ſaid, That ſeeing no Arguments could prevail with ſome People to part with this ſcandalous and pernicious Act, he thought it was very proper, that all honeſt Men, who wiſh'd well to the Trade of their Country, and the Honour of their Queen, ſhould clear themſelves of the leaſt Aſſent to it: And therefore, before the Act went to the Vote, he enter'd a Proteſtation for himſelf, and in the Name of ſuch as ſhould adhere to it; That this Act, allowing the Importation of French Wines and Brandy, ought not to paſs, as being diſhonourable to her Majeſty, inconſiſtent with the Grand Alliance, wherein ſhe was engag'd, and prejudical to the Honour, Safety, Intereſt, and Trade of this Kingdom. He deſir'd that this Proteſtation might be mark'd, and inſerted in the Records of Parliament; and the ſame was adher'd to by Twenty Peers, Forty three Repreſentatives for Shires, and Twenty one Repreſentatives of Boroughs; and then the Clauſe being put to the Vote, it was carry'd in the Affirmative. The next * Day, a Clauſe was offer'd, That no Scotch Ships ſhould trade directly with France, now in Time of the War; but ſeveral Members objecting againſt it, the Act was carry'd by a Vote without it.

Act for Importation of French Wines carry'd.

* Sept. 14.

On the 15th of September, it was urg'd by a Member, "That this had been a very tedious and expenſive Seſſion of Parliament; that moſt Part of it had been employ'd in adjuſting the Act for the Security of this Nation, after her Majeſty's Deceaſe; that the Diligence and Zeal, with which the Generality of the Members did promote it, and the univerſal Satisfaction, with which all Ranks of People had ſince receiv'd it, were a ſufficient Teſtimony that it was entirely agreeable to the Scotch Intereſt; and ſuch Scotchmen as had a Hand in adviſing her Majeſty to refuſe the Royal Aſſent to it, might have heard a very ignominious, tho' deſerved Character, given them the other Day. That now ſeeing the Proviſions which were made for thoſe Ends, in this Act of Security, were now laid aſide with the Act, therefore it was high Time for this Houſe, to employ themſelves in making new Conditions. That there was an Act now lying upon the Table, offer'd by Mr. Fletcher, which he mov'd might be the Standard of future Deliberations, as that formerly offered by the Marquis of Athol, had been the Foundation of the Act of Security." This Motion being ſeconded by many Members, the Lord Treaſurer repreſented, That the Parliament had ſat a long Time, without providing Funds for the Army, which muſt of Neceſſity be ſupported, both for maintaining the Peace at Home, and for defending the Nation againſt Invaſions from Abroad: That there was an Act now upon the Table, which had been long before preſented for that Purpoſe: And he moved, that it might receive a firſt Reading. This was oppos'd by a Member, who ſaid, "That it ſeem'd very unſeaſonable to propoſe a Supply at this Time, when the Houſe had ſo much to do for the Security of the Nation: It being well known, that the Parliament ſhould have no Time allow'd them after the Supply was granted; tho', for his Part, he ſaw no body unwilling to go upon the Supply in due Time, yet he thought it was very little Encouragement for the Nation to grant a Supply, when they found themſelves fruſtrated of all their Labour and Expence for theſe ſeveral Months; and when the whole Nation ſaw that the Supplies ſerve for no other Uſe, but to gratify the Avarice of ſome inſatiable Miniſters." This occaſion'd a long Debate; and many warm Speeches were made, in behalf of Mr. Fletcher's Act in particular, and on the State of the Nation in general; and at length Mr. Fletcher ſpoke in behalf of his own Act, entring into the Detail of it. Among the many Arguments for promoting it, and the good Conſequences which would ariſe from it, he urg'd, "That it would ſave a great Sum, which was yearly expended by ſuch as went to Court, to look after Places: That this Sum might ſerve for a good Stock for

Mr. Fletcher of Salton's Speech.

"Trade,

A. D. 1703.

" Trade; that by this Act the Nation would be free from the Influence of Engliſh " Miniſters, by having their own Places beſtowed by a Scotch Parliament; that " ſuch an Eſtabliſhment would not turn the Form of the Scotch Government into a " Commonwealth; ſince there are Precedents of it, in ſome of the moſt abſolute " Monarchies in the World, particularly China, where all Offices are beſtow'd by " the Prince, upon Recommendation from his ſeveral Councils, in the ſeveral Parts " of his Kingdoms: Nor would the Prerogative be impair'd by it; for as to the " Prince's Concern, it was only changing Hands, betwixt the Advice of an Engliſh " Miniſtry, and that of a Scotch Parliament: That a Scotch Parliament muſt know " who are Perſons fit for the Service of their Prince, and Nation, better than " Engliſh Miniſters; who, through their being unacquainted with the Scotchmen, and " Scotch Affairs, might commit Miſtakes hurtful to both Nations: That the Engliſh " would be Gainers by this Act, as well as their Prince, ſince all the Advantage " they had by the preſent Eſtabliſhment, was to have the Vanity of directing " Scotch Affairs, by the Humour of a few of their own Miniſters, who (as appear'd " of late) had very much miſtaken the Intereſt of England, in ſome of the Dire- " ctions they gave relating to the Scotch Affairs: That by theſe Means Scotland was " impoveriſhed, and rendered incapable of giving that joint Aſſiſtance againſt the " common Enemy, which otherwiſe they might, if they were allow'd to manage " their own Trade and Buſineſs to the beſt Advantage: That theſe Difficulties muſt " certainly make the Nation uneaſy in their preſent Condition, and would certainly " diſpoſe them to lay hold on any Opportunity of amending their Conſtitution, tho' " to the Ruin of their Neighbours.

The Chancellor made an Anſwer to this Speech, repreſenting the Act as laying a Scheme for a Commonwealth, and tending to innovate the Conſtitution of the Monarchy: And then the Miniſtry offer'd a ſtate of a Vote, for giving a firſt Reading, either to Mr. Fletcher's Act, or to the Act of Subſidy? There were a great many of the Country-Party, who had no mind to go to the full Extent of Mr. Fletcher's Act, but were withal reſolved to go upon the Conſideration of Overtures for the Liberty of the Nation. Theſe urged another State of a Vote, viz. Overture for Subſidy, or Overtures for Liberty? But the Miniſtry preſs'd the firſt State of the Vote. " Thereupon Mr. Fletcher alledg'd, That he had the Honour to offer an Act for " ſecuring the Liberties of the Nation againſt Engliſh Influence: That it was his " Opinion, that the Condition of the Nation was ſo far gone into Ruin, that the " Proviſions in this Act were abſolutely neceſſary for its Relief: That he doubted " not to make this appear by Reaſons unanſwerable: But that he found ſome Peo- " ple very ready to pervert the Meaning of good Deſigns, and leſt any ſuch bad " Handle ſhould be made of an Overture, which he had ſincerely deſign'd for the " Good of his Country, he begg'd Leave to withdraw his Overture; adding, That " he ſhould be very ready to go into ſuch other Overtures, as the Wiſdom of the " Houſe ſhould judge moſt proper for the Honour and Safety of the Nation." Then the other State of the Vote was offered, viz. Overtures for Liberty, or Overtures for a Subſidy? Here the Miniſtry were at a Loſs, for they knew that Overtures for Liberty would be carry'd; and by Mr. Fletcher's withdrawing his Act, they were put to ſhift for another State of a Vote. This put them to a Conſultation about the Throne; during which Time the Members call'd from all Sides of the Houſe for a Vote upon the Queſtion, as ſtated, Liberty, or Subſidy? During this Time, a great many warm Expreſſions were thrown upon the Miniſtry, from People of all Ranks; And after ſome Time ſpent in this Manner, during which ſeveral uncertain and imperfect Overtures of differing States of Queſtions were made, the Commiſſioner moved from the Throne, That if the Houſe would agree to allow a Firſt Reading to the Subſidy-Act, he did promiſe, that it ſhould not be heard of for Three enſuing Sittings. To this a Member anſwer'd, " That he believed, that thoſe about the Throne did " not expect that this Overture would take in the Houſe; that the Import of it " was plainly this, that the Act for a Subſidy ſhould get a Firſt Reading now, then " the Houſe ſhould have Three ſhort Sittings for the Liberties of the Nation; and " the Fourth ſhould compleat the Subſidy; after which, the Houſe was ſure to be " adjourn'd: But that he was certain the Houſe was better acquainted with the " Artifices of the Miniſtry, than to be miſled by ſuch Overtures. Another Mem- ber urg'd, " That it was now plain, the Nation was to expect no other Return for their " Expence and Toil, than to be put to the Charge of a Subſidy, and to lay down their Necks " under the Yoke of Slavery, which was prepared for them from that Throne. A Third Member ſaid, " That he inſiſted for having a Vote upon the Queſtion which had " been put. That he found that as the Liberties of the Nation were ſuppreſs'd, ſo " the Privileges of Parliament were like to be torn from them; but that he would " rather venture his Life, than it ſhould be ſo; and ſhould chuſe rather to die a "Freeman, than live a Slave." Some preſs'd for the Vote, adding, * That if there was no other way of obtaining ſo natural and undeniable a Privilege of the Parliament, they would demand it with their Swords in their Hands. Whether or no the Commiſſioner had Information, that the Houſe would that Day ſtand ſtiffly to what they propoſed to be done, it is certain, that the Foot-Guards were order'd to be in Readineſs; and that for ſeveral Days before, a Grand Guard was ſet upon the Netherbow-Port: And Lieutenant-General Ramſay was heard to ſay, in his Cups, That Means would be found to make the Parliament calm enough. However, the Commiſſioner perceiving that he would be torn in Pieces, if he withſtood the formidable Oppoſition he ſaw againſt him, order'd the Chancellor to acquaint the Houſe, That it was yielded the Parliament ſhould proceed upon Overtures for Liberty next Seſſion: Upon which Aſſurance the Members met next Morning, in order to prepare an Overture for their Purpoſe, which was in Subſtance as follows: "That the Elective Members ſhould be cho-"ſen every Year, at the Michaelmas Head-Courts: That there ſhould be a Parlia-"ment held once in Two Years, at leaſt: That the ſhort Adjournments, de Die in "Diem, ſhould be made by the Parliament themſelves, as in England: That no Officer "of the Army, Cuſtoms, or Exciſe, or Gratuitous Penſioner, ſhould ſit as an Elective "Member." If ſuch an Act had receiv'd the Royal Aſſent, the Country Party had reſolved to have concurr'd in giving a Supply; but the Commiſſioner was not inſtructed to purchaſe it at that Rate; and having Notice of what paſs'd, he call'd for ſuch Acts as he was empower'd to paſs, and gave the Royal Aſſent to the following: 1. Act for ſecuring the true Proteſtant Religion, and Preſbyterian Government. 2. Act ratifying the turning the Meeting of Eſtates into a Parliament. 3. Act anent Leeſing-Makers and Slanderers. 4. Act anent Peace and War. 5. Act anent the Publick Accounts. 6. Act in Favour of the Company Trading to Africa and the Indies. 7. Act diſcharging the Importation of Iriſh Victual. 8. Act continuing the Prohibition of exporting Engliſh and Iriſh Wooll, till next Seſſion of Parliament. 9. Act allowing the Importation of Wines, and other Foreign Liquors: And ſome private Acts. After which his Grace made a Speech to the Parliament, as follows:

Acts paſs'd, Sept. 16.

My LORDS and GENTLEMEN,

The Lord Commiſſioner's Speech.

"WE have now paſs'd ſeveral good Acts for our Religion, Liberty, and "Trade, which I hope will be acceptable to all her Majeſty's good Sub-"jects; I wiſh you had alſo given the Supplies neceſſary for the maintaining of "her Majeſty's Forces, and preſerving the Peace and Safety of the Kingdom; but "ſince I hope this may be yet done in due Time; and that beſides, ſome Queſti-"ons and Difficulties are fallen, that, in all Probability, you can have no Time to "determine; and that withal, it is fit her Majeſty ſhould have Time to conſider "upon ſome Things that have been laid before her; and that we may know her "Mind therein more perfectly, a ſhort Receſs appears at preſent to be neceſſary, "and that this Parliament be adjourned for ſome Time: And therefore I have or-"der'd my Lord Chancellor to adjourn this Parliament until the Twelfth Day of "October next: Which the Lord Chancellor did accordingly. Thus ended this remarkable Seſſion of the Scotch Parliament; which, according to an eminent Scotch † Writer, "Did more for redreſſing the Grievances, and reſtoring the Li-"berties of that Nation, than all the Parliaments ſince the Year 1660. Nor could "it be thought ſtrange, that Scotchmen were enraged to ſee the Engliſh, their inveterate Enemies, have ſuch Influence over all their Affairs, that the Royal Aſſent "was either granted or refuſed, as the Engliſh Miniſters thought proper; and, in "ſhort, all Scotch Affairs managed and determined by them, with regard only to "the Intereſt of England. Theſe Conſiderations embolden'd a great many Mem-"bers to inveigh with great Warmth, and in an unprecedented Manner againſt the "Scotch Miniſtry;" and among theſe zealous Patriots, none diſtinguiſh'd himſelf ſo much, as Andrew Fletcher of Salton. Soon after the Parliament was adjourn'd, the Queen beſtow'd ſeveral Titles of Honour on ſuch Members as had either ſerved her in the laſt, or were inclinable to ſerve her in a future Seſſion. The Marquis of Douglas, (though under Age) and the Marquis of Athol, were made Dukes; the Viſcounts of Stair and Roſeberry, were created Earls of the ſame Name; the Viſcounts of Tarbat, Earl of Cromarty; the Lord Boyle, Earl of Glaſcow; James Stuart of Bute, Earl of Bute; Charles Hope of Hopeton, Earl of Hopeton; John Cranford of Kilbirnce, Viſcount of Garnock; and Sir James Primroſe of Carrington, Viſcount of Primroſe.

The Parliament adjourn'd.

this laſt Kingdom, having review'd the ſeveral Gariſons, and being return'd to Dublin, was, with his Dutcheſs, entertain'd * by the Lord-Mayor, Sheriffs, and Commons, at the Tholſel, in the moſt reſpectful and diſtinguiſhing Manner, in regard as well to his Perſon and Character, as to the many ſignal Favours that City had receiv'd from his Grace's Anceſtors. About Five Weeks after, the Parliament being † met, his Grace made a Speech to both Houſes, importing in Subſtance, "That what her "Majeſty expected from the Commons at this Time, was only that the publick "Debts be diſcharged, and the Revenue made equal to the Expence of the Govern- "ment, which was much increaſed by the Charge of the Barracks: And they were "found ſo uſeful, and ſo great an Eaſe to the Country, that they ought not to be "neglected. Aſſuring both Houſes, That ſince the Queen had done him the Ho- "nour to place him in that Station, as his Duty and Gratitude obliged him to ſerve "her Majeſty with the utmoſt Diligence and Fidelity, ſo his Inclination and In- "tereſt, and the Examples of his Anceſtors, were indiſpenſable Obligations upon "him to improve every Opportunity, to the Advantage and Proſperity of this his "native Country. Concluding, that ſince he had no other Deſign, than what they "all aim'd at, the Queen's Service, and the Good of their Country, he only re- "commended to them, that they might unite and agree in the ſame Meaſures, and "purſue them with Wiſdom and Temper." The Commons being return'd to their Houſe, made Choice of Allen Broderick, Eſq; the Queen's Sollicitor-General, to be their Speaker, who was preſented and approved on the 24th; and the firſt Thing both Houſes went upon, was the framing and preſenting dutiful and affectionate Addreſſes, both to the Queen, and to the Lord Lieutenant: And the Lords wrote alſo a Letter to the Queen, returning her Majeſty their Thanks, for her happy Choice of James Duke of Ormond, to be her Lieutenant, and Chief Governor over that Kingdom: To all which Compliments, the Queen, and Lord Lieutenant, return'd very gracious Anſwers.

† Sept. 21. The Duke of Ormond's Speech to them.

Allen Broderick, Eſq; choſen Speaker.

On the 9th of October, a Petition was preſented to the Houſe of Commons, in behalf of the Governor and Company for making hollow Sword-Blades in England, ſetting forth, "That the ſaid Governor and Company had propoſed to lend Money "at Intereſt, at Six per Cent. per Annum, upon Security of Lands in Ireland, pro- "vided they might be indemnified therein from the Statutes of Mortmain; and "praying that Heads of a Bill might be brought in, for enabling them to take Con- "veyances of Lands in Ireland:" Which Petition was read, and order'd to lye on the Table, to be conſider'd by the Members. The 11th, Mr. Moleſworth reported from the Committee of the whole Houſe, appointed to take into Conſideration the State of the Nation, that they had come to a Reſolution, which was agreed to by the Houſe, viz. That an humble Repreſentation be made to her Majeſty, ſetting forth the preſent diſtreſſed Condition of this Kingdom. He reported alſo ſeveral other Reſolutions, as Heads of the ſaid Repreſentation, which being agreed to, a Committee was appointed to prepare, and bring it in. The ſame Day Mr. Aſgill, a Member of the Houſe, was heard in his Place, upon an Information, that he was Author of a Book, Entituled, An Argument, proving, that according to the Covenant of eternal Life revealed in the Scriptures, Man may be tranſlated from hence into Eternal Life, without paſſing through Death; although the human Nature of Chriſt himſelf could not be thus tranſlated, till he paſs'd through Death. Several Witneſſes were examin'd touching that Matter; and the Houſe having heard what Mr. Aſgill could ſay in his own Juſtification, he withdrew; and then it was unanimouſly reſolv'd, That it appear'd to the Houſe, that John Aſgill, Eſq; a Member of this Houſe, is Author of the ſaid Book. Reſolved alſo, That he be expell'd the Houſe; and for ever hereafter incapable of being choſen, return'd, or ſitting Member in any ſucceeding Parliament in this Kingdom. The 13th, the Houſe took into further Conſideration the Lord Lieutenant's Speech, and the Supply to be granted to her Majeſty; and came to ſeveral Reſolutions, which were order'd to be reported the next Day. The 14th, the Houſe order'd Major Clayton to carry the Heads of a Bill, "to make it High-Treaſon in this Kingdom, by "Word or Writing, to impeach the Succeſſion of the Crown, as limited by ſeveral Acts "of Parliament, to his Grace the Lord Lieutenant, and deſire the ſame might "be tranſmitted into England in due Form. Mr. Ludlow reported the Reſolutions taken the Day before, in a Committee of the whole Houſe on the Supply, which were unanimouſly agreed to by the Houſe; viz. "That the Funds formerly granted "by Parliament, and the Revenue of the Kingdom, were ſufficient to ſupport the "Government, and diſcharge the Publick Debts, due to and for Michaelmas, 1703. "That the Supply to be granted to her Majeſty, be a Sum ſufficient to make up the "Deficiency of the Revenue, to ſupport the neceſſary Branches of the Eſtabliſh- "ment for Two Years, ending at Michaelmas, 1705." The Houſe return'd Thanks to the Committee appointed to inſpect and examine the Publick Accounts of the Nation, for their Care, and faithful and diligent Diſcharge of the Truſt repos'd in them, whereby they had ſav'd the Kingdom the Sum of 103,368 l. 8 s. 4 d. which (by Miſrepreſentation) was charged as a Debt upon the Nation; and the ſaid Committee was order'd to examine, and report to the Houſe, what Perſons had been concern'd in making a Repreſentation, that the ſaid Sum, over and above the Funds formerly granted by Parliament, and the Revenue of the Kingdom, was neceſſary to ſupport the Government, and diſcharge the Publick Debts, to and for Michaelmas 1703. Two Days after, the Lord Lieutenant came to the Houſe of Lords, and gave the Royal Aſſent to Three Acts; The firſt, for an additional Duty of Exciſe upon Beer, Ale, and other Liquors; the Second, for Encouraging the Importation of Iron and Staves; and the Third, to prevent Popiſh Prieſts coming into that Kingdom: And on the 18th, his Grace having appointed the Commons to attend him in the Caſtle, he acquainted them with her Majeſty's moſt gracious Anſwer to their laſt Addreſs; which was, That her Majeſty was extreamly pleas'd with the Aſſurance they gave her of their Duty to her, and of their Affection and due Regard to the Crown of England: That they ſhould find by her Readineſs to advance the Good of that Kingdom, that ſhe had receiv'd no ill Impreſſion of them; and did not doubt but they would, upon all Occaſions, ſhew ſuch Reſpect to her, as to deſerve the Continuance of her Majeſty's Favour to them; and ſhould therefore give ſuch Diſpatch to the Publick Affairs, as the Condition of that Kingdom requir'd.

Acts paſs'd, October 16.

Not many Days * after, the Commons preſented to the Lord Lieutenant a Repreſentation, to be deliver'd to her Majeſty; the Subſtance of which was, "That "whereas her Majeſty's Royal Predeceſſors, of bleſſed Memory, had always had "the Glory of being Kings and Queens of a Free People, diſtinguiſh'd from the reſt "of Europe by the eminent Privilege of being govern'd by their own Laws, and of "enjoying Liberties under the Dominion of a Sovereign Prince, according to the "moſt equal and juſt Model of Government that ever was fram'd; yet the Con"ſtitution of that Kingdom of Ireland had been of late greatly ſhaken, the Lives, "Liberties and Eſtates of the Subjects thereof, being call'd in Queſtion, and try'd "in a Manner unknown to their Anceſtors. That when they conſider'd the "Charge which the Subjects of that Kingdom had been unneceſſarily put to, by "the late † Truſtees, in defending ſuch their juſt Rights and Titles, as had, af"ter many and expenſive Delays, been allow'd by the ſaid Truſtees, had exceed"ed in Value the Current Caſh of that Kingdom; they had but too great Rea"ſon to believe, that this had been principally occaſion'd thro' falſe and mali"cious Reports and Miſrepreſentations, made of the Proteſtants of that Kingdom, "by deſigning and ill-meaning Men, in order to create a Miſunderſtanding be"tween England and Ireland, and to promote beneficial Employments for them"ſelves: For altho' her Majeſty had been graciouſly pleas'd to aſſure them, that "nothing of that kind had made any Impreſſion on her Majeſty, to their Pre"judice, yet they were very ſenſible that that Nation had exceedingly ſuffer'd "thereby, in the Opinion of England. That they could not, without the great"eſt Grief of Heart, reflect upon the great Decay and Loſs of their Trade: That "that Kingdom being almoſt exhauſted of its Caſh, they hinder'd from earning "their Livelihood, and from maintaining their own Manufactories, their Poor were "thereby become very numerous; eſpecially the induſtrious Proteſtants, who, in a "Country wherein the Number and Power of the Papiſts is very formidable, ought, "as they humbly conceiv'd, to be encourag'd. That very many Proteſtant Fami"lies had been conſtrain'd to remove out of that Kingdom, as well into Scotland, "as to the Dominions of Foreign Princes and States: That their Foreign Trade, "and its Returns, were under ſuch Reſtrictions and Diſcouragements, as now to "become in a manner unprofitable; altho' that Kingdom had, of late, by its Blood "and Treaſure, contributed to ſave the Plantation-Trade to the People of England. "That the want of holding frequent Parliaments in Ireland, had been a great "Encouragement to evil-minded Men, who intended nothing but their own Gain, "tho' accompanied with the Ruin and Oppreſſion of her Majeſty's good Subjects. "That many Civil Officers were arriv'd at ſuch a Pitch of Corruption, thro' "Hopes of Impunity, as was almoſt inſupportable; thereby getting vaſt Eſtates in "a ſhort Time, in a poor Country: That others, in inconſiderable Employments, "did dwell and reſide for the moſt part out of the Kingdom; thereby neglect"ing the perſonal Attendance on their Duties, whilſt, in the mean Time, their "Offices (which, in effect, were made mere Sine-Cures) were but indifferently exe"cuted, to the great Detriment of her Majeſty's good Subjects, and the great "Failure of Juſtice: So that they were fully convinc'd, that nothing but frequent "Parliaments, with Permiſſion for them to ſit, and do the Buſineſs of the Nation,

On the 25th of October, Mr. Southwell, Secretary of State, acquainted the Houſe of Commons, That their Repreſentation was a Matter of the higheſt Conſequence; and that his Grace would take ſuch Care of it, as might moſt conduce to the Service of the Nation.

The ſame Day, the Commons voted ſeveral Penſions, amounting to Seventeen Thouſand Six Hundred Thirty Four Pounds, Seventeen Shillings, per Annum, to be unneceſſary Branches of the Eſtabliſhment; and order'd, That an Account be given to the Houſe, when, and which of the Half-Pay Officers had been provided for, and how they had been diſpoſed of: And reſolv'd, That Three Addreſſes be made to the Lord Lieutenant, one, " That the Half-Pay Officers formerly ſtruck off, be pro" vided for: Another, That all Judges, Commiſſioners of the Revenues, and others,
" having Offices in that Kingdom, that require perſonal Attendance, be oblig'd to " attend, or be remov'd: And the Third, That effectual Care be taken, that the " Barracks in that Kingdom might, for the future, be maintain'd at eaſy and rea-
" ſonable Rates, ſo as the Undertakers might have no unreaſonable Salaries, and " Prices for the ſame." The next Day they granted One Hundred and Fifty Thouſand Pounds to her Majeſty, to make good the Deficiency of the neceſſary Branches of the Eſtabliſhment, for the Support of the Government for Two Years, commencing at Michaelmas 1703: And the following Days proceeded on Ways and Means to raiſe the ſame. The 30th of October, they finiſh'd the Heads of a Bill, for ſecuring the Liberty of the Subject, and for Prevention of Impriſonment beyond the Seas: And order'd the ſaid Heads of a Bill to be carried to the Lord Lieutenant, to be tranſmitted into England. On the 3d of November, the Houſe being reminded, that the next Day was the Birth-Day of the late King William, of Glorious Memory, their Deliverer from Popery and Slavery, and that the Fifth was the Commemoration for the Diſcovery of the Gun-Powder Treaſon; they thereupon adjourn'd to the 6th of the ſame Month. Upon the 8th, the Commons went thro' the Heads of a Bill, for Naturalizing all Proteſtant Strangers, and order'd the ſame to be carry'd to the Lord Lieutenant, to be tranſmitted into England. A Fortnight * after, the Houſe of Commons, with their Speaker, attended his Grace, and preſented to him Heads of a Bill, to prevent the further Growth of Popery; and alſo Heads of another Bill, to encourage the Linnen-Manufacture of that Kingdom; with an Addreſs of the Commons to her Majeſty. On this Occaſion, the Speaker made a Speech to the Lord Lieutenant, importing, " That they look'd on the firſt of theſe Two Bills to be of ſuch Im" portance to their future Well-being, that they had begg'd Leave to attend his " Grace in a Body with it, and not ſent it, as in Caſes of leſs Weight is uſual,
" by particular Members: That the Oppoſition conſtantly made in England by the " Papiſts of Ireland, againſt whatever might tend to the Security of her Majeſty's
" Proteſtant Subjects, induc'd the Commons to lay theſe Heads of a Bill in this ſo-
" lemn manner before his Grace. That they thought it now more particularly " neceſſary; being well inform'd, and fully convinc'd, that great Sums of Money
" had been lately rais'd among them, to oppoſe the Paſſing of a Bill of this Na" ture in England: Yet they doubted not, but the Weight of the Thing, and Ju-

Bill to prevent the Growth of Popery.

The Speaker's Speech to the L^d Lieutenant thereupon.

A. D. 1703.

" Grace, that all Obſtacles would be ſurmounted, and an Opportunity given them " of aſſenting to the paſſing into Law, what they conceiv'd would be the great- " eſt Security to the Proteſtant Religion and Intereſt there. That they had alſo " fram'd, and agreed to Heads of a Bill, for the Improvement of the Linnen Manu- " facture ; which they conceiv'd might, in Time, become uſeful to that Kingdom, if " Liberty ſhould be given them to tranſport the Linnen Manufacture thereof di- " rectly to the Plantations ; but would otherwiſe be deſtructive to the ſame. That " to obtain ſuch Liberty, they had fram'd an humble Addreſs to her Majeſty, and " rely'd on her great Goodneſs to, and Care of her diſtreſs'd People of that King- " dom, That her Majeſty would be pleas'd graciouſly to interpoſe in their Favour, " with the Parliament of England, that ſuch Freedom might be allow'd them, as " one of the Encouragements they had been induc'd to believe they ſhould have, on " their going into the Linnen Trade, by the Addreſs of the Lords and Commons " of England : Which Addreſs they pray'd his Grace to lay before her Majeſty." Thereupon the Lord Lieutenant aſſur'd them, That he would take care to tranſmit theſe Two Bills, which were ſo much for the Intereſt of the Nation, and recommend them in the moſt effectual manner, according to their Deſire ; and do all that was in his Power, to prevent the Growth of Popery. Three Days * after, the Commons voted a Book, printed and publiſh'd by Brocas and Maloane, entitled, The Memoirs of the late King James the Second, &c. ſeditious ; and order'd it to be burnt by the Hands of the common Hangman, at the 'Change, and before the Parliament-Houſe. They alſo or- der'd, That Brocas the Printer, Maloane the Bookſeller, and one Euſtace who brought the ſaid Memoirs of King James from England, and gave them to Maloane to print, be proſecuted by the Attorney-General. 'Tis obſervable, that when the Motion was made for burning the Book, and proſecuting the Printer, a Member ſet forth the great Danger the Proteſtants were in, in ſome Parts of Ireland, particularly in the County of Limerick, where the Iriſh were beginning to form themſelves in- to Bodies, and to plunder the Proteſtants of their Arms and Money ; adding, That the diſaffected here held a Correſpondence with thoſe in England, and were not out of Hopes of reſtoring the pretended Prince of Wales. Whereupon the Houſe re- ſolv'd, " That it appear'd to them, that the Papiſts of that Kingdom ſtill retain'd " Hopes of the Coming in of the Perſon who went by the Name of the Prince of " Wales in the Life of the late King James, and now by the Name of James the " Third." But the ſame Day, Mr. Secretary Southwell, by Command of his Grace the Lord Lieutenant, acquainted the Houſe, That it was his Grace's Pleaſure, that they ſhould adjourn till the 11th of January next : Which was accordingly done. And this ſudden Adjournment, when the Houſe was on a hot Scent againſt Po- pery, afforded Matter of ſiniſter Reflections againſt the Lord Lieutenant.

Motions of the Confede- rate Fleet, un- der Admiral Shovel.

Let's now attend the Operations of War. On the 1ſt of July, Sir Cloudeſly Shovel ſail'd from St. Helen's, with the Engliſh and Dutch Squadrons ; the firſt conſiſting of Thirty five Capital Ships, under the Command of the Admiral, of John Leake Eſq; Vice-Admiral of the Blue, Sir Stafford Fairborne Vice-Admiral of the Red, and George Byng, Eſq; Rear-Admiral of the Red. The Dutch had Three Flags, and Four- teen Men of War, commanded by Admiral Allemond. Each Squadron was attended with a proper Number of Fireſhips, Bomb-Ketches, and Tenders ; and both had a great many outward-bound Merchant-Ships under their Convoy. On the 5th, they were, by contrary Winds, forc'd into Torbay ; from whence ſailing again on the 8th for Liſbon, they reach'd Caſcais the 24th, and, by their Appearance, diſpell'd the Apprehenſions the Portugueze were under of being inſulted by a French Squadron, which was reported to be deſign'd againſt them. Sir Stafford Fairborne, whom the Admiral ſent to Liſbon, with Compliments to his Portugueze Majeſty, and to the Queen Dowager of England, was receiv'd with all imaginable Marks of Reſpect and Eſteem ; and the Fleet having water'd, brought in Wines, and freſh Proviſions, ſail'd from Caſcais the 31ſt of July, anchor'd the 9th of Auguſt in Tangier Road ; ſail'd again from thence the 12th, and, with a Weſterly Wind, got thro' the Streights that Night : But the Levant Winds blowing afterwards pretty freſh, the Fleet made but little Way ; and, beginning to want Water, ſtretch'd from Cape de Gat to Cape Hony in Barbary, to get ſome Water there. Thereupon the Admiral ſent a Boat with a Flag of Truce, to acquaint the Moors with his Deſign ; but the Bar- barians anſwer'd that Civility with Muſket-ſhot, kill'd one of the Boat's Crew, and mortally wounded the Lieutenant of the Tartar, who commanded the Boat, and died Two Days after. The want of Water increaſing daily, and many Men dying thro' exceſſive Heat, which the Calms they had from Time to Time render'd the more intolerable, a Council of War was held on the 29th, aboard the Triumph, to conſider of the moſt proper Place to put into. Some propos'd Cagliari in Sardinia ; and others Altea, on the Coaſt of the Kingdom of Valencia, in Spain ; which laſt Place being reſolv'd upon, they made Uſe of the little Wind they had to get into it. The Eagle, commanded by the Lord Archibald Hamilton, and the Hampton-Court, were ſent before; but the Governor fired upon them, with Two Guns planted on a Tower, which, however, were ſoon ſilenced, and diſmounted, by the Shots from thoſe Two Ships. Mean Time, the whole Fleet came in Sight of the Place on the 31ſt of Auguſt, about Two in the Afternoon, and the Flamborough was ſent cloſe to the Shore, to cover the Deſcent of the Regiments of Marines, who, to the Number of Two Thouſand Five Hundred Men, landed, without any manner of Confuſion, and were actually drawn up in Battalia upon the Shore, before half the Fleet was come to their Anchors. Brigadier-General Seymour landed with the firſt Detachment, and gave ſuch Orders, that never a more regular Deſcent was made in an Enemy's Country. The Land Forces being thus got on Shore undiſturb'd, form'd a Camp near the Place; and a Meſſage was ſent to the Governor, that they did not come as Enemies, but Friends: To which he made Anſwer, That he had a great Eſteem for the Engliſh; but, however, he was ſorry he was not in a Condition to oppoſe their Landing: That he would write to the Viceroy of Valentia, and if his Orders were ſuch, the Admiral muſt not take it ill, if he ſhould fire upon his Men. At the ſame Time, the Admirals Shovel and Allemond, cauſed, in their Names, a ſhort Manifeſto to be publiſh'd, and diſpers'd among the Spaniards, containing in Subſtance, "That purſu- "ant to the Orders of her Majeſty of Great Britain, and the States-General, they "did not deſign to give the leaſt Diſturbance to the good Subjects of Spain, but to "protect ſuch of them, who, remembring their ancient Obligations to the Houſe "of Auſtria, ſhould ſwear Allegiance to their lawful Monarch, the Arch-Duke "Charles, and endeavour to throw off the Yoke of France. And as they would "give their Aſſiſtance to thoſe of the Spaniſh Nation, that ſhould regard their Du- "ty, and true Intereſt, ſo they would deſtroy the Perſons, Houſes and Goods of "ſuch, as ſhould oppoſe the Efforts which ſhould be made for the Deliverance of "that Valiant and Glorious Nation of Spain, from the Tyranny and Oppreſſion "of France. This Manifeſto had that good Effect, that the Spaniards, ſeeing no Injury was offer'd them, brought Plenty of all Refreſhments, and Proviſions, which were paid them in ready Money. They profeſs'd a great Hatred to the French, appeared very well diſpos'd for the Houſe of Auſtria, and drank to the Proſperity of the Arch-Duke. The Ships being provided with Water and Proviſions, the Marines return'd on Board the 3d of September in the Afternoon, and the ſame Evening the whole Fleet ſail'd for Leghorn: Where they arriv'd on the 19th. Ten Days before, Captain Jumper, with the Lenox, Ipſwich, Hampſhire, and Dover, ſail'd off of Fermontera, with the Turkey Fleet under his Convoy. A. D. 1703.

About this Time, the Inſurrection of the Proteſtants in the Cevennes, a mountainous Country in the South Part of France, made a great Noiſe. Three Parts in Four of the Inhabitants of that Country profeſs'd the Reformed Religion, before the general Perſecution in the Year 1685, to the Violence of which they were forc'd to yield; but moſt of them had ſince thrown off the Yoke of Popery, and re-embrac'd their ancient Faith, by Means of ſome zealous Miniſters; who, notwithſtanding the Danger to which they expos'd themſelves, had conſtantly preach'd amongſt them. Their Numbers, and the advantageous Situation of their Country, giving the Court of France more Jealouſy than of all the other Proteſtants in the Kingdom, Care was taken to curb and oppreſs them, more than any of the reſt; and by continual Vexations, to put it out of their Power to recover their Liberty. The Sieur Baſville, Intendant of Languedoc, and the Sieur Broglio, Commander of the Troops in that Province, left no Means untry'd to ruin them, by their Extortions, and Military Executions. The poor Proteſtants aſſembling often in the Woods, to perform their Religious Exerciſes, thoſe Two Perſecutors poſted Troops in ſeveral Places, with Orders, without Pity or Diſtinction, to fire upon all ſuch as they ſhould find in theſe Aſſemblies, and whom they could not ſeize, to burn their Houſes: By which Means a great Part of the Cevennois were utterly ruin'd, and whole Villages laid in Rubbiſh. The Abbot of Cheila, who made his Reſidence among the Cevennois, either to gratify his inhumane Temper, or to curry Favour with the Intendant, exerciſed ſtill greater Severities upon the Proteſtants; cauſing ſuch Men to be emaſculated, as were accus'd of having aſſiſted at the Religious Aſſemblies. It happen'd about the Month of June, in the Year 1702, that that infamous Prieſt having committed to Priſon one of thoſe innocent Proteſtants, whom he deſtin'd to that horid Execution, about Forty Young Men, Friends to the Priſoner, took up Arms, in order to reſcue him; and accordingly forc'd open the Priſon, deliver'd their Comrade, ſeiz'd on the Abbot, inflicted on him the Puniſhment he deſign'd for the other, and afterwards ſacrific'd him to their juſt Revenge, that he might no more commit ſuch helliſh Barbarities. This Inſurrection of the Proteſtants in the Cevennes.

A. D. 1703.

This done, they form'd a Deſign of greater Importance; and going through the Towns and Villages, brandiſhing their naked Swords, cry'd out, Liberty, Liberty; and in a little Time drew a great many other young Men after them, and form'd a Body of Three or Four Hundred Men. The Intendant being inform'd of what had befallen the Abbot of Cheila, did immediately ſend Orders for the ſeizing of the Rioters; but the Troops that were commanded upon this Service, meeting with Oppoſition, the Intendant thought this a favourable Opportunity to enrich himſelf, by pocketting the Pay of the Troops, and quartering them at Diſcretion, upon the Villages where the Murder had been committed; and to play his Game the longer, neglected to acquaint the French Court with this Inſurrection. The Diſcontented having by this Means gain'd Time to ſtrengthen themſelves, increas'd to the Number of Two Thouſand, who divided into Four Bodies, and became ſo formidable, that they began to make Excurſions into the Plain, burn Churches, and put to the Sword the Popiſh Prieſts, and all their former Perſecutors, leaving the reſt unmoleſted. Thereupon the Court of France diſpatch'd the Sieur Julian, a Man infamouſly known, by his Apoſtacy from the Proteſtant Religion, with Eight Regiments, to reduce the Malecontents; but theſe Forces not being able to ſtem a Torrent that gather'd Strength every Day, Mareſchal de Montrevel was ſent into Languedoc with Ten or Twelve Thouſand Diſciplin'd Men, and Directions to uſe all the Methods he ſhould think moſt effectual to reduce the Diſcontented. Montrevel had not been long in Languedoc, before he publiſh'd a Declaration, whereby, "He "committed all Prieſts, Eccleſiaſticks, and the Churches, to the Care of the new "Converts, and Communities; and declar'd, that if any Accident ſhould befal "them, the Communities ſhould be reſponſible for them, and that they ſhould be "burnt, and entirely deſtroy'd." This unpolitick Declaration, together with ſeveral unheard-of Cruelties exerciſed by that Commander, exaſperated the Malecontents, and vaſtly increas'd their Numbers, inſomuch that the French King's Troops, after having been ſeveral Times defeated in the Field, were oblig'd to keep within the walled Towns. The repeated Imformations of the Progreſs of the Cevennois, made the Sovereigns in Alliance againſt France, attentive to that Inſurrection; and the general Concern the Engliſh Nation expreſs'd, for a People that fought for the Proteſtant Cauſe, together with the Sollicitations of the Marquis de Miremont, and other illuſtrious French Refugees in their Favour, mov'd her Majeſty, and her Royal Conſort, Prince George, to propoſe the relieving of them in Council. The Earl of Nottingham repreſented the dangerous Conſequence of aſſiſting Rebels againſt their Natural Prince; but nevertheleſs, the Reſult of ſeveral Conſultations was, That ſince all ways to relieve the Cevennois were ſhut up by Land, the Fleet that was to go into the Mediterranean, under the Command of Admiral Shovel, ſhould endeavour to carry them a Supply of Arms, Ammunition and Money: Which Reſolution was no ſooner known, than univerſally applauded. And indeed, though it be neither lawful nor ſafe for Princes to encourage Inſurrections in one another's Dominions, yet this Maxim cannot take Place in Time of War, when any way, whereby we may annoy an Enemy, is allowable; nor, in particular, in regard to the French King, who, at this very Juncture, had arm'd part of the Empire, againſt the Empire it ſelf, and countenanced a Deſign of an Inſurrection in Scotland, and other ill Practices in England; which, in the Month of May, were diſcover'd, by the ſeizing, in Kent, of Two or Three Perſons coming from France, and having about them ſeveral Letters directed to Papiſts and diſaffected Perſons.

The Court of England reſolves to aſſiſt them.

The better to ſucceed in the Enterprize of relieving the Cevennois, who were alſo call'd Camiſars, ſeveral French Refugees were by Land ſent into France, to acquaint them, both with the Queen's good Intentions, and with the Signals that the Engliſh Ships would make, that they might anſwer them by other Signals, and concur in the Endeavours that ſhould be uſed towards their Relief: The only Perſon who had the good Fortune either to penetrate into, or return from the Cevennes, was Mr. David Flotard, who was ſent by the Marquis de Miremont; the others were taken at the Paſſage of Pont St. Eſprit, and either broke alive upon the Wheel, or made Galley-Slaves. Beſides the Perſons ſent by Land to the Cevennois, there were Three other French Refugees, viz. Mr. Portales, Captain La Billiere, and Mr. Tempié, commiſſioned to go on Board the Engliſh Fleet, to aſſiſt in this Undertaking, and be Witneſſes of all that paſs'd. The Firſt of theſe Gentlemen being ſent for to the Council of War, of all the Engliſh and Dutch Flag-Officers, held on Board the Triumph, on the 29th of Auguſt; wherein, among other Things, it was debated, how to put that Enterprize in Execution: Sir Cloudeſly Shovel told him, That the Seaſon being ſo far advanc'd, and the Gulphs of Narbonne and Lyons ſo dangerous, they did not think it Prudence to hazard her Majeſty's Fleet in a Coaſt unknown, and which had ever been ſo dreadful to the Engliſh Seamen, that in order to avoid it, they often choſe

to go a Hundred Leagues out of their Way: That he was very ſorry he could not perform himſelf ſo great a Service to the brave Cevennois; but that purſuant to the Reſult of their Conſultation, he would order Two Men of War to go upon that Attempt, with a good Quantity of Arms, Ammunition and Money; and that if they had the good Fortune to ſpeak with their Friends, and to deliver them thoſe Things, it would be eaſy for them to concert Meaſures with the Cevennois, for their further Supply and Relief. The Two Ships appointed to this Service, were the Pembroke, commanded by Captain Arris, and the Tartar, under Captain Cooper, who, as ſoon as the Grand Fleet had taken in freſh Water at Altea, ſail'd * a-Head towards the Gulph of Narbonne, having the Three before-mention'd Gentlemen on Board, and Two French Pilots beſides. The next Day, being the 4th of September, they took a French Tartane, by the Maſter of which they underſtood, that Mareſchal de Montrevel having Intelligence of their Deſign, had already taken the neceſſary Meaſures to diſappoint it. On the 15th, the Pembroke and Tartar entred the Gulph of Narbonne; on the 17th, they ſail'd in Sight of Narbonne, Vias, Beſiers, Agde, and Fort Breſcou: And being in the Evening come between Port Cette and Pequai, they made the Signals, as directed from Court, under the Earl of Nottingham's own Hand; but not being anſwer'd from the Shore, they did not think it ſafe to continue in that dangerous Sea any longer, and ſo made the beſt of their way to the general Rendezvous at Leghorn-Road, where they arrived the 23d of September; and where the Grand Fleet came Four Days † before. The next Morning the Town ſaluted the Admiral with Five Guns, of which Sir Cloudeſly Shovel took no Notice, as not being a ſufficient Salute for a Royal Fleet, and refus'd to accept the ordinary Preſent that was ſent him by the Governor. The latter having ſent to know the Reaſon of it; Sir Cloudeſly made him ſenſible of his Miſtake, and, at the ſame Time, ſent a Meſſage to the Great Duke of Tuſcany, inſiſting upon a Royal Salute, as having the Union-Flag, the moſt conſiderable in England. After ſome Diſputes, his Royal Highneſs was forc'd to order that the Town ſhould ſalute with Eleven Guns, which was accordingly perform'd, and which Sir Cloudeſly Shovel anſwer'd; and was afterwards complimented by ſeveral Perſons of Diſtinction, and receiv'd the extraordinary Preſents that had been prepared for the Count de Thoulouſe, Admiral of France, who was expected there before the Engliſh Fleet, but who never durſt come out of the Harbour of Thoulon, as long as the latter remain'd in the Mediterranean.

† Sept. 19. Sir Cloudeſly Shovel arrives at Leghorn, and inſiſts upon having a Royal Salute.

Count Lomberg, the Imperial Ambaſſador at the Court of Rome, having Notice of the Arrival of the Confederate Fleet in the Road of Leghorn, his Excellency haſten'd thither, and on the 28th of September, went on Board the Engliſh Admiral, and acquainted him with the Arch-Duke of Auſtria's having been declar'd and proclaim'd King of Spain at Vienna, by the Name of Charles the IIId, on the 12th of that Month, N. S. Thereupon every Ship in the Engliſh Squadron, fired each Fifteen Guns, and his Catholick Majeſty's Health was drank. Count Lamberg having ſent a Gentleman, with Mr. Fourdain, one of Sir Cloudeſly Shovel's Secretaries, to notify the Arch-Duke's Acceſſion to the Spaniſh Throne to the Dutch Admiral, the latter was ſomewhat ſurpriz'd, that the Imperial Miniſter ſhould not pay him a Viſit on that Account, as he had done the Engliſh Admiral: But, nevertheleſs, he order'd all his Ships to fire each Fifteen Guns, ſome Hours after: And then Count Lamberg went to ſee him on Board. The Fleet having got Water, and bought up Wines, and what other Proviſions they could find at Leghorn, ſail'd thence the 2d of October. On the 6th, the Pembroke, Exeter, Tartar, Flamborough, and one Fireſhip, were detach'd with Orders to go to Tunis and Tripoli, to renew the Peace with thoſe Governments; and thence to proceed to Scandaroon, to join Captain Jumper. The 18th, Rear-Admiral Byng was ſent with another Squadron to Algier, to renew the Peace with that Regency; and the 12th, the Fleet had a terrible Storm, but did not ſuffer much Damage, by Reaſon it did not continue long. Ten Days ‖ after, Sir Cloudeſly Shovel, with the Remainder of the Fleet, came into Altea Bay; where the Spaniards were very glad to ſee again the Confederates; and ſeveral of them openly declar'd for Charles the IIId, King of Spain, and offer'd themſelves to ſerve on Board the Fleet, which was accepted. Having, with Speed, water'd the Fleet, Sir Cloudeſly ſail'd on the 24th, with a ſtrong Levant, and on the 27th, at Night, got through the Streights Mouth. The next Day, Sir Thomas Hardy, with the Bedford, Somerſet, and Lizard, under his Command, was ſent by the Admiral to Tangier; and the 30th, the Dutch parted from the Engliſh, making the beſt of their way Home. The ſame Day Sir Cloudeſly ſent Five Ships, under the Command of Sir Andrew Lake, to Liſbon, and thence to Oporto, Viana, &c. to take under his Convoy thoſe Merchant Ships, which were bound for England: And having a fair Wind, and good Weather in his Paſſage, arrived in the Downs on the 17th of November. foon after with a French Man of War of Fifty Two Guns, and Five Hundred Men, coming from Newfoundland, whom they engag'd, and took, after an obſtinate Fight of Nine Hours.

While theſe Things paſs'd at Sea, ſeveral Actions of greater Conſequence happen'd on Land. The French having promiſed to ſend to the Elector of Bavaria a powerful Relief early in the Spring, their Army, under the Command of Mareſchal Villars, in Defiance to the Rigor of the Winter Seaſon, ſat down before Fort Kehl, which ſurrendred on the 11th of March, N. S. This Loſs awakening the drowſy Councils at Vienna, Count Styrum and Count Schlick were immediately order'd to enter Bavaria, which they did in Two different Places, with various Succeſs: For whilſt the firſt took Newmark, and inveſted Amberg, a Body of about Two Thouſand Horſe, which General Schlick left at Elſenheim, were entirely defeated by the Bavarians. At the ſame Time, whilſt Mareſchal de Villars refreſh'd his haraſs'd Troops in the Neighbourhood of Straſburgh, Count Tallard rais'd the Blockade of Traerback, before the Confederates could be ready to oppoſe him; but fail'd in his Deſigns of throwing Succours into Bonne, and of intercepting the Dutch Auxiliaries, in their March to join the Prince of Baden, who guarded the Imperial Lines at Stolhoffen. About the beginning of April, the Elector of Bavaria poſſeſs'd himſelf of the City of Ratisbone; and the Mareſchals de Villars and Tallard having receiv'd poſitive Orders to break through the Prince of Baden's Lines, and join the Bavarians, at any Rate, they made ſeveral ſmart Attacks upon thoſe Intrenchments, for Five * ſucceſſive Days, but were, at laſt, obliged to retire with ſome Precipitation, though with inconſiderable Loſs, Prince Lewis not being in a Condition to purſue them. Notwithſtanding this Diſappointment, Mareſchal de Villars detach'd † the Marquis de Blainville, with Twenty Battalions, and Thirty Squadrons, to force the Vale of Kintzig, and open a Paſſage for the French to penetrate into Swabia, which the Marquis perform'd with wonderful Diligence and Succeſs, and, on the 6th of May, join'd the Bavarian Army near Treylingen. Upon the News of this Conjunction, the Diet at Ratiſbon came to a Reſolution, That the preſent War was not on the Score of Religion; but that the League entred into by the Empire, and their Allies, was againſt the Faithleſs Crown of France, and againſt her Adherents, for Maintenance of the Freedom of Religion, and of the Liberties of the Empire, and their Allies. On the other Hand, the Elector of Bavaria, not a little puff'd up, to ſee himſelf at the Head of Thirty Thouſand Men, order'd his Miniſter to acquaint the Diet, "That "finding himſelf attack'd in ſuch a Manner, that Part of his Country was already "ruin'd, he reſolv'd to make Uſe of his Succours for the repelling of any Violence "that ſhould be offer'd him, for the future.

Affairs on the Lower-Rhine.

Bonn beſieg'd.

While the French were active and proſperous in Germany, the Duke of Marlborough, Captain-General of her Majeſty's Forces, was neither idle, nor unſucceſsful. His Grace having reſolv'd to open the Campaign, by the taking of Bonne, caus'd the Place to be inveſted on the 24th of April, (N. S.) by the Pruſſian and Lunenburgh Cavalry, under Lieutenant-General Buleau; and the next Day went himſelf to Cologne, whilſt the Infantry, commanded by Lieutenant-General Fagel, was coming up to the Camp. On the 26th, Lieutenant-General Coehorn arriv'd, by Water, with the Veſſels and Pontons, and preſently a Bridge was laid over the Rhine at Rhineſdorf, from which Place the Beſiegers Camp extended as far as Kruitſberg. After ſome Conſultations among the Generals, the Town was order'd to be attack'd in Three Places. The Firſt of the Attacks was commanded by Lieutenant-General Coehorn, having under him the Major-Generals Freiſheim and Erbervelt, with Mr. Larocque, as Chief Engineer: The Second by the Hereditary Prince of Anhalt-Zerbſt, and Mr. Tettau, with Mr. Hazard, as Chief Engineer: And the Third, by Lieutenant-General Fagel, with whom were join'd the Major-Generals Dedem and St. Paul, with Colonel Reinchard, Chief Engineer. Twelve Regiments being order'd to each of theſe Attacks, took their Poſts accordingly the 27th: And on the 3d of May, the Trenches were open'd, and carried on with great Succeſs, and very inconſiderable Loſs. At the ſame Time, the Batteries were rais'd with that Alacrity and Speed, and the Preparations for Miſchief appear'd ſo dreadful, that the Governor ſent a Letter to the Duke of Marlborough, importing, "That an Agreement had been made the laſt Year, between the Electors Palatine and of Cologne, that the Cities of Duſſeldorp and Bonne, ſhould not be "bombarded, in order to preſerve the Churches, Palaces, and other publick Build-"ings, the Performance of which he was order'd to requeſt from his Grace; and "to declare withal, That unleſs the ſame were obſerv'd, the Elector of Bavaria "would deſtroy the City of Neuburg, belonging to the Elector Palative." The Duke having communicated this Letter to the Elector Palatine, and conſulted with the other Generals, it was thought convenient that his Grace ſhould anſwer it in general general Terms, That it was neither his Cuſtom, nor his Inclination, to deſtroy Cities, or publick Buildings, out of a prepenſe Malice or Deſign, provided the Enemies Conduct did not put him upon ſuch a Neceſſity. On the 8th of May, the Batteries being ready, the Beſiegers began to fire with good Succeſs: For the ſame Day, the Chain which held the Flying-Bridge, by Means of which the Fort communicated with the Town, was broke by a Cannon-Shot, and the Bridge ſtaved in Pieces, and carried away by the Stream, notwithſtanding the Enemies Endeavours to ſave it. The next Day, the Battery which play'd upon the Fort, made ſuch a Breach, that the General reſolv'd to ſtorm it; but the French not thinking themſelves ſafe there, ſet Fire to their Cazerns, and retreated into the Ravelin, in order to get into the Town in Boats. The Beſiegers Diligence and Valour prevented their Deſign; ſo that the Commander of the Fort, and Thirty of his Men, were made Priſoners, the reſt being either kill'd, or drown'd. A little before the gaining of this Fort, an unhappy Accident happen'd in General Dedem's Attack, where One Hundred and Fifty Bombs, and as many Granadoes, took Fire, and were blown up, together with a Lieutenant, and Five Bombardeers, which, however, did not obſtruct the Progreſs of the Beſiegers; who being now Maſters of the Fort, a great Battery was rais'd in it, which began to play on the 12th, to the Number of Seventy Pieces of heavy Cannon, and Eighteen Mortars, in order to make Two Breaches. The next Day, at Noon, the Beſieged, with about a Thouſand Foot, ſupported by all their Horſe and Dragoons, made a Salley upon General Dedem's Attack, where the Beſiegers in the Trenches were at firſt put into ſome Diſorder, but ſoon recovering themſelves, they repuls'd the French, with the Loſs of about a Hundred Men kill'd on each Side; and ſome Priſoners taken on both. All Things being now in a Readineſs to aſſault the Counterſcarp, and Cover'd-way, on the Side of the Prince of Heſſe's Attack, the Onſet began about Eight a Clock at Night, under the Command of Major-General Tettau, and Brigadier Palandt, the Prince being there in Perſon. The Beſiegers, ſeconded by the continued Fire, both from the Cannon and Mortars of ſeveral Attacks, forc'd their way forwards, drove the Beſieged from their Works, and lodg'd themſelves there: In which briſk Action General Tettau was wounded, with about Ten Officers, and One Hundred and Fifty Soldiers kill'd and wounded, together with the Engineer that commanded in the Works. So much Bravery in the Beſiegers, and ſuch an amazing Storm of artificial Thunder and Lightning, aſtoniſhed the Beſieged to that Degree, that fearing a Second Aſſault, the next Day * they beat a Parley, and on the 15th of May, ſurrendred the Place on honourable Conditions, which were ſign'd by the Duke of Marlborough, and Monſieur d'Alegre, the French Governor.

A. D. 1703.

* May 14. (N. S.) Bonne ſurrendred, May 15. N. S.

While the Duke of Marlborough ſat down before Bonne, the Mareſchals de Villeroy and Boufflers, who commanded the French Forces in Flanders, having form'd a Deſign to ſurprize the Confederates that lay diſpers'd about Maeſtricht, and to bombard the Town it ſelf, and after that, to fall upon Liege, march'd on a ſudden, on the 9th of May, (N. S.) at Night, into the Neighbourhood of Tongeren, with about Forty Thouſand Men. Boufflers coming up with part of theſe Forces on the one Side of the Town, and Villeroy with the reſt on the other, the Confederates, who were marching to poſt themſelves in that Place, were forc'd to retreat with Speed, under the Cannon of Maeſtricht, whereupon the Enemy fell upon Tongeren, where Two Battalions of Foot, one of Elſt, the other of Portmore, having defended themſelves with extraordinary Bravery, for Twenty Eight Hours, were forc'd to yield at Diſcretion. This vigorous Reſiſtance, gave the Confederates an Opportunity to draw together before Maeſtricht: So that when the French advanced forward, with a Deſign, as was ſuppos'd, to have forc'd the Confederate Cavalry to repaſs the Maeſe at Nimeguen, and the Foot to retire under the Outworks of Maeſtricht, to their great Diſappointment, they found the Confederate Army, under General d'Auverquerque, drawn up in Order of Battel, advantagiouſly poſted, and ready to engage 'em, though much inferior in Number. This put the Two Mareſchals to ſuch a Stand, that the Confederate Generals might eaſily perceive how much they fluctuated in their Counſels. They firſt appear'd about Seven a Clock in the Morning, in Order of Battel, upon the Hill call'd Duyſberg, with the greateſt Part of their Army; from whence they made ſeveral Motions, ſeeming all to tend to the attacking of the Confederate Right Wing; which Monſieur d'Auverquerque obſerving, poſted an Engliſh Brigade in the Hedges of Lonaken, to cover their Right Flank, and a Regiment of Dragoons was poſted near the Church of Lonaken, to ſupport a Hundred and Fifty Foot, placed in the Church-Yard, to defend the Paſs from the Heath of Beſtmere: And, indeed, whereever the Enemy ſeem'd to bend their Strength, the Confederate Generals were careful to double their Oppoſition. About Ten of the Clock the ſame Forenoon, the French made a general Motion of all their Forces, ſending down ſeveral Brigades of Foot in Two Columns, from between Duysberg-Hill and the Village of Veltweſſen; from whence the Confederate Generals concluded, that they were marching directly towards them: But when they came within Reach of the Cannon, they made a Halt, both with their Brigades and the main Body of their Army.

Thus both Armies ſtood gazing one upon another, till Three in the Afternoon; when the Two Mareſchals, not daring to adventure the attacking of the Confederates, march'd back, the ſame way they came, to Tongeren, leaving to General Auverquerque the Honour of that Day: For 'twas to his Prudence, Experience and Valour, that the Preſervation of the Confederate Army was chiefly owing.

Immediately after the Surrender of Bonne, the Duke of Marlborough return'd to the Confederate Army in the Netherlands, which conſiſted of One Hundred and thirty Squadrons, and Fifty nine Battalions; and ſet forward towards Liege, as well to ſecure that Place, as to force the Enemy to decamp from Tongeren, where the French Forces, conſiſting of about Sixty Battalions, and above a Hundred Squadrons, ſeem'd to be very advantageouſly poſted. To this purpoſe, the Duke march'd the 25th of May from Hatch, near Maeſtricht, and having paſs'd the River Secker, advanc'd to Hautin, where the French intended to have forag'd that Morning; but upon Notice of the Confederates Approach, remov'd to ſome further Diſtance, where they continued under their Arms that Night; tho' upon the Confederates advancing to Nieudorp, they march'd with great Precipitation to Bockworn, not daring to ſtand the Hazard of a Battel. They alſo quitted Tongeren, after they had blown up the Walls and the Tower; whereupon the Duke follow'd 'em, and advanc'd within Half a League of their Camp. But tho' the Secker parted the Two Armies, and the Enemy had ſecur'd all the Bridges and Paſſes of the River, yet they thought themſelves not ſafe, and ſo retreated to Hannuye. 'Tis true, that upon the Duke's advancing to Thys and Lamin, the French drew up in Order of Battel, and ſent away their Baggage, as if they intended to have fought; but their Courage fail'd them once more, and ſo they retir'd within their Lines.

The French fly before the D. of Marlborough.

The Duke of Marlborough finding it impoſſible to bring the French to the Deciſion of a Battel, it was reſolv'd to force them in their Intrenchments; which General Coehorn and Baron Sparr perform'd with Succeſs in the Country of Waes. The firſt commanded one Attack, in a Place call'd the Hook-van-Callo; where, without much Reſiſtance, and with inconſiderable Loſs, he made himſelf Maſter of a Redoubt, call'd St. Anthony's Hook, and of the Pearl Fort: But Baron Sparr, who commanded the other Attack, near the Village of Stocken, met with great Oppoſition from Eight Battalions of the Enemies regular Foot, and Six Thouſand of the Country People, who made yet a more vigorous Defence than the diſciplin'd Men, and, by their firing from the Houſes of that Village, very much annoy'd the Confederates, after they were got into the Lines: Which oblig'd Baron Sparr to order, that no Quarter ſhould be given them. In this Action, Twelve Hundred Men of his Detachment were ſlain and wounded, among whom were ſeveral Officers of Note.

The French Lines forc'd by General Coehorn and Baron Sparr, June 26. N.S.

The publick Joy in Holland, upon this conſiderable Advantage, was ſoon after pall'd by an Expreſs ſent by General Opdam from Breda to the States, with an Account, "That the French near Antwerp, having receiv'd a conſiderable Reinforce-" ment from their main Army, came out of their Lines the 30th of June, and ſur-" rounded the Body of the Confederate Forces under his Command, and had entire-" ly routed them; and that he had eſcap'd to Breda with only Thirty Horſe; and " that he could give no further Account of thoſe Troops." This ſtruck all the Hague with a general Conſternation: The States-General met immediately; and after they had ſat in Conſultation till One in the Morning, diſpatch'd away Monſieur Geldermanſen with Two Deputies more, with Money and Inſtructions, to prevent, as much as might be, the ill Conſequences of this ſuppoſed Diſaſter: But theſe Commiſſioners, in their Way towards the Frontiers, met with a Courier diſpatch'd by Monſieur Hop, Treaſurer-General to the States, and their Deputy in that Army, with a Letter to the States, which they open'd; and finding in it a quite contrary Account, they immediately return'd to the Hague. Mr. Hop's Letter was as follows.

"UPon my Arrival Two Days ago at the Camp at Eckeren, an Expreſs arriv'd " there with Letters from the Duke of Marlborough and Monſieur d' Overkirk, " giving an Account of their March, and that the Enemy decamp'd at the ſame

" Time,

A. D. 1703.

" Time, and advanc'd towards the Demer; from whence the ſaid Generals judg'd " that it would be eaſy for the Enemy to ſend Succours to the Lines near Antwerp, and therefore we, on this ſide, ought to be upon our Guard. That, however, they would, with the main Army, obſerve the Enemy as narrowly as was " poſſible; and in caſe any ſuch Detachment were made, they would do the like. " This Advice coming at the ſame Time that one of our Spies brought an Account, that a great Body of Horſe from the French Army was advanc'd towards Dieſt, it was unanimouſly reſolv'd in a Council of War that Afternoon, " That ſince our Camp at Eckeren, wherein we had no more than Thirteen Battalions and Twenty ſix Squadrons, lay wholly expos'd and defenceleſs on the " ſide of the Left Wing; and that the Enemy coming with a ſuperior Power, " might not only cut off our Communication with Bergen-op-zoom and Breda, but " alſo with Lillo, it was moſt adviſable to ſend our heavy Baggage to Bergen-op-zoom, which was done that Night; and upon further Advice of the Enemy's " Motions, to change our Camp, and draw nearer to this Place: But yeſterday, " about Noon, we had Advice, That the Enemy were come out of their Lines " with a great Number of Troops; and ſoon after, the advanc'd Guards of our " Left Wing had ſight of them. Our General repair'd thither, and ſoon obſerv'd " that the Enemy, with a great Body of Forces, was filing off towards Howen " and Stabroek, and that thereby it was plain, their Deſign was to cut off our " Retreat. It was thereupon reſolv'd, That to prevent this, the Army ſhould immediately retire; but this could not be done ſo ſoon, but that the Enemy appear'd as well before and behind, as on each ſide of our Camp; and ſoon after " the Armies engag'd, and the Battel was very ſharp on all ſides, and laſted from " Three in the Afternoon till it was dark Night, and often with dubious Succeſs; " till at length, thro' the undaunted Bravery both of your High Mightineſſes own " Troops, and thoſe of foreign Princes in your Service, one of the moſt conſiderable Poſts, and thro' which we were oblig'd to march to come hither, namely, the " Village of Otterem, was taken by Force, and maintain'd by our Men. The Cavalry, commanded by Major-General Hompeſch, (who ſignaliz'd himſelf in a " very extraordinary manner) behav'd themſelves in this Fight as bravely as could " poſſibly be; and they on our Left Wing, together with the Foot, not only ſuſtain'd the Enemy's Fire, which was very great, with exceeding Reſolution for " above Three Hours, but at laſt oblig'd them to retire. In this Occaſion, Lieutenant-General Fagel receiv'd Two Wounds, one in his Head, and the other in his " Foot, but neither of them dangerous. The Enemy, in the Beginning of the " Fight, had taken our Four Pieces of Cannon, but were ſoon oblig'd to quit them; " and our Men took one of theirs, with ſome Ammunition, ſeveral Pair of Kettle-" Drums, Two Standards of the Gens d' Armes, and ſome Colours; and took the " Colonel of the Regiment du Maine, a Lieutenant-Colonel, and many other Officers of leſs Note, Priſoners: A great many of their Men remain'd upon the Place, " and, according to the Report of Priſoners, above Four Hundred of their wounded " Men were brought to Eckeren; beſides which, they ſent a great Number to Stabroek, and other Places. As to the Number of Men who have been kill'd or " wounded on our ſide, in this ſo ſharp and ſo long a Fight, it is impoſſible for " me to give an Account thereof as yet. Monſieur d' Opdam, who, for a Time, " was giving Orders every where, is ſince miſſing; and a Lieutenant, who is a " Priſoner here, affirms, That he was taken, and carry'd to Antwerp. The reſt of " the Generals, except Monſieur Fagel, are all in good Health; and it is owing to " their Bravery and good Conduct, ſeconded by the undaunted Courage of our " Troops, (next to the apparent Bleſſing of Almighty God) that the Enemy, who, " according to the unanimous Confeſſion of the Priſoners, had Thirty three Battalions, Forty ſeven Companies of Grenadiers, and Thirty two Squadrons, commanded by the Mareſchal de Boufflers, and the Prince Tſerclaes de Tilly, did not " wholly cut off and ruin our Army. We remain'd under Arms all Night, " and by Break of Day march'd from Otterem to this Place, without meeting with " any further Rencounter. General Coehorn, who ſaw the Engagement from the " other ſide of the Scheld, did laſt Night ſend over ſeveral Battalions to this Place, " who are now encamp'd with us. I thought it my Duty, as ſoon as I came hither " with the Army, after having been Twice miraculouſly preſerv'd in all the Action " of yeſterday, to give your High Mightineſſes Notice by an Expreſs of what is " above-written. I am, &c. &c.

This Account was, the next Day, confirm'd by another Letter from Count Slangerburgh to the States-General; both which agreed, in the main, with a Relation printed by the French themſelves at Namur. But tho' 'tis certain that the Loſs was pretty equal on both ſides, and amounted to about Three Thouſand Men, kill'd and wounded, on each; yet the French King was, by his Flatterers, perſuaded that his Troops gain'd the Victory; whereupon he caus'd Te Deum to be ſung in the Cathedral-Church of Paris. The ſpecious Pretences which the French had for their Triumph, was the Flight of General Opdam; to excuſe which, he wrote a Letter to the States from Lillo, wherein he acknowledg'd, That he made too haſty a Judgment upon the imminent Danger the whole Army was in; and that the Enemies preſſing on, with an irreſiſtible Superiority, within Piſtol-ſhot of the Place where he was preſent, and where no Succour could come up to enable him to keep his Ground, moved him to retire: Adding, That he would have reaſſum'd the Command of the Army, and that the Generals, and other Officers, made no ſcruple to obey his Orders; but that finding himſelf leſſen'd in the general Eſteem, and look'd upon as unworthy to command the Forces of the State, he had begg'd Leave of their High Mightineſſes Deputies to go to the Hague for a few Days, in order to clear himſelf before their High Mightineſſes, from the Imputations he lay under. Accordingly, General Opdam arriv'd at the Hague on the 11th of July; and, ſhortly after, by Command of the States-General, he deliver'd to them in writing his Apology for himſelf, which was much to the ſame Purpoſe with the Letter juſt now mention'd, and ran upon a critical Diſtinction, That he did not what he would have done, but the beſt he could do. About a Month after, ſeveral Officers of that Army, which was now commanded by Lieutenant-General Slangenburgh, wrote a Letter to Monſieur d' Opdam, importing, That underſtanding there ran about a Report in Holland, that ſince the Accident that befel him of being intercepted from the Army at the Battel of Eckeren, they had ſcrupled to ſerve under his Orders, which was far from their Thoughts; they therefore took a Reſolution to aſſure him, that they ſhould be extreamly glad to ſee him at the Head of the Army again. To do General Opdam Juſtice, it muſt be own'd, That he ſerv'd his Country above Thirty Years, with unblemiſh'd Fidelity, Zeal and Courage; and that in this laſt Action being cut off by the Enemy, and not able to rejoin his Troops, he had no other Courſe to take, than to keep out of the way: But 'tis the Misfortune of the greateſt Men, that their Actions are ſubject to the Cenſures of the meaneſt, and generally judg'd of, not by their true Motive, but by the Succeſs.

The French boaſt of the Victory.

General Opdam's Juſtification.

All this while the Duke of Marlborough held daily Conſultations, and uſed all poſſible Stratagems to draw the French to an Engagement; but failing in his Deſign, his Grace, attended with ſeveral General Officers, and a Guard of Four Thouſand Horſe and Dragoons, went to view the Enemy's Lines. Lieutenant Benſon, of the Engliſh Royal Regiment of Dragoons being detach'd with about Thirty Engliſh, fell in with one of the Enemy's Out-Guards of Forty Horſe, who, after one Diſcharge, retir'd, and were chas'd by the Engliſh to the very Barrier of their Intrenchments; which gave the Confederate Generals an Opportunity to view them within Muſket-ſhot. From that Day, the Duke of Marlborough laid a Scheme to force thoſe Intrenchments; but the Execution of that Project being induſtriouſly put off from Time to Time by the Field-Deputies of the States-General, the Siege of Huy was reſolv'd upon. Accordingly, on the 16th of Auguſt, N. S. Count Noyelles, with a Detachment from the Grand Army, arriv'd before the Place; and notwithſtanding the Fatigue the Confederate Troops had undergone, in a moſt difficult March, the Trenches were open'd the next Night. The Approaches were carry'd on with a great deal of Succeſs; and ſome of the Beſiegers Batteries being ready the 21ſt, began to throw ſome Bombs into the Works of the Enemy, and the next Morning to fire with Cannon and Mortars upon Fort Picard, Fort St. Joſeph, and the Caſtle, which continued till Three in the Afternoon, when Fort St. Joſeph beat a Parley, as did alſo Fort Picard and the Red Fort about Seven in the Evening. The Gariſon deſir'd to retire to Namur, with their Arms and Baggage; but that being deny'd, and no other Terms offer'd them, than either to ſurrender Priſoners at Diſcretion, or retire into the Caſtle, the continual Fire of the Beſiegers oblig'd them, at laſt, to abandon the Forts, of which the Confederates took * Poſſeſſion: And Monſieur Millon, Governor of the Caſtle, refuſing to receive his own Men into it, they were forc'd to return into the Town, where they were immediately ſeiz'd and diſarm'd. Upon the taking of the Forts, the Batteries were remov'd, and began to play upon the Caſtle; and on the 25th, the Diſpoſitions were made for an Attack. While the Cannon and Mortars were firing without Intermiſſion, the Confederate Troops advanc'd, and plac'd ſeveral Ladders at the Foot of the Caſtle: But tho' this was deſign'd only for a Feint, yet the Enemy believing the Beſiegers to be in earneſt, beat a Parley about Six in the Afternoon, offering to ſurrender, upon Condition that they ſhould be allow'd to march to Namur, with the uſual Marks of Honour. The Duke of Marlborough thereupon ſent a Meſſage to the Governor; "That notwithſtanding "the Advantage He had, if they would lay down their Arms, all that belong'd

« to the Officers and Soldiers ſhould be left them, and they ſhould be exchanged for « a like Number of Men, whenever the Mareſchal de Villeroy ſhould deſire it;" and Time was allowed them till Three next Morning, to ſend a poſitive Anſwer. Upon the Governor's Refuſal, Orders were given for renewing the Aſſault; whereupon the Soldiers in the Gariſon refuſing to defend the Place any longer, the Governor accepted the Terms offered him, whereby he, and his Gariſon, which, including thoſe who were in the Forts, conſiſted of Nine Hundred Men, commanded by Two Brigadiers General, were to remain Priſoners of War, 'till the Two Regiments taken ſome Months before in Tongeren by thé French, were releas'd. On the 27th of Auguſt, in the Morning, the Gariſon march'd out of the Caſtle, and were all diſarm'd, except the Officers, who were allow'd to keep their Swords.

Three Days before, a great Council of War was held at the Confederate Camp at Val-Nôtre-Dame, wherein were preſent, the Duke of Marlborough, the Deputies of the States-General, Monſieur d'Auverquerque, Monſieur Slangenburgh, the Lieutenant-Generals, and ſeveral Major-Generals. The Queſtion in Debate was, What Undertaking ſhould be gone upon after Huy ſhould be taken? The Siege of Limburg being propoſed, the Generals of the Engliſh, Danes, Lunenburghers, and Heſſians, gave their Opinion rather for attacking the Enemy's Lines between the Mehaigne and Leuwe, as an Enterprize that would contribute much more to the Glory and Advantage of the Arms of the High-Allies. But their Reaſons were oppoſed by the Deputies of the States, and the Dutch Generals, who would not conſent to hazard their Troops in an Action, which, they ſaid, was at beſt very dubious; and which, if attended with Succeſs, would yield no farther Advantage, than to find the Enemy retired into their fortified Towns; whereas, on the contrary, ſhould the French get the Victory, the United Provinces would remain expoſed to their Incurſions. Thereupon the Project of attacking the French Lines, was laid aſide, and the Reſolution taken to beſiege Limburgh, which was accordingly inveſted on the 10th of the following Month, by Lieutenant-General Bulau, with Twenty Four Squadrons of Horſe and Dragoons. On the 20th, the Foot arriv'd, and the Cannon and Ammunition being come to Liege, the Duke of Marlborough follow'd the next Morning, with the Hereditary Prince of Heſſe, and a farther Detachment of Fifteen Squadrons, and Twenty Four Battalions. By this Time the Beſiegers had made themſelves Maſters of the Lower Town, without Reſiſtance; and their Batteries being finiſh'd on the 25th, they play'd Night and Day upon the Upper Town. By the 27th the Breach was ſo wide, that the Confederates were preparing to give a general Aſſault: Upon which the French beat a Parley: But all the Conditions they could obtain, were, That the Gariſon ſhould remain Priſoners of War; that the Officers and Soldiers might keep what was their own, and that the Officers ſhould be allowed Twelve Waggons to carry their Baggage, provided they deliver'd up one of their Gates within half an Hour. This being ſubmitted to by the Beſiegers, and the Gariſon, conſiſting of One Thouſand Four Hundred Men, having laid down their Arms, and march'd out, the Beſiegers took Poſſeſſion of the Place, of which the Duke of Marlborough appointed the Baron of Rechteren to be Governor. This Conqueſt put an End to the Campaign in the Netherlands, which muſt be acknowledg'd to have been very Glorious to the Duke of Marlborough; ſince, beſides the taking of Three important Places; Bonne, Huy, and Limburg, he did all that lay in the Power of an able Commander, to engage the Enemy to a deciſive Battel: But it ſeems the French were contented to ſtand upon the Defenſive in Flanders, where they were, indeed, the weaker, while their Superiority on the Rhine, and in the Heart of the Empire, gave 'em ſignal Advantages.

But the Dutch oppoſe the Deſign of attacking the French Lines.

The Campaign ended in the Netherlands.

The Emperor having not only refuſed to conſent to the Neutrality of Ratiſbon, propos'd by the Duke of Bavaria, but inſtead of that, required the Sovereign Princes and States of Germany to furniſh their Quotas; their Deputies at the Diet, who were, indeed, no better than the Elector of Bavaria's Priſoners, alledg'd, that the Imperial Court's Refuſal was altogether out of Seaſon, and prejudicial to the Authority of the Princes and States of the Empire. The Queen of England, and the States-General of the United-Provinces, with all the Earneſtneſs imaginable, preſs'd that Unweildy, Lethargick Body, to take effectual Meaſures to prevent the fatal Conſequences of the Conjunction of the French and Bavarians: But when ſome of the Deputies would have taken into preſent Conſideration, the Ways and Means for every Circle to furniſh out their reſpective Proportions of Men, Artillery, and Ammunition, for an Army of a Hundred and Twenty Thouſand Men, which the Diet had the Year before reſolv'd to ſet on Foot, for the Defence of the Empire; others reply'd, That the Conſideration of theſe Things was too late for this Campaign, and too ſoon for the next: Which ſupine Negligence of the Diet, was the chief Cauſe of all the ſucceeding Diſtractions of the Empire.

Affairs of Germany.

A. D. 1703.

The Elector of Bavaria having publiſh'd a Manifeſto to juſtify his Conduct, held ſeveral Conſultations with the Mareſchal de Villars, wherein it was agreed, that the French General ſhould continue near the Danube, to obſerve the Motions of Prince Lewis of Baden, who had been join'd by Count Styrum; and that the Elector's Forces ſhould invade the Country of Tyrol, in order to open a Communication with the French Army in Italy, and ſhut up the common Paſſages, whereby Reinforcements were ſent to the Imperialiſts in Lombardy. On the other Hand, the Duke of Vendoſme having receiv'd his Maſter's Commands to break through Tyrol into Germany, both to join the Elector of Bavaria, and to relieve Mareſchal de Villars, who was, in a manner, block'd up in his own Camp, he put himſelf at the Head of Twenty Battalions, and Two and Twenty Squadrons; and by the Help of Count de Arco, who conducted him through unknown By-ways, ſoon ſurmounted the Mountain Baldo. But then being ſtopp'd in his Career by the Two Imperial Generals, Vaubonne and Solari, he was at a Stand what further Courſe to take; having receiv'd Advice from Tyrol, that the Elector, who was to have met him, had been forc'd to retire to his own Frontiers. However, he continued Ravaging the Country upon the Lake Di-Garda, and at length ſent a Detachment to beſiege the Caſtle of Arco, a little Town in the Dioceſe of Trent, and forc'd the Gariſon, conſiſting of Six Hundred Men, to ſurrender themſelves at Diſcretion, for want of Water and Ammunition. Encourag'd by this Succeſs, he advanc'd as far as Trent; and after he had rais'd ſeveral Batteries upon a Mountain that commanded the Town, he ſummon'd the Inhabitants to ſend him Commiſſioners to ſettle the Contributions he expected from them, threatning otherwiſe to reduce that City to Aſhes. The Magiſtrates refuſing to comply with his Demands, he threw above Five Hundred Bombs into the Place; but in regard his Batteries were on the other Side of the Adige, and the Town not within Reach, he thought it convenient to withdraw his Cannon and Mortars; all the Damage he did the City, not exceeding the Value of Ten Thouſand Florins. On the 12th of September, (N. S.) he retreated from thoſe Parts, and, marching back toward the Sacra, reveng'd himſelf upon the Country, burning the ſtately Houſes of the Nobility and Gentry he found in his Way. This done, he haſten'd back to Mantua, having left Lieutenant-General Vaubecourt to conduct the Remainder of his Forces into Italy: For he loſt little leſs than Three Thouſand Men, and thoſe the choiceſt in his Army, in this fruitleſs Attempt. Though the Duke of Vendoſme's, and the Elector of Bavaria's Expeditions into Tyrol, were equally unſucceſsful: Yet each endeavour'd reciprocally to impute the Miſcarriage to the other. For the Elector pretended that the French did not move ſoon enough; and the Duke of Vendoſme charg'd the Elector with invading Tyrol, before the Duke was ready to do the ſame, on the Side of Italy. But to do Juſtice to both, it muſt be acknowledg'd, That this remarkable Diſappointment of a French Project, which might have proved the total Ruin of the Emperor's Affairs, was principally owing to the Loyalty and Courage of the Peaſants of Tyrol, whoſe Services his Imperial Majeſty ſoon after acknowledg'd, by ſeveral Marks of Favour.

The Duke of Vendoſme fails in his Attempt to join the Elector of Bavaria.

Whilſt the Duke of Bavaria was buſy in his Expedition of Tyrol, there happen'd a Rencounter between the Count de la Tour, and a Detachment of Mareſchal Villars's Army. The firſt having paſs'd the Danube towards the latter End of July, between Ehingen and Mundlingen, with his Flying Camp of Imperialiſts, conſiſting of Four Thouſand Horſe, the Mareſchal de Villars ſent out a Detachment, who paſſing near Ulm about Midnight, and being join'd by the Gariſon of that Place, conſiſting of Two Thouſand Foot, fell with ſuch Vigor upon the Count, that after a ſtout Reſiſtance, he was forc'd to retreat to Riedlingen, not without a conſiderable Loſs, particularly of the brave Prince Chriſtian of Hanover, who endeavouring to croſs the Danube, miſtook the Ford, and was unfortunately drown'd. In the mean Time, the Duke of Bavaria rejoin'd the Mareſchal de Villars, and began to meditate the repairing his Loſſes, by the taking of Auſburg, a Wealthy, Epiſcopal, and Imperial City, under the Archbiſhop of Mentz. The Prince of Baden having Notice of his Deſign, haſten'd his March, croſs'd the Iller at Tirthoffen, paſs'd the River Wettech, and arrived within Sight of Auſburg, on the 5th of September, (N. S.) having ſent ſome Officers thither before, to encourage the Inhabitants, and the ſame Night incamp'd cloſe by the Town. Upon the Prince's Arrival, the Magiſtrates of Auſburg admitted into the City Two Battalions of the Imperialiſts, to ſtrengthen their Gariſon, and fired their Cannon upon the French and Bavarians, who ſtood upon the Riſing Ground, between Wellemberg and Hainhoffen; and who dividing their Body into Two, the Elector and Mareſchal marched to Biborgen and Kilkenthall, towards Donawaert, and the Count d' Arco, General of the Elector's Forces, retreated over the Lech to Friedburg, with intent to oppoſe the Prince's paſſing that River, and and making an Incurſion into Bavaria. He alſo kept Poſſeſſion of a Sluice, and a Mill, by means of which, he cut off the Water from Anſburg, which rendred this Poſt of great Importance. The Prince therefore ordered it to be attack'd, and ſoon forc'd the Enemy to quit it, and to retire towards Friedburg: Which done, his Highneſs ſat down before Memirghen, and in Two or Three Days, made himſelf Maſter of it. This Conqueſt was attended with the Surrender of Friedburg to the Count de la Tour, and of the Caſtle of Rottemburg to the Forces of Franconia. In the middle of theſe Tranſactions, the Prince thought it expedient, that Count Styrum ſhould paſs the Danube, in order to the further Proſecution of his Deſigns, and to conſtrain the Elector to quit an advantageous Poſt upon the Lech. Count Styrum having received his Orders, * broke up from Hauſheim, directing his March between Hochſtet and Donawaert, where he gave immediate Orders for laying a Bridge over the River. The Elector, and the Mareſchal, having Intelligence of Count Styrum's Motion, reſolv'd to fall upon him, and to that Purpoſe ſent to the Marquis d' Uſſon, who was left to command in their old Camp at Lavinghen, to advance upon a certain Signal, and fall upon the Imperialiſts in the Rear, while they charg'd 'em both in Front and Flank. All Things thus ordered, the Elector and Mareſchal croſs'd the Danube at Donawaert, and making the Signal agreed on, were anſwer'd by the Marquis. Thereupon Count Styrum, who underſtood the Meaning of the Signal, immediately reſolv'd to march, and fall upon the Marquis, before he was himſelf attack'd by the Elector and Mareſchal. The Event prov'd him to be an experienc'd General: For in leſs than half an Hour, he came within Sight of the Marquis, who had with him Eighteen Battalions, and Fifteen Squadrons, and obſerving that his Horſe were ſeparated from the Foot, he advanced with ſome choſen Squadrons, and charg'd the Enemy ſo ſeaſonably, and ſo briſkly, that they were utterly broken. The Marquis d' Uſſon ſeeing his Cavalry defeated, beyond any Poſſibility of being rally'd again, fled with his Foot to his Camp at Lavinghen, ſo that all his Men were in danger of being cut in Pieces, had not the Elector, and the Mareſchal charg'd the reſt of the Imperialiſts at the ſame Time. Count Shuglenburg, the Saxon General, ſtood their firſt Brunt with wonderful Bravery: But a Regiment of Bareith giving Ground, and the Enemy being ſuperior in Number, Count Styrum retreated in good Order to Nordlingen. The Action laſted from Six in the Morning, 'till Four in the Afternoon, in which the Imperialiſts, beſides the Loſs of their Baggage and Artillery, had above Two Thouſand Men kill'd, or made Priſoners. The French and Bavarians had, at leaſt, as many Slain and Wounded, though it muſt be own'd they remain'd Maſters of the Field, and conſequently had the Honour of the Day.

Count Styrum beaten by the French and Bavarians.

The Duke of Burgundy was arrived ſome Months † before in the French Army, under the Command of Count Tallard, and was in hopes to have taken Landau by Surprize; but the Deſign being diſcover'd, and the Traytors apprehended, he was forc'd to retreat to the Neighbourhood of Straſburg, where he continued a long while, without attempting any Thing. But as ſoon as the Imperialiſts were all employ'd, either in driving the Duke of Bavaria out of his rapid Conqueſts, and the Duke of Vendoſme out of Tyrol, or in watching the Motions of the Mareſchal de Villars; Mareſchal de Tallard bethought himſelf of ſitting down before Old Briſac, and carried the Duke of Burgundy to be preſent at the taking of it. That Place was inveſted about the latter End of Auguſt, (N. S.) and Monſieur de Vauban, the famous French Engineer, was ſent to aſſiſt at the Siege. Upon the 22d, at Night, the Line of Circumvallation being finiſh'd, the Trenches were open'd; and at firſt the Beſieged made a vigorous Defence; but the Beſiegers being provided with a Train of a Hundred Pieces of Cannon, and Thirty Mortars, and the Confederates not having a ſufficient Number of Men to attempt the Relief of the Place, the Governor ſurrendred it upon Terms, after a Siege of Fourteen or Fifteen Days only; for which ſlender Defence, he was afterwards ſentenc'd to die, and accordingly executed. The Duke of Burgundy having left a numerous Gariſon to ſecure this Conqueſt, return'd in Triumph to Verſailles; and the Emperor's Affairs being in a languiſhing Condition ſince Count Styrum's Defeat, Mareſchal Tallard was order'd to beſiege Landau, which he inveſted on the 7th of October, N. S. The Confederates knowing of what Importance the Preſervation of Landau would be to the Common Cauſe, after they had diſpos'd the reſt of the Army into Winter-Quarters, order'd the Hereditary Prince of Heſſe-Caſſel to attempt the raiſing of the Siege. His Highneſs ſet forward from the Netherlands, with Twelve Battalions, and Twenty Nine Squadrons, and having reach'd Alitzey, in the Palatinate, with very long Marches, was there attended by Count Naſſau Weilburg, General of the Palatine Forces, in order to concert proper Meaſures for the Relief of Landau, to which Purpoſe the Count promiſed to meet his Highneſs between Frankendale and Manheim. of this March, ſent away Mr. Pracontal with a Body of Ten Thouſand Men, and Orders to follow the Prince cloſe, or, if poſſible, to get before him: And, indeed, the French General was ſo diligent, that he join'd Mareſchal Tallard, before the Confederates knew any Thing of it: An Error that will hardly bear an Excuſe; for 'tis their own Fault, when Generals miſcarry, for want of Intelligence of the Enemy's Motions. Upon the 13th, his Highneſs encamp'd at Hoop-ſpier, within Three Quarters of a League of Spier, and Four Leagues from Landau, where the reſt of the Troops, under the Command of Count Naſſau Weilburg, join'd his Highneſs. Upon the 14th, all Things were prepar'd to attack the Enemy in their Lines, Two Days after; but upon the 15th, when his Highneſs expected to be join'd by a Battalion from Mentz, Two of Luxenburg, one of Heſſe-Darmſtat, and a Regiment of Horſe, Subjects of the ſame Prince, the Count of Naſſau Weilburg, came riding full Speed to the Prince's Quarters, (where moſt of the Officers were carouſing, and celebrating St. Leopold's Feaſt, in Honour to the Emperor) and told him, the Enemy were not in a Condition to come out of their Lines. However, he mounted immediately, and obſerving that the Palatine Quarter-Maſter General had rang'd the Army in a very diſadvantageous Place, where they lay expos'd in Flank to the Enemy, he diſpatch'd his Aid de Camp to the Count, to deſire him to march more ſlowly, that he might join him with his Right Wing. This Meſſage avail'd nothing: For before the Adjutant return'd, Count Naſſau Weilburg had engag'd the Enemy, and at firſt gain'd the Advantage; having taken ſome of their Cannon: But then the Enemy renewing the Charge, fell on with ſo much Fury upon the Foot, expos'd in Flank and Front to their Violence, that they were forced to retire in great Diſorder, before the Prince of Heſſe could come to their Relief. Hereupon the Enemy poured all their Forces upon the Right Wing, which hitherto they had, in vain, attack'd with great Loſs; but the Defeat of the Left, having open'd a way for the Enemy to fall on the Heſſian Foot, in Front and Flank, they were forced to retreat, after an obſtinate and bloody Reſiſtance, from one in the Afternoon, 'till Night: Inſomuch that after they had taken from the Enemy Sixteen Standards, Four Guidons, and Three Pair of Kettle-Drums, without loſing one of their own, they made an orderly Retreat to Dadenhoven, where they repaſs'd the Spierback; the French, though victorious, not daring to purſue them. The Prince of Heſſe, during the whole Action, which was very deſperate, perform'd all that could be expected, both from a General, and a common Soldier, had Three Horſes ſhot under him, and kill'd a French Officer with his own Hand. Among the Slain on the Confederates Side, were reckon'd the Prince of Heſſe Homberg, the Major-Generals Hochkirchen and Tettau, Four Colonels, Two Lieutenant-Colonels, Six Captains, ſeveral Inferior Officers; and a Major-General, a Colonel, and ſome other Officers wounded. On the French Side, M. Pracontal, and ſeveral of their beſt Officers were Slain, and great Part of the Gens d' Arms, cut in Pieces. However, as ſoon as this Action was over, the French return'd to the Siege, and the Confederates to Manheim; whereupon the Count de Frize, who had defended Landau with all the Vigor and good Conduct that could be expected from a brave, experienc'd General, deſpairing of any further Relief, ſurrendred that important Fortreſs upon the ſame Conditions that had been granted the Year before to Monſieur de Melac, the French Governor.

Whether the French King was offended at ſome Dictatorian Expreſſions in Mareſchal de Villar's Letters to his Majeſty, or whether the Elector of Bavaria, unwilling to bear that General's aſſuming, haughty Carriage, made Inſtances for his being recall'd; Count Marſin was, about this Time, ſent to command the French Forces in Germany; and no ſooner arrived there, than he was made a Mareſchal of France. On the 6th of December, N. S. the Elector of Bavaria laid Siege to Auſburg, and continued to batter the Place 'till the 13th, when a Letter directed to General Bibrack, the Governor, was intercepted. His Electoral Highneſs finding by it, that the Governor was adviſ'd to take ſuch Meaſures as he ſhould think fit, for preſerving his Gariſon, and the City from being deſtroy'd, there being no Hopes of Succours, that Prince ſent him the Letter by the ſame Perſon, who was to carry it; whereupon a Capitulation was agreed on the 14th, and the Gariſon was allow'd to march out with Four Pieces of Cannon, and other Marks of Honour, to be conducted to Nordlingen. Count Bibrack inſiſted very much upon ſome Articles relating to the Privileges of the Inhabitants, but the Elector would grant them none, declaring he was no Tyrant, and therefore they might rely upon his Honour. However, his Gariſon conſiſting of Ten Squadrons, and Sixteen Battalions, moſt French, under the Command of Mareſchal de Marſin, their new General, were no ſooner got into the Place, than the Elector declared his Intentions to alter the Magiſtracy, and remove the Proteſtants from the ſame. Mareſchal Marſin, on his Part, demanded

'Twas not the Conjunction of the French and Bavarians alone, that diſtreſs'd the Emperor's Affairs: For the Court of France had, at this Time, ſo effectually fomented and ſpirited the Diſcontents of the oppreſs'd and perſecuted Hungarians, that they appear'd in open Rebellion; and, under their Leader, Prince Ragotſki, had gain'd ſeveral Advantages, poſſeſs'd themſelves of ſeveral Places, and advanc'd within Two Leagues of Preſburg; whither Count Schlik, the Imperial General that was ſent againſt them, was oblig'd to retire. Several Expreſſes arriving daily at Vienna, with Accounts of the Progreſs of that Inſurrection; a falſe Rumour was ſpread in that City, and the Country round it, that Count Caroli and Count Perezeni, having join'd their Forces, to the Number of Twenty Thouſand Men, had march'd by Preſburg, and were advancing to beſiege Vienna; which occaſion'd there a general Conſternation. The Emperor having held ſeveral Councils upon that Subject, Prince Eugene of Savoy ſet out the 12th of December (N. S.) for Preſburg, to give the neceſſary Orders for the Security of that Place, and other Frontiers, and to endeavour to bring the Malecontents to an Accommodation: And about the ſame Time, Prince Ragotſki, and his Adherents, publiſh'd a Manifeſto, proteſting, "That they "did not intend to withdraw themſelves from the Allegiance they ow'd to the "Emperor, provided they might have the free Enjoyment of their Religion, Li-"berties, Eſtates and Privileges, and that the Government of Hungary be in the "Hands of the Natives of that Country." Tho' theſe be the uſual Pretences with which Ringleaders varniſh their ambitious Deſigns, and engage the unthinking, unwary Multitude in unnatural Attempts againſt their Governors; yet, at the ſame Time, nothing is more unpolitick in Sovereigns, than to uſe violent Means to keep a Nation in Subjection: For when People are unjuſtly oppreſs'd, they will readily embrace any Opportunity that offers, to better their Condition. Thus much for the Affairs of Germany this Year.

Inſurrection of the Hungarians.

Since the Beginning of the preſent War, Endeavours had been us'd to perſuade the King of Portugal to break his late Engagements with France, and to bring him into the Grand Alliance. This Negotiation, tho' carry'd on with great Prudence, Vigilance and Skill, by the Imperial, Engliſh and Dutch Miniſters, met nevertheleſs with ſeveral Obſtructions; but theſe being at laſt remov'd, chiefly by the Admirante of Caſtile and Mr. Methuen, a Treaty between the Emperor, the Queen of Great Britain, the King of Portugal, and the States-General, was at laſt ſign'd at Liſbon; and being brought to London on the 24th of May, the Ratifications of it paſs'd the Great Seal on the 14th of July following. One of the Motives upon which the King of Portugal enter'd into the Grand Alliance, was, that the Arch-duke Charles of Auſtria, ſhould be declar'd King of Spain, and come in Perſon into Portugal: And the Admirante of Caſtile, fearing the Heſitations and Slowneſs of the German Councils, which were for putting off the Departure of that Prince till the next Spring, publiſh'd a Memorial to prove, that his Preſence was abſolutely neceſſary in Portugal, and would admit of no Delay. His Reaſons were thought ſo weighty, that a Week after the Arch-duke was declar'd King of Spain, his Catholick Majeſty ſet out from Vienna in his Journey to Holland, with a noble Retinue, that was to attend him in his Expedition. He lay the firſt Night at Hailbron, where he began the Cuſtom of cauſing the Duke of Mansfeld, as Prince of Fundi, the Marquis del Vaſto, the Duke of Caſetta, and the Prince of Lichtenſtein, to be cover'd in his Preſence, as Grandees of Spain. The next remarkable Place he came to, was Hamel, a City belonging to the Elector of Hanover; where he was magnificently * entertain'd by that Court, who were come there for that Purpoſe. Before Dinner, he receiv'd the Compliments of the Miniſters of Pruſſia, Zell, and Wolfembuttel; and about Two Hours after, the Elector of Hanover paid his Catholick Majeſty a private Viſit, which the King return'd a little while after. His next Remove was to † Duſſeldorp, where he was receiv'd by the Elector Palatine, at the Head of the Nobility of the Dutchies of Berg and Juliers, and where he ſtay'd for ſome Time, both to ſee the Diverſions that had been prepar'd for him, and to wait till every Thing was ready in Holland, for his Tranſportation into Portugal. As ſoon as the Duke of Marlborough was inform'd of the King of Spain's Arrival at Duſſeldorp, his Grace went thither, to congratulate his Majeſty on his Acceſſion to the Spaniſh Throne, in the Queen of Great Britain's Name. The King having had notice of the Duke's coming, put on a fine rich Sword, with which he preſented his Grace in a very genteel manner: For while they were both diſcourſing, his Majeſty took it from his Side, and giving it into the Duke's Hand,

A. D. 1703. Hand, with a graceful Air; My Lord, ſaid he, (in French) I am not aſham'd to ſay, I am but a poor Prince; Je n'ay que la Cape & l'Epée, I have only my Cloak and my Sword; the latter may be of uſe to your Grace; and I hope you will not think it the worſe, for my wearing it one Day. After his Departure from Duſſeldorp, his Catholick Majeſty receiv'd all the Marks of Honour from the Pruſſian and Dutch Gariſons, as he paſs'd along in his way to Fort Sckenk, (or Schenken-Skans) where he was receiv'd and complimented by the Commiſſioners deputed by the States-General of the United Provinces. Between Worcum and Dort, he was again receiv'd by the Commiſſioners from the Provinces of Holland and Weſt-Friezland, with ſeveral Diſcharges of the Cannon of Lowerſtein. From Dort he continued his Paſſage by Water to Rotterdam, where he arriv'd the 1ſt of November, N. S. and there was ſaluted by the Queen of Great Britain's Yatchts in the Harbour, by a Triple Diſcharge from the Walls, and with ſeveral Vollies of ſmall Shot by the Burghers, who were drawn up for that Purpoſe all along the Maeze. Two Days after, his Majeſty arriv'd at the Hague, in the Count Goes's Coach, accompanied by the Duke of Marlborough, and ſeveral other Perſons of Quality; and at that Place was royally entertain'd by the States, till all Things were got ready for his intended Voyage.

The King of Spain arrives at the Hague, Nov. 3. N. S.

The King of Portugal's declaring for the Grand Alliance, did not a little pall the Joy of the French on their Succeſs in Germany; but what made the French Court ſtill more uneaſy, was, the Duke of Savoy's inclining to follow his Portugueze Majeſty's Example. His Royal Highneſs began to conſider, that as the moſt Chriſtian King made uſe of him only as a Tool, to compaſs his ambitious Deſigns, and to aſcend the Throne of Univerſal Empire; ſo he could reap no other Advantage from his Alliance with that aſpiring Monarch, than to become at laſt one of his Vaſſals: And on the other hand, the late haughty and domineering Deportment of the French towards the Venetians, and other States and Princes of Italy, had given that politick and diſcerning Prince well-grounded Jealouſies. His Suſpicions were not a little heighten'd by the French King's Motion, that he ſhould deliver up into his Hands the Town of Verceil, and the Citadel of Turin, to be gariſon'd by French Troops; whereupon his Royal Highneſs gave ear to ſome Propoſals that were made him from the Court of Vienna, by Count d'Averſberg, who went incognito to Turin for that Purpoſe. The French King having notice of this Negotiation, order'd the Duke of Vendoſme "to ſeize and diſarm the Troops of Savoy that were in his Army; to demand withal, the Fortreſſes of Verceil, Verjur, Suſa, and other Places; and to inſiſt, that the Duke of Savoy ſhould reduce the Number of his Troops "to the Eſtabliſhment ſtipulated in the Treaty of 1696, that his moſt Chriſtian "Majeſty might ſecure the Communication of his Territories, with thoſe belonging to the Crown of Spain in Italy, and reſtrain the Duke of Savoy from giving "him any Diſturbance." Juſtly provok'd by theſe Affronts and contumelious Demands, the Duke of Savoy immediately commanded ſeveral French Officers, who happen'd then to be in Turin, and even the Ambaſſador of France himſelf, to be put under Confinement. That Miniſter, ſurpriz'd at this Order, told arrogantly the Captain of the Guard, that was ſent to ſeize him, That the Duke being in the King his Maſter's Pay, his Majeſty might as lawfully, and of Right, not only ſeize his Forces, but alſo the Perſon of the Duke himſelf, for his Treachery. That his Maſter alſo would be reveng'd, and not only haraſs him with a foreign War, but raiſe inteſtine Broils, in the Heart of his Dominions. The Officer having reported theſe haughty Expreſſions to the Duke, his Royal Highneſs ſtept forth into his Anti-Chamber, which was crowded with Nobility and Gentry, and made the Officer repeat theſe inſulting Words two or three Times. The whole Court reſented the Affront to that Degree, that they unanimouſly promis'd to live and die with his Royal Highneſs; who thereupon ſent the chiefeſt among them into the Country, with Commiſſions, and Money to raiſe new Forces. On the other hand, the French King following his Blow, order'd the Duke of Vendoſme to invade the Frontiers of Savoy, and to ſend the following Letter to his Royal Highneſs.

Rupture between France and Savoy.

SIR,

The French King's Letter to the Duke of Savoy.

SInce neither Religion, Honour, Intereſt, Alliance, nor even your own Hand-Writing, are of any Force between Us, I ſend my Couſin, the Duke of Vendoſme, at the Head of my Armies, to make known to you my Intentions. He will allow you but Four and twenty Hours to reſolve what you have to do.

LEWIS.

The

The Duke of Savoy remain'd unmov'd by this threatning Letter, which he ſoon after anſwer'd by a Manifeſto againſt France. In the mean Time, his Royal Highneſs ſent Monſieur de Melarede, with the Character of his Envoy to the Cantons of Swiſſerland; where being kindly entertain'd, he acquainted them with the Injuries offer'd to the Duke his Maſter; laid before them the Danger to which they were themſelves expoſed, by the Neighbourhood of France; and propoſed the uniting of Savoy with the Cantons, by a ſtrict Confederacy for their common Security. He was vigorouſly oppoſed by the Marquis de Puiſieux, the French Ambaſſador in Swiſſerland; but nevertheleſs was ſo far ſucceſsful in his Negotiation, as to obtain private Leave of the Swiſſers to raiſe many Thouſand Men in their Country, for the Service of the Duke his Maſter, and to engage the Chief Cantons to demand of the French King the Neutrality of Savoy, and that his moſt Chriſtian Majeſty ſhould order his Troops to evacuate that Dutchy. At the ſame Time the Duke of Savoy ſent the Count de Tarini to Vienna, with the Treaty concluded between him and Count d' Aveſberg; and having acknowledg'd the Arch-Duke as King of Spain, by the Name of Charles the IIId, gave Notice of all his Proceedings to the Queen of Great Britain, and the States-General of the United Provinces, and ſoon after ſent Envoys into England and Holland, to ſollicit the Aſſiſtance of thoſe Two main Supports of the Confederacy. The Queen of England, well knowing how uſeful the Duke of Savoy might prove towards the reducing the exorbitant Power of France, immediately aſſur'd his Royal Highneſs of her Friendſhip and Protection; and ſoon after ſent Mr. Hill, a Perſon eminently diſtinguiſhed by his natural Parts, Learning, and Addreſs, to Turin, to concert Meaſures with his Royal Highneſs, in order to act againſt the common Enemy. The States-General, to ſecond her Majeſty's good Intentions in Favour of the Duke of Savoy, diſpatch'd Monſieur Vandermeer to his Royal Highneſs; and both theſe Miniſters ſet out together on their Embaſſy. About this Time the Town of Gelder, which had ſeveral Months been block'd up by the Pruſſian Forces, was ſurrendred to the Count of Lottam upon Articles; by the taking of which Place, the Allies became entire Maſters of the Spaniſh Gelderland, as they were already of Limburg, another Spaniſh Province. And now having taken a ſhort View of the Affairs of our Allies Abroad, 'tis high Time we ſhould return to England.

On the 2d of September, the Duke of Schomberg, Knight Elect of the moſt Noble Order of the Garter, was inſtall'd at Windſor with the uſual Solemnity; and about a Month * after, the Duke of Marlborough arrived from Holland. On the 4th of November, the Parliament was further Prorogued to the 9th of the ſame Month, when the Queen open'd the Seſſion with the following Speech to both Houſes:

* O&. 30. The Duke of Marlborough arrives from Holland.

The Parliament meets, Nov. 9.

The Queen's Speech to both Houſes.

My LORDS and GENTLEMEN,

" I Have call'd you together as ſoon as I thought you could conveniently come " out of your Countries, that no Time might be loſt in making our Prepa- " rations for carrying on the preſent War, in which I do not doubt of your chear- " ful Concurrence, ſince you can't but be ſenſible, that on the Succeſs of it depends " our own Safety and Happineſs, and that of all Europe.

" I hope I have improved the Confidence you repoſed in me laſt Year, to your " Satisfaction, and the Advantage of us and our Allies, by the Treaty with the " King of Portugal, and the Declaration of the Duke of Savoy, which, in great " Meaſure, may be imputed to the Chearfulneſs with which you ſupported me in " this War, and the Aſſurance with which you truſted me in the Conduct of it: " And we cannot ſufficiently acknowledge the Goodneſs of Almighty God, who is " pleaſed to afford us ſo fair a Proſpect, as we now have, of bringing it to a glo- " rious and ſpeedy Concluſion.

" I muſt therefore deſire you, Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons, to grant me " ſuch Supplies as ſhall be requiſite to defray the neceſſary Charge of the War in " the next Year, with Regard not only to all our former Engagements, but parti- " cularly to our Alliance lately made with the King of Portugal, for recovering the " Monarchy of Spain from the Houſe of Bourbon, and reſtoring it to the Houſe of " Auſtria; which Treaty being in it ſelf of the higheſt Importance imaginable, " and requiring all poſſible Diſpatch in the Execution of it, has neceſſarily occa- " ſion'd a great Expence, even in this preſent Year; though not ſo much as it will " require, and for which, I hope, we ſhall be amply recompenced in the " next.

" The Subſidies which will now be immediately required for the Aſſiſtance of " the Duke of Savoy, will likewiſe occaſion a further neceſſary Charge.

A. D. 1703.

" I muſt take Notice to you, that though no particular Proviſion was made in the " laſt Seſſion, either for the Charge of our preſent Expedition to Portugal, or for that " of the Augmentation Troops deſired by the States-General, yet the Funds given " by Parliament, have held out ſo well, and the Produce of the Prizes has prov'd " ſo conſiderable, that you will find the Publick will not be in Debt, by Reaſon of " either of theſe additional Services.

" I may further obſerve to you, that though the Funds for the Civil Government " are diminiſh'd by the War, I have, in Conjunction with the States-General, con- " tributed, out of my own Revenue, towards ſome publick Services, and particu- " larly the Support of the Circle of Suabia, whoſe firm Adherence to the Intereſt " of the Allies, under the greateſt Preſſures, did very well deſerve our ſeaſonable " Aſſiſtance. And I ſhall ſtill be careful not to engage my ſelf in any unneceſſary " Expence of my own, that I may have the more to ſpare towards the Eaſe of my " Subjects.

My LORDS and GENTLEMEN,

" I heartily wiſh ſome eaſy, and leſs chargeable Method, could be found out, " for the ſpeedy and effectual Manning of the Fleet.

" I muſt alſo recommend to you, to make ſome Regulation for preventing the " exceſſive Price of Coals: I have examined this Matter, and taken particular Care " to appoint Convoys for that Service; but the Price has not been in the leaſt " abated, notwithſtanding a very conſiderable Quantity has been imported ſince " that Time. This gives great Ground of Suſpicion, there may be a Combina- " tion of ſome Perſons to enrich themſelves, by a general Oppreſſion of others, and " particularly the Poor: 'Twill deſerve your Conſideration, how to remedy this " great Inconvenience.

" And in all your Affairs, I muſt recommend to you as much Diſpatch, as the " Nature of them will admit: This is neceſſary to make our Preparations ear- " ly; on which, in great Meaſure, depends the good Succeſs of all our Enter- " prizes.

" I want Words to expreſs to you, my earneſt Deſires of ſeeing all my Subjects " in PERFECT PEACE and UNION among themſelves: I have nothing ſo much at " Heart, as their general Welfare and Happineſs: Let me therefore deſire you all, " That you would carefully avoid any Heats or Diviſions, that may diſappoint me " of that Satisfaction, and give Encouragement to the common Enemies of our " Church and State.

* Nov. 11. The Commons Addreſs to the Queen.

Two Days * after, the Commons waited upon the Queen with an Addreſs of Thanks, for her Majeſty's moſt Gracious Speech from the Throne; Aſſuring her withal, That they were truly ſenſible of her Majeſty's earneſt Endeavours to bring the War to a glorious and ſpeedy Concluſion, of which ſhe had given them ſo fair a Proſpect, by her great Wiſdom and Conduct, in engaging the King of Portugal, and Duke of Savoy in her Alliance, for recovering the Monarchy of Spain from the Houſe of Bourbon, and reſtoring it to the Houſe of Auſtria. Moreover, They moſt gratefully acknowledged her Majeſty's ſingular Care in the good Management and Application of the Publick Money, whereby her Majeſty's Exchequer had greater Credit, in this ſo expenſive a War, than was ever known in the moſt flouriſhing Times of Peace; and her moſt ſignal and unparallel'd Grace and Goodneſs to her People, in contributing out of her own Revenue towards the Publick Service; particularly her Majeſty's moſt ſeaſonable Aſſiſtance to the Circle of Suabia. Concluding, That the many Bleſſings they enjoy'd under her Majeſty's moſt auſpicious Reign, and her tender Regard to the general Welfare and Happineſs of her Subjects, juſtly required utmoſt Returns of Duty and Gratitude. And her Majeſty might be aſſured, That her faithful Commons would ſupport her in her Alliances, and effectually enable her Majeſty to carry on the War with Vigor; to which nothing could more contribute, than a firm Union among themſelves: And therefore they craved Leave further to aſſure her Majeſty, that according to her Deſire, they would carefully avoid any HEATS or DIVISIONS that might give Encouragement to the common Enemies of the Church and State. To this Addreſs the Queen return'd an Anſwer, That ſhe was very well pleaſed with their Aſſurance of ſupporting her in the preſent War, and their kind Acknowledgments of her Endeavours to bring it to a happy Concluſion: And that they might aſſure themſelves, ſhe ſhould always purſue the true Intereſt of the Kingdom, and omit nothing that might promote the general Welfare of her People.

The Queen's Anſwer.

† Nov. 12. The next † Day the Lords did likewiſe attend the Queen with the following remarkable Addreſs.

" We

A. D. 1703.

The Lords Addreſs to the Queen.

" WE your Majeſty's moſt Dutiful and Loyal Subjects, the Lords Spiritual " and Temporal in Parliament aſſembled, do offer up our hearty Ac- " knowledgments to Almighty God, for the Preſervation of your Royal Perſon, ſo " eſſential to the Happineſs of your People, and the Safety of Europe.

" We ſee, with the greateſt Satisfaction, the Zeal with which your Majeſty " eſpouſes the Publick Intereſt, which carries you even beyond the Obligations of " your Treaties, in Defence of the Houſe of Auſtria, againſt the Uſurpations of the " Houſe of Bourbon: And the Glorious Reſtitution of that Family to the Monarchy " of Spain, which we have great Reaſon to expect from the late Alliance with the " King of Portugal, will be chiefly owing to your Majeſty's Arms and Aſſi- " ſtance.

" Your Majeſty may depend upon Security at Home, in the Love of your Peo- " ple: Our Perſons and Fortunes ſhall ever be ready to defend you upon all Occa- " ſions, and your Majeſty may therefore with the greater Safety and Glory, ſend " your Fleets and Armies Abroad, in the Defence of your Allies.

" The happy Declaration of the Duke of Savoy for the common Intereſt, gives " your Majeſty a ſeaſonable Opportunity to ſhew your Compaſſion and Concern " for thoſe Proteſtants in the South of France, who lie under the heavieſt Perſecution and " Oppreſſion.

" We lament for our ſelves, and others, the unavoidable Expence of War, but " have Reaſon to thank God, and your Majeſty, that we are free from all the other " Calamities of it, having almoſt nothing elſe to wiſh for (being ſecured of a " PROTESTANT SUCCESSION) but your long and happy Reign over us; and we " ſhall moſt willingly pay our Proportion of Taxes, encourag'd by your Royal " Generoſity, for the Eaſe of your People, and by the frugal Management of what " is given; being ſenſible there is no better way to ſave the Wealth of the Nation, " than by carrying on the War at this Time, with the utmoſt Vigor. Your Ma- " jeſty may expect from us a moſt ready Compliance with all your Deſires, ſo juſtly " merited by your Care of the General Welfare and Happineſs of your People, ex- " tended even to the pooreſt and meaneſt of your Subjects.

" This appears yet more eminently, in that earneſt and preſſing Recommenda- " tion to your Parliament of UNION and PEACE among themſelves; and we, in " the moſt ſolemn Manner, aſſure your Majeſty, that we will not only avoid, but " oppoſe, whatſoever may tend to create any Diſquiet or Diſſention amongſt your " Subjects.

" We ſhall never be wanting in any Part of our Duty, towards the ſupporting " your Majeſty's Honour, and your Allies, not doubting but Almighty God will " proſper your Majeſty's Arms, ſo gloriouſly employ'd to protect all thoſe, whom " the Ambition of the French King would oppreſs.

To this Addreſs her Majeſty returned the following Anſwer:

My LORDS,

The Queen's Anſwer.

" I Am extreamly ſenſible of the particular Concern you expreſs for me in this " Addreſs, and of your Great Zeal for the common Cauſe of Europe. I rely " very much upon the Aſſurance you give me of your Duty and Affection, and " ſhall always uſe my beſt Endeavours to eſtabliſh the Safety and Happineſs of the " Kingdom.

On the 19th of November, Mr. Secretary Hedges laid before the Commons, the Copies and Tranſlations of ſuch Treaties as were not laid before them the laſt Seſſion of Parliament, among which was the Defenſive and Offenſive Treaty with Portugal. Theſe Treaties having been examin'd in a Committee of the whole Houſe, it was not many Days * after reſolv'd, That the Forty Thouſand Men which were raiſed to act in Conjunction with the Forces of the Allies, and the additional Troops, conſiſting of Ten Thouſand Men, ſhould be continued for the Year 1704. That the Proportion of Land Forces to act in Conjunction with the Forces of Portugal, ſhould be Eight Thouſand Men, conſiſting of One Thouſand Horſe and Dragoons, and Seven Thouſand Foot. And that the Sum of One Million Eight Hundred One Thouſand and Six Pounds, Fifteen Shillings, be granted for maintaining the ſaid Forces, and the Guards and Gariſons of this Kingdom; the Payment of Invalids, and diſcharging the Subſidies payable to her Majeſty's Allies. Two Days before, the Commons had reſolved, That Forty Thouſand Men, including Five Thouſand Marines, be employ'd for Sea-Service for the Year 1704, and that a Sum of Four Pounds a Man per Month, for Thirteen Months, be allow'd for maintaining taining the ſaid Forty Thouſand Men; including the Ordnance for Sea-Service. The laſt Day of that Month, Mr. Secretary Hedges acquainted the Houſe, "That their Ad-"dreſs relating to the Continuance of the Stop of all Correſpondence with France "and Spain, having been preſented to the Queen, her Majeſty was pleaſed to "anſwer, That ſhe thought the Continuance of the Stop of all Poſts, Letters, Trade, and "all other Correſpondence with the Enemies, ſo neceſſary for the publick Good, that ſhe "would forthwith give Orders to her Miniſter at the Hague, to inſiſt upon it with "the States-General, as the Commons deſir'd." The ſame Day, the Commons voted an Addreſs to her Majeſty, aſſuring her, That they would provide for the making good ſuch Alliances as her Majeſty had made, or ſhould make with the Duke of Savoy.

A great Storm of Wind, Nov. 26.

On the 26th of November, between Eleven and Twelve of the Clock in the Evening, began the moſt violent Storm that ever was known in England, either in the Memory of any Man living, or recorded in Story; the Wind, which was Weſt South-Weſt, reſembling Thunder at a Diſtance, attended with great Flaſhes of Lightning. It continued with almoſt an unrelenting Fury till Seven the next Morning; blowing down a Multitude of Chimneys, Tops of Houſes, and even whole Buildings; tearing up a Multitude of Trees by the Roots, breaking of others in the Middle, beating ſeveral Spires off the Steeples; rolling up great Quantities of Lead, like Scrolls of Parchment, and blowing them off the Churches, Halls and Houſes. In this Hurricane, ſeveral People were kill'd in their Beds, particularly the pious and learned Biſhop of Bath and Wells, and his Lady; ſeveral others wounded, but abundance more miraculouſly preſerv'd. The Damage done in London and Weſtminſter, was conjectur'd to amount to One Million Sterling; and that of the City of Briſtol, to little leſs than One Hundred and Fifty Thouſand Pounds. It pleaſed God, that this Calamity was not univerſal, the Northern Parts of this Iſland having little felt the Effects of it. But yet our Loſſes at Land were inconſiderable, in Compariſon with thoſe we ſuſtain'd at Sea: For not only ſeveral Ships of the * Royal Navy, beſides others belonging to private Perſons, were caſt away, but abundance of brave Men irrecoverably loſt. Upon this diſmal Occaſion, the Houſe of Commons unanimouſly reſolv'd, "That an Addreſs be preſented to her Majeſty, "expreſſing the great Senſe the Houſe had of the Calamity fallen upon the King-"dom, by the late violent Storm; and that they could not ſee any Diminution of "her Majeſty's Navy, without making Proviſion to repair the ſame: Wherefore "they beſought her Majeſty, That ſhe would immediately give Direction for repair-"ing this Loſs, and for building ſuch Capital Ships as her Majeſty ſhould think "fit; and to aſſure her Majeſty, that, at their next Meeting, the Houſe would "effectually make good that Expence; and would now give Diſpatch in raiſing "the Supplies already voted, for making good her Majeſty's Treaties with the "King of Portugal, and all her Majeſty's other Allies; and would conſider of effe-"ctual Ways for promoting of Trade, for managing her Majeſty's Navy Royal, "and for encouraging the Seamen." To this Addreſs the Queen return'd a ſuitable Anſwer; and not many Days † after, was iſſued out her Majeſty's Proclamation, commanding, That a General and Publick Faſt be obſerv'd throughout all England, on the 19th of January enſuing, to implore God Almighty's Bleſſing and Favour, and that it would pleaſe him to pardon the crying Sins of this Nation, which had drawn down this ſad Judgment, to avert the like Judgments for the future, and obtain the heavenly Bleſſing on the Forces of her Majeſty and her Allies, both by Sea and Land. Which Faſt was accordingly moſt religiouſly obſerv'd.

The Biſhop of Bath and Wells and his Lady kill'd.

* Viz. One 2d Rate, Four 3d Rates, Three 4th, Four 5th, and One 6th Rate.

The Commons Addreſs to the Queen on that Occaſion.

† Dec. 12. A Publick Faſt appointed.

Our neareſt Allies, the Dutch, were not inſenſible of the terrible Effects of the late Storm: Several Churches, Houſes, and other Buildings in Holland, and the other United Provinces, receiv'd great Damage; and the Dykes in Friezland being broke down by the Violence of the Sea, one Fourth Part of that Country was laid under Water. Admiral Allemond, who was arriv'd ſome Days before with the Squadron from the Streights, rid out the Storm, tho' with the Loſs of the Maſts of ſome of his Ships: But Admiral Callemberg, with the Squadron of Men of War and Tranſport-Ships, deſign'd for the Expedition to Portugal, which was expected from the Texel to join thoſe in the Maeſe, was driven to the Northward upon the Coaſt of Norway. Of the Engliſh Ships in the Maeſe, ſome were ſtranded, and others entirely loſt: Upon which Accident, Sir George Rook went from the Hague to the Briel; and, by his Preſence and Directions, ſuch Diligence was uſed in repairing the Damage, that both the Engliſh and Dutch Squadrons being in a Readineſs to put to Sea about Three Weeks after, the King of Spain embark'd, and ſail'd for the Coaſt of England, with a very favourable Wind. Before his Departure, that Prince repreſented to the States, "That being lawful Heir of the Spaniſh Mo-"narchy, and the Province of Limburgh belonging to that Crown, he deſir'd that "the States would deliver up to him the Civil Government thereof, as a Confir-

The States, and their Allies, having granted his Demand, his Catholick Majeſty appointed Count Zinzendorf to take Poſſeſſion of the Town and Dutchy of Limburgh in his Name: Which he did accordingly. A. D. 1703.

Charles III. King of Spain, arriv'd at Spithead on the 26th of December, in the Afternoon, and had all poſſible Honours paid him, both from the Fleet, and the Town of Portſmouth. The next Day, the Duke of Somerſet, Maſter of the Horſe to her Majeſty, waited on that Prince on Shipboard, with a Letter and Compliment from the Queen, acquainting him, That ſhe was come to Windſor, in order to receive the Viſit his Majeſty intended to make her. The next Night he lay at Petworth, a Seat belonging to the Duke of Somerſet, where his Royal Highneſs Prince George was come to meet him; and on the 29th, about Seven in the Evening, arriv'd at Windſor. The Duke of Northumberland, Conſtable of Windſor-Caſtle, the Duke of St. Albans, Captain of the Band of Penſioners, and the Marquis of Hartington, Captain of the Yeomen of the Guard, receiv'd his Catholick Majeſty at his alighting out of the Coach; and the Earl of Jerſey, Lord Chamberlain of her Majeſty's Houſhold, lighted him to the Stair-head, where the Queen receiv'd him with great Demonſtrations of Reſpect and Affection. After he had made his Compliment to her Majeſty, acknowledging his great Obligations to Her for her generous Protection and Aſſiſtance, he led her Majeſty into her Bed-Chamber; where the Queen preſented about Forty Ladies of the firſt Quality to his Majeſty, who ſaluted them all with a Kiſs. After a ſhort Stay in her Majeſty's Bed-Chamber, his Royal Highneſs conducted his Catholick Majeſty to the Apartment prepar'd for him. He ſupp'd that Night with the Queen; who gave his Majeſty the Right Hand at Table, which he, with great Difficulty, admitted; the Prince ſitting at the End of the Table, on the Queen's ſide. The next Day, his Majeſty having notice that the Queen was coming to make him a Viſit, he met her at her Drawing-Room Door, endeavouring to have prevented her; but her Majeſty went on to his Apartment, from whence he led her Majeſty to Dinner.

Charles III. King of Spain arrives at Spithead.

He comes to Windſor.

His Entertainment there.

The Merchants trading in the Dominions of Spain took this Opportunity to wait on his Majeſty at Windſor; and being introduc'd by the Duke of Marlborough, deliver'd to his Majeſty this Compliment in the Spaniſh Tongue.

SIR,

" WE the Subjects of Her Majeſty of Great Britain, who have had our Houſes " and Traffick in Spain, are come to put our ſelves at the Royal Feet of " your Catholick Majeſty, and to welcome you into this Kingdom; as alſo to wiſh " your Majeſty a happy Voyage, and good Succeſs; hoping in God, after a little " Time, to have our Houſes and Trade again, under the Protection of your Majeſty, " in your own Kingdom. We pray God to preſerve your Majeſty's Royal Perſon, " for the Good of Chriſtendom.

His Catholick Majeſty receiv'd theſe Gentlemen very favourably, and, in a moſt obliging manner, aſſur'd them of his Favour and Protection; expreſſing himſelf thus; Eſtimo la Gracia y Favor; which is the higheſt Compliment the Spaniſh Language admits in their Sovereign.

That Afternoon was ſpent in Entertainments of Muſick, and other Diverſions; the Court making the moſt ſplendid Appearance that ever was known in England. After Supper, his Catholick Majeſty would not be ſatisfy'd, till, after great Compliments, he had prevail'd with the Dutcheſs of Marlborough to give him the Napkin, which he held to her Majeſty when ſhe waſh'd: And in returning the ſame to her Grace, his Majeſty put his Diamond Ring in it, as a Mark of his great Eſteem for that Lady. Supper being over, he led her Majeſty to her Bed-Chamber; where, after ſome Stay, he took his Leave of her, reſolving to depart next Morning; which he did accordingly, after having made ſeveral Preſents to ſeveral Ladies attending her Majeſty's Perſon, and, by his Genteel, Majeſtick, and Affable Carriage, approv'd himſelf a moſt accompliſh'd Prince, to a moſt diſcerning and polite Court. His Majeſty, accompany'd by the Duke of Somerſet, and other Perſons of Quality, lay on the 31ſt of December at Petworth, arriv'd at Portſmouth the 1ſt of January, and went immediately on Board the Royal Catherine at Spithead, highly pleas'd with his Reception and Entertainment at Windſor, and with the Honours paid him by the Fleet, and in the ſeveral Towns thro' which he paſs'd, both in his Journey thither, and in his Return to Spithead. Two Days after, his Majeſty came aſhore incognito to ſee the Dock, and honour'd with a Viſit Admiral Callemberg, who, ſome Time before, was arriv'd at Spithead with the greateſt Part

A. D. 1703. of the Dutch Men of War and Tranſports. The 5th, about Four in the Afternoon, Sir George Rook, with the whole Fleet, ſail'd from Spithead for Liſbon, with a very favourable Wind; and continued his Courſe till the 10th, when the Wind turn'd North-Weſt, and blew very hard. The Fleet was then in the Latitude of Forty ſix Degrees, Three Minutes, within Sixty Leagues N. W. E. of Cape Finiſter. The next Morning there was a great Calm of Wind, but the Sea was ſo much agitated in the Bay of Biſcay, that the Ships ſuffer'd more than they did during the Storm. The 12th, the Wind, which had been pretty moderate during the Night, became moſt violent from W. S. W. whereby the Fleet was diſpers'd; and it being impoſſible for the Tranſport-Ships to keep the Sea, they made the beſt of their way for our Harbours. The Admiral us'd all poſſible Endeavours to keep his Fleet together; but ſeveral Men of War being damag'd in their Maſts and Riggings, he was forc'd to return into the Channel; and on the 20th of January came to St. Helen's, where the Dutch, and the reſt of the Fleet, were already arriv'd. The King of Spain, on this Occaſion, gave ſignal Proofs of his ſteddy Courage and Reſolution: For, during the Violence of the Tempeſt, he continued on the Deck; and, diſregarding his own Danger, expreſs'd only a Concern for others. The Admiral having deſir'd him to go down into his Cabin; No, reply'd that Prince; I will ſtay, and be an Eye-Witneſs of your Diligence, and of the Labour that you, and your Officers, undergo for my Service. The Weather continued ſo tempeſtuous, that Sir George Rook could not come from St. Helen's to Spithead till the 23d. The next Day, the Duke of Somerſet went on Board the Royal Catherine, to compliment the King of Spain in her Majeſty's Name, and invite him on Shore; aſſuring him, That her Majeſty had given ſuch preſſing Orders for repairing the Fleet, that the ſame ſhould be ready to ſail in few Days: Whereupon his Majeſty landed at Portſmouth.

He ſails for Portugal, Jan. 5.

And is forc'd back by a Storm.

His great Reſolution and Courage.

* Jan. 21. Acts paſs'd. Three Days * before, the Queen came to the Houſe of Peers, and having given the Royal Aſſent to an Act granting an Aid to her Majeſty, for continuing the Duties upon Malt, Mum, Cyder and Perry, for one Year, ſhe made the following Speech to both Houſes.

My LORDS and GENTLEMEN,

The Queen's Speech to the Parliament.

" THE Misfortune of the King of Spain's being forc'd back upon our Coaſt by " contrary Winds, which, I hope, will loſe but very little Time, does yet
" make it ſo reaſonable to haſten our Preparations for this Year's Service, that tho'
" I am very ſenſible of your Zeal in forwarding all Things relating to mine, and
" the publick Service; yet I cannot but take this Occaſion to deſire you, with " all Earneſtneſs, that you would give the greateſt Diſpatch to the Buſineſs of this " Seſſions ſtill depending, which is ſo neceſſary for the Good of the common In-" tereſt.

The King of Spain puts again to Sea; Both by the Admiral's and the Duke of Somerſet's Care, the Fleet was in a Readineſs to put to Sea again by the 1ſt of February; but the Winds continued contrary till the 12th of that Month, when, Sir George Rook, having on Board the King of Spain, ſail'd from Spithead to St. Helen's, and the next Morning made the beſt of his way to Portugal. The 25th, the Confederate Fleet gain'd the Rock of Liſbon, and ſail'd up the River; the Admiral (on Board whom was his Catholick Majeſty) being ſaluted by all the Forts and Caſtles, with a Triple Diſcharge of their Cannon, ſtriking their Flags three ſeveral Times before they fir'd. As ſoon as the Admiral came to an Anchor, Mr. Methuen, Envoy Extraordinary, in the Abſence of his Father, her Majeſty's Ambaſſador Extraordinary there, (who was indiſpos'd with the Gout) went on Board, had Audience of the King, to welcome him in her Majeſty's Name; and was very graciouſly receiv'd by his Catholick Majeſty; who expreſs'd the great Reſpect and Veneration he had for her Majeſty, and how ſenſible he was of the ſignal and many Obligations he ow'd her; which he hop'd he ſhould be ſo happy as to be able to return in ſuch a manner, as might ſhew the whole World the grateful Senſe he ſhould always retain of her Majeſty's Kindneſs to him. The King of Portugal ſent the ſame Night the Duke of Cadaval on Board the Admiral, to compliment his Catholick Majeſty; who immediately ſent the Prince of Lichtenſtein, his High-Steward, to wait upon the King of Portugal, with a Compliment of Condoleance upon the Death of the Infanta, his eldeſt Daughter. To this the King return'd Anſwer, That the Joy for his Catholick Majeſty's Arrival, ſhould baniſh all Sorrow from his Mind, as well as from his Court and Dominions: And accordingly, Orders were given, That the Mourning, upon that Occaſion, ſhould be laid aſide for Three Days, and Illuminations made as many Nights in every Houſe, with other publick Rejoicings; which were obey'd by the People of all Ranks and Conditions, with all imaginable Chearfulneſs. The Admirante of Caſtile, and ſeveral other Perſons of Quality, went alſo on Board the Admiral, to wait on his Catholick Majeſty; who remain'd on Board the 26th. The next * Day, the Admiral, with the reſt of the Men of War, went up the River, and anchor'd over-againſt the Royal Palace; the Caſtles on both ſides the River continually firing. Between Four and Five in the Afternoon, the King of Portugal, accompanied by the Two Princes, his eldeſt Sons, with ſeveral Perſons of the Firſt Quality, embarked on a very noble Brigantine, rowed by Forty Men, clad in Crimſon-Velvet, laced with Silver, attended by the reſt of the Nobility in Barges and Felucca's, and went on Board the Royal Catherine. When his Majeſty came by the Ship's Side, he ſtruck his Flag, and when he came into the Ship, Sir George Rook ſtruck his Flag, and let fly his Streamer, and ſaluted him with Twenty Five Guns, which was taken by the whole Fleet, and anſwered from on Shore. His Catholick Majeſty received the King of Portugal at the Ladder-Head, which was made very Commodious, and waited on him to his Cabin, giving him the Right-Hand whilſt he was in the Ship. After a ſhort Stay there, the Two Kings went into the Brigantine. When they put off, both Ships hoiſted their Flags, which had remained ſtruck, while the King of Portugal was on Board the Admiral, and Sir George gave Two Salutes, of Twenty Five Guns each, which was followed by the reſt of the Fleet. The King of Spain had the Right-Hand on Board the Brigantine; and both Kings landed under a Triumphal Arch, which was erected at the Head of a very magnificent Bridge, built for this Purpoſe, and adorned with ſeveral Triumphal Arches, which, from the Palace Gate, run a good way into the River. At their Landing, the King of Portugal, giving the King of Spain the Right, took him by the Hand, and led him out of the Brigantine up the Stairs, and along the Bridge to the Palace, the Nobility, and the reſt of the Retinue, marching in a great deal of Order; and thus they proceeded to the Royal Chapel, where Te Deum was Sung, for his Catholick Majeſty's ſafe Arrival. Thence the King of Portugal conducted him to his Bed-Chamber, through one of the nobleſt Apartments in Europe; and then took his Leave of his Catholick Majeſty, but returned ſoon after, accompanied by the Two Princes: And their Majeſties ſupped together in Publick. The next Day Sir George Rook ſent Rear-Admiral Dilks on Shore, to Compliment the King of Portugal, to whom he was introduced by Mr. Methuen, and was very kindly received. The Envoy afterwards had Audience of the King of Spain, and made him a Compliment, in her Majeſty's Name, upon his being on Shore. The 29th, the Duke of Schomberg, Captain-General, and Commander in Chief of the Forces deſigned for this Expedition, preſented the Lord Portmore, and the reſt of the General Officers, to the King of Portugal, who met with a very favourable Reception: And the 1ſt of March, Sir George Rook, and the reſt of the Officers of the Fleet, introduced by the Engliſh Envoy, waited upon his Portugueze Majeſty, who received them with great Expreſſions of Kindneſs. The next † Day Vice-Admiral Leake, with a Squadron of Men of War and Tranſports, having on Board the Remainder of the Engliſh and Dutch Auxiliaries, went up the River of Liſbon; ſo that all theſe Troops did ſafely arrive there, not one Ship, either of this Squadron, or of the Grand Fleet, having miſcarried. Upon the News of the King of Spain's Arrival, the Marquis of Chateaumeuf, Ambaſſador from France, took his ‖ Leave of the King of Portugal, and the next Day retired into Spain.

Let us return to England: The Parliament had not ſat long, before the Bill for preventing Occaſional Conformity, which had miſcarried in the former Seſſion, was again ſet on Foot in the Houſe of Commons, by the zealous Sticklers for the Church of England, who, about this Time, began to diſtinguiſh themſelves by the Name of High-Church. This was neither unforeſeen, nor unexpected by the Heads of the Low-Church, or Moderate Party; and therefore an able and judicious Writer, (the late Dr. Davenant) by the Encouragement, and with the Approbation of the Lord Halifax, publiſh'd a Book, intituled, Eſſays upon Peace at Home, and War Abroad, wherein he enforced, what her Majeſty had lately recommended from the Throne; and endeavour'd to bring all Sorts of Men to throw aſide their Heats and Animoſities, and to unite in their own Defence, againſt the common Danger. This Book being principally deſign'd to diſſuade the bringing in of the Bill to prevent Occaſional Conformity, very ſharp Cenſures were paſs'd upon it, by the Party which the Author ſeem'd to have forſaken; and a great Promoter of that Bill, did not ſtick to reflect on him, as a profligate Scribbler. At the ſame Time Sir Humphrey Mackworth, another Gentleman of the ſame Principles, put out a ſmall Treatiſe in Defence of the Proceedings of the Commons, in Relation to the Comformity Bill; which Pamphlet, however, contain'd little elſe, beſides the Arguments uſed a Year before on the ſame Subject. On the other Hand, Sir John Packington made a warm

Bill to prevent Occaſional Conformity brought in again.

Speech in the Houſe, in behalf of the Bill; which agreeing with the Senſe of the Major Part of that Aſſembly, the ſaid Bill had a quick Paſſage there: But being ſent up *, it met with a very cold Reception among the Lords, who would hardly allow it a Second Reading. On this Occaſion, the Learned Dr. Burnet, Biſhop of Saliſbury, made a very eloquent † Speech againſt the Bill, and the Promoters of it, which had a great Influence on that illuſtrious Aſſembly; and beſides the Lord Haverſham, ſeveral other Peers ſpoke loud againſt the Bill, particularly the Duke of Devonſhire, the Earl of Pembroke, the Lord Mohun, the Lord Ferrers, and the Lord Wharton. The laſt of theſe, to ſhew the Unſeaſonableneſs of any Thing that led to perſecuting their Proteſtant Brethren, took Notice of the diſtracted State of Scotland, and of the Inſolence of the Papiſts in Ireland; adding, they ought rather to imitate the Parliament of the latter Kingdom, in their Zeal againſt Popery, than to frame Laws to increaſe Diviſions here. Nor did the Lord Mohun ſtick to ſay, That if they paſs'd this Bill, they had as good tack the pretended Prince of Wales to it. Upon the whole Matter, the Bill, after a Second Reading, was rejected by a Majority of Twelve or Thirteen Voices, which occaſion'd an almoſt univerſal Joy in the City of London: But 'tis obſervable, That Twenty Four Lords proteſted againſt it: And that in all the Queſtions relating to this Bill, the Duke of Marlborough and the Earl of Godolphin, went with thoſe that promoted it: Though whether out of meer Policy, or out of real Affection to the Church-Party, is uncertain.

The Bill rejected by the Lords.

The ſeaſonable Diſcovery of the ill Deſigns of the Jacobites and French Emiſſaries in Scotland, juſtified the Surmiſes of the Whiggiſh Peers, and contributed not a little to the rejecting the Conformity Bill: For in the Height of theſe Debates, the Earl of Scarborough produc'd ‖ a Letter from his Brother, acquainting his Lordſhip, that ſeveral ſuſpected Perſons, Retainers to the Duke of Berwick, were come over, and ſeized. Thereupon the Earl of Nottingham, Secretary of State, told the Houſe, That this Matter was already before the Queen, and would, in few Days, be laid before both Houſes: But nevertheleſs, the Majority of the Lords, either out of an eager Zeal for the Safety of the Queen's Perſon and Government, or rather, becauſe they did not think it Prudence to leave the Enquiry into ſo important an Affair, in the Hands of a Perſon, whoſe Affection to the Revolution Settlement had been queſtion'd, reſolv'd ∴ to appoint a Committee of Seven of their own Members to examine into it; and order'd that Sir John Macleane be brought to their Houſe the next Day. The Lord Steward having, on that  Day, acquainted the Lords from the Queen, "That "the Examination relating to Sir John Macleane, was a Matter of that Nicety and "great Importance, that ſhe thought it would be inconvenient to take it out of the "Method of Examination it was now in, and that her Majeſty would, in a ſhort "Time, communicate it to the Houſe: Their Lordſhips acquieſced, and order'd the Lords with White Staves to attend the Queen, to deſire her Majeſty, That Sir John Macleane might be committed to cloſe Cuſtody, which was complied with.

On the 17th of December, the Queen came to the Houſe of Peers, and having paſs'd the Act for a Land-Tax for the Year 1704, made a Speech to both Houſes, wherein ſhe acquainted them, That ſhe had unqueſtionable Informations of very ill Practices and Deſigns carried on in Scotland, by Emiſſaries from France, which might have proved extreamly dangerous to the Peace of theſe Kingdoms, as they would ſee by the Particulars which ſhould be laid before them, as ſoon as the Examinations could be fully perfected, and made publick without Prejudice: And that, in the mean time, ſhe doubted not but by this ſeaſonable Diſcovery, ſhe ſhould be able to give ſuch Directions for their Security, as would effectually prevent any ill Conſequences from theſe pernicious Deſigns. The Two Houſes were variouſly affected with this Diſcovery; and as the Scotch Plot made then a great Noiſe, and was the main Handle by which the Whigs and Revolutioners depreſs'd the Tories and Jacobites in the Queen's Favour, I ſhall endeavour to put it in a true Light, and to extricate it from thoſe Mazes of Uncertainty and Obſcurity, in which it has been involved by Partial Writers.

The Queen acquaints both Houſes with the Scotch Plot.

Mr. Lockhart, among the reſt, in his Memoirs concerning the Affairs of Scotland, would perſuade his Readers, that this was a Sham Plot, and villainous Deſign, contrived by the Duke of Queenſberry, to ruin the Cavaliers and Country-Party: But as his own Memoirs are a ſtanding Proof that there was in Scotland, ever ſince the Revolution, a great Party, who conſtantly adhered to the Exiled Royal Family; ſo his Account of this Affair, in particular, evidently ſhews, that, whoever was the chief Promoter, the Scotch Jacobites were, at this Juncture, ripe for an Inſurrection. "After the Parliament of Scotland, ſays Mr. Lockhart, was adjourn'd, mutual En-"gagements were renew'd between the Cavaliers, on the one Part, and the Duke of "Athole, Earl of Seafield, and Earl of Cromarty, on the other: And, accordingly, "when theſe Lords, with the Earl of Eglinton, went up to London, they were en-"tirely truſted by the Cavaliers. " ties ſtrove who ſhould outdo one another, in paying their Reſpects, and ſhewing " their Submiſſion to the good Will and Pleaſure of the Duke of Marlborough, and " Lord Godolphin. The Queen, indeed, for Faſhion-ſake, was ſometimes addreſs'd " to: But ſuch Application was made to thoſe Two Lords, that it was obvious to " all the World, how much the Scotch Affairs depended on them. After the " Scotch Nobility had attended the Engliſh Miniſters Six or Eight Weeks, a Re- " port was ſpread, as if a Plot had been diſcover'd, wherein a certain Num- " ber of the Heads of the Cavaliers had engaged to riſe in Arms againſt Queen " Anne, in Favour of the pretended Prince of Wales, (as they termed the King); " and this Story was propagated to blacken thoſe People's Endeavours to liberate " their Country from the Slavery and Dominion which England uſurp'd over it. " After the Duke of Queenſberry had broke his Vows to the Cavaliers, and ſeen " them, when united to the Country, ſo ſtrong and zealous a Party, that there was " no Hopes of being able to ſtand it out againſt ſo violent a Torrent, he bethought " himſelf how to undermine them, and leſſen their Intereſt at Court: And, in " Concert with his dear Friends, the Duke of Argyle, the Earls of Stair and Leven, " and Mr. Carſtairs, a Preſbyterian Preacher, reſolv'd to frame ſuch a Plot, as when " lodg'd upon thoſe they deſign'd it againſt, ſhould, in all human Probability, be " their utter Ruin and Deſtruction. They pitch'd upon Simon Frazer, (Lord " Lovat) of Beaufort, as the Tool to carry on this wicked Deſign, and be Evidence " to accuſe ſuch Perſons as they directed. This Gentleman, Three or Four Years " before, had been guilty of a moſt ſcandalous Rape upon the Perſon of the Lady " Dowager Lovat, Siſter to the Duke of Athol, for which Crime the Lords of Ju- " ſticiary had condemn'd him to dye: And Letters of Fire and Sword were raiſed, " and a Detachment of King William's Troops ſent againſt him and his Adherents, " who were pretty numerous, between whom ſeveral Skirmiſhes happen'd. The " Duke of Argyle was his great Patron, (upon Account of the ancient Grudge be- " tween the Families of Athol and Argyle;) but Frazer finding that his Grace was " no longer able to protect him againſt the Force of Law and Juſtice, he quitted " the Kingdom, and retired to France; where King James having an Account of " the Crimes for which he had left his Native Country, would not, during his Life, " allow him to come to the Court of St. Germains. This Perſon being made " Choice of, as well qualify'd for the intended Deſign, was ſent for from France to " England, and afterwards diſpatch'd from thence to Scotland; but before he left " France, by the Advice of his Friends at Home, he turn'd Papiſt; and finding " a way to be introduced to the French King by the Pope's Nuntio, he repreſented " himſelf as a Perſon of great Intereſt in Scotland, and oppreſſed for his Zeal to " the Royal Family; and that with Encouragement, and a ſmall Aſſiſtance, he " could contribute to make a great Diverſion to the Engliſh Arms, and much pro- " mote the Royal Intereſt; and for that End propoſed, That his moſt Chriſtian " Majeſty would furniſh him with Two or Three Hundred Men, and a good Sum " of Money to take along with him to Scotland, where he would perform Wonders: " But the French King, unwilling to hazard his Men and Money, without a farther " Security, and more Probability than his Aſſertions, gave him a fair Anſwer, de- " ſiring him to go firſt to Scotland, and bring him ſome Credentials from thoſe Per- " ſons, over whom he pretended ſo much Power; which he agreed to, and got, for " that Purpoſe, a little Money, and, by the French Intereſt, ſuch Credit at St. Ger- " mains, as to obtain a Commiſſion from King James to be a Major-General *, with " a Power to raiſe and command Forces in his Behalf, which was the main Thing " he aimed at: But at the ſame Time, Captain John Murray, Brother to Mr. Mur- " ray of Abercarnie, and Captain James Murray, Brother to Sir David Murray of " Stenhope, were likewiſe, under the Protection of Queen Anne's Act of Indemnity, " ſent over to Scotland to be a Check upon him, and bring Intelligence, how they " found the Tempers of the People, and their Inclinations towards King James. " Thus provided, Frazer arrived in England; and on the Borders of Scotland, was " met by the Duke of Argyle, and by him conducted to Edinburgh, where he was " kept private; and being fully inſtructed what he was to do, the Duke of Queenſ- " berry gave him a Paſs, to ſecure him from being apprehended, in Obedience to " the Letters of Fire and Sword emitted againſt him: And now he goes to the " Highlanders, introduces himſelf into the Company of all that he knew were well " affected to King James, and his Intereſt; there produces his Major-General's " Commiſſion, as a Teſtimonial of the Truſt repoſed in him, and endeavours to get " from them Promiſes to riſe up in Arms, and ſignify the ſame under their Hands; " that the King might know aſſuredly who they were, and what Numbers he had to " truſt to, and regulate his Affairs accordingly. " the Terms he demanded; but generally there were few, that did not regret the " King's repoſing any Truſt in a Perſon of ſo bad a Character, and fearing he would " betray them, refuſed to treat, or come to Particulars with him. After he had " practiſed here and there through the Highlands, with ſmall Succeſs, when the Par- " liament was adjourn'd, he went to London, to conſider of what further Uſe he " might be to his Conſtituents, reſolving (though the Primum-Mobile, and his Pa- " tron, the Duke of Argyle, was now dead) to continue in their Service; and they " finding he had made but a ſmall Progreſs, and could not, as yet, fix any Thing " at the Doors of the Perſons againſt whom they levell'd; they reſolv'd to ſend him " again to France, to demand Letters, and further Encouragement to the Dukes of " Hamilton and Athol, the Earls of Seafield and Cromarty, and the Cavaliers: And " for that End, the Duke of Queenſberry procured him, and Two others with him, " a Paſs from the Earl of Nottingham, Secretary of England, under borrowed Names. " If he went upon a good Deſign, as the Duke of Queenſberry afterwards alledg'd, " Why needed he have made their Perſons and Buſineſs ſuch a Secret to the Queen's " Secretary, as that he muſt know neither? But before Frazer reached Paris, and " had executed his black Deſign, it came to Light, in a great Meaſure; for the fa- " mous Mr. Ferguſon ſoon diſcovered, and conſequently defeated the Project, when " it was as yet but in Embrio. Frazer, whilſt he was in London, having addreſs'd " himſelf to him, and one Mr. William Keith, (Son to Sir William Keith, and a great " Dependant on the Duke of Athol) he acquainted them with his pretended Deſign " and Project for King James, and mightily preſſed Keith, that he would uſe his " Endeavours to perſuade the Duke of Athol to forgive him, and allow him Acceſs " to his Grace, ſince he was heartily ſorry for the Crime he had committed, and " was promoting ſo good a Deſign: But Keith, (though he play'd the Fool, and " dipp'd deep enough with him in all other Points) told him, that was what he " could not preſume to propoſe, and what he knew the Duke of Athol would never " grant. Ferguſon, an old experienced Plotter, underſtanding Frazer's Character, " ſuſpected his Integrity; and it coming to his Knowledge, that he was often pri- " vately with the Scotch Courtiers, was by them ſupported, and had obtained a Paſs, " as above related, ſoon concluded, that there was ſome baſe Deſign in Hand, and " thereupon gave the Duke of Athol Notice of it: And he again having enquired " at the Earl of Nottingham, and finding Ferguſon's Informations to be true, and " his Suſpicions to be well-grounded, acquaints Queen Anne with the whole Proce- " dure, accuſing the Duke of Queenſberry in Particular, and his other Friends and " Partiſans, of correſponding with, and protecting a Perſon outlawed, in the King- " dom of Scotland, guilty of the moſt horrid Crimes, and a * Trafficker with France: " Whereupon the Duke of Queenſberry, to vindicate himſelf, declared, That " Frazer, when he came to Scotland, wrote to him, that he could make great Diſ- " coveries for the Queen's Service; and that upon that Account he had ſent for " him, given him a Protection in Scotland, and again procured him a Paſs in " England, with a Deſign he ſhould go to France, and make a clearer Diſcovery, " which he did not doubt he would have perform'd, had not the Matter come too " ſoon to Light; and as a convincing Proof thereof, he produces a Letter from " the Queen Mother, directed to Lord M———, which he interpreted the Lord " Murray, (formerly the Title of the Duke of Athol, before his Father died) but " his Grace made uſe of ſuch ſolid Arguments, and convincing Proofs, to ſhew " the Fallacy of that Letter, that Queen Anne, her ſelf, could not deny, but that " ſhe thought it not genuine. I muſt likewiſe acquaint you, that David Baily " having wrote a Letter about the ſame Time that the pretended Plot was diſco- " vered at London, to the Duke of Hamilton, then at Edinburgh, intimating, That " the Duke of Queenſberry, and Marquis of Annandale, had been at great Pains to en- " gage him to go to London with them, and be a concurring Evidence of ſuch Things as " he ſhould afterwards be informed of againſt the Dukes of Hamilton and Athol, the " Earl of Hume, and ſeveral others; which he poſitively refuſing to do, he thought it his " Duty to make a Diſcovery thereof, that thoſe noble Perſons might be on their Guard, " leſt the Duke of Queenſberry ſhould ſtill endeavour, and at laſt find out proper Perſons " to be his Accomplices. This Information upon the Back of the pretended Plot, " made a great Noiſe. The Duke of Hamilton laid it before the Scots Privy-Coun- " cil, and deſired their Lordſhips would take it, and its Conſequences, under Con- " ſideration: Upon which Baily was impriſoned, and examined: But having no " Proof, beſides his own Aſſertions, he was ordered to ſtand in the Pillory, and " baniſhed out of the Kingdom: The firſt Part of which Sentence was executed, " but the other taken off, when the Marquis of Tweedale came to the Government. Mr. Lockhart, however, adds, " That 'tis hard to make a Judgment of this laſt Sto- " ry: If it was true, ſays he, 'tis a further Proof of the Court's Deſigns: But for " my

" my Part, (tho' I am convinc'd the Duke of Queenſberry was capable of it, and " did as ill with Frazer) I believe it was all a Lye, and only a Counter-Plot, fram'd " by Mr. Baily of Ferviſwood, to exaſperate the Nation againſt the Duke of Queenſ- " berry; David Baily being his near Relation, and Tweedale's Party appearing moſt " earneſt for his being acquitted in Council. Beſides, this David Baily was ſo ſcan- " dalous a Fellow, that he would ſcarcely have been allow'd as an able Wit- " neſs in any Judicatory in Europe, where his Character was known." Thus far Mr. Lockhart.

Another Scotch Writer, who * collected the Original Papers about the Scotch Plot, with Remarks upon the whole, gives a ſmoother Turn to this Affair. " The Princi- " ples (ſays he, in his Preface) of falſe Policy, imbib'd by the Jacobites and Pa- " piſts, make it natural for them to wiſh the Overthrow of the preſent Eſtabliſh- " ment: And we may aſſure our ſelves, that the Courts of France and St. Germains " will not be wanting to put them upon acting according to thoſe Principles, and " to cultivate all the other Seeds of Diviſion ſown among us, in order to give " them an Opportunity. But, as we ought carefully to avoid all Cauſes of pub- " lick Diviſions and Diſcontents on the one hand, we ought as carefully to diſtin- " guiſh betwixt Perſons ſo diſcontented on the other, elſe we may be led into dan- " gerous Miſtakes. And ſince a Spirit of Calumny and Slander is inſeparable from " a Spirit of Faction; what one Party ſays againſt another, ought to be well weigh'd " before it be publickly receiv'd; eſpecially when the States of a Nation are brought " in to be Sharers of the Reproach. It's known, that ever ſince the Revolution, but " more particularly ſince the Affair of Darien, there has been a Party in Scotland " ſtruggling for the Recovery of their Ancient Conſtitution; and, to the Eter- " nal Honour of our Eſtates of Parliament, be it ſaid, they have made Noble Ef- " forts for that End. This being a popular Cauſe, and, by Conſequence, apt to " take with the Nation; ſuch of our Scotch Adminiſtrators, as ſold themſelves to " all the Meaſures of the late Courts, found nothing ſo likely to bring the Per- " ſons and the Cauſe into Diſrepute, as to charge them both with Jacobitiſm, and " Deſigns upon the Prerogative. In this Charge they have been ſo unconſciona- " ble, as, without juſt Ground, to include not only many of our greateſt Families, " and ſome of the chief Inſtruments of the Revolution in particular, but the Pro- " ceedings of our Parliament during the laſt Seſſion in general; and by this means, " to ſatisfy their own private Reſentments, they would confound the Innocent with " the Guilty, and graft a falſe Plot upon the Stock of a true one. It's unaccountable " to think how much they have impos'd upon the Revolution-Party in England, by " ſuch Miſrepreſentations, induſtriouſly ſpread by their Tools; but it's hop'd our " Neighbours will, at laſt, be undeceiv'd, and diſtinguiſh betwixt the Efforts of " true Patriots, to recover an Ancient and Brave Nation from the Oppreſſions " of Domeſtick Courtiers, and the bad Influences of a Foreign Miniſtry, and the " Deſigns of real Jacobites to overturn Religion and Liberty."—— He concludes his † Remarks with telling us, " He is firmly of Opinion, that a dangerous Con- " ſpiracy has been, and is ſtill carrying on in all the Three Nations, for ſubverting " the Government: But he can never believe there's any Truth in the Plot, as " charg'd in groſs, by Captain Frazer and others, upon the Country-Party in Scot- " land: That Charge he muſt needs think to be a Deſign of the Courts of France " and St. Germains, in order to blaſt the Reputation of thoſe, who inſiſt upon ſuch " Conditions of Government, as may for ever prevent the Return of Popery and " Arbitrary Sway."—— But what he adds a little ‖ lower, plainly ſhews, that the Scotch Country-Party were but one Degree remov'd from downright Jacobites; and that, if they were diſoblig'd and provok'd, by being deny'd thoſe Terms of Government which they thought neceſſary to ſecure them from Oppreſſion, they might be tempted to accept the pretended King James upon thoſe Terms, and join with France and the Jacobite Party in England, to ſettle him likewiſe upon the Throne of that Kingdom. This the Scots publickly avow'd, at this Juncture, both in Converſation, and in Print.

Let us now attend the Proceedings of the Court of England, and of the Two Houſes of Parliament, in relation to the Scotch Conſpiracy; whereby the Miſts caſt upon it by partial Writers, will be diſpell'd. On the 18th of December, the Lords proceeded by Balloting to the Choice of their Select Committee; which fell on the Dukes of Devonſhire and Somerſet, the Earls of Sunderland and Scarborough, and the Lords Somers, Townſhend, and Wharton. Two Days * after, the Earl of Kingſton reported their Lordſhips Addreſs of Thanks, for the Queen's late Speech, which the ſame Evening was preſented to her Majeſty; and in which they "acknowledged her " Condeſcenſion, in promiſing to communicate to them the Informations ſhe had " receiv'd of the ill Practices of her and their Enemies in Scotland." They added, " They doubted not, the Zeal this Houſe had ſhew'd for having the Perſons ſe- " cur'd,

" cur'd, and their Deſigns brought to Light, had been very acceptable to her Ma-
" jeſty: That they rely'd upon her, That ſhe would give ſuch Directions, as might " effectually prevent all pernicious Deſigns. That they would maintain the Rights " of the Crown, and the Church of England, in all ſuch Ways as might moſt pro" mote the Good and Happineſs of all her Subjects:" And concluding, That they deſir'd not to let their Thoughts go beyond her Majeſty's Perſon to a future Security, but as 'twas neceſſary for her Majeſty's Preſervation, as well as for ſettling the Minds of all her good Subjects, who look'd on the Proteſtant Succeſſion as her Majeſty's beſt Security, as well as their own. In Anſwer to this Addreſs, the Queen told the Lords, " She " was very glad to find, that the Communication ſhe had made to this Parliament, had " been ſo acceptable to them: That ſhe made no doubt of the Zeal of the Houſe
" of Lords, nor ſhould her own ever be wanting to ſecure her People from Dangers,

The Queen's Anſwer.

† Dec. 20. The Commons Addreſs.

The ſame † Day, the Commons waited alſo on the Queen with an Addreſs of Thanks; wherein they repeated their unanimous Reſolutions to ſtand by and ſupport her Majeſty, and the Succeſſion in the Proteſtant Line, againſt all Pretenders, and all her Majeſty's Enemies; aſſur'd her, That they would diſpatch the Remainder of the Supplies with Readineſs and Zeal: And concluded, That they could never have the leaſt Diſtruſt of her Majeſty's Vigilance and Care for the Preſervation of the Proteſtant Intereſt in general, of the Monarchy, and the Church of England as by Law eſtabliſh'd. In Anſwer to this, the Queen told the Commons, That ſhe was very well pleas'd with their Aſſurances of diſpatching the Supplies, and with the other Parts of their Addreſs, in which they expreſs'd ſo much Duty and Readineſs to ſupport, and to truſt her: Aſſuring them withal, That they might depend upon her Willingneſs to join her Endeavours with them, in ſecuring the Proteſtant Succeſſion in the Monarchy, and the Church of England as by Law eſtabliſh'd. The Commons conceiving the Lords appointing a Select Committee to examine the Perſons ſuſpected, to be an Incroachment upon the Royal Prerogative, or at leaſt a Reflection on ſome of her Majeſty's Miniſters, preſented, Three ‖ Days after, the following Addreſs to her Majeſty.

Queen's Anſwer.

‖ Dec. 23.

Moſt Gracious Sovereign,

Another Addreſs of the Commons, aſſerting the Royal Prerogative.

" WE your Majeſty's moſt Dutiful and Loyal Subjects, the Commons of England in Parliament aſſembled, beg Leave humbly to lay before your Ma-
" jeſty, the great and juſt Concern we are under, to ſee any Violations of your " Royal Prerogative.

" Your faithful Commons believe the Adminiſtration of the Government beſt
" ſecur'd, when it is left to your Majeſty, as the Law has entruſted it; and " have ſo firm a Dependance upon your Majeſty's Affection to your People, and " your great Wiſdom, that they can never apprehend ſo little Danger from any " Conſpiracy, as when the Examination thereof is under your Majeſty's Dire" ctions.

" We are therefore ſurpriz'd to find, That when ſeveral Perſons, ſuſpected of " Treaſonable Practices againſt your Majeſty, were taken into Cuſtody by your
" Meſſengers, in order to be examin'd, the Lords, in Violation to the known Laws
" of the Land, have wreſted them out of your Majeſty's Hands; and, without your
" Majeſty's Leave or Knowledge, in a moſt extraordinary Manner, taken the Exami" nation of them ſolely to themſelves; whereby a due Enquiry into the Evil Practices
" and Deſigns againſt your Majeſty's Perſon and Government, may, in great Meaſure, be " obſtructed.

" Your Loyal Commons do therefore moſt earneſtly deſire your Majeſty to ſuffer
" no Diminution of that Prerogative, which, during your Majeſty's Reign, they " are confident will always be exerted for the Good of your People.

" And we humbly beg Leave to aſſure your Majeſty, That as we are reſolved,
" by timely and effectual Supplies, to enable your Majeſty to carry on the War,
" which you have ſo gloriouſly begun; ſo we will, to the utmoſt of our Power,
" ſupport your Majeſty in the Exerciſe of your Juſt Prerogative at Home, and
" the aſſerting of it againſt all Invaſions whatſoever.

The Queen's Anſwer.

In Anſwer to which, the Queen told them, She had had the Satisfaction to find, that the Matter which might have occaſion'd this Addreſs was now at an End: That ſhe return'd 'em many Thanks for the Concern they expreſs'd for her Prerogative, and for their repeated Aſſurances of making the Supplies effectual, which would be greatly for the Honour and Advantages of the Kingdom: And that ſhe would be careful not to give way to any Invaſions of the Prerogative of the Crown, or of the Rights and Liberties of the People.

On

A. D. 1703.

On the 17th of December, when Mr. St. John reported the Addreſs of Thanks, the Commons reſum'd the adjourn'd Debate of the Day before, concerning a Perſon who was an Officer in the late King James's Army; and who having been taken into Cuſtody by the Governor of Berwick, was afterwards diſcharg'd by the Earl of Nottingham's Allowance; which was complain'd of, not without ſome ſevere Reflections upon his Lordſhip. This Debate laſted till late at Night, but at laſt it was reſolv'd, "That the Earl of Nottingham, one of her Majeſty's Principal Secretaries "of State, for his great Ability and Diligence in the Execution of his Office, for "his unqueſtionable Fidelity to the Queen and her Government, and for his ſteady "adhering to the Church of England as by Law eſtabliſh'd, had highly merited "the Truſt her Majeſty had repoſed in him." The Commons order'd, at the ſame time, That Mr. Speaker ſhould lay this Reſolution before her Majeſty, when the ſaid Addreſs ſhould be preſented to her: Which being done accordingly, the Queen was pleas'd to ſay, She was glad to find they were well ſatisfied with the Earl of Nottingham, who was truſted by her in ſo conſiderable a Poſt.

The Earl of Nottingham cleared by the Commons.

It was Matter of Wonder to many, to ſee that the Commons, whoſe proper Province it is to take care of the Liberties of the Subject, ſhould now appear ſuch zealous Aſſertors of the Royal Prerogative, in Oppoſition to the Houſe of Lords, who are the natural Defenders of it. But this was entirely owing to a Party-Pique: The Tories, or High-Church Party, who were the ſtrongeſt in the Houſe of Common, laying hold on all Opportunities both to ingratiate themſelves with the Queen, whom they knew to be fond, if not of the Thing it ſelf, at leaſt of the Sound of Prerogative; and to thwart the Whigs, who had the Majority in the Houſe of Lords. To this we may add, That the Tories receiv'd no ſmall Encouragement from ſome Perſons in high Stations, who were ready enough to countenance thoſe who endeavour'd to ſtifle the Scotch Conſpiracy, which made the Whig Lords the more eager to examine into it. On the other hand, the Houſe of Lords highly reſented the Reflection caſt upon them by the Commons, in their Addreſs to the Queen, of the 23d of December; wherefore to vindicate their Honour, and aſſert their Privileges, their Lordſhips reſolv'd and declar'd, "That by the known "Laws and Cuſtoms of Parliaments, they have an undoubted Right, whenever "they conceive it to be for the Safety of her Majeſty and the Kingdom, to take "Examinations of Perſons charg'd with criminal Matters, whether they be in "Cuſtody or not; and to order, that Perſons to be examin'd, be taken into Cuſto-"dy of her Majeſty's Sworn Officer attending their Houſe. And * That the ſaid "Addreſs of the Commons is unparliamentary, groundleſs, without Precedent, and "highly injurious to the Houſe of Peers, tending to interrupt the good Correſpon-"dence between the Two Houſes, and create an ill Opinion in her Majeſty of the "Houſe of Peers, and of dangerous Conſequence to the Liberties of the People, the Con-"ſtitution of the Kingdom, and Privileges of Parliament." This done, they appointed a Committee to draw up a Repreſentation upon the ſaid Reſolution; which was accordingly done the ſame Day, and preſented the † next to her Majeſty, who return'd the following Anſwer:

Party-Pique between the Lords and the Commons.

Votes of the Lords to vindicate their Honour, and aſſert their Rights. Jan. 12, & 13.

* Jan. 17.

† Jan. 18.

My LORDS,

I Am very ſorry for any Miſunderſtandings that happen between the Two Houſes of Parliament, which are ſo inconvenient for the Publick Service, and ſo uneaſy to Me, that I cannot but take notice with Satisfaction, of the Aſſurance you give Me, that you will carefully avoid all Occaſion of them. I thank you for the Concern you expreſs for the Rights of the Crown, and for my Prerogative; which I ſhall never exert ſo willingly, as for the Good of my Subjects, and the Protection of their Liberties.

The Queen's Anſwer to the Lords Repreſentation.

On the 29th of January, the Earl of Nottingham acquainted the Houſe of Lords, "That he was by the Queen commanded to lay before them, the Papers which con-"tain'd all the Matters hitherto diſcover'd of the Conſpiracy in Scotland; But that "there was one Thing which was not yet proper to be communicated to the "Houſe, becauſe the making it publick might prevent a farther Diſcovery of Mat-"ters of greater Importance: But that their Lordſhips ſhould be acquainted with "this alſo, ſo ſoon as it could be done without Prejudice to the Publick Service." Hereupon the Lords reſolv'd to addreſs her Majeſty, That the whole Matter, and all Papers relating to the Scotiſh Plot, might be laid before them with all convenient Diſpatch, that this Houſe might not want an Opportunity, before the End of this Seſſion, of enquiring into, and diſcovering the wicked Deſigns and Conſpiracies of her Enemies. To this Addreſs the Queen anſwer'd, ‖ ſomewhat out of Humour, That having ſo lately acquainted them, that ſhe had communicated to them all the Particulars relating to the Deſign againſt Scotland,

Some Papers communicated to the Lords Houſe.

They call for the reſt.

Scotland, which could yet be made publick without Prejudice to the Service; her Majeſty did not expect to be preſs'd upon that Matter, before it was ſcarcely poſſible that the State of it could be alter'd: And that her Majeſty made no doubt, but before the End of the Seſſion, there might be a proper Time to communicate that, which could not now be made publick without great Inconveniency. Two Days after *, the Earl of Nottingham deliver'd to the Lords ſeveral other Papers relating to the Scotch Conſpiracy; which being ſealed up as the former were, it was order'd, That all the ſaid Papers ſhould be open'd on Tueſday the 8th of February, and all the Lords ſummon'd to attend.

Other Papers laid before their Lordſhips.

* Feb. 3.

By this Time, all poſſible Endeavours had been uſed to ſtifle the Plot, and to prepoſſeſs the Queen and the Publick, that the whole was a Contrivance of the Duke of Queenſberry's: For which Purpoſe, the famous Plotter, and Counter-Plotter, Ferguſon, was a very uſeful Inſtrument to the Perſons ſuſpected. When they thought they had raiſed a ſufficient Battery againſt all Attacks from their Enemies, the Duke of Athol deſired the Queen to ſummon her Scotch Council: Which being done accordingly on the 18th of January, and her Majeſty being preſent, his Grace read a Memorial, importing in Subſtance, "That having heard Surmiſes were induſtri-
" ouſly ſpread, as if ſeveral of her good Subjects and Servants in Scotland were upon
" ill Deſigns againſt her Majeſty and Government, he begg'd ſhe would be pleas'd
" to call her Servants together, that they might name the Perſons guilty or
" ſuſpected; and give her Majeſty a true Account of the Proceedings of the laſt " Parliament, which had been miſrepreſented to her Majeſty. That ſhe was " pleaſed to ſay, ſhe intended to call them together for thoſe Ends, which, however,
" was delay'd. That in the mean time, on the 25th of November laſt, there was " a Diſcovery made to his Grace, That one Captain Simon Frazer, who was a de" clared Rebel, outlaw'd in Scotland for a moſt barbarous Rape, and other Crimes,
" had been in London about a Fortnight before, and that he had come from St. Ger-
" mains in May or June laſt; and after having ſtaid ſome Time in London, had gone
" to Scotland, and there had met with the Duke of Queenſberry at Edinburgh, at the " Time of the Sitting of the Parliament; and having got from the Duke of " Queenſberry a Protection and Paſs, he with them travell'd to ſeveral Places in " Scotland, particularly to Argyle-ſhire, where he produced the ſaid Paſs, as alſo a " Commiſſion and Inſtructions ſign'd by King James; and in this manner he ſe-
" duced and trepann'd ſeveral of her Majeſty's Subjects. That after this, and " about the End of September, he return'd to London, where he again met privately
" with the Duke of Queenſberry, who procured a Paſs to the ſaid Frazer, and " Three of his Accomplices, from the Earl of Nottingham, under falſe Names: Up-
" on which, Frazer went to Holland, in his way to St. Germains, in order to give " an Account of his Negotiations in Britain. That Mr. Robert Ferguſon was the firſt
" who (by a Gentleman he ſent to his Grace) inform'd the Duke of " Athol of Captain Frazer's having been at London, and gone to St. Ger-
" mains, with ill Deſigns againſt her Majeſty; and that the Duke of Queenſberry
" intended by him, and his Accomplices, to ruin him (the Duke of " Athol) and ſeveral Perſons of Quality in Scotland. That on the 27th of Novem-
" ber, the Earl of Nottingham acquainted his Grace, That the Duke of Queenſberry
" having, by a Note, deſired a Paſs for Four Perſons, (viz. Captain Smeaton, or " Campbel, ——Monro, ——Dickiſon, and ———Forbes) he had given the ſaid
" Paſs. That thereupon the Duke of Athol waited on her Majeſty, and acquainted
" her with what Information he had got: And afterwards further inform'd the Earl " of Nottingham, That the Duke of Queenſberry had deliver'd the ſaid Paſs to Colin
" Campbel of Glenderoul, an Officer in the Army in Scotland; and that he deliver'd
" it to Thomas Clarke, an Apothecary in Watling-ſtreet, at whoſe Houſe Frazer had " lodg'd, and who deliver'd it to him at Graveſend. That the Deliveries of the " ſaid Paſs were confirm'd by the Examinations of Thomas Clarke and Colin Camp-
" bel. That on the 30th of November, his Grace acquainted the Earl of Notting-
" ham, how the Accomplices of Captain Frazer were to direct the Letters from
" hence to him beyond Sea, and how Frazer directed his Letters to his Correſpon-
" dents here: Upon which ſeveral Packets of Letters were intercepted, which diſ-
" cover'd Frazer's Correſpondents, particularly Colin Campbel, Mr. Keith, John Mur-
" ray, and Captain Macleod, an Officer in the Guards in Scotland. That it appear'd,
" that one Corbouſier, a Merchant in London, had given a Bill of One Hundred " and Fifty Guineas to Captain Frazer; and that Frazer had written to the " Duke of Queenſberry, under Cover to Colin Campbel; and that there was " alſo a Letter intercepted, from Frazer to the Earl of Leven. That on " the 6th of December, Mr. Keith acquainted his Grace, that the firſt Time he " met Captain Frazer in London, he deſired him to try if the Duke of Athol would

That by the Declarations of Colin Campbel, and Sir John Macleane, and " others, and by Frazer's Letters, it appears, That beſides the Deſign of an Inva- " ſion, there was another moſt wicked Contrivance, to bring ſeveral of her Majeſty's " good Subjects and Servants into a Plot, in order to ruin them and their Families: " Wherefore, his Grace humbly begg'd her Majeſty would be pleas'd to order the " Duke of Queenſberry to give his Reaſons, Firſt, why he met with, employ'd, and " gave Two Hundred Guineas to Captain Frazer in Scotland, with whom, as being " an intercommuned Rebel, it was Treaſon, by the Law of that Kingdom, to con- " verſe. 2. How the Duke of Queenſberry came to give a Paſs or Protection to a " Rebel, whoſe Buſineſs in the Highlands of Scotland, was to tempt her Majeſty's " Subjects into a Rebellion. 3. For what Purpoſe the Duke of Queenſberry ſent " Captain Frazer, and Three Perſons with him, ſo carefully and privately to " France, and what Services he expected her Majeſty would reap by their going " thither, ſince it appear'd by the Letters and Declarations, that Frazer's main " Deſign, was to engage the French King to proſecute his Deſign of an Invaſion." In a ſubſequent Addition to this Memorial, the Duke of Athol thought fit to obſerve, in his own Vindication, Firſt, " That he ſaw by Frazer's Letters, and the Decla- " rations of Colin Campbel of Glenderoul, and Captain Maitland, and by what a " Lord had publickly ſaid, that there had been a Deſign to accuſe his Grace, and " ſeveral others, of correſponding with St. Germains: Secondly, That the ſaid De- " clarations were made by thoſe who were guilty of correſponding with Frazer, and " who were employed by the Duke of Queenſberry, in his Secret Affairs with " him. Thirdly, That what theſe Perſons alledged, was only upon a Hearſay " from Frazer, viz. That his Grace deſign'd to ſend Glengary, and Captain James " Murray, to St. Germains, neither of which Two Perſons, his Grace ever ſpoke " to: Concluding, That his Grace, as well as the Duke of Hamilton, were men- " tion'd by Sir John Macleane, the laſt Perſon who came over from St. Germains, " and ſaid, he had Inſtructions to ſound, or try both their Graces: But that this " was rather a Vindication; for ſince they were to be ſounded, they were not en- " gaged, or had Correſpondence there: By all which the World might judge of the " reſt of the malicious Calumnies of his Grace's Enemies; and how eaſy a Matter " it would be for his Grace to refute them, when publick; eſpecially the inconſi- " ſtent Story of a Letter ſaid to have been ſent from St. Germains to his Grace." By this Memorial it manifeſtly appears, That the Duke of Athol, one of the prin- cipal Perſons ſuſpected, had either the Peruſal, or Information from the Secretary of State, of the Contents of the Letters, Declarations, and Examinations, relating to the Scotiſh Conſpiracy, before the ſame were communicated to the Houſe of Lords: A Circumſtance which ſhews, That the Accuſed were more Countenanced than the Accuſers; ſo that it was no difficult Matter for the former to put a Slur upon the Plot.

One of the chief Reaſons that may be aſſign'd for the Conduct of the Court on this and other like Occaſions, is, that the Queen, and thoſe ſhe entruſted with her moſt intimate Thoughts and Inclinations, took for current Coin, what Mr. Ferguſon ſo- lemnly * declared, viz. That there was not a Nonjuror, or one reckon'd a Jacobite, en- gaged in a Plot againſt her Majeſty and the Government: And that 'twas ſo far from giving them Uneaſineſs, that her Majeſty was on the Throne, that they heartily bleſſed GOD the Monarchy was preſerved againſt the Deſigns of the Republicans, and that one of the Serene Family of the Stuarts poſſeſs'd the Sovereignty, in ſpite of all the Endeavours of ſuch as would either have ſupplanted her, had the late King William lived, or would have brought either the Princeſs Sophia of Hanover, or the Prince, her Son, into England, or to Scotland, during her Reign, ſince his Deceaſe. That though 'twas not to be denied, but there were thoſe in her Majeſty's Dominions, who would not ſwear to ſerve her againſt the Prince at St. Germains, yet ſince they were willing to live quietly under her Majeſty's Authority, 'twas hoped they would be diſtinguiſh'd from Rebels and Traytors. And ſhould the Weight of Foreign Affairs bring her Majeſty into a Neceſſity of Capitulating with France, there was none in theſe Kingdoms, who would be either more careful for the Secu- rity of the Proteſtant Religion, and of the Church of England, or of her Majeſty's en- joying the Royal Dignity during her Life, (as was anciently ſtipulated between Henry the IId, and King Stephen, and between Richard Duke of York, and King Henry the the VIth;) than they who were ſtigmatized as Jacobites, would. As to the preſent Conſpiracy, Ferguſon added, " Nor are the French Plots againſt her Majeſty to be much " dreaded, whilſt the Miniſters of that King know not better how to chuſe their " Tools for promoting them, than to employ Captain Frazer in Scotland, who is " both ſo obnoxious to the Laws of that Nation, and accounted infamous by all " Men, for the vileſt and moſt abominable Crimes. Neither can it be reaſonably " imagined, that the Duke of Queenſberry, who not only protected the ſaid Frazer " in Scotland, but obtained a Paſs by a ſham Name of the Earl of Nottingham here, " for conveying him abroad again, would be in a Conſpiracy with the Court of " France, againſt her Majeſty, and the preſent Government. And it ought to be " held ridiculous, that either my Lord Stair, who was the Author of the Maſſacre " of Glencoe, or Mr. William Carſtairs, who was deeply engag'd both in the in- " tended Aſſaſſination at the Rye-Houſe, and in all the Treaſonable Deſigns, as well " againſt King Charles the IId, as againſt the late King James, while on the " Throne, ſhould now be embark'd in the Service with thoſe at St. Germains, and " co-operate with thoſe who are ſaid to be carrying on the exalting the Prince of " Wales to the Throne of his Anceſtors. Nor will it paſs upon any Man of com- " mon Senſe, that the Duke of Queenſberry's Confidence in, Kindneſs to, and ſin- " gular Care for the covering and protecting Captain Frazer, ſhould be meerly in " Hopes of Frazer's getting his Grace's Pardon, in caſe of a Revolution, as the ſaid " Frazer was pleaſed to ſay, both to my ſelf, and, as I have been told, to others, " and not rather be that Duke's Intelligence from Abroad, as his ſaid Grace is re- " ported to have affirmed. And what Sort of Informations his Grace had con- " tracted with him about, may be partly conjectured from the Rumours which have " obtain'd for ſome Time, about this Town, of a Plot carrying on in Scotland " againſt her Majeſty, wherein not only the Duke of Athol, but divers others of " the firſt Quality in that Kingdom, were criminally concerned. But as to the " more exact Knowledge, what Tidings Frazer was to convey to the Duke of " Queenſberry from the other Side, were to be, will be learned from intercepted Let- " ters hither and thither; ſo both my own getting the Duke of Athol acquainted " how ſuch Letters might be laid hold of, and his Grace's laying it before her Ma- " jeſty, are an undeniable Evidence, that both the Duke of Athol, and my ſelf, " are far from being in a Conſpiracy againſt her Majeſty, and her Government. " Nor can it eſcape the Obſervation of her Majeſty, and the honourable Lords of " her Privy-Council, how precarious the Lives, as well as the Liberties and For- " tunes of all ſuch muſt needs be, againſt whom either Frazer doth entertain Re- " ſentments, and bear Revenge, (as he is known to do, in Reference to the Duke " of Athol, and to many more of the firſt Rank of Scotland,) or the Duke of " Queenſberry himſelf harbour the leaſt Grudge. And ſeeing it will contribute to " the giving further Light to this Matter, to have thoſe ſtrictly examined, who " either here, or in Scotland, have had ſecret Converſation and Tranſactions with " Captain Frazer, 'tis my humble Opinion, that beſides what may be learned from " the Laird of Locheal, and from other Heads of the Highland Clans in Scotland, all " whoſe Names are, in great Probability, known to his Grace the Duke of Queenſ- " berry, it having been under his Grace's Protection, as well as Advice, that Frazer " went to them; ſo much more, in the Uſe of proper Methods, may be gained from " Mr. Keith, and Lieutenant Campbell, who, of all Men, ſeemed to be more in " Frazer's Confidence, and in his Secrets, than they have yet declared. And in " my humble Opinion, 'twill be one of the moſt effectual Courſes to prevail with " them to deal openly, and without Reſerve, if they ſhall be threatned with the " being ſent to Scotland, in order to be proceeded againſt. Nor is it unlikely, but " ſomething conſiderable in this Affair, may be wreſted out of Mr. Carſtaires, in " that he having procured of the late King William a Pardon to Frazer, with re- " ſpect to his having levied War, and being ſtill reckoned by Frazer for one of " his eſpecial Friends, (which alſo was told to my ſelf by the ſaid Frazer) 'tis not " to be ſuppoſed, but that one endowed with the inſinuating Faculty and Art, for " which Mr. Carſtaires is ſo much valued by his Party, as he is known to be, would " wind himſelf as much as he could, into the Knowledge of what Frazer came to " tranſact in Scotland, eſpecially when he could not avoid the having a Proſpect of " rendring the being let into it, ſerviceable to the Intereſt of the Kirk. Three Days after, * Mr. Furguſon laid before the Queen's Privy-Council, a long Narrative, containing what he had omitted in his former Declaration, and what he had ſince been able to recollect, chiefly about his Conferences with Captain Frazer: All which ſeem'd calculated either to ridicule, or to ſtifle the Scotch Plot.

* Dec. 27.

The Lords take the Scotch Plot into Conſideration.

On the 8th of February, the Lords proceeded to take that Affair into Conſideration; and, in the firſt Place, read the Papers that had been laid before them on the 29th of January, the moſt material of which was intitled, an Account of the Conſpiracy in Scotland. The Subſtance of it was, " That the Earl of Nottingham had In- A. D. 1703.

29th

" formation of ſome Deſigns of an Inſurrection in Scotland, to be ſupported with " Money, Arms, and Men, from France, with which he acquainted the Queen, The Earl of Nottingham's Account of it.
" who having receiv'd the like Informations from the Duke of Queenſberry, com" manded him to communicate theſe Matters to his Grace, that by comparing " them together, her Majeſty might the better judge of them. This the Earl did,
" and the Duke ſaid, the Accounts he had received were much of the ſame Kind;
" and added, That his † Informer was come from France, but his Name he was † Viz. Capt. Frazer.
" obliged to conceal, and was ſo forward and zealous in doing Service to her Maje-
" ſty, that he was willing to go again into France, and to ſend from Time to " Time, or even to bring Intelligence of the further Progreſs of the French De" ſigns; with which he was ſure he ſhould be truſted, as he had been formerly.
" That his Grace ſaid, he accordingly deſigned to ſend him; which the Earl of " Nottingham approved, and acquainted her Majeſty with this Converſation with the " Duke of Queenſberry. That on the 10th of November, 1703, the Earl of Nottingham had an Account, That Sir John Macleane, with others, were in Cuſtody
" at Folkſtone, as coming out of France without Leave; and that the ſame
" Day he receiv'd a Letter, as did alſo the Earl of Cromarty, from Sir John
" Macleane, intimating, that at his Landing, he had ſurrendred himſelf, and " deſiring, that he might be brought before the Earl, to give an Account of his " coming. That Sir John being accordingly ſent for in Cuſtody, and examined, he
" ſaid, That he had long deſir'd to come Home, and had often aſk'd Leave, by his Friends, without Succeſs; but now hearing of the Indemnity granted by the Queen to her Scotiſh Subjects, he gladly laid hold of it, being weary of the Hardſhips he endur'd in France, where he could not ſubſiſt with his Allowance: That he never had any Poſt, either in Court or Army; and he reſolved to live quiet at Home, in Hopes of ſome Favour from her Majeſty, in Conſideration of the Sufferings of his Family for their Loyalty. But being told, " That
" tho' this was a very ſpecious Repreſentation of his Caſe, yet 'twas impoſſible to " believe that this was all, or the true Deſign of his coming; ſince he had delay'd
" coming many Months after he knew of the Indemnity." Sir John Macleane, upon this, pretended Sickneſs; and that now he came in ſo much Haſte, that he brought his Wife, who had lain in but Eleven Days: Adding, That an Engliſh Fiſher-boat had been diſcharg'd, by Order of the Court of France, (a Thing never done before) without Ranſom or Exchange, on purpoſe to bring him to England. That this increaſing the Earl's Suſpicion, Sir John Macleane was told, " That however indemnify'd
" he might be in Scotland, he was ſtill liable to the Act of Parliament in England,
" which made it Treaſon to come hither from France: And that he muſt expect
" the Rigor of the Law, being ſo juſtly, from the above-mention'd Circumſtan-
" ces, to be ſuſpected of ill Deſigns." That thereupon he ſaid, He would tell the Earl all he knew, upon Aſſurance of his Pardon, and being treated like a Gentleman; ſo as not to be requir'd to appear in Publick, as an Evidence againſt any Perſon: " Of " which, by the Queen's Order, he being aſſur'd; he then told the Earl of Not- " tingham, That in July 1702, the Lord Lovat came to France, and told Sir John Sir John Macleane's Diſcovery.
Macleane, he had Matters of great Importance to communicate to the Queen at St. Germains; but requir'd a Promiſe from her, not to reveal any Thing of what he ſhould ſay to any of her Miniſters. That this being granted, Sir John Macleane carried him to the Queen, as he did afterwards, by her Directions, to Monſieur Torcy; to whom, as before to the Queen, he ſaid, That he was come from the Highlands of Scotland, where he had diſcours'd with many Heads of Clans, particularly Stuart of Apin, Sir Ewin Cameron, Sir Daniel Macdonald, and others, from whom he brought Aſſurances, that they would riſe in Arms with Ten Thouſand Men, if they were aſſiſted from France with Money, Arms, and Troops to ſupport them. That Monſieur Torcy, after communicating this to the French King, aſſur'd him, That his Maſter would furniſh them with Money and Arms, and alſo Men, ſo ſoon as his Affairs would admit of the laſt: And the Number agreed on was Five Thouſand; which were to be tranſported from Dunkirk, and landed at Dundee; from whence the March was ſhort and eaſy to the Foot of the Highlands, to which, if need were, they might retreat; and in the mean Time make a ſtand, and oppoſe any of the Queen's Forces that might be ſent againſt them, and give Time to the Highland Clans to aſſemble and come to them, and form and increaſe the Army, to be ſuperior to all the Queen's Forces in Scotland. That to facilitate this Deſign, Five Hundred Men were to be ſent from Breſt, to ſeize the Fort of Inverlochy; which could not reſiſt Cannon, being commanded by Hills near it: And that this would give Security to Ships coming into the River, and be a Means to convey Supplies of all kinds, as there ſhould be Occaſion. That the Execution of this Project was delay'd, partly becauſe the French King could not ſpare his Troops, partly becauſe his Fleet was not in a Condition to oppoſe the Engliſh; partly becauſe he did not entirely rely on the Lord Lovat's Information and Aſſurances; and partly, that he might ſee the Event of the Scotiſh Parliament; by which he might judge of the Diſpoſition of the Scots, as well as by ſome further Enquiry which he deſign'd to make. That therefore Lovat was ſent back in May laſt, with Captain Frazer and Captain John Murray, who had long been in the French Service, with Orders to come back as ſoon as the Scotiſh Parliament was ended, with an exact Account of the Inclinations of the People, and what Numbers might be relied upon to join with the French. That beſides theſe, one James Murray was alſo ſent to Scotland, with Orders to ſpeak with Duke Hamilton, (to whom one Bell was ſent before with like Directions, and died in Holland) and to engage him in the Intereſt of France, for the Support of the Prince of Wales. That there had been other Meſſages ſent to him; but the Queen told Sir John Macleane, She had had no Anſwer, and therefore order'd Sir John to ſound his Grace; and if he found him diſpos'd to her Service, then, and not otherwiſe, to communicate to him this Project: Which he was alſo to do to the Duke of Athol, and Earl Marſhal. And that Stephenſon, a Banker, formerly ſent to Duke Hamilton, was, at his Return, put into the Baſtile; which was thought to be occaſion'd by the Duke's not truſting him, and to prevent a Diſcovery; there being ſo many Factions at St. Germains, that nothing was kept ſecret.——— "That afterwards, up" on a further Examination, Sir John Macleane recollected the Names of the Per-" ſons, and the Men they could bring into the Field, which Lovat, aliàs Frazer,

" reckon'd upon, when he gave Account to the Court of France of the Scots Readi-
" neſs to riſe, if the French would ſupport them. That the Queen having com" manded the Earl of Nottingham to acquaint the Duke of Queenſberry with what
" Sir John Macleane had diſcover'd, his Grace thereupon told the Earl, That this " Frazer was the Perſon who diſcloſed to him ſome Matters of this Nature, with " which he had acquainted the Queen; but that he had not told her Majeſty his " Name, being under a ſolemn Engagement to conceal it. That this Frazer was " brought to him by the late Duke of Argyle and the Earl of Leven, who were " privy to all his Proceedings with him. That Frazer was gone to France, and had " promis'd to ſend his Grace an Account of all the French Deſigns; and would " come back whenever any Thing of Moment happen'd, or that his Grace ſhould
" require him: Whereupon the Duke of Queenſberry was deſir'd to call him back;
" for he was more likely to do Harm than Good, by any Intelligence that could " be expected from ſo ill a Man."

This Account contain'd, in the next Place, the Duke of Athol's Proceedings with the Earl of Nottingham, with the Subſtance of Campbel's, Clerke's, Keith's, and Ferguſon's Examinations; which, together with ſeveral other Papers, were read that Day, and the next *. Five Days after †, the Lords having taken the ſaid Papers into Conſideration, order'd the Uſher of the Black Rod immediately to attach the Body of William Keith, and keep him in ſafe Cuſtody, in order to his being examined by this Houſe; and that no Perſon be allow'd to ſpeak with him. Then, after reading other Papers, and further Debate thereupon, their Lordſhips reſolv'd to preſent an Addreſs to her Majeſty, which, on the 15th of February, was reported by the Duke of Bolton, and, with ſome Amendments, agreed to, as follows:

* Feb. 9.
† Feb. 14.

Addreſs of the Lords to the Queen.

WE your Majeſty's moſt Dutiful and Loyal Subjects, the Lords Spiritual and Temporal in Parliament aſſembled, humbly beg Leave to acquaint your Majeſty, That having (according to our Duty, and your Majeſty's Royal Intention) taken into our moſt ſerious Conſideration, the Papers laid before us by the Earl of Nottingham, relating to the very ill Practices and Deſigns carried on in Scotland, by Emiſſaries from France; We find mention made therein of ſeveral other Papers not yet brought to the Houſe, which we have Reaſon to believe are very material, as well for ſetting thoſe wicked and dangerous Conſpiracies in a due Light, as for our forming a right Judgment upon the whole Matter: In particular,

The Account of Deſigns of an Inſurrection in Scotland; which, by your Majeſty's Commands, the Earl of Nottingham communicated to the Duke of Queenſberry.

Mr. Stanhope's Letter, or Memorial, giving an Account of the Money to be remitted into Scotland and Ireland; with the Perſons Names to whom the ſame was to be paid.

The Letter wrote by an Officer of the Gariſon of Inverlochy, to the Governor; of a Deſign to draw great Numbers together, under Pretence of Hunting.

The Letter intercepted going from France to Scotland, written in a Gibberiſh Language; wherein the Conſpiracy is ſaid to be contained.

One Letter, going from Scotland to France, to the late Queen at St. Germains; written in the ſame Sort of Language.

A. D. 1703.

A Letter written by the proper Hand of the late Queen at St. Germains, to ſome Perſon in Scotland.

The Letters, or Accounts tranſmitted from the Duke of Queenſberry, as far as they relate to the Tranſactions with France, or concern any Conſpiracy in Scotland.

The Original Examinations of Sir John Macleane, Campbel, Clarke, Ferguſon, Lindſay, Keith, and Mrs. Fox.

The Commiſſion and Credentials from the Pretended Prince of Wales, to Frazer.

With all poſſible Reſpect to your Majeſty, and Deference to your Royal Judgment, we deſire theſe Papers may be communicated to the Houſe; as alſo an Affidavit concerning the Lord Belhaven, which we are inform'd is lodg'd in one of the Secretaries Offices; together with ſuch other Papers, relating to any Treaſonable Deſigns, which have been on foot in Scotland ſince your Majeſty's happy Acceſſion to the Throne, as your Majeſty, in your Wiſdom, ſhall think fit.

It is not our Meaning by this Addreſs, nor was it ever the Intention of the Houſe, to deſire, that the Matter which your Majeſty was pleaſed to ſignify by the Earl of Nottingham, could not be then properly communicated, without Prejudice to the Publick Service, ſhould be brought before the Houſe, till ſuch Time as your Majeſty ſhould judge it convenient; and therefore we take this Opportunity to ſay, That if a fair Repreſentation had been made to your Majeſty, of what was univerſally profeſs'd and declared to be the Senſe of the Houſe throughout the whole Debate, upon which our Addreſs of the 29th of January was form'd, it could not have been interpreted, as preſſing your Majeſty to lay that Matter before us, ſooner than conſiſted with your Majeſty's Pleaſure.

We remain ſtill in Hopes, That according to your Majeſty's Gracious Intimation, there may be a proper Time, before the End of this Seſſion, to communicate that Matter to us, without Inconvenience to the Publick.

We are deeply ſenſible, That your Majeſty and your People cannot be ſafe, while the Deſigns of the Emiſſaries of France, and the Abettors of the pretended Prince of Wales, in any Part of your Dominions, are not thoroughly ſearch'd into, and diſcovered; and that an imperfect and partial Enquiry into them, will rather encourage than prevent them.

It is upon this Account, that with ſo much dutiful Zeal, (which we are ſure will be always acceptable to your Majeſty) we deſire to have all the Information we can, before we proceed to offer to your Majeſty our humble Advice, of what may beſt contribute, in the preſent Juncture, to the Honour and Safety of your Majeſty, and the Security and Tranquility of your Dominions.

And upon this Occaſion we preſume to renew to your Majeſty, the Promiſe made in our Addreſs, of the 16th of January laſt, That no Dangers, nor Reproaches, nor Artifices whatſoever, ſhall deter or divert us from uſing our utmoſt Endeavours, from Time to Time, in diſcovering and oppoſing all Contrivances and Attempts againſt your Royal Perſon and Government, and the Proteſtant Succeſſion, as eſtabliſhed by Law.

The Queen's Anſwer to this Addreſs, was as follows: viz. I have ordered ſuch Papers to be laid before you, according to your Deſire in this Addreſs, as are now ready, and would have ordered them at firſt, had I imagined they would have been expected; but ſome of the Particulars being contain'd in Letters written to my ſelf, which will require a little Time to be Extracted, and others being in the Hands of the Secretary of Scotland; I am not yet able to make a full Anſwer to your Addreſs, but you ſhall have a more particular Anſwer with all convenient Speed.

The Queen's Anſwer.

On the 19th of February, the Earl of Nottingham acquainted the Lords, That her Majeſty had now ſent them all the Papers deſired in their laſt Addreſs, except the Information in which the Lord Belhaven's Name was mentioned, and which was ſent to the Duke of Queenſberry, who had left it in Scotland, but was order'd to ſend for it: That among theſe Papers there were ſome Letters in Gibberiſh, that wanted explaining: And that he (the Earl of Nottingham) had lately received a Letter, by the Diſcovery of Mr. Keith, upon which he thought it proper that Keith ſhould be examined. Hereupon an Order was made for that Purpoſe; and, on Monday, the 21ſt of February, the Duke of Somerſet having reported, "That Mr. Keith had prevaricated with the Lords, and that he did know the Meaning of ſeveral Things in the Letters, which he would not diſcloſe;" the Lords thereupon declared, That the ſaid Keith, by his Behaviour, did not ſeem an Object worthy of her Majeſty's Mercy. The Houſe proceeded to read the Papers deliver'd in Two Days before, by the Earl of Nottingham, and in particular, an Extract of a Letter from Mr. Stanhope, the Queen's Envoy and Plenipotentiary at the Hague, to Mr. Secretary Hedges, dated July the 9th---20th, 1703, importing, "He had received a Letter, dated as from "Amſter-

William Keith prevaricates with the Lords.

" Amſterdam, the Contents of which were of ſuch Concern, that he thought it his " Duty to tranſmit it to Mr. Secretary, viz. That there was ſomething againſt the Queen and her Government working in England, Scotland and Ireland, for there (at Amſterdam) were great Remittances of Money from Paris, and from Liſle, to the Duke of Hamilton Fifty Thouſand Piſtoles, to Sir Robert Hamilton, Knight, Twenty Five Thouſand Piſtoles, which Two latter were in Holland; and that moſt of this Money was already drawn for. The Letter from the late Queen at St. Germains, directed to L. M. T. and dated May the 20th, was as follows:

" YOU may be ſure, that when any Concerns require the Help of my Friends, " you are one of the firſt I have in my View. I am ſatisfied you will " not be wanting for any Thing that may be in your Power, according to your " Promiſe; and you may be aſſured of all ſuch Returns as you can expect from me " and mine. The Bearer, who is known to you, will tell you more of my Friend- " ſhip to you, and how much I rely on yours for me, and thoſe I am concerned " for.

After the Reading of ſeveral other Papers, the Lords order'd Colin Campbel, and Mr. Francis Fox, to be taken into the Cuſtody of the Black-Rod, and kept in ſafe and cloſe Confinement; and Two Days after *, their Lordſhips addreſs'd the Queen, " To iſſue her Royal Proclamation to promiſe a Pardon, and a Reward of Five " Hundred Pounds, to any Perſon, who ſhould, within Six Days after the Date of " the ſaid Proclamation, make known to the Lords Committees about the Scotch " Conſpiracy, the Key or Cypher, whereby the Four Letters, written in Gibberiſh " Language, might be fully explain'd, and alſo the Perſons Names to whom the " ſaid Letters were directed, from whom they came, and by whom ſubſcribed. With which Addreſs the Queen readily complied.

* Feb. 23.

On the 1ſt Day of March, the Lords order'd Major Richard Bowcher, Sir Thomas Stewart, alias Lord Belkaſky, and Mr. Jackſon of Gray's-Inn, to be taken into Cuſtody, in order to their being examined, in relation to the Scotiſh Conſpiracy; and Two Days after †, the Lord Wharton having acquainted the Houſe, That the Secret Committee was offered a Key, and the Letters to be decyphered, upon the Conditions ſet forth in her Majeſty's Proclamation; and alſo upon Condition, That the Key and Letters, when decypher'd, might be only communicated to the Lords of the Committee, and by them to her Majeſty, when ſhe ſhould think fit: It was thereupon reſolved, That the Committee be directed to agree to the Terms propoſed. On the 6th of March, the Earl of Nottingham communicated to the Houſe Two intercepted Letters; and the next ‖ Day, his Lordſhip laid alſo before the Houſe, the Papers relating to the Lord Belhaven, all which were referr'd to the Conſideration of the Lords Committees. On the 20th, the Duke of Somerſet reported from the ſaid Committee, the ſeveral Examinations of Sir John Macleane, and his Lady, Colin Campbel, William Keith, David Lindſey, Mr. Fox, Thomas Clarke, Mr. Corbuſier, Captain Meers, Mr. Patrick Oliphant, Mr. Ogilby, Sir Thomas Stewart, and Mr. Ferguſon, with ſome Remarks (a) thereupon; as alſo the Subſtance of the Four Gibberiſh Letters: Which Report being, on the 22d taken into Conſideration, after ſome Debate thereupon, it was reſolved, Firſt, " That it did appear to this Houſe, that there had been a dangerous Conſpi- " racy carried on, for the raiſing a Rebellion in Scotland, and invading that King- " dom with a French Power, in order to the ſubverting of her Majeſty's Govern- " ment, both in England and Scotland, and the bringing in the pretended Prince of " Wales. II. That it was the Opinion of this Houſe, That nothing had given ſo " much Encouragement to this Conſpiracy, as that the immediate Succeſſion to the " Crown of Scotland, after her preſent Majeſty, and the Heirs of her Body, was " not declared to be in the Princeſs Sophia, and the Heirs of her Body, being Pro- " teſtants. III. That the Queen would be pleaſed to uſe her Endeavours, by ſuch " Methods as ſhe ſhould think moſt proper, to have the Succeſſion of the Crown of " Scotland, declared to be ſettled on the Princeſs Sophia; and to take ſuch Meaſures " as might beſt conduce to the diſappointing and fruſtrating the Deſigns of her Ene- " mies, who were engaged in this Conſpiracy againſt her Majeſty, and her Go- " vernment. And, IV. That her Majeſty be aſſured, that when her Endeavours " ſhall take effect for ſettling of the Succeſſion, this Houſe would do all in their " Power to promote an entire Union between the Two Kingdoms, for their mutual " Security and Advantage." Theſe Reſolutions were order'd to be drawn up into an Addreſs by the Lords Committees; to whom, the ſame Day, the Lord-Keeper, by Order, gave the Thanks of this Houſe, for their Exactneſs, Care, and Fidelity, in the Examination of the Scotiſh Conſpiracy. Two Days after †, the Lords, after ſome Debate, came to a Reſolution, "That Sir John Macleane having made an in- "genuous Confeſſion to the Lords Committees, her Majeſty ſhould be addreſs'd, to "give him as full and compleat a Pardon, as might conſiſt with the Safety of her "Majeſty and her People, and to provide for his Subſiſtence." And then the Order of the Lords for the cloſe Confinement of Sir John Macleane in the Tower of London, was diſcharged. Upon this Recommendation, Sir John Macleane receiv'd a conſiderable Penſion from the Crown; tho', in his Heart, in the Queen's Time, and openly after her Death, he continued ‖ in the Intereſt of the pretended Prince of Wales. It is obſervable, that the Debate about Sir John Macleane, brought in another concerning the Earl of Nottingham: A Motion being made, That he had not done his Duty, in his Examination of Sir John Macleane, when firſt brought before him, by not asking him all the Queſtions he ought, for that afterwards he had confeſſed other Matters to the Committee of Seven Lords. But upon the Queſtion, his Lordſhip was juſtified, and voted to have done his Duty by a Majority of Eleven Voices.

On the 25th of March, the Lords took into farther Conſideration, the Papers and Matters relating to the Scotiſh Conſpiracy; and it was reſolv'd and declar'd, "That "Mr. Robert Ferguſon's Two Papers, dated the 24th and 27th of December, 1703. "were falſe, ſcandalous and ſeditious, contrived to ſtifle the Conſpiracy, tending to "create an ill Opinion in her Majeſty of her good Subjects, and to promote "the Intereſt of the pretended Prince of Wales." Then the Houſe taking notice, that either through the Careleſsneſs or Connivance of ſome Miniſters, Mr. Ferguſon was not as yet cenſured for the ſaid Papers; after a long Debate it was farther reſolv'd, "That the not paſſing a Cenſure upon Mr. Robert Ferguſon's Two Papers, "dated the 24th and 27th of December, 1703. which were by him delivered to the "Cabinet-Council, nor ordering him to be taken into Cuſtody, nor proſecuted for "the ſame, before they were laid before this Houſe, was a great Encouragement, "to her Majeſty's Enemies, and of dangerous Conſequence to the Government, and "the Proteſtant Succeſſion, as eſtabliſhed by Law." And it was order'd, 1ſt, That Sir Edward Northey, her Majeſty's Attorney-General, ſhould forthwith proſecute the ſaid Robert Ferguſon for the ſaid Papers, with the utmoſt Severity, according to Law. 2dly, That the ſaid Ferguſon be committed to the Priſon of Newgate, for treaſonable and ſeditious Practices. At the ſame time, the Lords order'd Sir Thomas Stewart to be diſcharg'd from the Cuſtody of the Black-Rod. And Four Days after *, Mrs. Frances Fox was order'd to be committed to the Priſon of Newgate, and proſecuted for High-Treaſon: But neither ſhe, nor Ferguſon, ever receiv'd the leaſt Puniſhment. On the 31ſt of March, the Lords, in a Body, attended the Queen with their Addreſs, containing the Four Reſolutions above-mention'd: To which the Queen return'd an Anſwer, That ſhe had ſome time ſince declared her Intentions of endeavouring the Settlement of the Proteſtant Succeſſion in Scotland, to her Servants of that Kingdom, as the moſt effectual Means for ſecuring their Quiet, and our own; and the readieſt way to the entire Union betwixt both Kingdoms, in the perfecting of which, it was very deſirable no Time ſhould be loſt.

The Differences between the Two Houſes about the Examination of the Plot, were ſtill heighten'd by the Lords interpoſing in an Affair, the Cognizance of which the Commons pretended, did ſolely belong to themſelves. The Caſe was thus: One Matthew Aſhby commenced and proſecuted an Action at Common Law againſt William White, Mayor of Ayleſbury, and the Conſtables of that Town, for refuſing to receive his Vote at an Election of Burgeſſes to ſerve in Parliament for the ſaid Borough; but being caſt, he brought an Appeal into the Houſe of Lords, who upon ſtrict Examination of Witneſſes, and upon mature Deliberation, gave Judgment in Favour of Aſhby: Thereby aſſerting both the Right of Electors, and the Freedom of Elections. However, the Commons looking upon theſe Proceedings as an Encroachment on their Privileges, after having inſpected the Lords Journals, * reſolv'd, 1ſt, That according to the Known Laws and Uſage in Parliament, it is the ſole Right of the Commons of England in Parliament aſſembled, (except in Caſes otherwiſe provided for by Act of Parliament) to examine and determine all Matters relating to the Right of Election of their own Members. 2dly, That according to the known Laws and Uſage of Parliament, neither the Qualification of any Elector, or the Right of any Perſon elected, is cognizable or determinable elſewhere than before the Commons of England in Parliament aſſembled, except in ſuch Caſes as are ſpecially provided for by Act of Parliament. 3dly, That the examining and determining the Qualification or Right of any Elector, or any Perſon elected to ſerve in Parliament, in any Court of Law, or elſewhere, than before the Commons of England in Parliament aſſembled (except in ſuch Caſes as are ſpecially pro- vided for by Act of Parliament) will expose all Mayors, Bailiffs, and other Officers, who are obliged to take the Poll, and make a Return thereupon, to Multiplicity of Actions, vexatious Suits, and insupportable Expences, and will subject them to different and independent Jurisdictions, and inconsistent Determinations in the same Case, without Relief. 4thly, That Matthew Ashby having in Contempt of the Jurisdiction of this House, commenced and prosecuted an Action at Common Law against William White, and others, the Constables of Aylesbury, for not receiving his Vote at an Election of Burgesses to serve in Parliament for the said Borough, is guilty of a Breach of the Privilege of this House. 5thly, That whoever shall presume to commence or prosecute any Action, Indictment, or Information, which shall bring the Right of the Electors, or Person elected to serve in Parliament, to the Determination of any other Jurisdiction than that of the House of Commons, (except in Cases specially provided for by Act of Parliament) such Person and Persons, and all Attorneys, Sollicitors, Counsellors, and Serjeants at Law, soliciting, prosecuting, or pleading in any such Case, are guilty of a high Breach of the Privilege of this House. And order'd these Resolutions to be fixed upon Westminster-Hall Gate, signed by the Clerk.

Another Affair gave the Commons Occasion to carp at the Proceedings of the Lords: On the 20th Day of January, Charles Bathurst, Esq; presented a Petition to the House of Commons, touching an "Order made by the House of Peers the 12th "Day of February, 170$\frac{2}{3}$. with relation to an Order made by the Court of Exche- "quer the 15th of July, in the Thirteenth Year of King William, concerning an In- "quisition and Survey of the Boundaries of the Honour of Richmond, and Lordship "of Middleham, and of many other Manors bounding thereupon; and praying such "Relief on the Subject-Matter of the Petition, as the House should think meet." Hereupon the Commons appointed some of their Members to search the Journals of the House of Peers, and the Offices of the Courts of Exchequer and Chancery, touching their respective Proceedings in relation to this Affair. Those Members having made their Report, the Commons, in a Grand Committee, took † the same into Consideration, and after a long Debate, resolv'd, "That the House of Lords, taking "Cognizance of, and proceeding upon the Petition of Thomas Lord Wharton, com- "plaining of an Order of the Court of Exchequer, bearing Date the 15th of July, "1701. for filing the Record of a Survey of the Honour of Richmond, and Lord- "ship of Middleham, in the County of York, is without Precedent, and unwarran- "table, and tends to the subjecting the Rights and Properties of all the Commons "of England to an illegal and arbitrary Power: And that it is the undoubted Right "of all the Subjects of England, to make such Use of the said Record, as they "might by Law have done, before the said Proceedings of the House of Lords.

On the 1st of February, the House of Commons proceeded to take into Consideration the Account of the Conspiracy, which her Majesty was pleased to communicate to them; and the Papers relating thereto being read, it was unanimously resolv'd, "That an Address be presented to her Majesty, acknowledging her great Goodness "in communicating those Papers: And that this House was abundantly satisfied "in her Majesty's wise Conduct, and great Care of her People; and also to assure "her Majesty, that they would, to the utmost, support her against all her Enemies "whatsoever." This Address being presented to the Queen by such Members of the House as were of the Privy-Council, her Majesty commanded Mr. Secretary Hedges to acquaint the House, That she was glad they were so well satisfy'd with what she had done; and that she took very kindly the Confidence they had in her, and the Assurances they had given her on this Occasion.

The Queen's Answer.

On the 31st of January, the Queen sign'd a Patent, to be pass'd the Great Seal of Scotland, for reviving and restoring there, the most Ancient and Noble ORDER of the THISTLE: In pursuance of which Patent, John Duke of ARGYLE was receiv'd into that Order the 4th of February, by her Majesty the Sovereign thereof; as were Three Days * after, John Duke of Athol, William Marquis of Annandale, James Earl of Dalkeith, George Earl of Orkney, and James Earl of Seafield. Her Majesty dispensed, during her Royal Pleasure, with the Ceremonies and Solemnities of their Instalment as well as that of all the rest of the Knights Brethren; and was pleased to give a Commission to David Nairne, Esq; to be Secretary of the said Order, and to confer upon him the Honour of Knighthood. Some Historians pretend, that that Order was first instituted by Achaius King of Scotland, after having concluded an Alliance with Charlemaign. And others tell us, it was instituted, or at least renew'd by James the IVth, who took St. Andrew for Protector thereof. Be that as it will, the said Order was neglected, till the late King James reviv'd it; but there was no Creation of any Knight in the Reign of King William. The Ensigns of the Order are, a Green Ribbon, which the Knights wear in the same manner as the Knights of the Garter wear a Blue; and a Star, with St. Andrew's Cross. Their Motto is, Nemo me impune lacessit.

Accordingly the Duke of Marlborough having, on the 15th of January, embark'd on Board the Mary Yatch in the River, arrived Three Days after at the Hague, where he receiv'd the Compliments of all the Publick Miniſters, the General Officers, and other Perſons of Quality; and having had ſeveral Conferences with the Deputies of the States General, left that Place on the 11th of February, and on the 14th arrived at London. The ſame Day, Mr. Secretary Hedges deliver'd to the Houſe of Commons a Meſſage from her Majeſty, importing, That her Majeſty having taken into her ſerious Conſideration, the mean and inſufficient Maintenance belonging to the Clergy in divers Parts of this Kingdom, to give them ſome Eaſe, had been pleaſed to remit the Arrears of the Tenths to the poor Clergy; and for an Augmentation of their Maintenance, her Majeſty declared, that ſhe would make a Grant of her whole Revenue ariſing out of the Firſt-Fruits and Tenths, as far as it ſhould become free from Incumbrances, to be applied to this purpoſe: And if the Houſe of Commons could find any proper Method, by which her Majeſty's good Intentions to the poor Clergy might be made more effectual, it would be a great Advantage to the Publick, and acceptable to her Majeſty. Hereupon the Commons, in an humble Addreſs, † return'd "her Majeſty their moſt hearty Thanks "for her moſt gracious Meſſage, and the great and pious Concern her Majeſty had "for the increaſing the Maintenance of the poor Clergy out of her own Revenue; "aſſuring her withal, that they would do their utmoſt to make her Majeſty's cha- "ritable Intentions moſt effectual." Accordingly a Bill was brought in for that purpoſe: And Four Days ‖ after, the Archbiſhop, Biſhops, and Clergy of the Province of Canterbury, in Convocation aſſembled, acknowledg'd the Queen's Bounty in an humble Addreſs to her Majeſty, who took that Opportunity again to aſſure them, that ſhe would always continue to protect the Church of England. James Boucher arraign'd.

On the 21ſt of February, James Boucher, formerly Aid de Camp, and Gentleman of the Horſe to the Duke of Berwick, was arraign'd before the Lord Chief-Juſtice Holt, the Lord Chief-Juſtice Trevor, the Lord Chief-Baron Ward, the Juſtices Powel, Powis, Gould and Tracy, and the Barons Bury and Price, appointed by a Special Commiſſion of Oyer and Terminer, at the Queen's-Bench Bar, upon Two Indictments for High-Treaſon; one, for being in Arms in the Service of the late King James in Ireland; and the other, for returning from France into England without Licenſe, againſt the Form of the Statute made in the Ninth Year of King William. The Court being ſat, and the Indictments read, Mr. Boucher pleaded Guilty: And then having obtain'd Leave to ſpeak, he endeavour'd to extenuate his Crime; alledging, "That it was very well known, that he had ſollicited Two Years paſt for "Leave to come over into England: That while he was in France, he did all he "could to ſubſiſt the Engliſh, that were brought Priſoners to the French Camp: "That he apply'd himſelf to Colonel Lumley, who promis'd to lay his Caſe before "the Queen; but not hearing from him, he went to his Son, who told the Priſoner, he had no Opportunity to acquaint the Queen with it. That afterwards "he was taken going to Holland; and then he ſent to Colonel Lumley, who promis'd to remember him. That he continued ſtill to ſollicit the Service of her "Majeſty's Subjects; and had procur'd their Horſes, that had been taken from "them, to be reſtor'd to them. That he ſpoke to Colonel Godfrey, and he promis'd "to ſpeak to - - - - - - - - who promis'd to make it their Intereſt, to procure his "Return. That after the Campaign was over, he came over into England, at Noonday, with his Children; and ſent up a Letter to my Lord Nottingham, to acquaint "him where he was. That, indeed, he follow'd King James into Ireland; but had "no Commiſſion; and only ſerv'd the Duke of Berwick as Aid de Camp: And that "afterward, he went into France; but never ſerv'd there with any Commiſſion, "but as Maſter of the Horſe to the Duke of Berwick. Concluding, He hop'd, "that the Articles of Limerick would take off a great Part of his Offence; and "that his Lordſhip (the Lord Chief-Juſtice Holt) would repreſent his Caſe favourably to the Queen.

He pleads Guilty.

Then Dr. Sands begg'd Leave to ſpeak in Behalf of the Priſoner; but being told by the Lord Chief-Juſtice Holt, That all he could do now (the Priſoner having pleaded Guilty) would ſignify nothing; And that if he had any Thing to ſay, he muſt apply himſelf elſewhere: And the Attorney-General demanding Judgment againſt the Priſoner, upon his Confeſſion of the Two Indictments: Mr. Boucher, (ſaid the Lord Chief-Juſtice Holt) You are, by your own Confeſſion, convicted of High-Treaſon; for which, Judgment of Death is to be pronounc'd upon you, and which you are to ſuffer, under thoſe Circumſtances which the Law has appointed. The Fact, of which you were accus'd, and have now confeſs'd, is, That ſince the 11th Day of December, 1688, you went into France, without Licenſe either from the late King, or Queen, and have return'd ſince the 14th of January 1697, without any Licenſe under the Privy-Seal, either from the late King, or her Majeſty that now is; which Fact is made High-Treaſon by the Statute of the Ninth Year of the late King. The Wiſdom and Juſtice in making that Law, will be evident to any one, that will but reflect upon the Poſture of our Affairs at that Time: For in the Year preceding to that of the making thereof, there was an horrid Conſpiracy form'd, from among that Party of Men who had ſo left the Kingdom, to aſſaſſinate the late King, to introduce a Popiſh and French Power, for the Subverſion of the Proteſtant Religion, and the Liberties and Properties of the People of England; which was manag'd with that Privacy, and carry'd on with that Secrecy, that it was not diſcover'd; nay, not ſo much as ſuſpected, until it arriv'd to that Maturity, that it was come to the very Point of being put in Execution. In the following Year, the Peace of Reſwick was made, whereby the Intercourſe was reſtor'd between England and France; from whence it was evident, that divers of that Party of Men would return into the Realm, and thereby have an Opportunity to revive and carry on that horrid Deſign, in the Succeſs whereof they had been ſo diſappointed; for which, no doubt, they were not a little enrag'd: And it could not be otherwiſe expected, but they would make uſe of it; for thoſe of the ſame Principles, will be guilty of the ſame Practices. Therefore it was neceſſary to make a Returning into England, by any of thoſe who were under theſe Circumſtances, to be very Penal; unleſs they ſhould firſt give Satisfaction to the Government, either of their Innocence, or Repentance, and obtain a Licenſe and Approbation for their Return, under the Privy-Seal. For their Returning in any other manner, is a Danger to the Queen's Perſon, and her Kingdom. This Treaſon, tho' it ſeems, and is new in the Form, yet it is compounded of an old Treaſon, known in the ancient Law of the Kingdom; which is, That of Adhering to the King's Enemies. For what can be thought of thoſe, who, in Time of War, ſhall abandon their own Country, be harbour'd and protected in any Enemy's Country, for being of an Intereſt inconſiſtent with, even repugnant to that of their own? What your Deſigns might be in returning in this manner, whether to revive and purſue theſe wicked Practices, your own Conſcience is your Witneſs, and will be your Judge; and if that ſhall acquit you, it will be for your Advantage in the World to come. But you are an Offender againſt the Law of this Land, which has made this your Offence to be High-Treaſon. And thereupon his Lordſhip pronounc'd the Judgment appointed for one guilty of that Crime: Which done, the Priſoner was remanded to Newgate.

Two Days * after, the Lords made an Addreſs to her Majeſty, "That ſhe would "be pleas'd to reprieve Boucher, to encourage him to make a Diſcovery; which "if he would not do, that then the Severity of the Law might be executed up-"on him." Boucher was repriev'd accordingly; but whether he could not, or was unwilling to reveal any Secrets, he died in Newgate without making any Diſcovery, at leaſt, that ever came to publick Knowledge.

On the 24th, their Lordſhips took into Conſideration, the Report of the Commiſſioners of the publick Accounts, in what related to the Earl of Orford, as late Treaſurer of the Navy, and reſolv'd, That he had made up his Accounts very fairly.

The Committee of the Lords, appointed to draw up the State of the Caſe upon the Writ of Error, lately depending in the Houſe of Peers, wherein Matthew Aſhby was Plaintiff, and William White, and others, Defendants, having made their Report, their Lordſhips reſolv'd, 1. That the aſſerting, That a Perſon having Right " to give his Vote at an Election, and being hindered ſo to do by the Officer who ought to " take the ſame, is without Remedy for ſuch Wrong by the ordinary Courſe of Law, is de- " ſtructive of the Property of the Subjects againſt the Freedom of Elections, and " manifeſtly tends to encourage Corruption and Partiality in Officers, who are to " make Returns to Parliament, and to ſubject Freeholders, and other Electors, to " their arbitrary Will and Pleaſure. 3. That the declaring Matthew Aſhby guilty of " a Breach of Privilege of the Houſe of Commons, for proſecuting an Action " againſt the Conſtables of Ayleſbury, for not receiving his Vote at an Election, af- " ter he had, in the known and proper Methods of Law, obtain'd a Judgment in " Parliament, for Recovery of his Damages, is an unprecedented Attempt upon " the Judicature of Parliament, and is in Effect, to ſubject the Law of England, to " the Votes of the Houſe of Commons. And, 4. That the deterring Electors from " proſecuting Actions in the ordinary Courſe of Law, where they are depriv'd of " their Right of voting, and terrifying Attornies, Sollicitors, Counſellors, and " Serjeants at Law from Solliciting, Proſecuting and Pleading in ſuch Caſes, by " Voting their ſo doing, to be a Breach of Privilege of the Houſe of Commons, is a ma- " niſeſt aſſuming a Power to controul the Law, and hinder the Courſe of Juſtice, " and ſubject the Property of Engliſhmen, to the arbitrary Votes of the Houſe of " Commons.

Four Days after ‖, the Lords preſented an Addreſs to the Queen, importing, That having taken into their Conſideration, the great Alterations lately made in the Commiſſions of the Peace; they begg'd Leave to lay before her Majeſty, that it was their Opinion, That no Perſon that refuſed to take the Oaths to the late King, was fit to be in the Commiſſion of the Peace under her Majeſty: And beſought her Majeſty, that ſhe would be graciouſly pleas'd to order the ſaid Commiſſions to be reviewed, and to give Directions, that no Perſon be continued, or put into the Commiſſion of the Peace, but Men of Quality and Eſtates, and of known Affection to her Majeſty's Title and Government, and the Proteſtant Succeſſion, and the Church of England, as they were both eſtabliſhed by Law; and that ſuch be reſtored, who were ſo qualified, and had been turn'd out without juſt Cauſe. To which her Majeſty return'd Anſwer; That ſhe always thought it reaſonable, that the Commiſſions of the Peace ſhould be filled with Gentlemen of the beſt Quality and Eſtates in their Country. And it was as fit they ſhould be of known Loyalty and Affection to the Government, to the Proteſtant Succeſſion, and the Church of England, as eſtabliſh'd by Law; and ſhe would give Directions according to this Rule. At the ſame ∴ Time, the Lords laid before the Queen, a Repreſentation, or Addreſs, in Anſwer to the Commons late Addreſs againſt their Lordſhips Proceedings, in Relation both to the Scotch Plot, and the Caſe of Aſhby and White, concluding, with expreſſing the juſt Senſe they had of that virtuous and truly Royal Moderation, which her Majeſty had ſhewn upon this Occaſion.

Repreſentation of the Lords againſt the Commons.

ſion, in not ſuffering her ſelf to be prevail'd upon to do any Thing to the Prejudice of the Conſtitution, from whatſoever Hands the Invitation came. In Anſwer to this Repreſentation, the Queen told their Lordſhips, She hoped none of her Subjects had any Deſire to leſſen the PREROGATIVE, ſince ſhe had no Thoughts of making Uſe of it, but for their Protection and Advantage. And that ſhe look'd upon it as a great Misfortune, when any Miſunderſtandings happen'd between both Houſes of Parliament, which could not be without ſo much Prejudice to the Publick, that ſhe ſhould never omit any Thing in her Power to prevent the Occaſions of them.

The Queen's Anſwer.

To put an End to the Heats and Animoſities between both Houſes, on Monday, the 3d of April, the Queen came to the Houſe of Peers, and having given the Royal Aſſent to Twelve Publick, and Twenty Four private Bills, her Majeſty addreſs'd her ſelf in theſe Words to both Houſes.

Acts paſs'd April 3.

My LORDS and GENTLEMEN,

" I Cannot put an End to this Seſſion, without returning you Thanks for the Wil-
" lingneſs which you all have expreſs'd, to ſupport and aſſiſt me in contiuning the preſent War.

The Queen's Speech to both Houſes.

" And I muſt thank you, Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons, very particularly, " for the great Forwardneſs and Zeal which you have ſhewn, both in the early " Diſpatch of the Supplies, and in making them ſo effectual for carrying on the " publick Expence, without any additional Burthens upon the Country; it ſhall be " my Care to improve this to the beſt Advantage.

My LORDS and GENTLEMEN,

" At the opening of this Seſſion, I did earneſtly expreſs my Deſires of ſeeing " you in perfect Unity among your ſelves, as the moſt effectual Means imaginable, " to diſappoint the Ambition of our Enemies, and reduce them to an honourable " and laſting Peace; and though this has not met with all that Succeſs which I wiſh'd " and expected, yet being fully convinc'd, that nothing is ſo neceſſary to our com- " mon Welfare, I am not diſcouraged from perſiſting in the ſame earneſt Deſires, that " you would go down into your ſeveral Countries, ſo diſpoſed to Moderation and " Unity, as becomes all thoſe who are joined together in the ſame Religion and In- " tereſt.

" This, I am perſuaded, will ſoon make you ſenſible, that nothing, next to the " Bleſſing of God, can ſo much contribute to our Succeſs Abroad, and to our Safety " at Home.

The Queen having ended her Speech, the Lord Keeper, by her Majeſty's Command, prorogued the Parliament to Tueſday, the Fourth Day of July next. But before we leave this Seſſion, we muſt take Notice, that beſides the Bills that were paſs'd, there was a very remarkable one brought into the Houſe of Commons, for Recruiting her Majeſty's Land-Forces, by obliging the ſeveral Pariſhes, or Corporations in England, to furniſh a certain Number of Men. This Project was ſet on Foot, and promoted by ſome Courtiers, who thereby endeavour'd to curry Favour with the Duke of Marlborough; but being a Copy of what is practiſed in France, and other Deſpotick Governments, the Bill was dropp'd. Upon this Occaſion, an eminent Member made a Speech, that deſerves to be preſerv'd to Poſterity, and is as follows:

The Parliament of England Prorogued.

Bill for Recruiting the Land-Forces dropp'd.

Mr. SPEAKER,

" THE fatal Conſequences of all Arbitrary Power, are generally Oppreſſion and " Slavery, which diſmal Effects are the ſame, whether they be felt under " an Engliſh, French, Dutch, or Spaniſh Government; for the Nature of all Tyranny, " in it ſelf, is alike, let it be exerciſed where, and by what Authority ſoever: But " if there be any Difference in the Grievance of it, it will appear to be moſt un- " natural, when uſed and ſettled by a Power, that ought to be the ſtrongeſt Bul- " wark againſt: If, therefore, the Liberty of the Subject be reſtrained, forced, and " taken away, by conſent of the People's Repreſentatives, the Guardians of it, " the Loſs of it will certainly ſeem to be ſo much the more intolerable, by how " much the more it is their Duty, and their Intereſt, to defend and preſerve the " People's Rights, entire from all Violence.

Remarkable Speech againſt it.

" Under every free and juſt Government, the People enjoy an equal Right in the " Liberty of their Perſons and Eſtates, and have one and the ſame common Bene- " fit of the ſame Law; where, and to whomſoever this Juſtice is denied, I am

" ſure the People muſt fall under the heavieſt Tyranny, Oppreſſion and Slavery " in the World.

" That this Bill, as now brought into the Houſe, does reſtrain and deprive the " much greater, and more induſtrious Part of the People, of that Freedom and " Property, which the reſt of their Fellow-Subjects enjoy, is very plain and evi- " dent, by the Exceptions of ſuch Perſons as are only exempted from being forced " from their Country, their Wives, and their Children, into Foreign Service: The " Perſons only excepted, I find are Clergymen, the Scholars of the Two Univerſities, " the Students of the Inns of Court, all Free-holders and Copy-holders, and their Sons, " that have Land to the Yearly Value of——— or that did pay to the late Subſidy " Act; all Electors and Voters for any County, City or Borough; ſo that all Ap- " prentices and Servants, all Graziers, Farmers, Labourers, and all other Perſons " whatſoever, not exempted by the Qualifications above ſpecified, (which extend " not to one Third of the People of England) are liable to be baniſh'd their Coun- " try, and forced from their Maſters and their Families, without any Limitation " of Time, and almoſt Hopes of Return; whilſt every ſmall Free-holder, and " Copy-holder, every corrupt Voter and Elector of any City or Borough, (of whom " a great Number might, of all People, be the beſt ſpared) ſhall ſtay at Home, in " Luxury, Sloth, and all the other Crimes that attend our Elections; ſo that the " beſt Conſequence that can be expected of this Bill, will be, that all Cities and " Boroughs will be crowded with the moſt idle Perſons of the Country, who are " able at any Rate, or by any Way, to make themſelves Voters, in order to ex- " empt themſelves from the Fatigue and Danger of War; and the Country, by " this Means, will be drain'd and depriv'd of Servants, Farmers and Labourers, " who are the moſt laborious and neceſſary Perſons of the Commonwealth, to till " and cultivate the Land.

" It is impoſſible, Mr. Speaker, to foreſee all the fatal Conſequences of this Bill. " One of the greateſt Shocks that ever happen'd to the Roman State, was from " their Slaves, who took up Arms to recover the Liberty of their Perſons. The " Rebellion of Naples, and ſeveral other dangerous popular Inſurrections, both in " our own and neighbouring States, have been the Effects of leſs Cauſes: How can " it then be thought, that Freeborn Engliſhmen, without the leaſt Accuſation, or " Suſpicion of a Crime, will patiently endure to be condemn'd to Death, or perpe- " tual Slavery?

" Lucius Manlius, the Dictator, having, contrary to the Cuſtom of the Romans " from the Foundation of their State, to his Time, caus'd ſome Perſons to be " whipp'd, and others to be impriſon'd, for refuſing to liſt themſelves, was accus'd " before the People, as guilty of the higheſt Crime, and had certainly ſuffer'd " Death, or ſome other exemplary Puniſhment, but that his Son, going privately " arm'd to the Tribune of the People, threatned, and reſolv'd his Death, 'till the " Tribune was forc'd ſolemnly to ſwear he would drop the Accuſation.

" The Uſage of the Soldiers has been very hard and ſevere, and this Bill will " certainly make it worſe; for what Concern can it be thought the Officers will " have for their Men, when they are ſenſible they muſt be ſupply'd by the Coun- " try, without any Charge or Trouble to themſelves? I muſt here take Notice, " that this great Oppreſſion is not reſtrain'd only to recruit her Majeſty's Army in " the Netherlands, but her Forces in general; ſo that Perſons thus conſtrain'd, may " be ſent into either of the Indies, as well as into the Low-Countries; a Hardſhip " beyond Expreſſion. In my Opinion, Mr. Speaker, this is a ready way to depo- " pulate the Land, to ſell the Lives of our Subjects, and to eſtabliſh and confirm, " or, at leaſt, promote the Sale of them, both at Home and Abroad, by a Law, in " which there is not any Strain of popular Applauſe.

" It was generally expected, that, at leaſt, the Deſign of this Bill ſhould have " been ſpecious and plauſible; that it ſhould only have rid and eaſed the Coun- " try of looſe, idle, and diſorderly Perſons, who are a Peſt and Burthen to a Common- " wealth; but had due Care been taken to put ſo fair a Gloſs upon it, I am afraid it " would have proved in the End as falſe, and as fatal to us, as the Juſtice of the " Lacedemonians did to the Athenians, who, after the Reduction of Athens under " their Power, firſt began to put to Death only ſuch Perſons as were obnoxious to " the People; but after the Eſtabliſhment of their Tyranny, the beſt of the Citi- " zens ſuffer'd, and were executed with the reſt. This alſo was Sylla's Maxim, " when he had ſubdu'd the Liberty of Rome. Damaſippus, a cruel Favourer of " Marius, was thought to ſuffer as a worthy Example of his Juſtice, and his Death " was attended with the loud Applauſe and Acclamations of the People: But it was " ſoon found, that his Puniſhment was only a ſpecious Pretence, and a plauſible " Beginning to that ſucceeding Slaughter, with which he fill'd the Senate, and the " Forum. The Promoters of this Bill, Mr. Speaker, are not Maſters of ſuch refin'd " Politicks; they have not endeavour'd to conceal, or put any Colour upon their " Intentions, but have, at once diſcover'd what they always in their Heart deſign'd " ſhould be the Practices of it when obtain'd, upon what Pretence ſoever.

" The Difficulties of proportioning the Number each County or Pariſh is to find, " as well as where to lodge the coercive Power, are ſo many, and ſo great, that they " ſeem to be almoſt inſuperable; ſo that I ſhall not enter into thoſe Particulars, but " agree with the Sentiments of this Houſe upon another Occaſion, That the promo- " ting the Intereſt of this Bill in general, does directly tend to ſubject the Rights of the " Commons of England, to an Illegal and Arbitrary Power; and therefore deſire, that " it may be left to be the Act of a more Arbitrary King or Queen, and a more ſer- " vile Houſe of Commons.

About a Month before the Prorogation of the Parliament of England, the Duke of Ormond, Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland, put * alſo an End to the Seſſion of the Parliament of that Kingdom, after his Grace had given the Royal Aſſent to ſeveral Publick and Private Acts; one in particular to prevent the further Growth of Popery: In which, however, the High-Church Party found Means to inſert a Clauſe that bore hard upon Proteſtant Diſſenters.

* March 4. The Iriſh Parliament alſo prorogued to the 3d of October, 1704.

By this Time, the Queen's Favourite, and her Prime Miniſter, perceiv'd that the High-Church Party were grown Head-ſtrong and unmanageable; and that, in Conjunction with ſome of the avowed Friends of the pretended Prince of Wales, they promoted Deſigns, which either they themſelves were averſe to, or which, at leaſt, they thought inconſiſtent with their preſent Schemes. Hereupon, tho' with ſome Difficulty, the Queen was perſuaded to lay aſide the Earl of Nottingham, Principal Secretary of State, the main Support of the High-Church Party at Court, and whoſe Removal appear'd the more neceſſary, in that his Conduct, with relation to the Scotch Plot, had been call'd in Queſtion, in Both Houſes of Parliament. The Perſon pitch'd upon to ſucceed him, was Robert Harley, Eſq; a Gentleman of an ancient Family, but moderate Fortune, quick Parts, good Reading, and of an aſpiring Genius: Who by his unwearied Application to Buſineſs, (particularly in the Detection and Proſecution of the corrupt Management of the Eaſt-India Company,) was early taken notice of; and who by his plain, familiar Behaviour, Flexibility and unaffected Dexterity, had gain'd ſuch an extenſive Intereſt, as to be almoſt unanimouſly choſen Speaker, of the Two former, and of the preſent Houſe of Commons. Add to all theſe, that from his Education among the Diſſenters, and the great Share (a) he had in the Settlement of the Succeſſion on the Houſe of Hanover, he ſeem'd to be moſt agreeable to the Whig-Party, whom the Court now thought fit to cajole, as the moſt able and willing to ſupport Publick Credit. One of the Conditions upon which Mr. Harley accepted the Seals was, that Henry St. John, Eſq; a Gentleman of excellent bright Parts, and graceful Preſence, and who, in the Two laſt Seſſions, had, on ſeveral remarkable Occaſions, ſpoke with great Applauſe, ſhould be made Secretary at War, in the Room of William Blaithwaite, Eſq;; which was the more eaſily conſented to, by reaſon the latter was grown ſomewhat ſtiff and ruſty, by enjoying, many Years, that profitable Employment, and rather leaned to the High than to the Low-Church Party. Mr. Harley alſo inſiſted, That his Friend and Countryman Thomas Manſel, Eſq; ſhould be made Comptroller of the Queen's Houſhold, in the Room of Sir Edward Seymour, Bar. which was as readily comply'd with: Sir Edward being a tough, hardy Country-Gentleman, of plain, ſolid Senſe, admirably well acquainted with the Forms and Uſages of Parliamentary Proceedings; but whoſe ſtubborn Spirit could not eaſily be wrought upon by Court Arts, or bend to any Thing, which he had conceived to be againſt the Intereſt of the Nation. At the ſame Time, the Earl of Jerſey was removed from the Place of Lord Chamberlain of the Houſhold, with no more Reaſon than he had been continued in it, ever ſince the late King's Demiſe: And the Staff was † given (upon a very weighty ‖ Conſideration) to the Earl of Kent. A few Days after, his Lordſhip, Mr. Manſel, and Mr. Harley, were ſworn of the Privy-Council: And, on the 16th of May, 1704. this laſt Gentleman was declared one of her Majeſty's Principal Secretaries of State, with almoſt univerſal Approbation; as one that had not yet made himſelf obnoxious to either Party.

Lords; wherein the Proceedings of the Commons, with Relation to the Ayleſbury Buſineſs, and the Examination of the Scotch Plot, were arraign'd in a moſt audacious Manner. The firſt were taxed as arbitrary and illegal, contrary to the Liberties of Engliſhmen, deſtructive of the Rights of Elections, and an Invaſion of the Nation's Judicature: And as to the other, it was ſuggeſted, That the careſſing her Majeſty, with the Title "of a Queen ſitting on the Throne of her Anceſtors by Right of Succeſſion "from her Father; when at the ſame Time they knew her Right depended upon the "Validity of Parliament Limitation, and was built on the Foot of the late Revolution, "and the Act of Settlement, was a barbarous Treachery to the whole Nation, an "inſolent Affront to her Majeſty, an Inſinuation of the Title of the pretended "Prince of Wales, and a villainous Attempt to deſtroy the preſent Settlement of "Succeſſion, and was conſequently High-Treaſon by their own Act of Parliament: "And that to addreſs her Majeſty to extend her Prerogative, and thereby to "embroil her with the Privilege of the Peers, was the moſt aggravated Piece "of Treachery, that ever Houſe of Commons was, or could be guilty of; the "ſame being an Affront to her Majeſty, a malicious Deſign on her Perſon, by "perſuading her to enter on that very Thing, the exorbitant Practice whereof, was "the Ruin of her Father and Grand-Father; an unprecedented Attempt upon the "Liberties of the People, and a meddling with what they have no Power or Right "to touch. They alſo heartily acknowledg'd their Lordſhips Zeal, Courage and Fidelity, both in vindicating their own undoubted Rights, invaded by the Houſe of "Commons, in their diligent Care for the Safety of her Majeſty's Perſon, in ſearching after the deeply laid Contrivances of her Enemies in the late Plot, and in "their aſſerting the Liberty and Rights of the People of England, againſt the "Invaſion and Uſurpation of the Houſe of Commons." And as they look'd upon the Lords, as the Sanctuary and Safety of this Nation, ſo in the Name of the injured Freeholders and Commons of England, they aſſured their Lordſhips, in the Concluſion, That they would firmly adhere to, and faithfully defend their Lordſhips, in the further Purſuit of theſe juſt and glorious Ends. Tho', in reality, this was the Senſe of all the Whig-Party, yet the Juſtices of the Peace for Glouceſterſhire, aſſembled at their Quarter-Seſſions, having repreſented to her Majeſty the dangerous Conſequences of that Libel: The Queen cauſed a Proclamation * to be publiſh'd, promiſing a Reward of 100 l. for the Diſcovery of the Author; and of 50 l. for the Apprehending of the Printer of that ſeditious Paper. Affairs of Scotland.
|| See Scotch Memoirs.

All this while the Scotch Plot made a great Noiſe; and || Accounts of it being ſoon wafted over to France, the Lord Lovat was immediately clapt up in the Baſtile. On the other Hand, Mr. David Lindſay, who had been Secretary to the Earl of Middleton, and was privy to all the Tranſactions of the Court of St. Germains; and who notwithſtanding the expreſs Denial made by Mr. Secretary Hedges, of granting him leave, had lately ventur'd to come from France into England, was try'd upon the Statute made in the late Reign againſt Correſponding with France, and ſentenced to die. Being carried to Tyburn, he was told by the Sheriff he muſt expect no Mercy, unleſs he acknowledg'd his Crime, and diſcover'd what he knew of the Conſpiracy: But, undoubtedly upon a Secret Intimation that he was to be reprieved, he continued as obſtinate, and mute, as he had been before the Committee of the Lords; and ſo he was carried back to Newgate, where he continued Priſoner for ſome Years, and then, being baniſh'd the Kingdom, he died in Holland, in a very miſerable Condition.

David Lindſay ſentenc'd to die; but reprieved.

The Truth is, whether, as ſome pretend, the Miniſtry found the Queen inclined to favour the Friends of the Court at St. Germains; or whether they themſelves were ſhy and apprehenſive of irritating the Scots, at this critical Juncture; 'tis moſt certain, that even after the Removal of the Earl of Nottingham, the further Diſcovery of the Plot was proſecuted with great Tenderneſs, not to ſay Supinity; of which I ſhall give a notable Inſtance. Towards the End of June, 1704. Captain Francis Lacan, late of the Lord Galway's Regiment of Foot in Piedmont, and who in King James's Time, had been an Enſign in Dumbarton's Regiment, came over from Holland, and upon Oath, delivered an Information in Writing to Mr. Secretary Harley, importing, in Subſtance, "That Sir George Maxwell, Captain Levingſton, Captain "Hayes, and ſeveral other Scotch Officers, who came from the Court of St. Germains to Holland, near a Year and a half before, after having held ſeveral private Conſultations in divers ſuſpicious Places in the Neighbourhood of the Hague; "and Sir George having, in vain, endeavour'd to get a Paſs from Mr. Stanhope, the "Queen's Envoy, they all embark'd for Scotland, to the Number of Fifteen or Sixteen Gentlemen, with Three Ladies, the ſame Day that Captain Lacan ſail'd "from

" from the Briel for England, with the Retinue of an Envoy from the Duke of " Savoy." Mr. Secretary Harley having communicated this Information to the Lord-Treaſurer, Orders were immediately diſpatch'd to Scotland to ſeize Sir George Maxwell and his Followers; which was accordingly done, juſt upon their Landing: But tho' by what had already appeared before the Committee of the Lords, and other concurring Evidences, it was moſt certain, that they came with a Deſign to raiſe Commotions in Scotland, yet they were ſoon after ſet at Liberty; and Sir George Maxwell was not only permitted to come to London, but highly careſs'd by ſome great Men. As for Captain Lacan, tho' his Information proved ſo true and exact, that his Zeal and Diligence were, at firſt, highly extoll'd, both by the Treaſurer and the Secretary; and tho' he did further Service to the Government, by ſeizing in St. James's Park a young Iriſh Gentleman, lately a Retainer to the Court of St. Germains; yet, after he had attended daily, at the Secretary's Office, for above Three Months, and conſumed his ſmall Subſtance, he was ſent back to Holland, without any other Recompence, than empty Promiſes. Nor was this all: For the Iriſh Youth who, to ſave his Life, readily diſcover'd all he knew; and who, among other Particulars, acquainted Mr. Secretary with the conſtant Correſpondence Duke Hamilton held with the Court of St. Germains: This Gentleman, I ſay, was likewiſe ſent to Holland with Lacan, upon a ſleeveleſs Errand; I ſuppoſe, leſt he ſhould blab, and reveal how eaſily he came off, and what little Streſs was laid on his Diſcoveries. 'Tis true, that both the Treaſurer and the Secretary had, at this very Time, a better and more agreeable Informant; and that was one of the Daughters of the late Sir Theophilus Oglethorpe, who, being come from France without a Paſs, lay at the Mercy of the Government; but who by her Wit and Beauty, improv'd by the French Gayety and Politeneſs, ſoon gain'd the Favour, if not the Hearts of thoſe Two Miniſters. Nay, ſome pretend, that the Secretary having, by his Addreſs, gain'd a greater Share in her Confidence and Secrets, this raiſed ſuch a Jealouſy and Reſentment in the Treaſurer, as, in Time, grew to an irreconcileable Enmity.

Rivalſhip between the Lord Treaſurer, and Mr. Secretary Harley.

Be that as it will: Purſuant to the Queen's late Promiſe to the Houſe of Peers, her Miniſters reſolv'd to uſe all proper Methods to procure the Settlement of the Crown of Scotland on the Houſe of Hanover, in the enſuing Seſſion of the Parliament of that Kingdom; for which purpoſe, it was thought abſolutely neceſſary to make ſome Alterations in the Miniſtry there; and ſeveral Scotch Councils were held thereupon. The Duke of Queenſberry, to preſerve the Intereſt he had gain'd with the Queen, and the Church Party in England, had brought up to London the Earl of Belcarras, and the Titular Archbiſhop of Glaſgow, to vouch for his Inclinations to ſerve and protect the Epiſcopal Clergy in Scotland. " That Prelate (ſays * the Scotch " Memorialiſt above quoted) was a Man of extraordinary Parts, and great Learn- " ing, but extremely proud and haughty to all the inferior Clergy of his Dioceſe, " and very much deſtitute of thoſe Virtues that ſhould adorn the Life and Conver- " ſation of one ſo highly exalted in the Church. He had a great Share in the Go- " vernment both of Church and State before the Revolution: And after the aboliſh- " ing of Epiſcopacy, he lived privately, indulging that avaritious, worldly Temper, " which had ſullied his other Qualifications in all the Capacities and Stations of his " Life; and which likewiſe moved him to embark on this Deſign, which, when he " left Scotland, and even after he came to London, he kept as a mighty Secret, pre- " tending to the Cavaliers, he undertook that long Journey in the Middle of Win- " ter, ſo dangerous to his Grey Hairs, only to ſupplicate Queen Anne to beſtow the " vacant Biſhops Rents on the poor ſtarving Epiſcopal Clergy. Yet when this Mat- " ter was under the Conſideration of Queen Anne, and her Servants, his charitable " Zeal did allow him to accept of Four Hundred Pounds Sterling per Ann. out of " them; though there remain'd but Twelve Thouſand Pounds, after his Four Hun- " dred was deducted, (to be divided among his numerous needy Brethren) that " was not appropriated to other Uſes: And his Lordſhip was worth Twenty Thou- " ſand Pounds of his own." Be this Particular as it will, the Archbiſhop aſſured the Queen, " That the Duke of Queenſberry was the beſt Friend the Epiſcopal Clergy " had in Scotland, and would have procur'd them a Toleration, (which, it ſeems, " they knew ſhe deſired) had he not found they were ſo diſaffected to her Intereſt, " that to ſhew them Favour would be to encourage her Enemies: Adding, with " Tears in his Eyes, Her Majeſty might depend upon the Truth of this Information, " ſince it came from him who could be no Gainer, but, on the contrary, was a great " Loſer by their being kept under.

Character of the Archbiſhop of Glaſgow.

On the other hand, the Earl of Stair, conſidering that the vigorous Proceedings of the Engliſh Houſe of Lords with relation to the Plot, would ſo exaſperate the Scotch Nation, and in particular the Cavaliers and Country Party, that it was impoſſible for the Duke of Queenſberry, and his Partizans, to ſucceed there: The Earl of Stair,

A. D. 1704.

Stair, I ſay, (after my Scotch † Voucher) propoſed, That an Engliſh Army ſhould be ſent to Scotland, to be maintain'd by England, and remain there till the Queen's Deceaſe; and that, during her Life, another Seſſion of Parliament ſhould not be held. The Earls of London, Leven, and Glaſgow, cloſed with the Earl of Stair's Propoſal; but as the ſame might have raiſed a Combuſtion in Scotland not eaſily to be extinguiſh'd, and would have prevented the Queen's aſſerting her juſt Rights in a legal manner, the Engliſh Miniſters did not think it proper to follow ſo dangerous a Counſel. The Scotch Memorialiſt takes this Occaſion to give us the following Characters both of its Author, and of his Three Aſſociates; but which muſt be read with due Caution, and Grains of Allowance, as being written by a Man of an oppoſite Party. " John Earl of Stair (ſays Mr. Lockhart *) was the Origin and principal " Inſtrument of all the Misfortunes that befel either the King, or Kingdom of " Scotland. " 'Twas he that adviſed King James to emit a Proclamation, remitting " the Penal Laws by his own abſolute Power and Authority; and made ſeveral " other Steps with a Deſign to procure his Ruin. 'Twas he that, underhand, car- " ried on the Revolution in Scotland; and acted the ſame Part as the Earl of Sunder- " land did in England. 'Twas he that, to ſecure his Court Intereſt in King William's " Time, contriv'd, and was the Author of the barbarous Murder of Glencoe, and " had a main hand in the Plot to cut off the Chief of the Cavaliers and Country " Party. And in this, 'twas he that taught and encouraged England arbitrarily and " avowedly to rule over Scots Affairs, invade her Freedom, and ruin her Trade. " 'Twas he that was at the Bottom of the Union, and to him, in a great meaſure, " it owes its Succeſs. As he was thus the Bane of Scotland in general, ſo he and his " Family were the great Oppreſſors of all the particular Perſons that did not depend " upon him, and go along with his Deſigns; and that ſo openly and barefacedly, " that a Cavalier, or Anti-Courtier, was not to expect common Juſtice in the Seſſion, " where his Brother was Preſident, whereby he and his Family were, at the ſame " time, the moſt dreaded and deteſted of any in the Kingdom. This Family had " roſe but lately from nothing; and it was ſo much the ſtranger, that they pretend- " ed, and others ſuffered them to uſurp ſuch a Dominion, as extended not over the " Cavaliers alone, but even ſuch of the Revolution Party, as were of any other Inte- " reſt beſides them, felt the heavy Effects of it. From this ſhort Abſtract of the " Earl's Life, 'tis eaſy to gather, that he was falſe and cruel, covetous and impe- " rious, altogether deſtitute of the ſacred Ties of Honour, Loyalty, Juſtice, and " Gratitude. And, laſtly, a Man of very great Parts, elſe he could never have " perpetrated ſo much Wickedneſs. He had indeed a piercing Judgment, a lively " Imagination, a quick Apprehenſion, a faithful Memory, a ſolid Reflection, and a " particular Talent of Diſſimulation and Cunning in their greateſt Extents; ſo that " he was ſeldom or never to be taken at unawares. He was extremely facetious and " diverting Company in common Converſation; and, ſetting aſide his Politicks, " (to which all did yield) good-natur'd. To theſe Qualifications were likewiſe " added that of Eloquence, being ſo great a Maſter of it, that he expreſſed himſelf, " on all Occaſions and Subjects, with ſo much Life and Rhetorick; and that like- " wiſe ſo pointedly and copiouſly, that there was none in the Parliament capable to " take up the Cudgels with him. Had a Judgment of his Inſide been taken from " his Outſide, he might well enough have paſſed for that of which he was the leaſt. " Theſe Endowments, much improv'd by long Experience and Application in Buſi- " neſs, may juſtly entitle him to be ranked among the Greateſt, though, at the ſame " time likewiſe among the Worſt Men in this Age: And what has been ſaid of " him, may ſerve for a Character of his Two Brothers, Sir Hugh and Sir David " Dalrymple, nay, the whole Name; only with this Difference, that though they " were all equally willing, yet not equally capable of doing ſo much Evil as his " Lordſhip.

Character of the Earl of Loudon, ubi ſupra, p. 98.

" Hugh Earl of Loudon was, of all the Perſons concerned in the Government, " without doubt, amongſt the beſt. He had nothing in his Nature that was cruel or " revengeful; was affable, courteous, and juſt 'twixt Man and Man; and tho' he " purſued his own Maxims and Deſigns, yet it was in a moderate, gentle, manlike " Way. Being deſcended of a Family Enemies to Monarchy, and educated after " that way, and his Fortune in bad Circumſtances, he eaſily dropp'd into the Court " Meaſures, and was ſoon taken notice of; firſt made an extraordinary Lord of " the Seſſion, in which Poſt he behaved to all Men's Satisfaction, ſtudying to under- " ſtand the Laws and Conſtitution of the Kingdom, and determine accordingly. He " was endowed with good natural Parts, and had much improved them in his " younger Years by reading: And tho' he did not much affect to ſhew them in Pub- " lick, yet there were few exceeded him in contriving and carrying on a Deſign, " having a clear Judgment, and ready Apprehenſion.

" David Earl of Leven, in the Beginning of his Life, was ſo vain and conceited, " that he became the Jeſt of all ſober Men: But as he grew older, he overcame that " Folly in part; and from the proudeſt, became the civileſt Perſon alive. He " was a Man of good Parts, and ſound Judgment, but Maſter of no Kind of Learn- " ing: And tho' he had once the Command of a Regiment, and was at laſt created " Lieutenant-General, and Commander in chief of the Forces in Scotland, yet his " Courage was much called in Queſtion. He was born and bred an Enemy to the " Royal Family, and therefore chearfully embraced, and effectually promoted " every Thing againſt its Intereſts. However, he was no ways ſevere, but rather " very civil to all the Cavaliers, eſpecially ſuch as were Priſoners in the Caſtle of " Edinburgh, when he was Governor, from whence he gained more of their Favour, " than any Man in the Government.

Character of the Earl of Leven, Ibid. p. 99.

" David Earl of Glaſcow, had nothing to recommend him, ſave that his Sir- " name was the ſame with the Duke of Queenſberry's, being upon no Account to be " reckon'd a Man of more than ordinary Senſe. He was eſteem'd proud, arrogant, " greedy, extremely falſe, and a great Speaker at Random; was ſo ridiculouſly " vain, that he affected a great deal of Reſpect and Reverence as his Due; and " nothing pleaſed him ſo much, as to dedicate a Book to his Lordſhip, provided " frequent Mention was made in the Epiſtle, of his illuſtrious and ancient Family; " though all the World knew his Parents were, not long ago, Boatmen; and ſince " married to the Heireſs of Kelburn, a petty Family in the Shire of Air. " However, having, by being concerned in Farming the publick Revenues, " ſcrap'd together a good Eſtate; he wanted not Ambition to be a Man of Qua- " lity, and concern'd in the Government; both which the Dutcheſs's Favour, " and his own Aſſurance, procured him. There was no Man had ſuch a Sway " with the Duke of Queenſberry, as he; and he was the Chief of thoſe Evil " Counſellors, that perſuaded and engaged him to follow, at leaſt perſevere in " ſuch pernicious Ways.

Character of the Earl of Glaſcow, Ibid. p. 100.

To reſume the Thread of Hiſtory: The Duke of Athol finding he was not able ſingly to oppoſe the Duke of Queenſberry and his Aſſociates, wrote to his Friends in Scotland, to ſend up Two or Three of their Number, to aſſiſt and ſupport him; whereupon the Duke of Hamilton convened at Edinburgh, a conſiderable Number of the Cavaliers and Country-Party. Before they came to a general, there were ſeveral previous Meetings, between the Duke and the Marquis of Tweedale, the Earls of Rothes, Roxburgh and Hadington, the Lord Belhaven, Baily of Jerviſwood, Hume of Blackadder, and Hadden of Gleragies; who, tho' they were oppoſite to the Court, were never eſteem'd ſtanch Friends to the Royal Exil'd Family: And tho' there were ſeveral of the Cavaliers, at that Time, in Edinburgh, yet his Grace never conſulted any of them, but in Conjunction with the other Set, reſolv'd to pitch upon the Earls of Rothes and Roxburgh, and Baily of Jerviſwood, whom he propoſed at the general Meeting, to be ſent to London, to aſſiſt the Duke of Athol in the Management of their Affairs. The Cavaliers could not well oppoſe theſe Three Perſons, after they had been publickly named by their principal Leader: However, ſome did not ſtick to diſcover to Duke Hamilton their Apprehenſions, that they would mind their private, more than the publick Concerns; but Duke Hamilton remain'd fix'd in his Choice; thinking thereby to engage them, and their Party, to ſtand by him, againſt the Duke of Queenſberry, his inveterate Enemy. They were inſtructed, " To inform Queen Anne, that they were ſent by a very conſiderable Number of " Parliament Men, to acquaint her Majeſty, That being inform'd a great deal of " Pains had been taken to perſuade her Majeſty, that a conſiderable Party in Scot- " land had been conſpiring againſt her, deſigning thereby to incenſe her Majeſty " againſt her good Subjects; and that the better to ſucceed therein, a Plot was pre- " tended to be diſcovered; and being likewiſe inform'd of ſeveral Deſigns on Foot, " and Advices given, (particularly narrating the above-mention'd Propoſal made " by the Earl of Stair,) which were inconſiſtent with the Laws, Honour and Wel- " fare of the Kingdom: They thought it their Duty to repreſent to her Majeſty, " the Neceſſity of allowing the Parliament to meet as ſoon as poſſible, where this " Plot might be enquired into, and the Guilty be puniſh'd; and ſuch Meaſures " taken, as would, for the future, prevent all Deſigns againſt her Majeſty and Go- " vernment, diſcourage all Endeavours to create groundleſs Jealouſies, betwixt her " Majeſty and her good Subjects, and ſecure the Kingdom from the Effects of thoſe " pernicious Projects that were on Foot, with Deſign, at one Stroke, to debaſe the " Honour, and enſlave the Freedom of this ancient and independent Kingdom." The Three Deputies deliver'd their Meſſage to the Queen; but were not long in London, before they were convinc'd of the Reality of the Plot, and ſo were eaſily prevail'd upon to favour the Meaſures of the Engliſh Miniſters, againſt whom they had often exclaim'd in Scotland: Therefore 'tis no Wonder, that from this Time they became odious to the Cavaliers, and Country Parties; and that we find their Names branded by their Memorialiſt. "The Earl of Rothes, (ſays Mr. Lockhart, *) "had not one good Quality to recommond him, being falſe to a great Degree, a "Contemner of Honour and Engagements, extremely ambitious, ridiculous, vain "and conceited, (though of very ordinary Parts and Accompliſhments,) extra-"vagantly Proud, and ſcandalouſly mercenary. No Man was more forward in the "Country Party, nor did profeſs greater Regard to the Royal Family, than his Lord-"ſhip, and that with repeated Oaths and Aſſeverations: But, alas! he had neither "enough of Senſe, nor Honeſty, to reſiſt the firſt Temptation. John, Earl, after-"wards Duke of Roxburgh, made his firſt Appearance in the World, to the general "Satisfaction of all Men. He was a Man of good Senſe, improved by ſo much "Reading and Learning, that, perhaps, he was the beſt accompliſh'd young Man "of Quality in Europe; and had ſo charming a way of expreſſing his Thoughts, "that he pleas'd even thoſe againſt whom he ſpoke: And it was a Thouſand Pities, "a Man ſo capable to do good, ſhould have proved the very Bane of his Coun-"try, by being extremely falſe and diſingenuous, and ſo regardleſs of the Ties "of Honour, Friendſhip, Vows, and Juſtice, that he ſacrificed them all, and "the Intereſt of his Country, to his Deſigns, viz. Revenge and Ambition. "George Baily of Jerviſwood, was moroſe, proud and ſevere; but of a pro-"found, ſolid Judgment, and, by far the hardeſt headed Man of all his Par-"ty, to whom he was a kind of Dictator. In King William's Time, he had "gained a great Reputation, by ſtanding ſtiffly by the Intereſt of his Country; but "being of a rebellious Race, he never had the leaſt Thought of ſerving the Royal "Family; and though he join'd with the Cavaliers and Country Parties, in Oppoſition "to the Duke of Queenſberry, and the Court Meaſures; yet he always favoured the "HANOVERIAN SUCCESSION; and therefore, as ſoon as the Court of England "inclined to that Meaſure, he ſoon left his Maxims; and, being once dipp'd, "never fell off, but ſerved them to the End." The Scotch Memorialiſt † adds, That theſe Three Gentlemen, by the Management of Mr. Johnſon, Secretary of State to King William, engaged for themſelves, the Marquis of Tweedale, and other Friends, "That if the Queen would allow the paſſing a few inconſiderable Limi-"tations upon her Succeſſors into Laws, they would prevail with the Parliament "of Scotland to ſettle the Succeſſion in the ſame Manner with England;" to which the Engliſh Miniſters readily acquieſced, well knowing, That if once the main Point, the Succeſſion, were gain'd, they could eaſily repeal the Limitations in a ſubſequent Parliament. Hereupon the Marquis of Tweedale, a Well-meaning Man, but of ſlender Capacity, was appointed High Commiſſioner to the next Seſſion; the Duke of Queenſberry, one of the Secretaries of State, was laid aſide; and his Colleague, the Earl of Cromarty, remain'd ſole Secretary. The Earl of Leven was reinſtall'd Governor of the Caſtle of Edinburgh, in the Room of the Earl of March; Mr. James Johnſon ſucceeded Sir James Murray of Philiphaugh, as Lord Regiſter; and the Earl of Glaſcow, Treaſurer-Depute, was removed; but no body was named to fill up his Place, nor were any other Changes made at this Time in publick Employments, in order to decoy ſome into the new Meaſures, by Promiſes and Expectations of Preferment, and to keep others ſteddy, with Hopes of being continued. All this while, the Earls of Rothes and Roxburgh, with ſolemn Aſſeverations, profeſs'd to Duke Hamilton, that they would never do any Thing againſt the Intereſt of the Royal Exiled Family; and that their only Deſign in coming into the Adminiſtration, was to diſpoſſeſs the Duke of Queenſberry: And, on the other Hand, though the Duke of Hamilton, and the Cavaliers, knew well enough what Bargain they had ſtruck at London, yet they reſolv'd to appear ignorant of their Deſigns; but, in the mean Time, leave nothing undone to carry on their own. It was by ſome propoſed to attack the Duke of Queenſberry; but by the Negotiations of the Earl of Hume, and Cochran of Almaronoch, on the one Side, and the Earl of March, and Sir James Murray of Philiphaugh, on the other, it was agreed, That the Examination of the Plot ſhould not be paſs'd, provided the Duke of Queenſberry's Friends in Parliament (for he came not down to Scotland himſelf) would join to the Cavaliers in oppoſing the Succeſſion, and other Court Meaſures.

ANNE

ANNE R.

My LORDS and GENTLEMEN,

The Queen's Letter to them.

" NOthing has troubled us more, ſince our Acceſſion to the Crowns of theſe " Realms, than the unſettled State of Affairs in that our Ancient King- " dom.

" We hop'd, that the Foundations of Differences and Animoſities, that, to our " great Regret, we diſcover'd among you, did not lie ſo deep, but that by the Me- " thods we have proceeded in, they might have been remov'd.

" But, inſtead of Succeſs in our Endeavours, the Rent is become wider: Nay, " Diviſions have proceeded to ſuch a Heighth, as to prove Matter of Encouragement " to our Enemies beyond Sea, to employ their Emiſſaries among you, in order to " debauch our good Subjects from their Allegiance, and to render that our Ancient " Kingdom, a Scene of Blood and Diſorder; meerly, as they ſpeak, to make you " ſerve for a Diverſion.

" But we are willing to hope, that none of our Subjects, but ſuch as were ob- " noxious to the Laws for their Crimes, or Men of low and deſperate Fortunes, or " that are otherwiſe inconſiderable, have given Ear to ſuch pernicious Contri- " vances. And we have no Reaſon to doubt of the Aſſurances given us by thoſe " now entruſted with our Authority, that they will uſe their utmoſt Endeavours to " convince our People of the Advantage and Neceſſity of the preſent Meaſures: " For we have always been inclin'd to believe, That the late Miſtakes did not " proceed from any want of Duty and Reſpect to Us, but only from different " Opinions as to Meaſures of Government.

" This being the Caſe, We are reſolv'd, for the full Contentment and Satisfacti- " on of our People, to grant whatever can, in Reaſon, be demanded, for rectify- " ing of Abuſes, and quieting the Minds of all our good Subjects.

" In order to this, We have named the Marquis of Tweedale our High-Commiſſi- " oner; he being a Perſon, of whoſe Capacity and Probity, or Qualifications and " Diſpoſitions to ſerve Us and the Country, neither we nor you can have any " Doubt. And we have fully impower'd him to give you unqueſtionable Proofs " of our Reſolution to maintain the Government, both in Church and State, as " by Law eſtabliſh'd in that our Kingdom: And to conſent to ſuch Laws, as ſhall " be found wanting for the further Security of both, and preventing all Encroach- " ments on the ſame for the future.

" Thus, having done our Part, We are perſuaded that you will not fail to do " yours; but will lay hold on this Opportunity, to ſhew to the World the Sincerity " of the Profeſſions made to Us, and that it was the true Love of your Country, " and the Senſe of your Duty to it, and therefore not the want of Duty to Us, (for " We ſhall always reckon theſe Two inconſiſtent) that was at the Bottom of the " late Miſunderſtandings.

" The main Thing that We recommend to you, and which We recommend to " you with all the Earneſtneſs We are capable of, is, The Settling of the Succeſ- " ſion in the Proteſtant Line; as that which is abſolutely neceſſary for your own " Peace and Happineſs, as well as our Quiet and Security in all our Dominions, and " for the Reputation of our Affairs abroad; and conſequently, for the Strengthening " the Proteſtant Intereſt every where.

" This has been our fix'd Judgment and Reſolution, ever ſince we came to the " Crown: And tho' hitherto Opportunities have not anſwer'd our Intentions, Mat- " ters are now come to that Paſs, by the undoubted Evidence of the Deſigns of our " Enemies, that a longer Delay of Settling the Succeſſion in the Proteſtant Line, " may have very dangerous Conſequences; and a Diſappointment of it, would in- " fallibly make that our Kingdom the Seat of War, and expoſe it to Devaſtation " and Ruin.

" As to Terms and Conditions of Government, with regard to the Succeſſor; we " have impower'd our Commiſſioner to give the Royal Aſſent to whatever can, in " Reaſon, be demanded, and is in our Power to grant, for ſecuring the Sovereignty " and Liberties of that our Ancient Kingdom.

" We are now in a War, which makes it neceſſary to provide for the Defence " of the Kingdom; the Time of the Funds, that were lately given for Mainte- " nance of the Land-Forces, being expir'd, and the ſaid Funds exhauſted, Provi- " ſion ought alſo to be made for ſupplying the Magazines with Arms and Ammuni- " tion, and repairing the Forts and Caſtles, and for the Charge of the Frigats, that " prove ſo uſeful for guarding the Coaſts.

" We

" We earneſtly recommend to you, whatever may contribute to the Advance" ment of true Piety, and Diſcouragement of Vice and Immorality; and we doubt " not but you will take care to encourage Trade, and improve the Product and " Manufactories of the Nation: In all which, and every Thing elſe that can be
" for the Good and Happineſs of our People, you ſhall have our hearty and rea" dy Concurrence. We ſhall only add, That Unanimity and Moderation in all " your Proceedings, will be of great Uſe, for bringing to a happy Iſſue the impor-

Given at Our Court at Windſor-Caſtle, the 25th Day of June 1704. and of Our Reign the Third Tear.

After the reading of this Letter, her Majeſty's High-Commiſſioner made the following Speech:

My LORDS and GENTLEMEN,

The High-Commiſſioner's Speech.

YOU have heard the Queen's Gracious Letter: Her Majeſty therein expreſſes ſuch a Concern for the Good and Welfare of this Nation, and gives ſuch unqueſtionable Proofs of it, as prevents even your Wiſhes. I do not in the leaſt doubt, but when you duly conſider the Import of this Letter, you will be all of the ſame Mind with me; That it is now in our Power, to make our ſelves, and our Poſterity, happy.

Such, indeed, are her Majeſty's Gracious Condeſcenſions. that, in order to obtain what is for our Good, we need only propoſe it; provided you do it, as no doubt you will, with the Regard and Deference that are due to ſo Gracious a Sovereign; and that, in your Demands, you keep within juſt and reaſonable Bounds, and aſk nothing but what is in her Majeſty's Power to grant.

If there be any Thing yet wanting for the better ſecuring our Religion, and the preſent Church-Government, as now by Law eſtabliſh'd, or for the ſuppreſſing of Vice, and encouraging of Virtue; if any Grievances to be redreſs'd, and new Laws found neceſſary, as I doubt not but there will, for rectifying of Abuſes crept into your Conſtitution, or Adminiſtration of the Government, or any Part of it; whether it be the Policy, or Juſtice, or for removing all Encroachments upon the Sovereignty or Liberties of this Nation, and the Securing and Preſerving theſe entire and inviolable, to our ſelves and our Poſterity: I am fully impower'd and inſtructed, not only in all theſe Matters, to give you what reaſonable Satisfaction you can demand; but likewiſe in any Thing, that may be propoſed for improving of Learning, the advancing of Trade, and encouraging of Manufactories: So that, in effect, nothing hath eſcap'd her Majeſty's Care, that can any ways contribute to make you a flouriſhing and happy People; ſhe reckoning the Welfare, Peace and Proſperity of her Subjects, the only way to her own Greatneſs and Happineſs.

And yet, as if all this were too little, her Majeſty extends her Care for you further, in recommending to you, as you have heard, the Settling the Succeſſion in the Proteſtant Line: And this her Majeſty recommends to you with all the Earneſtneſs ſhe is capable of; as that which is abſolutely neceſſary for ſecuring to your ſelves, and tranſmitting to your Poſterity, your Religion and Liberties, or whatever elſe you have, or can have, that is valuable. Sure her Majeſty can have no Concern in this, but the Intereſt of her People; which does ſo evidently require the Settling of the Succeſſion, and the Settling of it at this Time, that I hope no true Proteſtant, and Lover of his Country, will, when he hath ſeriouſly thought on it, find juſt Ground to oppoſe it.

Her Majeſty having thus done her Part, and in a Manner ſo good and generous, and evidently diſintereſted, it remains, that we fail not to do ours, by letting go this great Opportunity (which, if now loſt, may poſſibly never be recover'd) to deliver this Nation from the Inconveniences and Hardſhips that it hath lain under ever ſince the Union of the Crowns, and which of late have grown heavier upon it.

Her Majeſty hath alſo recommended to you the Supplies that are wanting, for the Purpoſes mention'd in her Letter; which I need not repeat: For ſure there are none here, who are not convinc'd of the Neceſſity of them, and who will not heartily concur in giving of them, notwithſtanding the low Circumſtances the Country is in at preſent; eſpecially ſeeing her Majeſty allows you to enquire into the Miſapplications of former Funds, given and appropriated by Parliament, and to take ſuch Courſe as may prevent the like for the future.

One Thing more I have to add, and that is concerning the Buſineſs of the Plot, of which ſo great a Noiſe hath been made in our Neighbour-Nation. Her Majeſty hath allow'd me to acquaint you, That in due Time the whole Matter ſhall be laid before you; and that ſhe hath given the neceſſary Orders, for having both the Perſons that have been examin'd in England, and the Papers that relate to that Affair, ſent hither. Her Majeſty doubts not. but your Enquiries into this Plot, or any Practices of the like Nature, will end in your laying down ſolid Meaſures for preventing of them, or the fatal Conſequences of them in Time to come: And as to any Queſtions or Conteſts that may ariſe upon ſuch Enquiries amongſt you, her Majeſty hopes, that you will manage them with all the Temper and Moderation, that the Nature of the Thing will allow.

A. D. 1704.

My LORDS and GENTLEMEN,

I have ſpoke long, contrary to my Way and Inclination, and therefore I ſhall only add in a Word, as to my ſelf I am very ſenſible of my Unfitneſs for ſo great a Truſt; but ſince ſuch is her Majeſty's Pleaſure, I'll do my beſt, and I ſhall eſteem my ſelf very happy, if I can any ways contribute to bring Matters to a Settlement in this Nation. It is a great Encouragement to me, I muſt own it, that the preſent Opportunity, in a manner, enables me to give, at the ſame time, the greateſt Proofs that I can ever hope to give, of my Duty to her Majeſty, my Love to my Country, and my Reſpect to Parliaments, in particular to this honourable Meeting.

The High-Commiſſioner having ended his Speech, the Earl of Seafield, Lord High-Chancellor, ſpoke as follows:

My LORDS and GENTLEMEN,

The Lord Chancellor's Speech.

" YOU have heard her Majeſty's moſt gracious Letter, and what his Grace my " Lord Commiſſioner hath been pleaſed to add; which do fully lay before " you the weighty and great Reaſons for which her Majeſty hath called you together " at this Time; and you muſt all be convinced, that the chief Deſign of her Ma- " jeſty's Government, is to advance the Happineſs and Welfare of her People, and " to protect them in the full Poſſeſſion and Enjoyment of their religious and civil " Concerns.

" Her Majeſty doth, with a very tender and affectionate Concern, lay before you " the Danger of Diviſions and Animoſities; and recommends to you, to employ your " Thoughts in promoting what is for the Security and Advantage of the Kingdom. " And you cannot but be ſenſible, that our Diviſions muſt encourage our Enemies " abroad, to form Deſigns to diſturb the Peace and Tranquillity we now enjoy; and " therefore ye will, no doubt, make uſe of this Opportunity to convince all, that " this Nation is fix'd and firm in their Loyalty to her Majeſty; and that all her " good Subjects will conſtantly ſupport her Government.

" Her Majeſty doth, with great Earneſtneſs, recommend the ſettling of the Suc- " ceſſion in the Proteſtant Line, as what would be the ſureſt Foundation for the Se- " curity of your Religion and Liberties, and will contribute greatly to the Ad- " vancement of the Proteſtant Intereſt every where; and this being of ſo great " Conſequence, it is not to be doubted, but that you will think this the fit Oppor- " tunity for taking it under your Conſideration, while we have the Advantage of " being convened in Peace under her Majeſty's Protection, and can deliberately " conſider, what is the moſt probable Means for the future, to ſecure and preſerve " all that is valuable to us. And for your further Encouragement, you have heard " how her Majeſty hath given full Inſtructions to her Commiſſioner, to grant ſuch " Conditions of Government, with regard to the Succeſſor, as can reaſonably be " demanded, for ſecuring the Sovereignty and Liberties of this Kingdom: So that " nothing is wanting on her Majeſty's Part, that is neceſſary for the Eſtabliſhment " and Security of this Nation.

" You know that her Majeſty is engaged in a moſt juſt and neceſſary War, for " the Defence of the Liberties of Europe; which makes it neceſſary that Supplies " be given for maintaining the Forces, for repairing the Forts and Gariſons, for " providing the Magazines with Arms and Ammunition, and for maintaining the " Frigats, which have proved ſo uſeful for the guarding of your Trade: All theſe " being plainly needful, it is not be doubted, but that you will readily comply " therewith. It is to be regretted, that the Nation is in ſo low a Condition; but what " we give is neceſſary for our own Defence, and will circulate within the Kingdom: " And her Majeſty doth freely allow of taking Inſpection of the Funds that have " been given by Parliament, and appropriated for the publick Uſe, and will take " care, that what ſhall be now given, ſhall be duly applied.

" Her Majeſty hath given frequent Aſſurances of her Reſolution, to maintain the " eſtabliſh'd Government of the Church, and hath recommended to you to fall upon " effectual Means for diſcouraging of Vice and Immorality, and for encouraging " true Piety and Religion, and providing for and employing of the Poor.

A. D. 1704.

" The Trade of the Kingdom doth alſo deſerve your ſerious Conſideration; for the " Advancement of which, and the Improvement of the Product and Manufactories " of the Kingdom, her Majeſty gives you Aſſurance of her ready Concurrence.

" My Lord Commiſſioner has acquainted you, That the Plot, which has made ſo " great a Noiſe here, and in our Neighbour Nation, ſhall be laid before you with " all its Evidence; and it is not to be doubted, but that you will take care to do " therein what is neceſſary for the diſcouraging of bad Practices, which may tend " to diſturb the Peace and Quiet of this Kingdom; and in all your Proceedings in " this Matter, that you will avoid Animoſities, and make it your principal Care " to provide for the publick Security and Peace.

My LORDS and GENTLEMEN,

" I ſhall conclude with recommending to you again, the ſerious Conſideration of " what her Majeſty has ſo earneſtly recommended; and that ye will improve this " Opportunity, which God hath given you, for ſecuring to your ſelves, and tranſmit- " ting to your Poſterity your Religion and Liberties; which will certainly be for " your Honour and Happineſs, and will render you equally acceptable to her Ma- " jeſty and to all her Subjects.

After this, the Earl of Cromarty, Secretary of State, made the following pedantick and ambiguous Speech:

My LORD CHANCELLOR,

The Earl of Cromatry's Speech.

Albeit this Seat wherein it has pleaſed her Majeſty to place me, does allow, or rather oblige me to ſay ſomething on this Occaſion; yet my Lord High-Commiſſioner, and Lord Chancellor, have ſaid ſo fully and ſo well, as I may juſtly fear what I can ſay, will prove a diminutive Adjection: But I ſhall ſpeak little, and (if I can remember) I ſhall not repeat.

My Lord, Should all her Servants be ſilent, the Actings, the Sayings, the whole Tract of her Majeſty's Government, and the happy Effects thereof, do ſpeak loudly, that if ever Prince or Sovereign have devoted themſelves to GOD, and their Country, without Flattery or Hyperbole, we may truly ſay, that our moſt gracious Queen hath. All may hear, and thoſe who have the Honour to attend her Majeſty, muſt ſee, that her Time, her Care, her Pleaſure, her Leiſure, her Treaſure, yea, her very Health and Life, are ſacrific'd every Day, and almoſt every Time of the Day, to actual Exerciſe of Devotion to GOD, or Adminiſtration of Government to her People; and we may bleſs God, that by his Bleſſing on her Endeavours, all, and every one of her Subjects, do participate of the Fruits of the Royal Sacrifice: Nay, and all the beſt Part of Europe beſide, that is, her Majeſty's Confederates, and her and their Enemies do find with Grief, what we feel with Satisfaction. And though her Majeſty has many Dominions under her Royal Care, and more Confederates; yet ſhe omits not any of our particular Concerns; and we partake in our full Capacity of thoſe happy Effects. We are with many others engaged in a great, but (to full Conviction) neceſſary War, the Effects whereof are dreadful and hurtful, not only in Expence and Soldiers, (which all muſt afford) but the ſeeing of People ſlaughtered like Beaſts in our Streets and Houſes, to ſee our Towns on Fire, our Women raviſhed, our ſacred Things prophaned, and many other diſmal Effects of War and Rapine, which almoſt all others feel and ſee; we (Thanks to God, and under him to his Vicegerent our Queen) do only hear of theſe Things: My Lord Chancellor, this we ought, and I doubt not we do remember and conſider. My Lord, This is not offered as an Elogy and Panegyrick on her Majeſty; ſhe is far above what I can ſay, but it is an Antecedent to the following Subſumption.

And as this of her Care of us, and Zeal for us, is evident, ſo it is no leſs true, that the Queen ſits higher than we do, or ought to do on this Throne, as ſhe does alſo on the Throne of her other Dominions: And farther, we know that ſhe is one of the Heads, and highly ſituate, in all the great Confederacy; wherefore her Majeſty is, if not the Chief, yet a Principal; and from this, both Reaſon and Diſcretion oblige us to conclude, that ſhe muſt ſee very much farther, and more clearly into the Actions, Deſigns and Practices of her and our Enemies, and in the Concerns, and in what directs and moves our Allies, than is poſſible for us to do; who both ſtand lower, and are bounded in our narrow Spheres: Therefore, as in all Matters, ſo eſpecially in point of Fact, we are bound to rely on her Information, and her Judgment, more than on our own; ſince what we can but conjecture, is obvious to her certain Knowledge; and if we ſhould fall (as I confidently hope we will not) into the Indiſcretion, to oppoſe our Conjectures to her Knowledge, that could not miſs of dire Effects, and readily moſt miſchievous to our ſelves.

Her Majeſty's Royal Letter, my Lord Commiſſioner his Grace, and my Lord Chancellor, have plainly laid before us Matters of great Importance: Her Majeſty is very expreſs in what what she proposes; her Reason and Antecedent is as plain and expres as the Conclusion. I hope the Two Motives I gave for believing, and consequently for obeying, her Majesty, are also plain and concluding.

My Lord Chancellor, The Honour of being her Majesty's Secretary, obliges me to obviate and remove an Asperson on the Queen's Majesty's Candor and Honour, (if any such Insinuation be made) which is, that some would persuade others to believe, that the Queen has a secret Will in the Affair now before us, contrary to her expres Will revealed, and declared by her in her Royal Letter.

My Lord, I am persuaded she does hate that Position in Theology, and I am certain she does so in her Politicks; and the Reason of my Certainty in this is, that her Majesty did command me, and, I think, her other Servants, expresly to assure this House, that nothing in her Servants could please her better, than if they should believe and obey her in what she proposes in her Letter; and nothing can displease her more, than to do otherways.

My Lord, Both old Custom, and good Manners, oblige us to begin with her Majesty's Letter, and in its Method. If my Zeal and Duty, on this Subject, have drawn me in to speak more than I intended, or perhaps, needed, I beg the House's Pardon: But since my Hand is in, and that I neither use nor love to speak oft, I shall only add my earnest and humble Wish for these Two Things: First, That the Orders of the House may be strictly observed; for, by that, much Time will be sav'd, and many Inconveniencies prevented; and the not doing of this, will disgrace this great Court. The Second is, That we may redargue one another with Kindness and Civility: Let our Force fall on the Subject which we oppugn, or the Measures which we reject, and by no means on one another's Persons. Would to God we were always unanimous; but that seldom, if ever, was in so numerous a Court or Council: But when we differ, will we argue the better for our being angry? No; impedit ira Animum. Will we convert others so well, by making them angry, as by a meek Calmness in arguing? Does Spite add Force to Reason? Or does it produce that Consent which we endeavour to obtain? So, for our own Sakes, and for the Honour of our Reasonings, let us argue and reply with Calmness. I have oft regretted, to see good Reasoning lost, or at least ineffectual in great measure, by the Heats in arguing; and I will say, it were a Pity: For the Members of great Courts elsewhere, may, in the Opinion of many, speak better Language than these of this do; yet they do not speak better Sense. And besides these Motives to calm Reasoning, this ought to determine us all against it; to wit, that neither our Heat, nor our self-pleasing Arguments, are, what will determine any Debate. The Law of Order, the Constitutions, Statutes and Necessity, give the Faculty of Concluding to the Whole of this House; and all we can say, must be submitted to what this whole House will approve, or to what the major Part will agree in: And therefore, much Reasoning, and all Heats, will, on many Accounts, be profitably forborn. I conclude with this Assertion, which I think evident without Discourse; That as the Union of Britain is apparently its greatest Politick Good; so, as certainly, and by the infallible Rule of Contraries, a Division of Britain is its greatest Evil: And then, it is a necessary Corollary; Whoever is not for the Union of Britain, may be concluded an Enemy to it.

Proceedings and Debates about the Succession.

These formal Speeches being over, Mr. Seaton Jun. of Pitmeddon, gave in a Resolve, importing, That the House would stand by and defend her Majesty's Person and Government, without Naming a Successor to the Crown of Scotland, during this Session of Parliament; but would agree on such Conditions of Government, to take Effect after her Majesty's Death, as might best conduce to free this Kingdom from all Englis Influence, to the end the Scots might be in a Condition to treat with England about a Federal Union. Nothing was done in this Resolve that Day; but on the 13th of July, the Duke of Hamilton presented another, much of the same Import; viz. That this Parliament would not proceed to name a Successor to the Crown, until the Scots had a previous Treaty with England, in relation to Commerce, and other Concerns. The Courtiers, not expecting that the Cavaliers would have begun so early to oppose the Succession, were not a little surpriz'd and puzzled at this Resolve; and all they could do for the present, was to procure a Vote, That it should lie on the Table till the next Sederunt, or Meeting, Four Days * after. The Duke of Hamilton having then moved the resuming of the Consideration of his Resolve, the same occasion'd a warm Debate; in which Mr. Fletcher of Salton, in a particular manner, pathetically set forth, " the Miseries and Hardships which the Scots had undergone, since the Union " of the Two Crowns under one Sovereign; and the Impossibility of bettering " their Condition, unless they took care to prevent any Design that tended to con- " tinue the same." Hereupon the Earl of Rothes presented another Resolve, importing, That this Parliament would immediately proceed to make such Limitations and Conditions of Government, as might be judged proper for rectifying the Constitution, and to vindicate and secure the Sovereignty and Independency of the Nation; and then the Parliament liament would take into Conſideration the other Reſolve offer'd by the Duke of Hamilton, for a Treaty previous to the Nomination of a Succeſſor to the Crown. This occaſion'd a new Debate, wherein ſome Members of the Court Party earneſtly urged † the Neceſſity of ſettling the Succeſſion, before the Houſe proceeded to any other Buſineſs; and, on the other hand, the Cavaliers made very ſharp Reflections on the Proceedings of the Parliament of England with relation to the Plot, which had great Influence on many Members wholly unacquainted with that Affair. However, the Court Party thinking they were ſtrong enough to give the Earl of Rothes's Motion the Preference before Duke Hamilton's Reſolve, inſiſted to have the Queſtion ſtated, which of the Two ſhould come firſt under the Houſe's Conſideration? Upon which, great Heats ariſing, Sir James Falconer propoſed, that both Reſolves ſhould be join'd in this manner, viz. That this Parliament will not proceed to the Nomination of a Succeſſor, until we have a previous Treaty with England for regulating our Commerce, and other Concerns with that Nation: And, That this Parliament will proceed to make ſuch Limitations and Conditions of Government, as may ſecure the Religion, Liberty, and Independency of this Nation, before they proceed to the ſaid Nomination of a Succeſſor to the Crown. All the Cavaliers ſeconded this Motion; but the Courtiers unanimouſly oppoſed it, and inſiſted that the previous Queſtion ſhould be put, Whether to put this joint Reſolve to the Vote, or to vote them ſeparately? And it being carry'd to vote them jointly by Forty two Voices; then the ſaid Joint-Reſolve was put to the Vote, and carry'd by a Majority * of Fifty five Voices.

The Cavaliers were extremely elated upon this Victory; and the Duke of Athol, Lord Privy-Seal, and one of their Leaders, moved, That her Majeſty having been pleaſed to ſignify by her Commiſſioner, that the Examination of the Plot ſhould be laid before the Parliament, his Grace the Lord Commiſſioner would be pleaſed to write to her Majeſty to ſend down the Perſons who were Witneſſes, and all the Papers relating to that Plot, as ſoon as poſſible, that that Affair might be thoroughly examin'd; and thoſe who were unjuſtly accus'd might be vindicated, and the guilty puniſh'd. Whereupon the Lord Chancellor declared, by Order of the Lord Commiſſioner, That his Grace had writ, and would write again to her Majeſty, for all the Evidences relating to the Plot. Two Days after, the Duke of Hamilton moved, "That the Parliament would proceed to "make ſuch Limitations and Conditions of Government, for the rectifying of the "Conſtitution, as might ſecure the Religion, Liberty and Independency of this Na"tion; and that they would name Commiſſioners to treat with England for regula"ting the Commerce, and other Concerns with that Nation, previous to all other "Buſineſs, except an Act for Two Months Ceſs, firſt of all to be granted for the "preſent Subſiſtence of her Majeſty's Forces. Thereupon the Earl of Marchmont made a long Speech, in Subſtance importing, "That ſince the Houſe had reſolv'd "not to fall immediately upon ſettling the Succeſſion, it was reaſonable that an "Act ſhould be made to exclude all Popiſh Succeſſors." To which the Duke of Hamilton anſwer'd, That he ſhould be one of the firſt who ſhould draw his Sword againſt a Popiſh Succeſſor, though he did not think this a proper Time, either to ſettle the Succeſſion, or to conſider of the Earl of Marchmont's Propoſal. After ſome Debates, the Conſideration of the Duke of Hamilton's Motion was adjourn'd to the 21ſt, when it was moved, That the Act preſented by the Lord Juſtice Clerk, and declar'd by him to be for Fourteen Months Supply, payable in Two Years, might likewiſe be conſider'd. Whereupon, after Debate, it was put to the Vote, Whether to give a Ceſs for Two, or for Six Months? And it was carried by Sixteen Voices, that it ſhould be for Six Months only. The ſame Day, an Overture by Mr. Fletcher of Salton, for nominating Commiſſioners to treat with England, was read; as was alſo a Petition of David Failie, Priſoner in the Caſtle of Sterling by Sentence of the Council, for accuſing the Duke of Queenſberry, and the Marquis of Annandale, of a Deſign to ſuborn him againſt the Duke of Hamilton, and the Duke of Athol, and others, in relation to the Plot, praying to be ſet at Liberty; which was granted, upon his finding Bail to appear before the Parliament when call'd. On the 25th of June, the Act of Supply was again taken into Conſideration; and an additional Clauſe about the Security of the Kingdom, offered to be added to that Act, was read. After ſome Debate thereon, the following Reſolve was offered by the Lord Roſs, viz. That the Parliament will proceed to grant Two Months Supply for ſubſiſting her Majeſty's Forces; and as ſoon as the Act of Security, now read, has got the Royal Aſſent, will give Four Months more. And then a Second Reſolve was preſented by the Earl of Roxburgh, viz. That there be a firſt reading mark'd on the Act for Security, and that both this Act, and that for the Supply, lye without being farther proceeded on, until his Grace, her Majeſty's Commiſſioner, receive Inſtructions as to the Act of Security, it being then free for the Parliament to proceed to the Acts jointly or ſeparately, as they ſhould think fit. After reaſoning on both the Lords Reſolves, the Queſtion was ſtated, Approve the firſt Reſolve preſented by the Lord

Lord Roſs, or the ſecond Reſolve preſented by the Earl of Roxburgh? And it was carried for the Second. The Act of Security being read, a firſt reading was order'd to be mark'd thereon; and then the Lord Commiſſioner appointed the next Sitting of Parliament to be for diſcuſſing private Buſineſs. In the mean time, the Queen and her Miniſters being inform'd of all that paſs'd, thought fit to allow the paſſing of the Act of Security, rather than, by refuſing it, to increaſe the preſent Ferment and Animoſities, and be obliged to diſband the Forces in Scotland, for want of a Subſidy to defray that Charge. Hereupon the Act of Security received the Royal Aſſent, and on that Occaſion the Lord High-Commiſſioner made the following Speech: A. D. 1704.

Act of Security paſs'd, Auguſt 5.

My LORDS and GENTLEMEN,

The High-Commiſſioner's Speech to the Parliament.

" AT your ſitting down, her Majeſty, in her Gracious Letter, recommended
" to you Two Things, which ſhe thought moſt neceſſary for your own Quiet
" and Security, as well as for that of her Government; The Settling of the Suc-
" ceſſion in the Proteſtant Line, and the providing for the Subſiſtence of the Forces,
" the Funds laſt given for that End being then exhauſted. The firſt of theſe you " have not thought fit for your Intereſt to do at this Time: I heartily wiſh you may " meet with an Opportunity for it, more for your Advantage, at another. The " other all of you ſeem'd moſt ready and willing to go into, as witneſs the ſeveral
" Motions and Reſolves made there-anent; but withal ſhew'd ſtrong Inclinations for " an Act of Security, as abſolutely neceſſary. I told you then, as I had done at firſt,
" that I had been fully impower'd, and inſtructed not only as to that, but many " other Things for your Good; but upon the Alteration of Circumſtances, had " not now the Liberty to make uſe of thoſe Powers even as to that, till I had ac" quainted her Majeſty, and knew her Mind, which I would do, and uſe my utmoſt
" Intereſt to procure it favourable; which was the true Reaſon of your long Adjourn" ment, and not what was inſinuated by ſome, who ought to have known me better,
" the Character I have in the World being, as I hope, above ſo mean a Reflection.

" And now, My Lords and Gentlemen, I can tell you, that from her Majeſty's
" innate Goodneſs, and gracious Diſpoſition towards you, it hath been more eaſy
" for me, and ſome other of her Servants, to prevail with her, than perhaps was by " others expected; ſo that you have an Act of Security ſufficient for the Ends propo-
" ſed: And it's hop'd, at the ſame time, you will perfect that of Supply, which you
" your ſelves ſeem convinced to be abſolutely neceſſary at this time; and without " which, neither the Forces can be kept on Foot, nor any Frigats maintained for " guarding our Coaſts, and ſecuring our Trade; both which now lying before you,
" I hope you will go preſently about, that when finiſhed they may have the Royal
" Aſſent, which I am ready to give: And thereafter you may have time to proceed " to other Buſineſs relating to Trade, or your other Concerns, wherein I ſhall be " willing to comply with your Deſires, ſo they be within the Bounds of my In-" ſtructions.

The Courtiers now perceiving they could do nothing, unleſs they divided the Cavaliers, and the Duke of Queenſberry's Friends, reſolved to throw a Bone of Contention amongſt them. The 9th of Auguſt being appointed for nominating Commiſſioners to treat with England, ſeveral Motions were made on that Head: But the Lord Belhaven, in a long Diſcourſe, left the Matter in hand, and gave a full Account of " the Plot; and having, by this means, ſpent ſo much of the Day, that it was impoſſible for the Houſe to reaſſume and finiſh the former Debate, Mr. Fletcher of Salton, (to be even with the Court) made a Speech, importing in Subſtance, " That " he was ſorry the Debate had been interrupted; but ſince the Plot and Proceedings " of the Engliſh Houſe of Lords, had been mentioned, he was of Opinion, the Houſe
" could not but take it into Conſideration; and having afterwards expoſed the En-
" croachments of the Houſe of Lords on the Freedom of the Scotch Nation, by pre" ſuming to judge of what they termed, a Scotch Conſpiracy, as the greateſt Step that " e're was made, towards aſſerting England's Dominion over the Scots Crown: He
" ſaid, he hoped the Houſe would ſhew its Reſentment of it;" and for that End preſented a Reſolve, which he deſired might be read and voted, importing, " That
" the Engliſh Houſe of Lords Addreſs to the Queen, in relation to the Nomination
" of their Succeſſor to the Crown of Scotland, and their Examination of the Plot,
" ſo far as it concerned Scotland and Scotſmen, was an undue intermeddling with " our Concerns, and an Encroachment upon the Honour, Sovereignty, and Indepen-
" dency of this Nation; and that the Proceedings of the Houſe of Commons were " like thoſe of good Subjects to the Queen, and good Neighbours to us." Though the Earl of Roxburgh, the Lord Belhaven, Baily of Jerviſwood, and many more of Reſolve againſt the Engliſh Houſe of Lords about the Scotch Plot.

A. D. 1704. the Courtiers, were of the Number of thoſe that were beſpattered by this Plot, and would willingly, all of them, have proſecuted the Authors of it, to the utmoſt Extremity; yet they durſt, by no Means, conſent to this Reſolve, becauſe it was levell'd againſt their Superior Powers, the Peers of England; and therefore they oppoſed it: But the Injuſtice and Encroachment of the Engliſh Houſe of Lords, was ſo clearly proved; and the Neceſſity of reſenting the ſame, repreſented in ſo lively and affecting a Manner, that when it was put to the Vote, the firſt Branch, with Relation to the Lords, was approved by a great Majority; but the other Branch, concerning the Commons, was rejected; many being of Opinion, it would have been an undue intermeddling in the Engliſh Concerns, for the Scotch Parliament to declare its Opinion, whether the Engliſh were Right, or Wrong, in Relation to the Queen, as Queen of England? And below the Scotch Parliament to return them Thanks, for not invading the Rights and Liberties of Scotland. Nor was this Clauſe much valued by the Cavaliers; ſince the only Deſign of inſerting it, was to cajole the Engliſh Houſe of Commons, at that Time in very bad Terms with the Houſe of Lords: But the kind Reception the other Branch met with, very much humbled the Courtiers, who knew not what Apology to make to their Maſters, the Engliſh Miniſters.

After this the Parliament granted the Queen a Supply of Six Months Ceſs, payable in Twelve Months Time, and then ſpent Four Sittings on the Report of the Committee appointed laſt Seſſion to inſpect the publick Accompts. In the mean Time, ſeveral Overtures for good Laws were preſented; ſuch as an Act for a further Repreſentation of the State of Barons, in regard of the late Increaſe of Peers; An Act for Freedom of Voting in Parliament, excluding all Officers of the Army, and others concern'd in the Revenue, from electing, or being elected Members of Parliament; and ſome Acts for regulating Abuſes; but none were finiſh'd and paſs'd, except the Act allowing the Importation and Exportation of Wooll. Four Days after *, the Lord Commiſſioner told the Parliament, That he was not allow'd to give them any more Time, her Majeſty thinking a ſhort Receſs neceſſary at preſent: But that it would not be long before they had another Opportunity of doing what ſtill remain'd to be done; for no Diſappointment her Majeſty had met with, could alter, in the leaſt, her favourable Diſpoſitions towards that her ancient Kingdom. Hereupon, the Parliament, by his Grace's Order, was prorogued to the 7th of October next: But before they ſeparated, they drew up an Addreſs to her Majeſty, deſiring that the Evidence and Papers relating to the Plot, might be laid before them againſt next Seſſion.

* Aug. 27.

The Scotch Parliament prorogued.

Immediately after the Adjournment of the Parliament, the Courtiers repaired to London, where the Marquis of Tweedale was made Chancellor; the Earls of Seafield and Roxburgh, Secretaries of State; the Earl of Rothes, Lord Privy-Seal; the Earl of Cromarty, Juſtice-General; Mr. Baily of Jerviſwood, Treaſurer-Depute; and the Earl of Selkirk, Lord Belhaven, and Sir John Home, Lords of the Treaſury. Sir William Hamilton of Whitlow, was alſo made Juſtice Clerk; but he lived not to enjoy that Office many Months; and was ſucceeded by Adam Cockburne of Ormiſtown.

Alterations in the Scotch Miniſtry.

† Lockhart, Ubi Supra, p. 128. Characters of Sir William Hamilton, and Adam Cockburne, Eſq;

" The firſt of theſe Two, (ſays the Scotch Memorialiſt †) was bred a Lawyer, and " after the Revolution, raiſed to the Bench, upon Account of his Whiggery. He " ſoon diſplay'd a froward haughty Mind. Betwixt Man and Man, wherein he had " no particular Concern, he was juſt; but extreamly Partial, where his Friend, or " his own Politicks, interfer'd. He had a ſound, ſolid Judgment: But all his Acti- " ons were accompanied with ſo much Pride, Vanity, Ill-nature, and Severity, " that he was odious to every Body;" but particularly to the Jacobites, upon Account of his eminent Zeal for the Hanoverian Succeſſion. The Cavaliers were glad he was out of the way, but gain'd very little by the Change: " For Adam Cockburne " of Ormiſtown, was a warm Stickler for the Revolution, and a rigid Preſbyterian, " which recommended him to King William's Favour. He was a Man of good Un- " derſtanding, and wanted not abundance of Application to Buſineſs; but of ſo " hot, virulent, turbulent, and domineering a Temper, that he was uneaſy even to " his own Party. Of all that were concern'd in the Adminiſtration, none equal'd " him in vindictive Proſecutions of thoſe he thought Enemies to the eſtabliſh'd " Government, either in Church or State; having, upon that Score, regard to nei- " ther Sex, Age, or Quality; and by theſe Means he preſerv'd his Intereſt at " Court, ſerving as a Scare-Crow to terrify others. A new Commiſſion of Council was, at the ſame Time, ſent down to Edinburgh, by which moſt of the Cavaliers, and all the Duke of Queenſberry's Friends, were laid aſide, and made up entirely of Starch Revolutioners: And thus the Adminiſtration of Affairs in Scotland, was lodg'd in the Hands of a Set of Men, who chearfully concurr'd with the Meaſures at this Time purſued by the Court of England.

New Privy-Council.

The

A. D. 1704.

The News of the glorious Succeſſes Abroad, which, by this Time, had reach'd London, made an agreeable Diverſion to the lowring Proſpect of Things at Home; but in order to form an Idea of the great Actions perform'd this Year by the Britiſh Arms, 'tis neceſſary to premiſe a ſhort View of the Poſture of Affairs in Europe, before the Duke of Marlborough went into the Field. Upon the Duke of Savoy's declaring for the Grand Alliance, Count Staremberg, who commanded the Imperial Forces in Italy, ſent a Detachment of Fifteen Hundred Horſe, under the Conduct of Count Viſconti, to his Royal Highneſs's Aſſiſtance. This handful of Men were ſeveral Times diſturb'd in their March by the Enemy, but having bravely fought their way through, moſt of them got ſafe into Piedmont. However, this being too ſlender a Supply to prevent the Duke of Savoy's being oppreſs'd by the French and Spaniards, expreſs Orders were ſent from Vienna to Count Staremberg, at any Rate, to join his Royal Highneſs's Forces with the beſt Part of the Imperial Army. Accordingly, that wiſe and reſolute General having made a Motion towards the Mincio, to amuſe the Duke of Vendoſme, and incline him to believe he deſign'd to go into Germany, he turn'd, on a ſudden, paſs'd the Secchia on the 26th of December, (N. S.) and directed his March through the Countries of Parma, and Placentia; having divided his Forces, conſiſting of near Sixteen Thouſand Men, into Three Bodies, the firſt of which was commanded by the young Prince of Vaudemont; the Second by General Vaubonne; and the Third, which form'd the Rear-Guard, by General Staremberg in Perſon. On the 2d of January, the Imperialiſts defeated a Detachment of Four Hundred Horſe, and Fifty Grenadiers of the Forces of Milan; and with the like Succeſs attack'd, the next Day, Two Hundred French Horſe near Brono, and Two Hundred Spaniſh Foot, and ſome Militia; commanded by French Officers, and intrench'd at Stradella. The 4th, the Germans paſs'd the Stradella, and continued their March, leaving One Hundred and Thirty Dragoons in thoſe Intrenchments, as if they deſign'd to reſt in that Place; and in their way to Brono, routed Five Hundred French Horſe. In the mean Time, the Duke de Vendoſme, who follow'd the Imperialiſts with Five Thouſand Foot, and One Thouſand Five Hundred Horſe, arriv'd the 3d at Sarmata, and hearing of the Action that happen'd that Day at Stradella, he haſten'd thither, and drove the German Dragoons from thoſe Intrenchments. The whole Imperial Army being join'd, they march'd towards Parma, and finding ſome Troops poſted on the other Side that River, to oppoſe their Paſſage, whilſt Monſieur de Vendoſme march'd to attack them in the Rear, General Vaubonne ſwam over, with ſome choice Squadrons, and beat the Enemy from that advantageous Poſt. To improve this Succeſs, the Germans laid a Bridge on that River, over which moſt of their Army paſs'd; but that Bridge being made in Haſte, of old rotten Boats, it unfortunately broke down, before the Rear, commanded by the Prince of Lichſtentein, and Count Solari, could all get over. Thereupon the French, who by this Time were all come up, attack'd thoſe Troops, which occaſion'd a ſharp Diſpute, wherein thoſe Two brave Generals were kill'd; but the Imperial Horſe ſwimming once more over the River, reſcued the Foot; and the Bridge being repair'd, the whole Army paſs'd, and on the 13th join'd the Duke of Savoy, not having loſt above Four Hundred Men, in that prodigious and memorable March. His Royal Highneſs having diſpos'd his new Gueſts into Quarters of Refreſhment, and view'd the Fortifications of Verrue, Vercelli, and other Poſts, return'd the 25th of January, (N. S.) to Turin, where he gave Audience to the Envoys-Extraordinary of England and Holland.

Foreign Affairs relating to the Grand Alliance.

Count Staremberg's memorable March to join the Duke of Savoy.

After ſeveral Paper Skirmiſhes between the Marquis de Puiſieux, and Monſieur de Mellarede, the Miniſters of France, and Savoy, in Swiſſerland, the former deſired a Meeting of the Deputies of the Cantons at Solothurn: The ſame being granted, and the Aſſembly open'd on the 18th of February, (N. S.) the French Ambaſſador made a long Speech to them, the Sum of which was no more than to offer to them, 1. "The Guard of that Part of Savoy which borders upon the Lake of Geneva, and "is call'd the Country of Chablais and Fauſſigny: 2. That his Majeſty's Troops "ſhould have free Paſſage through them, to and from Italy. 3. That the Duke of "Savoy ſhould not be allow'd the like Paſſage for his Troops: And, 4. That the "Swiſs, in Conſideration of his Majeſty's extraordinary Complaiſance, ſhould grant "him a new Levy of a certain Number of Men." The Diet having debated this Offer, made a Deputation to the Ambaſſador, to let him know, That, beſides many Inconveniencies which would attend their Acceptance of that Propoſal, they did not think the Guard of thoſe Places a ſufficient Security for the Helvetick Body, who were reſolv'd not to ſuffer themſelves to be ſurrounded by any one Prince. The Ambaſſador made many Proteſtations of the great Conſideration his Maſter had for the Cantons, and that he had no Deſign to ſurround them; but this not proving ſatisfactory, he ſeem'd to give ſome Hopes of his Maſter's conſenting that the Fortreſs of Mont- meillan might be put into the Hands of the Cantons, but not the Countrey round it: And this not ſatisfying the Diet, which perſiſted to demand the Neutrality for all Savoy, the Aſſembly broke up, with mutual Diſſatisfaction, between them and the Ambaſſador, who, at * parting, deliver'd them the following Memorial.

* Feb. 22. N. S.

Magnificent LORDS,

The French Ambaſſador's Speech to them.

I Am concerned to ſee, that the more Complaiſance the King, my Maſter, has for your Deſires, the more you affect to make him irregular Demands; for it ſeems you make no Account of the new Marks of his Conſideration which his Majeſty has ſo lately given you, in granting you the Favour which you had deſired of him, in relation to the Countries ſituate along the Rhine, and the Lake of Conſtance. Notwithſtanding all the King has done to remove the Apprehenſion you have of being ſurrounded by one Powerful Prince, you are yet earneſt in aſking a Neutrality for all Savoy. I am ſorry that I ſhould be obliged to tell you, I cannot give you any Aſſurances upon your Demands: Whenever you make any that ſhall not prejudice the King's Intereſt, I ſhall readily uſe my utmoſt good Offices for your Satisfaction: But while you perſiſt in endeavouring to obtain Things which may expoſe part of his Majeſty's Dominions to the Mercy of his Enemies, and when you will exact that he ſhould give up his Advantage in their Favour, all I can do, is to give the King an Account of your Demands, but without accompanying them with any Inſtances on my Part, unleſs I were reſolv'd to diſpleaſe his Majeſty. It is enough for me, that I have uſed all poſſible and reaſonable Means to undeceive you in the Fears you appear to have of being ſurrounded. I can do no more at preſent, but muſt expect the Orders his Majeſty will pleaſe to give me.

† Feb. 23. N. S.

The next † Day, the Diet ſent a new Deputation to the French Ambaſſador, to ſignify to him their Wonder and Surprize at the Expreſſions he made Uſe of in his Memorial, particularly the Word Favour; and to repreſent to him, That what all the Cantons had demanded of his Majeſty for the Security of the Frontiers of Switzerland, was their unconteſtable Right, ſtipulated in their Alliances with him, and founded on the Rights of Nations. The Deputies having acquitted themſelves of this Commiſſion, the Aſſembly broke up, after they had agreed to wait a few Days for the King of France's Reſolution touching the Neutrality of all Savoy; and that, in the mean Time, every Canton ſhould conſult what further Meaſures to take, as Occaſion might require.

Diſtreſs'd Condition of the Emperor's Affairs.

Before this Time, Prince Eugene was gone to the Imperial Court, to ſollicit Reinforcements for the German Forces that remain'd in the Mantuan, under the Command of Count Leiningen: But the Elector of Bavaria being now ſtrongly ſupported by great Supplies of Men and Money from France, and threatning no leſs than to march directly to Vienna, the Emperor could not ſpare any Forces for Italy. Nor was the Conjunction of the French and Bavarians alone that diſtreſs'd and alarm'd the Court of Vienna: For the Agents of France had, at this Juncture, ſo dextrouſly raiſed the Diſcontents, and effectually encouraged the Inſurrection of the oppreſs'd and perſecuted Hungarians, that having form'd ſeveral formidable Bodies, under their Leaders, Prince Ragotzki, Count Caroli, and Count Berzeni, and made themſelves Maſters of ſeveral important Places, they now offer'd powerfully to aſſiſt the Elector of Bavaria in his intended Invaſion of the Emperor's Hereditary Countries.

Count Wratiſlaw's Memorial to the Queen.

Things being in this Condition, Count Wratiſlaw, the Imperial Envoy-Extraordinary to the Queen of Great Britain, made ‖ a lively Repreſentation to her Majeſty. "Of the preſſing Neceſſities of the Empire, by the breaking in of a conſiderable "Army of French into Bavaria; which, together with the Inſurrection in Hungary, "had reduced the Imperial Hereditary Countries into an incredible Perplexity and "Confuſion; ſo that it was to be feared, an entire Revolution and Deſolation of all "Germany would follow, if ſome ſpeedy Aſſiſtance were not applied, proportionable "to the great Danger they were now threatned with. This the Envoy thought "himſelf obliged to lay before her Majeſty, that out of the ſame Zeal for preſerving "the Liberties of Europe, for which the Queen was ſo much famed, ſhe would be "pleaſed to order the Duke of Marlborough, her Captain-General, ſeriouſly to con"ſult with the States-General, of the ſpeedieſt Method for aſſiſting the Empire; or "at leaſt to conduct part of the Troops in her Majeſty's Pay beyond Sea, to pre"ſerve Germany from a total Subverſion: It being neither juſt in it ſelf, nor ad"vantageous to the common Cauſe, That her Majeſty's Troops ſhould tarry on the "Frontiers of Holland, which were not in the leaſt threatned by the Enemy, and "were defended by great Rivers, and ſtrong Places, whilſt the Empire was de"ſtroy'd by the French Troops, with Fire and Sword." To this Memorial

Mr.

A. D. 1704.

Mr. Secretary Hedges return'd an Anſwer; "That the Duke of Marlborough had re- "ceiv'd Orders from her Majeſty, to take the moſt effectual Method with the States- "General, to ſend a ſpeedy Succour to his Imperial Majeſty and the Empire; and "to preſs the States to take the neceſſary Meaſures, to reſcue Germany from the im- "minent Danger it was now expos'd to.

The Queen's Anſwer.

Either the foregoing Memorial was but Matter of Form, or the Emperor's Envoy was then unacquainted with the great Project which the Duke of Marlborough had already form'd to deliver the Empire; and which, 'twas ſaid, he had communicated to Three Perſons only in England, to wit, the Queen, the Prince of Denmark, and the Lord Treaſurer; not to above Two Perſons more in Holland; and not to any of the Imperial Court, before he was ready to put it in Execution. In order to that, his Grace embark'd at Harwich towards the Middle * of April, with General Churchill his Brother, Lieutenant-General Lumley, the Earl of Orkney, and other General Officers; and Two Days after, arrived at the Hague. On the 23d, he was attended by a Deputation of the States-General; with whom he had a Preliminary Conference about the Meaſures to be proſecuted this Summer: And the ſame Day, Part of the Gariſons of Liege and Maeſtricht, with the Troops that had been can- ton'd, for ſome Time, in that Neighbourhood, conſiſting of Seventy three Squadrons, and about Forty Battalions, were order'd to aſſemble on the Riſing-Ground of Leon, and to encamp with the Left at the Village of Harcourt, and the Right near the River Jaar. About the ſame Time, the States-General regulated the ſeveral Poſts of their General Officers: Monſieur d' Auverquerque, the Field-Marſhal, was ap- pointed to command their Forces on the Maeze, having under him the Counts de Tilly and Noyelles, as Generals; General Slangenburg, thoſe on the Moſelle; Lieute- nant-General Saliſch, in Brabant; Lieutenant-General Spaar, in Flanders; Lieute- nant-General Fagel, in Portugal; and Major-General Belcaſtel, in Savoy. On the 2d of May, my Lord Marlborough had another long Conference with the Deputies of the States-General; wherein he open'd to them the Project he had concerted long before, and of which he had only given ſome Hints to ſuch of them as he had moſt Confidence in, when, at the States Deſire, he went laſt to the Hague: Telling them withal, "That he thought his marching into Germany, would moſt conduce to the "Advantage of the Confederacy; and therefore, he doubted not, upon their Re- "port of this Matter to the States-General, but their High Mightineſſes would rea- "dily concur with him, aud join their Forces with her Majeſty of Great Britain, in "ſo glorious a Cauſe." The States ſpent a whole Day's Conſultation upon the Duke's Propoſals; to which, ſome Members of the Aſſembly were backward to give their Concurrence; being apprehenſive, that, by thus dividing their Forces, they might loſe in One Summer, all the Advantages they had gain'd in the Two former Campaigns.

The Duke of Marlborough embarks for Holland, * April 19. N. S. He arrives at the Hague, April 21.

The States regulate the Poſts of their Gene- ral Officers.

The Duke of Marlborough opens his Pro- ject to the States-General.

The next * Morning, the Duke had a Conference with the States-General them- ſelves, and the Council of State; to whom he made a very lively Repreſentation of the imminent Danger that threaten'd the whole Empire, and, indeed, all Europe, if an immediate Check were not given to the Progreſs of the French and Bavarians in Germany; adding, That their High Mightineſſes being entire Maſters of the Maeze, and of all the Spaniſh Gelderland, a ſmall Number of Forces were now able to ſecure their Frontiers. Theſe Reaſons, ſupported by the Reputation of him that deliver'd them, and back'd by the Influence of thoſe he had intruſted with his Se- cret, made ſo great Impreſſion in the Minds of the whole Aſſembly, that all Af- fairs relating to the Operations of the enſuing Campaign, were in this Conference happily determin'd and adjuſted: After which, his Grace took his Leave of the States, and on the 5th of May, at Night, went in a Yatcht to Utrecht. The † next Day, he went by Land to Vortz, a Seat belonging to the Earl of Albemarle; from whence he proceeded towards Ruremond, giving Orders for the Engliſh Troops, and other Forces poſted thereabouts, to join, and march towards Coblentz. On the 8th, the Duke came to Ruremond; where his Grace gave the neceſſary Orders for the building of a Bridge, which was deſign'd only as a Feint, as if the Engliſh, and other Troops, were to march for the Moſelle: Thoſe Forces, in the mean time, drawing together near Boiſleduc, under the Command of General Churchill, in order to proceed on their March to Ruremond. Two Days ‖ after, the Duke went to Maeſtricht; and Monſieur d' Auverquerque, with ſeveral other General Officers, having waited upon his Grace, the Duke review'd the Dutch Army, was enter- tain'd at Dinner in the Camp, and then return'd to Maeſtricht. On the 16th, his Grace ſet out from thence; and, the ſame Evening, join'd the Detachment com- manded by Brigadier-General Ferguſon, with Five Squadrons of Dutch Horſe, and Eleven Pieces of Cannon of the Dutch Train. The 18th, the Duke march'd to Eedbourg, and was there join'd by General Churchill, with the Engliſh Forces and Train of Artillery; and the Army encamp'd with the Left at that Place, and the Right at Caſter. The 19th, the Prince of Saxe-Zeits, Biſhop of Raad, and the Prince of Heſſe, with other Canons of the Chapter of Cologne, came from thence to the Camp, to wait upon his Grace; as did alſo Count Briançon, Envoy Extraordinary from the Duke of Savoy to her Majeſty of Great Britain.

The French endeavour to ſtop the Duke's Progreſs;

The French in Flanders, both from the Duke's marching towards Coblentz, and the great Preparations made in that Place, thought his Grace deſign'd to open the Campaign with the Siege of Traerbach, and then endeavour to advance into France along the Moſelle; upon which Suppoſition, they detach'd Eight Battalions, and Sixteen Squadrons, towards that River, and gave out, that they intended the Siege of Huy; imagining that by this Report, they might ſtop the Progreſs of the Engliſh General: But the Duke of Marlborough, ſlighting that Amuſement, and well knowing that the Forces he had left in Flanders, under the Command of Monſieur d' Auverquerque, were ſufficient to defeat any Attempt of the French on that ſide; his Grace continued his March according to his fix'd Reſolution, and on the 20th of May advanc'd from Bedbourg to Kerpen, where he receiv'd Letters from Prince Lewis of Baden, the Prince of Heſſe, Monſieur Bulau, and Baron Hompeſch, all agreeing in Opinion, that the French might force their Paſſage thro' the Black Foreſt, and bring a new Addition of Strength to the Elector of Bavaria. About the ſame Time, his Grace receiv'd Advice from the Netherlands, that the Court of France had ſent poſitive Orders to the Marſhal de Villeroy, to march towards the Moſelle with Thirty five Battalions, and Forty ſix Squadrons; ſtill upon the Conjecture, that his Grace intended to act on that ſide. Hereupon the Duke gave immediate Orders for the Forces to march with all poſſible Expedition, to prevent the ill Conſequences that might attend a Conjunction of the French and Bavarians. On the 23d of May, his Grace went to view the Fortifications of Bonne; and having given his Directions to the Governor of that Place, return'd in the Evening to the Army; where certain News came, that the Recruits for the French Troops in Bavaria, and other Reinforcements, join'd the Elector of Bavaria Three Days before at Villingen. This Enterprize, no leſs important than difficult, was executed with great Order, Diligence and Succeſs, and gain'd the French Generals no ſmall Reputation. On the other Hand, the Supineneſs of the Court of Vienna, in truſting the Guard of the important Paſſes of the Black Foreſt to the Militia alone, was much reflected on; but the Imperialiſts not fighting the Elector of Bavaria, when they might have engag'd him with viſible Advantage, was ſtill more ſeverely cenſur'd.

But in vain.

The French Succours join the Elector of Bavaria.

The Elector of Bavaria, and the Marſhal de Marſin, being advanc'd towards Dutlingen, General Thungen thought fit to withdraw the Confederate Troops from the Lines, between the Danube and the Lake of Conſtance, and poſted himſelf at Rotweyler, the 13th of May, with Three Regiments of Horſe, Nine Dutch Battalions, and Two of Wolfembuttel. He was reinforc'd the 14th, with another Dutch Battalion, and Three others, beſides Three Regiments of Horſe of the Duke of Wirtemberg. The 15th, the Margrave of Bareith, and Count Stirum, arriv'd in the Camp with Twelve Thouſand Men, beſides Four Battalions, and Nine Squadrons of the Forces of the King of Pruſſia; ſo that the Army conſiſted of Ninety nine Squadrons, and Forty two Battalions. The 19th, Prince Lewis of Baden arriv'd in the Camp; and having held a Council of War, in which it was reſolv'd to attack the Enemy the next Day at Villingen, the Army broke up accordingly; but the Bavarians having Advice of their Motion, quitted their Camp, with great Precipitation, and retir'd to Donau Eſchingen. The 21ſt, the Elector march'd to Huſingen; advanc'd the 22d to Furſtemberg, and the 23d to Engen. Prince Lewis not thinking it practicable to attack the Bavarians, becauſe they were parted by a deep River, and a Moraſs, march'd to Dutlingen the 21ſt; and having paſs'd the Danube, advanc'd to Liptingen the 23d, to ſtreighten the Bavarians between the Lake of Conſtance and his Army, and oblige them to fight. The 24th, General Bibra join'd Prince Lewis of Baden, with Seven Thouſand Men, from the Lines of Stolhoffen; and both Armies mov'd towards Stockach, the only Paſs thro' which the Bavarians could make their Retreat. The 25th, the Batteries play'd on both Sides; but in the mean time, the Bavarians march'd thro' a narrow Defile; and tho' only Two Men could go a-breaſt, yet on the 26th, in the Morning, their whole Army was gone through, and march'd to Pfullendorf, and from thence to Saulgen. The Imperialiſts having thus ſuffer'd the Bavarians to eſcape, march'd towards Moſchircken, and the 28th came to Rutlingen. The Bavarians were for Three Days without Bread; and had the Imperialiſts ſecur'd the Paſs of Stockach, they muſt needs have laid down their Arms, and diſbanded themſelves. Some lay the Fault of it upon the Guides, who led the Army a great way about: But, whoever was to blame, 'tis certain, the Imperialiſts loſt a very favourable Opportunity; which, as it occaſion'd great Murmurings in their Army, ſo it render'd the Arrival of Prince Eugene amongſt them very much wiſh'd for. A. D. 1704.

By this Time the Eyes of all Europe were fix'd on the Duke of Marlborough, who, with unwearied Diligence, advanc'd on the 25th of May to the Camp of Newdorf near Coblentz, where beſides Mr. Davenant, the Queen's Agent at Francfort, and Monſieur d'Amelo, Envoy Extraordinary from the States-General, who came to compliment his Grace, the Count of Wratiſlaw, late Envoy from the Emperor to her Britannick Majeſty, waited alſo on the Duke, to ſettle all Things for his Grace's further March, and his Conjunction with the Imperial Army. The 26th, whilſt the Horſe and Dragoons were paſſing the Rhine, his Grace made a Viſit to the Elector of Triers, at his Caſtle of Ehrenbrietſtein, and having din'd with the Elector, march'd with his Forces to Braubach, a Town belonging to the Landgrave of Heſſe d'Armſtadt. The next Day, that Prince gave a Viſit to the Duke, who that Night encamp'd at Naſtetten; and the 28th of May moved to Schwalbach. In the mean Time, the Foot march'd the 27th from Coblents to Braubach, and the next Day to Naſtetten, having Orders to follow the Horſe and Dragoons, as cloſe as was conſiſtent with the March of the Artillery and Baggage.

During the Encampment at Schwalbach, the Duke receiv'd an Expreſs from the States-General to aſſure him, That according to his Deſires, they had given Orders for a Reinforcement of Eight Battalions and Twenty One Squadrons to be ſent after his Grace, from their Army on the Maeſe; and that Monſieur d'Auverquerque had appointed Sixteen Squadrons of Horſe, Five of Dragoons, Seven Battalions of Daniſh Forces, and One of Heſſe for that Service. The 29th of May, the Duke continued his March from Schawlbach to Caſſel, a Village on the Rhine, over-againſt Mentz; and upon his Arrival, went and made a Viſit to the Elector of that City, by whom his Grace, and his Retinue, were magnificently entertain'd at Dinner. The next Day, the Duke allow'd his Troops ſome Reſt; and attended by the principal Officers of the Army, viſited the Fortifications of Mentz, and dined with the Elector. On the laſt Day of May the Foreign Miniſters, who had attended the Duke from Coblentz to Mentz, having taken their Leaves of him, the neceſſary Orders were given for the Troops to paſs the Maine, which being perform'd with all Diligence, the Duke continued his March towards the Necker; encamp'd that Night at Grootgerhout, and advanc'd the firſt of June to Quingenberg. The next Day his Grace march'd to Weinheim, and on the Third to Ladenburgh, where his Grace, and the other Generals, took their Quarters; and the Troops having paſſed the Necker, encamp'd on the River-Side, over-againſt the Town. Here the Duke thought fit to halt two whole Days, as well to give his wearied Troops ſome Refreſhment, as not to leave too far behind the reſt of the Auxiliary Forces. The Duke's bending his March toward the Danube, was a great Surprize to the French, who after their Diſappointment in their firſt Conjectures of his Grace intending to act on the Moſelle, had entertain'd a Jealouſy, that he would advance to the Upper Rhine, and might have a Deſign upon Landau. Upon this Suſpicion, Mareſchal de Tallard repaſs'd that River at Altenheim, in order either to join the Mareſchal de Villeroy, or to oppoſe the Duke of Marlborough's paſſing the ſame River. On the 5th of June, Count de Frieſe acquainted his Grace from Prince Lewis of Baden, whom he had left with his Forces at Ehingen, on this Side the Danube, that the Elector of Bavaria was ſtrongly encamp'd near Ulm, on the other Side; and his Grace had likewiſe Intelligence, that Prince Eugene of Savoy was arrived in the Imperial Camp; and that the Hereditary Prince of Heſſe Caſſel was marching with the Troops of Heſſe and Lunenburgh towards the Danube. Hereupon Count Wratiſlaw, who, during all this Campaign, with unwearied Application and admirable Addreſs, made it his Buſineſs to create and cheriſh a good Correſpondence between the Duke and the Emperor's Generals, went from his Grace, to confer with Prince Lewis of Baden, upon Occaſion of the Motions of the Enemy on the other Side the Rhine; and to manage an Interview between his Grace, and Prince Eugene, which was equally deſired by both thoſe great Generals.

The Duke having order'd his Foot and Artillery, which paſs'd the Main the 4th of June, to follow with the Reinforcements of Horſe and Foot, that were marching from the Maeſe under the Duke of Wirtemberg, his Grace left Ladenburgh the 6th, and march'd to Wiſlock. The 7th he came to Eppingen, the 8th to Great Gardack, and on the 9th to Mondelſhiem, where he halted the next Day. About Three in the Afternoon, Prince Eugene, accompanied by Count de Wratiſlaw, arriv'd at the Duke's Quarters; and after Dinner, the remaining Part of the Day was ſpent in Conferences between the Prince and the Duke, wherein the mutual Eſteem they had before for each other, grew into a ſtrict Friendſhip and Confidence, which appear'd in all the Operations of the Campaign. The next Day, * his Highneſs march'd with the Duke to Great Great Heppach, where his Grace ordering his Army to be drawn in Battalia before the Prince, his Highneſs expreſs'd his Surprize, to find them in ſo good Condition, after ſo long and ſo quick a March. The 13th, the Duke being informed by Count Wratiſlaw, that Prince Lewis of Baden was coming Poſt to meet him, his Grace ſent Colonel Cadogan with a Compliment to his Highneſs, whom he found at Eſſirgen, with Prince Lobcowitz, his Nephew, and conducted them to Great Heppach. Amongſt other Expreſſions of Civility that paſs'd between Prince Lewis and the Duke of Marlborough, his Highneſs ſaid, That his Grace was come both to ſave the Empire, and to give him an Opportunity to vindicate his Honour, which he was ſenſible was, in ſome manner, at the laſt Stake, in the Opinion of ſome People. Compliments being paſs'd on both Sides, a Conference was held between the Generals, wherein it was reſolved, That the Auxiliary Troops ſhould join the Army on the Danube; That Prince Lewis, and the Duke of Marlborough, ſhould have each his Day of Command alternately, while they continued together; and that Prince Eugene ſhould repair towards Philipſburgh, to defend the Paſſage of the Rhine, the Lines of Stolhoffen, the Country of Wirtemberg, or act otherwiſe, according to the Motions of the French. The next Day early in the Morning, the Horſe march'd from Great Heppach, where his Grace ſtaid to entertain Prince Lewis and Prince Eugene at Dinner; after which, the former return'd to his Army on the Danube, and Prince Eugene went Poſt to Philipſburgh, to command the Army on the Rhine. In the Evening, the Duke join'd the Troops under his Command at Eberſpach; and on the 16th, his Grace march'd with the Horſe to Groſſen-Seinſen. The other Auxiliary Troops marching at the ſame Time, in Two Bodies, under the Command of the Prince of Heſſe, and Monſieur Eulau, encamp'd at ſome Diſtance from the Duke, but diſpos'd in ſuch a manner, that the whole might be able to join Prince Lewis in one Day's March, as ſoon as he ſhould make a Motion with his Army towards his Grace. Upon Advice from Ulm, that the Elector of Bavaria's Army had paſs'd the Danube; and that he had put his heavy Baggage into that City, the Duke decamp'd the 21ſt with the Horſe from Groſſen-Seinſen, and in his March was join'd by the Auxiliary Troops of Lunenburgh, Hanover, and Heſſe. The Army encamp'd between Launſheim and Urping; and on the 22d made a Motion to join Prince Lewis of Baden at Weſterſtettein, at which Place the Right of his Grace's Camp then lay. Prince Eugene of Savoy having deſired of the Duke a further Reinforcement of Troops for the Security of the Rhine, and the Lines of Stolhoffen; his Grace thereupon ſent Orders to Lieutenant-General Schelton to march to the Rhine with the Seven Battalions of Daniſh Foot, that were coming from the Maeſe, and by this Time were advanc'd as far as Francfort: On the other Hand, the Elector of Bavaria ſent a conſiderable Detachment to Dillingen and Lawingen, with Intent, upon the Advance of the Confederate Army towards the Danube, to poſſeſs himſelf of that Camp. The 23d, Prince Lewis and the Duke continued in the Camp near Launſheim to form the Line of Battel: The next Day the Army march'd, and encamp'd with the Right at Elchirgen near the Danube, and the Left at Languerau, where they halted Three Days; and the 28th march'd again, and encamp'd with the Right at Herbretchting, and the Left at Gingen, on the River Brentz, within Two Leagues of the Elector of Bavaria's Army, which lay between Dillingen and Lawingen, with the Brentz between the Two Armies. The Twenty-Ninth, the Engliſh Foot and Artillery arrived in the Camp: And the ſame Day the Generals held a Council of War, wherein it was reſolv'd to draw near Donawert; whereupon the Confederate Army march'd from Gingen and Herbretchting, and encamp'd with their Right at Lanthauſen; and their Left at Palmerſhoften. The firſt of July they continued their March, and encamp'd with their Right at Amerdingen, and their Left at Onderingen; upon which, the Elector of Bavaria rightly judging that the Prince and Duke intended to attack Donawert, he ſent a conſiderable Detachment of his beſt Troops to reinforce Count d'Arco, who was poſted at Schellenberg, on a riſing Ground, where he had already caſt up great Intrenchments to cover Donawert. The Duke of Marlborough having reſolv'd to drive the Enemy from that important Poſt, the neceſſary Orders were given to the Army; and the next Day his Grace advanc'd at Three in the Morning, with a Detachment of 6000 Foot, and Thirty Squadrons of Engliſh and Dutch Cavalry, beſides Three Battalions of Imperial Grenadiers, the reſt of the Army under Prince Lewis following with all poſſible Diligence: But the Way being very bad and long, the Detachment led by his Grace, could not reach the River Wernelz, (or Wernitz) which runs by Donawert, till about Noon, and it was Three of the Clock before they could get over that River. The Duke having paſſed it at the Head of the Cavalry, view'd the Intrenchments, and made the neceſſary Diſpoſitions for the Attack. In the mean Time, the Engliſh and Dutch Artillery began to thunder againſt the Enemy, who anſwer'd it briſkly from their Batteries. The Engliſh and Dutch Foot, commanded by Lieutenant-General Gore, and Brigadier Ferguſon, began began the Attack with unparallel'd Valour, but met with ſuch a vigorous Defence, that they were Twice repuls'd, and obliged to retreat, and ſome of them to lye flat on the Ground, 'till Prince Lewis, coming up with the Imperialiſts, attack'd, and forc'd the Intrenchments on the weaker Side. The Confederates made a terrible Slaughter of the Enemy, purſuing them to the very Danube, where a great Part of them follow'd the Example of Count d' Arco, and other General Officers, who ſav'd themſelves by Swimming over that River. The Bavarians left behind them Fifteen Cannon, with all their Ammunition, Tents and Baggage, and Thirteen Colours, beſides Count d' Arco's Plate, with other rich Booty, which was diſtributed among the victorious Soldiers. All the Confederate Troops that engag'd, behav'd themſelves with a great deal of Bravery and Reſolution, and the Horſe and Dragoons ſhar'd the Glory of the Day with the Infantry: But the Attack being begun by a Battalion of Engliſh Guards, and the Regiments of Orkney and Ingoldſby, who march'd to the Intrenchments with uncommon Intrepidity, and without covering themſelves with Faſcines; they ſuffer'd a great deal more than the Germans, who, by Prince Lewis's Directions, went on to the Attack with more Caution. The Enemy's Loſs was computed at Five Thouſand Men, nor was that of the Confederates much leſs; which, however, was abundantly made up, by the gaining ſuch a compleat Victory, as gave them a free Entrance into the Duke of Bavaria's Country. Prince Lewis of Baden, General Thungen, the Hereditary Prince of Heſſe-Caſſel, Prince Alexander of Wirtemberg, the Prince of Saxony, Count Horn, Lieutenant-General; the Major Generals Wood and Pallandt, and Brigadier Bedmar, were ſlightly wounded; Lieutenant-General Goor, the Prince of Homburg, the Prince of Beveren, the Counts Van-Erback, and Schuylemburg, and Major-General Beinheim, were kill'd; and Count Stirum died not many Days after, of his Wounds. The Elector of Bavaria was no ſooner inform'd of the Defeat of his Troops at Schellenberg, than he quitted his advantageous Camp between Dillengen and Lawingen, and came to the other Side of the Danube, over againſt Donawert, in his March to the River Lech, to prevent the Confederates cutting off his Retreat to his own Country. The ſame Night he ſent Orders to his own Gariſon at Donawert, to ſet Fire to the Town, to burn their Bridges and Magazines, and then to retire; but the Confederates being advanc'd into the Suburbs, and laying their Bridge to paſs into the Town, the Gariſon durſt not ſtay to put thoſe Orders in Execution. The Enemy burnt only their Bridges, and ſome Magazines, and retired in great Haſte early the next Day; and, at the ſame Time, the Confederates enter'd the Town without Oppoſition, and found in it all Sorts of Proviſions and Ammunition. The 5th of July, the whole Confederate Army paſs'd the Danube, over ſeveral Bridges of Pontons, near Donawert, and encamp'd at Mertingen, in the Elector of Bavaria's Country; whoſe Army was retreated to the other Side the Lech, and had entrench'd themſelves under the Cannon of Auſburgh. The 6th was obſerv'd as a Day of Thankſgiving for the late Succeſs; and the Daniſh Horſe, commanded by the Duke of Wirtemberg, having that Day paſs'd the Danube, march'd to the Ground appointed for them in the Camp; where Count Palfi arrived the ſame Day, with a Compliment from Prince Eugene to the Duke of Marlborough, upon the late Victory. The Duke reſolving to improve that Advantage, before the Enemy recover'd the great Conſternation they were under, order'd Count de Frieze, with a Detachment of Four Thouſand Men, and Twelve Pieces of Cannon, to prepare the Bridges for the Army to paſs the Lech, near Ginderkingen, which being finiſh'd the ſame * Evening, that Detachment immediately march'd over, and took Poſt in the Country of Bavaria, where they were reinforced the 8th, by Six Thouſand Men more. The whole Army marched at the ſame Time, and encamp'd with the Right at Hamber, and the Left at Ginderkingen, near the River; and upon theſe Motions, the Gariſon of Niewburg abandon'd that Place, and retired to Ingoldſtat. The Enemy having left a Gariſon at Rain, a ſmall Town, about half a League on the other Side the Lech, the Confederate Generals reſolv'd to attack it; whereupon the Army decamp'd from Ginderkingen, † paſs'd the Lech, and came with the Right to Standa, and the Left to Bercheim. The Ten Thouſand Men that had paſs'd the River Two Days before, were, at the ſame Time, reinforc'd by Nine Battalions, and Fifteen Squadrons, that were to carry on the Siege of Rain, under the Command of Count de Frieze; to favour which Enterprize, the Army made a Motion to the Right on the 12th of July, N. S. The next Day Count de Veblen, General of the Palatine Horſe, came to the Confederate Camp, with Advice from Prince Eugene, that the Mareſchals de Villeroy, and Tallard, with an Army of Forty Five Thouſand Men, had paſs'd the Rhine above Fort Kiel, giving out they intended to ſuccour the Elector of Bavaria, which 'twas not doubted but one of them, at leaſt, would attempt; and therefore his Highneſs deſired a Reinforcement of Horſe, that he might the better be able to obſerve the Enemy's Motions. Thereupon Prince Maximilian of Hanover, was detach'd with Thirty Squadrons of Impe-

The ſame Night the Trenches were open'd before Rain, and the Approaches carried on with ſo good Succeſs, that by the 16th in the Morning, the Gariſon capitulated, and march'd out the next Day. Orders having been given for the providing Magazines at Newburg and Rain, the Army march'd the ſame Day from Percheim to Holtz, and Oaſterhauſen; and on the 18th, continued their March, and encamp'd with the Right at Knepach, and the Left at Aicha, where the Generals took their Quarters, and caus'd a Magazine to be erected.

The Emperor writes a Letter of Thanks to the Duke of Marlborough.

The Emperor, to ſhew his grateful Senſe of the ſignal Service perform'd by the Duke of Marlborough at Schellenberg, writ a Letter of Thanks to his Grace, "Wherein his Imperial Majeſty aſcrib'd, in a ſpecial Manner, the Succeſs of that "Day to his Grace's Conduct, and the Valour of the Engliſh Troops; not doubting "but his Grace, in Conjunction with Prince Lewis of Baden, and the other Imperial "Generals, would uſe their utmoſt Endeavours to finiſh the Work, as glorioufly as "they had begun it, and put an End to the War which the Elector of Bavaria had "rais'd in the Heart of the Empire; which would be an eternal Monument, and Tro"phy of the higheſt Glory to the Engliſh Nation, and her moſt Serene Majeſty, whoſe "Anceſtors had never before carried their Victorious Arms into Upper-Germany."

The Duke refuſes the Title of Prince.

Upon the delivering this Letter to the Duke, Count Wratiſlaw told his Grace, "That "the Emperor deſired he would accept of the Honour intended him, of the Title "and Dignity of a Prince of the Empire:" Whereupon his Grace pray'd the Count to repreſent to the Emperor, "That he was extremely ſenſible of his Imperial Ma"jeſty's Goodneſs towards him, beyond any Thing he could deſerve; but that his "Ambition was entirely bounded in the Queen's Grace and Favour, whoſe abun"dant Kindneſs had been already extended towards him, beyond whatever he could "have aim'd at, and that he muſt refer himſelf wholly to her Majeſty's Pleaſure." Hereupon the Emperor writ, with his own Hand, a Letter to the Queen, wherein, after a Congratulation on the late Victory over the French and Bavarians near Donawert, "aſcribed principally to the Valour of the Engliſh Troops, by the Cou"rage and Conduct of her Majeſty's General, the Duke of Marlborough; his Impe"rial Majeſty deſired the Queen to lay her Commands on my Lord Marlborough, "to accept a Teſtimony of his Imperial Majeſty's Acknowledgment of his Ser"vices, ſince the Duke himſelf, when Count Wratiſlaw intimated to him his "Maſter's Intention, made ſome Difficulty to admit it." Monſieur Hoffman, the Emperor's Reſident at the Court of England, * ſeconded this Letter with a ſhort Speech, to acquaint the Queen, "That he had Orders from his Maſter, earneſtly to "preſs, with all Reſpect, that her Majeſty would be pleaſed to require his Grace to "make no further Scruple in that Matter." The Queen was, at laſt, prevail'd upon to comply with the Emperor's Deſire; but before her Pleaſure could be made known to the Duke of Marlborough, his Grace had highly merited the Honour his Imperial Majeſty intended him, by an Action that will tranſmit his Name and Glory to the remoteſt Poſterity.

* July 23. O. S.

The Confederate Army having reſted Two Days at Aicha, made a ſmall March on the 21ſt of July, (N. S.) the Right advancing about half a League on this Side that Town; and the Left to a Village call'd Roerback. The next Morning, the Duke of Marlborough, with the Piquet of the Cavalry of the Left, and a Detachment of Five Hundred Foot, croſs'd the Paer, and march'd to view the Ground for a Camp near Friedberg, where the Enemy had put a Gariſon of Two Hundred Foot, and as many Horſe; who as ſoon as his Grace came within Sight, retired towards their Army. His Grace having left in the Town Four Hundred Foot, and One Hundred Horſe, under the Command of the Lord North and Grey, return'd to the Camp. And on the 23d, he march'd again, and encamp'd with the Right at Volfurtſtauſen, and the Left at Oaſtmaring; (the Town of Friedberg being in the Center of the Line) and within a League of Augſburg; ſo that the Elector of Bavaria's Communication with his own Country, was, in a manner, entirely cut off. Here the Generals received Advice from Prince Eugene, that the Mareſchal de Tallard being arrived the 18th at Willingen, his Highneſs was marched, with Twenty Battalions, and Sixty Squadrons, to obſerve his Motions, having left the reſt of the Troops under the Command of Count Naſſau Weilbourg, to defend the Lines of Stolhoffen. The Hereditary Prince of Heſſe-Caſſel being return'd from Donawert to the Army, though he was not yet quite recover'd of the Wounds he receiv'd in the Action at Schellenberg, the Duke of Marlborough declar'd him General of the Engliſh and Dutch Horſe; and on the 26th, the Army made a general Forage in Sight of the Enemy's Camp, without any Loſs. That Evening Information was brought, that that the Mareſchal de Tallard, after he had been battering the Town of Willingen Six Days, had been oblig'd to raiſe the Siege, upon Prince Eugene's advancing the 23d to Rotweil; that he march'd Two Leagues the ſame Day, and was the 24th at Dutlingen; and that Prince Eugene would march on the other Side of the Danube, to obſerve him.

It was reaſonable to believe, that after the Defeat at Schellerberg, which had been attended with the Conqueſt of Donawert, Niewburg and Rayn; the Elector of Bavaria would have made uſe of the favourable Diſpoſitions which the Generals of the Confederates expreſs'd, in offering him ſuch Terms of Accommodation, as, conſidering the preſent Condition of his Affairs, he ought not to have expected: But tho' that Prince had approv'd the Articles agreed on between Count Wratiſlaw, and his Miniſter Monſieur Prilmeyer, and had promiſed to come in Perſon to the Confederate Camp to ſign them; yet he recall'd his Word, upon Advice that Mareſchal de Tallard had paſſed the Black Foreſt to come to join him; and ſent back his Miniſter to acquaint Count Wratiſlaw, That ſince the King of France made ſuch powerful Efforts to ſupport him, he thought himſelf obliged in Honour to remain firm in his Alliance. This Breach of Promiſe of the Elector was highly, and very juſtly, reſented by the Duke of Marlborough, and Prince Lewis of Baden, who thereupon * commanded out Count de la Tour, General of the Imperial Horſe, and Count de Frieze, with Thirty Squadrons of Horſe and Dragoons, to plunder and burn the Country of Bavaria, as far as Munich the Capital City; hoping, that either a generous Compaſſion for his deſolate Subjects, or the want of Subſiſtence, would conquer the Elector's Obſtinacy. Hereupon the Inhabitants of ſeveral Places ſent Deputies to the Duke of Marlborough, offering to pay large Contributions to prevent military Execution; but his Grace told them, That the Forces of the Queen of England were not come into Bavaria to get Money, but to bring their Prince to Reaſon. On the laſt Day of July (N. S.) upon Advice, that the Elector of Bavaria had ſent a Detachment of Horſe towards Landſperg; the Duke of Wirtemberg was immediately ſent out with Two Thouſand Horſe and Dragoons to obſerve them: But Intelligence being ſoon after brought, that the Enemy's Detachment conſiſted only of Four Squadrons ſent to reinforce the Gariſon of Munich, freſh Orders were then diſpatched to the Duke of Wirtemberg, to join with the Count de la Tour in the Execution of his Commiſſion, which was perform'd with the utmoſt Severity. The Confederate Generals finding that the Elector of Bavaria remain'd inflexible, and that it was not poſſible to attack him in his fortified Camp, under the Canon of Augſburg, without infinite Diſadvantage; and conſidering, beſides, that Mareſchal de Tallard was advancing with a conſiderable Body of Forces, they reſolved to attempt the reducing of the ſtrong Places of Bavaria, and to begin with Ingolſtadt. Prince Lewis undertook to command, and carry on the Siege with the Imperial Troops, and the Duke of Marlborough to cover it with the Auxiliary Forces, which, in caſe of Need, might be join'd by thoſe under Prince Eugene, who, by this time, was advanced to Dillingen. Thereupon the Confederate Army marched back, on the 4th of Auguſt, N. S. from their Camp at Friedberg towards Aicha, burning all the Villages they had ſpared before, between thoſe Two Towns; and having paſſed the Paer, encamp'd that Night at Kiebach, (or Kippach,) their Left Wing reaching to Aicha, and the Right beyond the Caſtle of Winden. The next Day, the Army paſſed again the River Paer, near the Town of Schrobbenhauſe, leaving it to their Right, and encamped the Left Wing at Kloſterberg, and the Right behind Schrobbenhauſe. On the other Hand, the Mareſchal de Tallard with about Twenty Two Thouſand Horſe and Foot, being come to Biberach on the 4th of Auguſt in the Morning, he left his Troops, and went to the Elector's Camp. His Electoral Highneſs, after having left Monſieur de Chamarante in Auſburg, with Eight Battalions and Four Squadrons of French Troops, marched with the reſt of his Forces, to join the freſh Auxiliaries of that Nation at Biberach, as with Intent to paſs the Lech at that Place, in order to attack the Confederate Army. But this Feint was only to cover his true Deſign, which was to paſs the Danube, at Lawingen, and to fall on the Army Prince Eugene had brought from the Lines of Biebl, and which was then encamped at Hochſtet. Upon this Apprehenſion, his Highneſs, on the 6th of Auguſt, went to the main Army to confer with the Prince of Baden, and the Duke of Marlborough; and taking notice, in his Way, of a Tract of Ground very proper for a Camp, being a Height that reach'd from the Villages of Munſter and Elirghoven, to the Wood Apperſhoven, with a Rivulet before it, he thereupon ſent Orders to his Army, to come and poſſeſs themſelves of that advantageous Poſt; which was put in Execution that very Night. The ſame Day, the Duke of Marlborough having received Intelligence, That the Elector of Bavaria was come out of his Entrenchments, and encamped by Tirhaupten, on the other Side of the Lech, between Biberach and Clooſter-Holts, it was reſolv'd to obſerve him, and to

to advance towards Dorawert. On the 7th, Eight Hundred Imperial Horſe were detached to ſtreighten the Town of Ingolſtadt on one Side, whilſt Brigadier Ealdwin, with Five Hundred Horſe, inveſted the Place on another Side. The ſame Day Prince Lewis held a Council of War with Prince Eugene, and my Lord Duke, in which it was agreed, to continue in their late Reſolution of Prince Lewis's beſieging Ingolſtadt, whilſt the other Two ſhould obſerve the Elector of Bavaria; whereupon the Duke of Marlborough with his Forces marched from Hogewaert to Zanditzell, and Prince Lewis on the other Side the little Town of Potmes. The 9th, the Duke advanced within Two Hours march of Rain, and Prince Lewis bent his March directly to Niewburg, to repair from thence before Ingolſtadt, taking with him Two and Twenty Battalions of Foot, the Regiments of Horſe of Cronsfeld, and Hohenz-Sollern, the Cuiraſſiers of Merci, and the Dragoons of Caſtelli, leaving Twenty Eight Squadrons in the Duke's Army, under the Command of the Duke Regent of Wirtemberg, General of the Horſe. The ſame Day, * my Lord Marlborough was inform'd, That the Enemy marched from Biberach to Lawingen, in order to paſs the Danube there; and Prince Eugene, who had taken his Leave of his Grace, in order to return to his Army, coming back not many Hours after, with the ſame Advice, after a long Conſultation, the Prince went back again, and rejoin'd his Army. My Lord Marlborough, at Two of the Clock in the Morning, order'd the Duke Regent of Wirtemberg to go before, with the Twenty Eight Squadrons under his Command, cauſing him to be follow'd, a few Hours after, by Twenty Battalions under the Command of General Churchill, and directing them both to uſe all imaginable Diligence to join Prince Eugene, with Promiſe that he would ſoon be with them, with the reſt of the Army. Accordingly, his Grace continued his March on the 10th towards Rain, and encamp'd with his Right at Middleſtadt, and his Left at Pluckingen, having the Town of Rain in the Front, and the Quarter-General at Nederſchonevelt, where Bridges had already been laid over the Danube. The ſame Day, the Prince of Wirtemberg, with the Horſe and Dragoons, and after him General Churchill, with the Foot and Artillery, paſſed that River on the Bridge that was at Merxen.

* Aug. 9. N. S.

When Prince Eugene came the 10th, early in the Morning to his Army, he found them ready to march, to go and poſſeſs themſelves of the Intrenchments of Schellenbergh, whither thoſe that commanded in his Abſence had already ſent Workmen, to put them again in a State of Defence: Not judging it convenient to expect the Enemy in the Camp of Munſter, with an Army that did not exceed Eighteen Thouſand Men. But the Prince cauſed the Tents to be immediately ſet up again, contenting himſelf with ſending the Baggage to Donawert, rightly conjecturing, that the Enemy who paſs'd that Day the Danube at Lawingen, could not come near his Army that ſame Evening; and that he might maintain the important Poſt of Munſter, till my Lord Marlborough had join'd him. Upon Intelligence that the Enemy, after having paſſed the Danube, had not retaken their ancient Camp between Lawingen and Dillingen, but that their Left was at Lawingen, the Prince diſpatch'd an Expreſs to my Lord Duke, to deſire him to haſten his March: And becauſe it was moſt plain, that the Enemy were ſo far advanced that Day, with deſign to attack his Highneſs the next; the Prince caus'd all his Infantry, and Part of his Cavalry, to march to the Camp of Schellembergh, keeping only with him Twenty Two Squadrons of Dragoons of his own Army, with the Twenty Eight Squadrons commanded by the Duke Regent of Wirtemberg. With theſe few Troops he paſſed the Night in the Camp of Munſter, keeping the Horſes ready ſaddled, with Reſolution, if poſſible, to preſerve that Poſt, tho' without coming to an Engagement, till he had been join'd by the Duke of Marlborough. On the 11th, the Prince was inform'd, That his Grace was upon his March ever ſince Two of the Clock in the Morning; and that the Twenty Battalions under General Churchill, were very near; whereupon the Prince, who had alſo Intelligence, that the Enemy made no Motion that Day, caus'd all the Troops which he had ſent to Schellenbergh, to return to the Camp of Munſter. General Churchill came there betimes with his Twenty Battalions, and in the Evening my Lord Duke arriv'd with his whole Army. The 12th, at Break of Day, the Confederate Generals went to view the Enemy, whom they found to be in Motion, and their Horſe marching forward; but took notice, that their advanc'd Squadrons ſtopt ſhort, after they had perceiv'd thoſe that attended the Prince and Duke. At One of the Clock in the Afternoon, the Quarter-Maſters of the Enemy's Army mark'd out Camps from Bleinheim to Lutzingen: And the Confederate Generals being return'd to their Army, ordered the neceſſary Paſſages to be made. They now plainly diſcover'd, that the French and Bavarians were poſſeſs'd of a very advantageous Poſt on a Hill; that their Right Flank was cover'd by the Danube, and the Village of Bleinheim; and their Left by the Village of Lutzingen; and that they had before them a Rivulet, whoſe Banks were high, and the Bottom marſhy:

EXPLANATION of the REFERENCES in this PLAN.

A. The Confederate Army marching in Nine Columns from their Camp at Munster.

B. The Camp of the French and Bavarians just before the Battle.

C. Disposition made by the Confederates for the Attack.

D. The Two Mills which the Enemy set on Fire, together with the Villages of Berghausen, Weiler, Unterklaw, and a Farm House.

E. Batteries of the Confederates.

F. The Enemies Batteries.

G. Twenty Battalions design'd for the Attack of the Village of Bleinheim.

H. Fifteen Squadrons to support them.

I. The said Twenty Battalions drawn up (after having pass'd the Rivulet)

K. The place where some of our Cavalry pass'd the Rivulet.

L. The places where the Rest of the Left Wing pass'd the Rivulet. Some on Bridges of Pontons, and some through the Water.

M. The Form in which they drew up after having pass'd the Rivulet.

N. Three Battalions brought up to favour the Cavalry, who were twice repuls'd by the Enemy from the Village of Oberklaw.

O. Ten Battalions attempting to pass the Rivulet over against Oberklaw repuls'd.

P. The Place where the Right Wing pass'd the Rivulet, and was three times repuls'd.

Q. The Right Wing drawn up after having pass'd the Fourth time.

R. The Cavalry of our Left Wing, drawn up after having several times Charg'd the Enemy.

S. The Place where the Enemies Cavalry rallied.

T. The Height where part of the Enemies Cavalry (upon the Approach of ours) broke and ran down in the greatest Disorder. In this Flight Mr. de Tallard was taken Prisoner, at the Mill of Sonderen mark'd 3.

U. The Remainder of the Right Wing of the Enemy's Cavalry rallied again, but upon our Motion to attack them, they fac'd about and march'd off: Thirty of our Squadrons pursuing them towards Morslingen.

The rest of our Cavalry halted at V. To observe the Enemy, which by this time was drawn up beyond the Moras at Hochstet.

During this Halt at V. the Elector of Bavaria was perceiv'd at W. making his Retreat, upon which Orders were sent to General Hompesch, who follow'd the Enemy towards Morselingen, to face about, and march to join those which halted at V.

X. The Place where our Army drew up, and lay on their Arms that Night.

Y. The Place where the Enemy drew up, and continu'd till Night, and then march'd off towards Dillingen and Lawingen.

Z. The D. of Marlborough's Quarters that Night.

So that it was thought at firſt to be unpaſſable; as, indeed, it prov'd to be in ſeveral Places.

In theſe Circumſtances, 'twas thought a very hazardous Enterprize to attack ſo numerous an Army; but then there ſeem'd to be an indiſpenſible Neceſſity of falling immediately upon the Enemy, before they had Time to fortify themſelves in that Poſt. For, beſides that the Confederate Army ſhould have wanted Forage much ſooner than Ingolſtadt could have been taken, the Generals were well inform'd, that the Mareſchal de Villeroy, leaving Monſieur de Coigny in the Camp near Offenburgh, was ready to make an Irruption into the Country of Wirtemberg, with another Body, which might have acted in Concert with the Elector of Bavaria; ſo that thereby the French Armies would have eſtabliſh'd a free Communication from the Rhine to the Danube, and have forc'd all to ſubmit, as far as the Mein; whilſt the Elector, from his Camp at Hochſtet, might have ruin'd a great Part of the Circle of Franconia, and have brought Things to that Paſs, that the Auxiliaries under the Duke of Marlborough ſhould not have been able to find either Subſiſtence, or Winter-Quarters on the Danube, and in the Upper Germany; tho', on the other Hand, that great and ſeaſonable Supply could not have left the Empire, without expoſing it to certain Ruin. Theſe were ſaid to be the Reaſons, upon which the Duke of Marlborough and Prince Eugene reſolv'd to fight: But there was, undoubtedly, another no leſs prevailing; to wit, That in caſe of a Victory, of which they were confident, they ſhould not ſhare the Honour of it with Prince Lewis of Baden, of whom they were both jealous; and particularly the Duke, ſince the Affair of Schellenberg, the Succeſs of which was principally aſcribed to Prince Lewis's Conduct. Be that as it will, that very Night all the neceſſary Diſpoſitions were made for the Attack, and the Baggage ſent to Rutlingen, a Village between Munſter and Donawert. The Confederate Army conſiſted of Sixty ſix Battalions, and a Hundred and Seventy eight Squadrons, amounting to Fifty or Fifty two Thouſand Men, with Fifty Pieces of Cannon; the Right being commanded by Prince Eugene, the Left by the Duke of Marlborough. The Enemy's Army was near Sixty Thouſand ſtrong, conſiſting of Eighty two Battalions, and a Hundred and ſixty Squadrons, with Ninety Pieces of Cannon: Their Right Wing, commanded by Mareſchal de Tallard, being made up of Sixty Squadrons, and Forty Battalions of the beſt Troops of France; and on the Left, was the Elector with the Bavarians, and the Mareſchal de Marſin, with the reſt of the French Troops under his Command.

The 13th of Auguſt 1704, N. S. decided the Fate of the Empire, or rather, of all Europe. About Three a-Clock in the Morning, the Confederate Army began to move in Eight Columns, Four of Foot, and as many of Horſe, and paſſed the Rivulet Keſſel on ſeveral Bridges. About Six, the Duke of Marlborough and Prince Eugene gave the Generals Directions for the Attack; and then the Army advancing into the Plain, was drawn up in Order of Battel. This unexpected Motion caus'd no ſmall Alarm among the French and Bavarians; who thereupon call'd in their Foragers, and ſet on fire the Villages of Onderklaw, Wolperſtette, Weiler, Berghauſen and Sweinenback, and Two Water-Mills near Bleinheim; of which Two Brigades of Foot, commanded by the Lord Cutts, took Poſſeſſion. In the mean Time, the Confederate Army advanc'd as far as the Moraſs; which being found marſhy, and unpaſſable for the Infantry, they quickly made Five Bridges with the Planks of the Pontons, and repair'd the Bridge on the High-Road, which the Enemy had deſtroy'd. At the ſame Time, Prince Eugene caus'd the Right Wing to march along the Wood, to fall on the Flank of the Elector; who did extend his Left proportionably, to prevent Prince Eugene's gaining his Flank. The Enemy fearing likewiſe leſt the Confederates ſhould gain the Flank of their Right Wing, by poſſeſſing themſelves of the Village of Bleinheim, poſted in it Twenty eight Battalions, and Twelve Squadrons of Dragoons; and put ſome Infantry into the Villages of Overklaw and Lutzingen, which extreamly weaken'd their main Battalia, and was one of the principal Cauſes of their Defeat. To favour the Paſſage of the Left Wing, the Two Brigades of Foot, commanded by the Lord Cutts, were order'd to go over the Rivulet firſt; which done, they poſted themſelves in a Bottom, near the Village of Bleinheim, and, for ſeveral Hours, with wonderful Reſolution, ſtood the Fire of Six Pieces of Cannon, planted upon the Height near that Village. At the ſame Time, the Enemy fir'd very briſky on the Bridges; but were quickly anſwer'd by the Batteries of the Confederates. The neceſſary Preparations being made, the Duke of Marlborough gave Orders for a general Attack; which was begun on the Left, at Three Quarters paſt Twelve: Major-General Wilks made the firſt Onſet, with the Five Engliſh Battalions of How, Ingoldſby, Marlborough, Row, and North and Grey, and Four Battalions of Heſſians, ſupported by the Lord Cutts and Major-General St. Paul, with Eleven other Battalions, and Fifteen

Squadrons of Horſe under the Command of Major-General Wood. The Five Engliſh Battalions, led on by Brigadier Row, with unparallel'd Intrepidity, aſſaulted the Village of Bleinheim, advancing to the very Muzzles of the Enemies Muſkets, and ſome of the Officers exchanging Thruſts of Swords with the French, through the Palliſadoes: But being expos'd to a Fire much ſuperior to theirs, they were ſoon forc'd to retire, leaving behind them near one Third Part of their Men, either kill'd or mortally wounded; and amongſt the latter, Brigadier Row himſelf. In this Retreat, they were purſued by Thirteen Squadrons of the French Genſdarmerie and Carabiniers, who had entirely cut them in Pieces, had not the Heſſian Infantry ſtopt the Career of the Enemy, by the great Fire they made upon them. The French being repuls'd, and forc'd to fly in their Turn, were chac'd by Five Squadrons of Engliſh Horſe, who, by this Time, had paſs'd the Rivulet; but whilſt they rallied themſelves, ſome freſh Brigades of the Enemy, ſuperior in Number, charg'd the Engliſh Horſe with great Vigor, and oblig'd many of them to repaſs the Rivulet with Precipitation. Here again the Heſſian Foot perform'd notable Service; putting the Enemy to the Rout by their continual Fire. Whilſt Row's Brigade rallied themſelves, that of Ferguſon, commanded by himſelf, attack'd the Village of Bleinheim, on the Left, with no better Succeſs; and tho' both return'd Three or Four times to the Charge with equal Vigor, yet both were ſtill repuls'd with like Diſadvantage: So that it was found impoſſible to force the Enemy in that Poſt, without ſacrificing all the Infantry. The Engliſh Foot having thus begun the Engagement on the Left; the Horſe, both of that Wing, and of the Right, paſs'd the Rivulet, and drew up in Order of Battel, without any Diſturbance from the Enemy, who kept themſelves very quiet on the Hill they were poſſeſs'd of, fondly hoping, That the more of the Confederates paſs'd the Rivulet, the more they ſhould kill *: Which Confidence coſt them very dear. The Cavalry of the Confederates Left marching up towards the Hill, the Enemy's Horſe began to move at laſt, and charg'd them with a great deal of Vivacity and Courage; and, at the ſame Time, the French Infantry in Bleinheim making a terrible Fire on the Flank of the Confederate Horſe, which were advanc'd too near that Village, they were put into ſuch Diſorder, that Part of the firſt Line retir'd even beyond the Rivulet. Hereupon Lieutenant-General Bulau, Commander in Chief of the Troops of Lunenburg, brought up from the Second Line his own Regiment of Dragoons, and thoſe of Major-General Villers, and Brigadier Bothmer; which charg'd the Enemy's Horſe with ſo much Vigor, that they entirely broke them, drove them beyond the Second Rivulet, and from thence to the very Hedges of the Village of Bleinheim. This gave Time to thoſe of the Confederates that had given Ground, to repaſs the Rivulet, and to form a Second Line behind thoſe Regiments, and ſome others that had join'd them; ſo that thoſe ſucceſsful Dragoons continued in the firſt Line all the remaining Time of the Action. Upon this Advantage, the Confederate Horſe form'd themſelves in Order of Battel, advanc'd leiſurely to the Top of the Hill, and charg'd ſeveral times the Enemy's Horſe, who were always routed, but who ſtill rallied every time, tho' at a conſiderable Diſtance; which gave the Confederates Opportunity to gain Ground. As the latter were preparing for a freſh Attack, Mareſchal de Tallard caus'd Ten of his Battalions to advance, to fill the Intervals of his Cavalry, in order to make a laſt Effort; which the Prince of Heſſe-Caſſel, General of the Horſe, and the Lieutenants-General Lumley, Bulau, Hompeſch and Ingoldſby obſerving, they caus'd Three Battalions of the Troops of Zell to come up to ſuſtain the Horſe. This done, the Confederates return'd to the Charge; but the ſuperior Fire of the Enemy's Infantry put their firſt Line into ſome Diſorder, ſo that they ſhrunk back, and remain'd, for ſome Time, at about Sixty Paces Diſtance from the Enemy; neither Party advancing againſt the other. At laſt the Confederates renew'd the Charge, with ſo much Vigor and Succeſs, that having broke and routed the Enemy's Horſe, the Ten Battalions (whom they abandon'd) were entirely cut in Pieces. Mareſchal de Tallard rally'd his broken Cavalry behind ſome Tents, that were ſtill ſtanding in his Camp; and ſeeing Things in this deſperate Condition, he reſolv'd to draw off his Dragoons and Infantry out of the Village of Bleinheim: Whereupon he ſent one of his Aids de Camp to Mareſchal de Marſin, to deſire him to face the Confederates with ſome Troops from the Village of Overklaw. But Marſin repreſented to Tallard's Meſſenger, That he had too much Buſineſs in the Front of his Village, (where he had to deal with the Duke of Marlborough in Perſon) to ſpare any Troops; he not being victorious, but only maintaining his own Ground. In the mean Time, Lieutenant-General Ingoldſby made the Prince of Heſſe, and the Lieutenants-General Lumley and Hompeſch ſenſible, how eaſily it would be entirely to defeat the French Cavalry, by charging them on their Right Flank: Which Advice being put in Execution with a great a great deal of Vigor, the Enemy were entirely routed, and put to Flight. Part of them endeavour'd to gain their Bridge on the Danube, between Bleinheim and Hochſtet; the other Part, among whom were the Gens d' Armes, were ſo cloſely purſu'd by the Dragoons of Bothmer, that thoſe who eſcap'd being kill'd, threw themſelves into the Danube, where moſt of them were drown'd. Thoſe who fled towards Hochſtet, rallied once more, making a Shew to ſuccour the reſt, but the Regiment of Bothmer forc'd them, and kept them in Awe for ſome Time, and being at length join'd by ſome other Regiments, the Enemy fled full Gallop towards Hochſtet. The Mareſchal de Tallard was ſurrounded with the Run-a-ways, and taken near a Mill, behind the Village of Sonderen, not far from the Danube, by Mr. de Boinenbourg, a Lieutenant-Colonel of the Troops of Heſſe, and Aid de Camp to the Prince of Heſſe-Caſſel; and the Marquiſſes de Montperoux, General of the Horſe; de Seppeville, de Silly, and de la Valiere, Majors-General; and ſeveral other Officers of Note, were alſo made Priſoners in this Rout.

While theſe Things paſs'd near the Village of Bleinheim, and in the Center, the Duke of Marlborough caus'd the Village of Overklaw, Mareſchal de Marſin's Quarters, to be attack'd by the Brigade of Berenſdorf, conſiſting of Ten Battalions. The Prince of Holſtein-Beck, who commanded them as Major-General, paſs'd the Rivulet at the Head of Two Battalions, with a great deal of Reſolution; but as the Imperial Cavalry, which was to have ſuſtain'd him, was above Two Muſket Shots from him, he was hardly gone over, when Seven or Eight of the Enemy's Battalions fell on him with great Fury, before he could form his Men, ſo that the Regiment of Goor was almoſt entirely cut in Pieces, and the Prince himſelf deſperately wounded and taken Priſoner. The reſt of the Infantry being ſuſtain'd by ſome Daniſh and Hanoverian Cavalry, charg'd a Second Time, though with no better Succeſs: But the Third Time, the Duke of Marlborough having himſelf brought up ſome Squadrons, which were ſupported by others from the Body of Reſerve, made them advance with ſome Battalions beyond the Rivulet, whereupon the Enemy began to retire. As ſoon as the Duke had perform'd this Service, his Grace repair'd to the Center, where finding the Action decided for the Confederates, he caus'd Part of his Victorious Cavalry to halt, to obſerve the Motion of that Part of the Enemy, which by this Time was drawn up beyond the Moraſs at Hochſtet. During this Halt, the Elector of Bavaria was perceiv'd, making his Retreat from the Village of Lutzingen; upon which, General Hompeſch, who with ſeveral Squadrons was purſuing the Enemy towards Morſelingen, was order'd to face about, and march to join thoſe that halted; as well to prevent the Elector's falling upon Hompeſch's Rear, as to form a Body, in order to charge that Prince, who march'd full Speed, but in pretty good Order, with his Squadrons on the Left, and his Battalions on the Right. Before General Hompeſch return'd from the Chaſe, the Right Wing of the Confederate Army was perceiv'd at ſome Diſtance behind the Elector, and appearing to be Part of his Army, and marching in ſuch a Manner, as might eaſily have flank'd the Duke of Marlborough, if he had immediately charg'd the Bavarians, his Grace, with great Prudence, ſent out a Party to view them. During this Time, the Elector continued marching off, with great Precipitation, 'till he reach'd the Moraſs of Morſelingen. The French Horſe being entirely defeated, and the Confederate Troops Maſters of the Ground between the Enemy's Left, and the Village of Bleinheim, the Twenty Eight Battalions, and Twelve Squadrons of Dragoons which were in that Village, found themſelves cut off from the reſt of their Army, and deſpairing of being able to make their Eſcape, after a weak Attempt to repulſe the Confederate Infantry that ſurrounded the Village, they capitulated at laſt, laid down their Arms, deliver'd their Colours and Standards, and ſurrender'd themſelves Priſoners of War, on Condition, that the Officers ſhould not be ſearch'd: So that very few Men eſcap'd of the Forty Battalions the Mareſchal de Tallard had brought up, and which were the Choice of the French Infantry.

All this while, Prince Eugene, on the Right, labour'd under no ſmall Difficulties, having to deal with the Elector of Bavaria, and the Mareſchal de Marſin. The Confederate Foot of that Wing, conſiſted only in Seven Battalions Daniſh, and Eleven Pruſſian, and the Cavalry in Ninety Two Squadrons of the Troops of the Emperor, and other Princes and States of the Empire. The Enemy had in their Left Wing Thirty Battalions, and a great many Squadrons of Horſe: And had poſted Fourteen Battalions in the Village of Overklaw, which the Duke of Marlborough had taken upon him to cauſe to be attack'd by his Infantry. The Horſe of the Confederate Right Wing were, moſt of them, poſted over againſt Overklaw; but the Eighteen Battalions, who were to the Right of all, had a great way to march, before they could get up the Hill; and beſides, the Paſſage of the Rivulet being very difficult, the Attack could not begin on that Side, ſo ſoon as

A. D. 1704.

Prince Eugene intended; ſo that the Troops that were poſted in a Bottom, not far from Lutzingen, were for Three Hours expoſed to the Enemy's Cannon. About One a-Clock in the Afternoon, Prince Eugene's Troops charged with indifferent Succeſs: For his Infantry, though much inferior in Number to the Enemy's, maintain'd their Ground with great Firmneſs, and the Cavalry broke that of the Enemy's Firſt Line: But they were ſo vigorouſly repulſed by the Second Line, that Part of them were driven, in great Confuſion, beyond the Rivulet. The Confederate Infantry, having no more Horſe to ſuſtain them, were oblig'd to retreat Three or Four Hundred Paces, towards the Wood, with conſiderable Loſs, eſpecially the Two Battalions in the Flank; ſo that Things were, for ſome Time, in a very ill Condition on that Side. The Infantry ſtood firm near the Wood, and Prince Eugene having rally'd the Horſe, brought them up again to the Charge; but they were repuls'd a Second Time. They were rally'd once more, and for near Three Quarters of an Hour, ſtood within about Sixty Paces of the Enemy, neither of the Two Parties making any Motion. Prince Eugene made Uſe of that Time to poſt his Troops advantageouſly, after which, he led them to the Charge a Third Time: His Cavalry had at firſt ſome Advantage, but were afterwards repuls'd. The Infantry had better Succeſs, for they broke and defeated the Enemy's Foot; though they could not march up to them, but through a moſt difficult Ground. Hereupon Prince Eugene left his Cavalry, and put himſelf at the Head of the Infantry, and improving the Diſorder into which they had put the Enemies Foot, purſu'd them over Hills, Dales, Rocks and Woods; and having charg'd them again, did entirely rout them, and continued the Chace for above an Hour's March, as far as the Village of Lutzingen. Here Prince Eugene caus'd his victorious Foot to halt, to give Time to his Cavalry, which had rally'd a great way behind, to rejoin the Infantry. Then the whole Wing continu'd the Chace during an Hour, as far as the Village of Morſelingen and Tweiſſenhoven, where the Enemy made a Shew to ſtand their Ground, that they might have Time to paſs a great Moraſs, and reach Dillergen and Lawingen. As ſoon as the Action was decided in the Left Wing, my Lord Marlborough diſpos'd himſelf to march with Part of the Troops on that Side, towards the Village of Overklaw, to charge the Left of the Enemy on their Flank, and to ſuccour Prince Eugene; but he was inform'd, by the Way, by one of his Highneſs's Aids-de-Camp, that there was no more need of it: That all was recover'd on the Right, and that the Enemy had abandon'd the Villages of Overklaw and Lutzirgen, after having ſet them on Fire. Thus this memorable Battel, which, during near Five Hours, was fought with dubious Fortune, ended, at laſt, in a moſt compleat Victory, on the Side of thoſe, who, before the Engagement, had viſible Diſadvantages: Which, under Divine Providence, was owing to the invincible Courage and Intrepidity of the Confederate Troops, and to the Conduct and Firmneſs of their Generals. As the whole Action was, in a manner, manag'd and directed by the Duke of Marlborough, ſo the beſt Part of the Glory is certainly due to him: But then it would be Injuſtice not to own, that Prince Eugene's Share in the Honour of that Day, comes but little ſhort of the other. It is acknowledg'd by all, that they both gave their Commands with all the Clearneſs and Compoſedneſs imaginable; expoſing their Perſons, where-ever their Preſence was neceſſary, with the greateſt Unconcernment, and preſerving their Temper and Preſence of Mind, in the moſt imminent Dangers. The Duke very narrowly eſcap'd being kill'd by a Cannon Ball, which graz'd under the Belly of his Horſe, and cover'd him with Dirt. The Prince was in the thickeſt of the Enemy's Fire, but had alſo the good Fortune to come off unhurt. The other Generals of the Confederate Army, diſcharg'd their reſpective Commands with great Prudence, Activity and Valour: But among the reſt, the Hereditary Prince of Heſſe-Caſſel, and the Prince of Hanover, Generals; Lumley, Hompeſch, and Bulau, Lieutenant-Generals; Wood and Villiers, Major-Generals of Horſe; the Lord Cutts, the Earl of Orkney, and Ingoldſby, Lieutenant-Generals; the Prince of Holſtein-Beck, Wilkins, and St. Paul, Major-Generals; Row, Ferguſon, and Berenſdorf Brigadiers of Foot, deſerve to have their Names recorded in Hiſtory. All the Troops, in general, fought with equal Bravery and Undauntedneſs, though with ſome different Circumſtances of Courage, agreeable to the particular Temper of the ſeveral Nations, of which they conſiſted. The Engliſh Foot ſhew'd their natural Fire, Briſkneſs and Intrepidity, in their ſeveral Attacks of the Village of Bleinheim; the Pruſſian and Daniſh Infantry, their innate Firmneſs and Reſolution on Prince Eugene's Side, where they recover'd all; and the German Horſe perform'd Wonders in the Center, particularly the Regiment of Dragoons of Bothmer. All the Enemy's Troops that engag'd, fought with great Vigor and Courage; and had their Generals perform'd their Parts, with anſwerable Prudence and Forecaſt, 'tis hard to gueſs, which way the Fortune of the Day would have been determin'd.

'Tis

A. D. 1704.

'Tis true, the Elector of Bavaria maintain'd his Reputation of a brave and experienced Commander; nor was he ill ſeconded by Mareſchal de Marſin; but then Mareſchal de Tallard, and the other Generals of the Enemy's Right Wing, committed inexcuſable Faults, both in throwing the beſt Part of their Men into Bleinheim, whereby their Center was extremely weaken'd; and in ſuffering the Confederates to paſs a Rivulet, without any conſiderable Oppoſition. On the other Hand, the Surrender of ſo great a Body of Troops, as were poſted in that Village, without making a bold Effort to force their Way through, as it was juſtly cenſured by the French themſelves, ſo will it remain a Stain upon that Nation, which the gaining of Ten Victories will ſcarce wipe off. The Enemies Loſs in this Action amounted to about Twenty Eight Thouſand Men; viz. Seven Thouſand kill'd or drown'd, as many wounded, and the reſt taken Priſoners; beſides Four or Five Thouſand that deſerted them in their precipitate Retreat. Count de la Veruë, General of the Horſe, was among their Slain; and Monſieur de Buſen, and Count de Clerambaut, Lieutenant-Generals, were drown'd in the Danube: Meſſieurs de Blainville and Surlaube died of their Wounds; Mr. de Marillac, Brigadier, the Duke d'Humieres, Brother to the Duke d'Aumont; the Marquiſſes d'Arpajou, de Hautefort, and de Beringhen, were either kill'd or wounded, and the Marquis de la Baulme, only Son to the Mareſchal de Tallard, died a few Days after of his Wounds. The Priſoners of Note, beſides the Mareſchal de Tallard, were the Marquis de Monperoux, Meſtre de Camp, or General of the Horſe; the Marquis de Hauteſeuille, Meſtre de Camp, or General of the Dragoons; the Marquis de Marivaux, and the Count de Blanzac, Lieutenant-Generals; the Marquis de Valſemé, the Marquis de la Valiere, the Chevalier de Croiſſy, Mareſchaux de Camp, or Major-Generals; Monſieur de la Meſſiliere, Brigadier-General of the Gens d'Armes; Monſieur de St. Second, Monſieur Deſnonville, Monſieur d'Amigni, Monſieur de Signey, Monſieur de Montfort, Brigadiers of Foot; Monſieur de Jolly, Brigadier of Dragoons; the Marquis de Saſſenage, Aid-de-Camp, and Son-in-Law to the Mareſchal de Tallard; the Chevalier de Ligondais; the Marquis de St. Poüange, the Baron de Heyder, Colonels of Horſe; the Marquis de Vaſſey, the Marquis d'Aurival, Monſieur de Prié, Colonels of Dragoons; Monſieur de Novan, Monſieur de St. Maurice, the Count de Lionne, the Marquis de Laſſey, the Baron d'Elſt, Monſieur de Palincourt, Monſieur de Saulveboeuf, Monſieur de Montenay, the Count de Gallard, Monſieur de Creſſy, the Count de Tavannes, the Count de Schacq, Colonels of Foot; the Prince Marbecg of Lorrain, Captain of Horſe; the Marquis d'Auvet, Captain of the Gens d'Armes; Monſieur Joug, Major in the Regiment of Orleans; the Chevalier de Rocheplate, Cornet of the Gens d'Armes; the Marquis de Carman, Under-Lieutenant of the Gens d'Armes; Monſieur d'Ovilars, Enſign; and Monſieur Juiſſac, Guidon of the Gens d'Armes; and the Sieurs du Breuil and la Morcelaire, Commiſſaries of the Artillery. Beſides the Priſoners, the Confederates got many other Marks of a compleat Victory; viz. near a Hundred Pieces of Cannon, Twenty Four Mortars, One Hundred and Twenty Nine Colours, One Hundred and Seventy One Standards, Seventeen Pair of Kettle-Drums, Three Thouſand Six Hundred Tents, Thirty-Four Coaches, Three Hundred laden Mules, Twenty Four Barrels, and Eight Caſks of Silver. This Succeſs coſt the Allies Four Thouſand Four Hundred Eighty Five Men kill'd, and Seven Thouſand Five Hundred Twenty Five wounded: But loſt few Men of Note, except the Prince of Holſtein-Beck, and Brigadier Row, who died of their Wounds; and Philip Dormer, Lieutenant-Colonel of the Engliſh Guards; Major Frederick Cornwallis, Lieutenant-Colonel Dallyel, Lieutenant-Colonel Fetherſtonbaugh, Major Creed, Colonel John White, Lord Forbes, Captain; and Major Chenewix, who were kill'd in the Fight. The Principal Perſons among the Wounded, were the Lord North and Grey, who loſt his Right Hand; the Lord Mordaunt, who had his Left Arm ſhatter'd; Colonel Hamilton, Lieutenant-Colonel Levingſton. Lieutenant-Colonel Peyton, Major Grandville, Major George Morgan, Lieutenant-Colonel Britton, Major Armſtrong, and Major Ketley.

The Duke of Marlborough made a Prince of the Empire. The Emperor's Letter to his Grace, dated Auguſt 28. N. S.

Not many Days after the Battel of HOCHSTET, the Emperor wrote a Letter to the Duke of Marlborough, wherein, having given him the honourable and kind Appellations of Moſt Illuſtrious Couſin, and Moſt Dear Prince, his Imperial Majeſty told him, "That he had freely, and of his own Accord, admitted him among the Princes of "the Holy Empire, not ſo much in Conſideration of his Noble Family, as upon "Account of his Perſonal Merit, and his great Deſerts towards the Auguſt Houſe "of Auſtria, and the Holy Roman Empire. I have been willing, added the Empe"ror, that the ſupreme Honour in Germany, which I have, with ſo much Juſtice, "conferr'd on you, ſhould remain as a Monument, that it may the better appear to "all the World, as I freely acknowledge it, how much my ſelf, and all the Em"pire, are indebted to the moſt ſerene Queen of Great Britain, for having ſent her "powerful Succours as far as Auſburg and Bavaria, when my own Affairs, and thoſe Theſe Actions are ſo great, particularly that of HOCH- "STET, (Ages paſt having never ſeen the like Victory obtain'd over the French) "that we may rejoice to ſee not only the moſt pernicious Efforts of the Enemy re- "puls'd, and the Affairs of GERMANY, which were in a tottering Condition, or "rather thoſe of Europe, ſecur'd and re-eſtabliſh'd; but likewiſe, that it may be "reaſonably hop'd, that the full and perfect Liberty of the Chriſtian World ſhall "be reſcu'd from the Yoke with which it was threaten'd by the Power of France."

The States-Generals Letter to the Duke.

Some * Days before, the States-General wrote a Letter to the Duke of Marlborough, "Wherein they return'd his Grace their moſt hearty Thanks for the ſpeedy Notice "he had ſent them by Colonel Panton, of the agreeable News of the Victory of "Bleinheim." After the firſt Blow, added they, you had given the Enemy at Schellenberg, we had reaſon to expect ſomewhat much greater would fall out, but never durſt have carried our Hopes ſo far, as to think of ſo glorious and compleat a Victory as you have, with the Army of the Allies, gain'd over the Enemy. The Action of that Day has plac'd the Greatneſs of your Merit in its true Luſtre: A Day whoſe Glory might have been envied by the greateſt Captains of Ages paſt, and whoſe Memory will endure through all Ages to come. We heartily congratulate your Grace upon this Occaſion, and rejoice in the Glory you have acquired, as well as for the Advantage the common Cauſe has obtain'd. This Action will let France ſee, that her Troops are not invincible, and has given it ſuch a Blow, as that King never felt in the whole Courſe of his Reign. This Victory, tho' the compleateſt in it ſelf that ever was gain'd, was yet greater in its Conſequences: For by this Succeſs, Bavaria became an entire Conqueſt to the Emperor; Ratiſbon, Augſburgh, Ulm, Memmingen, and other Imperial Cities, recover'd their Liberty; the Peace of the Empire was reſtored; Landau was regain'd †, after a memorable Siege, where the King of the Romans commanded in Perſon; and Triers and Traerback were timely poſſeſs'd and ſecured by the Vigilance and Activity of the Duke of Marlborough. On the other hand, we may obſerve, that this Campaign was no leſs profitable than glorious to his Grace: For beſides the Principality of Mildenheim, which was beſtow'd upon him by the Emperor, and the Share he had in the rich Spoils of the Elector of Bavaria's Palaces, he alſo receiv'd great Preſents from ſeveral Princes of Germany. The moſt conſiderable was from the King of Pruſſia, whom the Duke attended at Berlin, to put the finiſhing Hand to a Treaty, for the marching of Eight Thouſand Pruſſians to Italy, under the Command of Prince Eugene, towards the Relief of the Duke of Savoy. Though the Succeſs of this Negotiation was principally owing to the Lord Raby, the Engliſh Ambaſſador at the Court of Berlin, who was in great Favour with the King; yet the Duke of Marlborough had both the Honour and Profit of it. For at his ‖ Departure, his Pruſſian Majeſty preſented his Grace with a Hat with a Diamond Button and Loop, and a Hatband ſtudded with Diamonds, the whole valued at 25000 Crowns, beſides Two ſtately Saddle-Horſes with rich Furniture, and other Preſents. From Berlin, the Duke made a Viſit to the Court of Hanover, where he was receiv'd with all poſſible Demonſtrations of Reſpect and Kindneſs; and had the Honour, during his Stay there, always to eat with the Elector and the Princeſs of Sophia, who before he ſet * out from thence for Holland, preſented his Grace with a large golden Baſon and Ewer, and a fine Set of Tapiſtry Hangings.

The Dutcheſs of Marlborough having had the firſt Notice of the Victory at Bleinheim, (by Colonel Parke, one of the Duke's Aids-de-Camp) was not wanting to improve it with her Royal Miſtreſs, who appointed the 7th of September, as a Day of publick Thankſgiving throughout the Kingdom for this general Bleſſing. Upon that Day, the Queen, who, like moſt of her Sex, loved Pomp and Shew, went in a triumphant manner to St. Paul's Cathedral, accompanied by her Royal Conſort, and attended by her Ladies and great Officers of State: And on this Occaſion, her Majeſty's Subjects gave all imaginable Demonſtrations of Joy. However, it is obſervable, that under Pretence of Zeal for the Honour and Proſperity of the Queen's Reign, but, indeed, through Partiality and Envy, a Set of Men endeavour'd, in their Writings, Speeches, and Addreſſes, to raiſe the Succeſſes of the Fleet under Sir George Rooke, almoſt to the ſame Pitch of Glory with thoſe of the Army under the Duke of Marlborough. But though the Actions of the Admiral cannot, with Juſtice, be brought into Competition with thoſe of the Captain-General; yet 'tis certain, that her Majeſty's Arms gain'd this Year conſiderable Reputation and Advantages at Sea; firſt, by the Taking of Gibraltar *; and then, juſt a † Month after, by the Sea-Fight that happen'd in the Mediterranean, off of Malaga, between the Confederate and the French Fleets; the firſt of which was commanded by Admiral Rooke and Vice-Admiral Callemberg, and the other by Count de Thouloufe, Admiral of France. All the Officers and Seamen of the Confederate Fleet fought with unparallel'd Intrepidity and Reſolution; and had not the Center been weaken'd by the Loſs of the Service of ſome Ships, which, thro' want of Ammunition, were forc'd to leave their Stations, 'tis highly probable, the Confederates would have obtain'd an unconteſted Victory. The French, to do them Juſtice, tho' forc'd, in ſeveral Parts of their Line, to yield to the ſuperior Mettle and Stoutneſs of the Engliſh, yet rather gain'd than loſt Reputation by this Engagement, in which they ſhew'd uncommon Courage: And, among the reſt, the Bailly of Lorrain, who was one of Count de Thouloufe's Seconds, diſtinguiſh'd his Fortitude in a particular manner, encouraging his Men to do their Duty, even when he had but few Hours to live. The Battel being ended with the Day, both Fleets kept their Line at ſome Diſtance from each other. In the Night the Wind ſhifted to the Northward, and in the Morning to the Weſtward; which gave the French the Wind of the Confederates, and an Opportunity to have renew'd the Fight with Advantage; but both Fleets lay by all Day within Three Leagues of one another, repairing their Defects; and at Night the Enemy retir'd, and ſtood to the Northward. On the 26th of Auguſt N. S. in the Morning, the French were got Four or Five Leagues to the Weſtward of the Confederates; but, a little before Noon, the latter had a Breeze of Wind Eaſterly, with which they bore down on the Enemy till Four a-Clock in the Afternoon; when the French ſtretching themſelves into a Line of Battel, the Engliſh and Dutch did the ſame, brought to, and lay by with their Heads to the Northward all Night. The Confederates brav'd the Enemy, only to conceal their own Weakneſs; for, to ſpeak the Truth, neither of the Two Fleets had any Inclination, or, indeed, was in a Condition to come to a Second Engagement; wherefore they were both glad to loſe Sight of one another. The next ‖ Day, the Wind being ſtill Eaſterly, hazy Weather, the French kept on their Courſe towards the Spaniſh Coaſt; and the Confederates made uſe of the ſame Opportunity to bear away to the Weſtward, and ſo got into Gibraltar. Tho' both Parties claim'd the Victory, yet, in the Opinion of all impartial Judges, neither had a clear Title to it: For as there was not one Ship burnt, ſunk or taken, on either Side; ſo was the Loſs of Men near equal on both. 'Tis true, the Engliſh and Dutch carry'd their Point, which was, to diſable the French Fleet from aſſiſting the Spaniards in the Retaking of Gibraltar; and this, together with the vaſt Diſproportion of Strength, with which they engag'd the Enemy, makes their Advantage little leſs than a compleat Victory. Sir George Rooke having ſtaid Eight Days at Gibraltar to refit, and ſupply'd that Place with Men and Proviſions, ſail'd from thence the 4th of September N. S. and return'd home with the great Ships; leaving behind him Eighteen Men of War, under the Command of Sir John Leake, both for the Defence of the Coaſt of Portugal, and to be in a Readineſs to ſuccour Gibraltar, if there ſhould be Occaſion.

‖ Aug. 27. N. S.

The Allies were not, this Year, equally ſucceſsful in all Parts; nor had the Preſence of King Charles III. in Portugal, the Influence that was generally expected. After ſeveral Councils of War held in the Preſence of their Catholick and Portugueze Majeſties, which paſs'd not without ſome Diſputes between the Duke of Schomberg and the Portugueze Generals and Miniſters; the Auxiliary Forces of England and Holland began to land the 16th of March (New Stile). The Duke of Schomberg had warmly inſiſted, that theſe Auxiliaries might keep in a Body; urging the Inconveniencies that might attend their Separation; but the King of Portugal being unwilling to truſt the Defence of the Frontier-Towns to his raw and undiſciplin'd Troops; and there happening ſome Coldneſs between the Engliſh General, and Monſieur Fagel, who commanded the Dutch Forces, at their very firſt Interview, the Engliſh Infantry had their Quarters aſſign'd in Olivenza, Elvas, Portalegre, and other Places in the Province of Alentejo; and the Dutch were ſent up the Tajo, towards Abrantes. The King of Portugal, by his Treaties with England and Holland, had engag'd to furniſh Horſes to mount the Cavalry and Dragoons of thoſe Two Nations; but whilſt the King of Spain, Charles, was detain'd in Holland and England, by contrary Winds, the French Ambaſſador in Portugal, with admirable Induſtry, bought up the beſt Horſes of that Kingdom; ſo that moſt of the Horſes which his Portugueze Majeſty's Officers did afterwards provide for the Engliſh and Dutch Auxiliaries, being neither of a Size nor Strength fit for Service, ſcarce one Third Part of the Troopers and Dragoons were mounted this Campaign. Neither was there better Proviſion made for ſick Soldiers, which, after ſo tedious a Paſſage, could could not but be in great Numbers, and of which Abundance died for want of Attendance and Neceſſaries. Another ill Omen for the enſuing Campaign, was, the Differences that happen'd between the Portugueze and the Engliſh and Dutch Generals. The Duke of Schomberg, by his Title of Captain-General of the Queen of Great Britain's Forces in Portugal, ought, certainly, to have commanded, at leaſt, all the Engliſh and Dutch Auxiliaries: And it had been no unwiſe Policy in the King of Portugal, to have made his Grace likewiſe Commander in Chief of all his Forces; a Poſt which his Grace's Father formerly held in that Kingdom, with ſo much Applauſe and Succeſs, that he wreſted the Crown of Portugal from the Spaniards, and fix'd it in the Family that wears it at preſent. But tho' few, if any of the Portugueze Officers, had the neceſſary Qualifications to be made Generals, yet the King of Portugal would not break the eſtabliſh'd Rule of that Kingdom, whereby the Governors of Provinces command in Chief all the Troops within their Diſtricts. 'Tis true, he made the Duke of Schomberg Velt-Mareſchal-General of the Portugueze Forces; but then, his conferring the ſame Dignity on Monſieur Fagel, General of the Dutch Forces, rather leſſen'd than honour'd the Duke, and made Mr. Fagel unwilling to obey one, to whoſe Level the King of Portugal had rais'd him; ſo that there was little Concurrence of Councils and Deſigns, between thoſe Two Generals. To all this we may add, That a French Lady, marry'd to the Duke of Cadaval, the principal Perſon in the Court of Portugal, was not a little inſtrumental in retarding the Preparations for the Campaign.

Differences between the Generals and Miniſters in Portugal.

Upon Information that the Auxiliaries which the King of France had ſent to his Grand-Son, Philip V. conſiſted, for the moſt part, of Iriſh Soldiers; the Duke of Schomberg, purſuant to the Queen's Warrant, publiſh'd * a Proclamation, promiſing her gracious Pardon to all ſuch of her Subjects, who being now in the Service of her Enemies, would quit the ſame, to come over to Charles III. King of Spain, or any other of her Majeſty's Allies; and that ſuch of them as were qualified to ſerve in her Majeſty's Forces, ſhould be receiv'd and entertain'd in the ſame Quality, as they enjoy'd in the Service they left: And that ſuch as, by reaſon of their Religion, could not ſerve in her Majeſty's Forces, ſhould be employ'd in the Service of the King of Spain, or of ſuch other of her Majeſty's Allies, where they ſhould beſt like. A few † Days after, Charles III. and the King of Portugal, publiſh'd their reſpective Manifeſtoes: The firſt, "ſetting forth his Title to the Crown of Spain, and promiſing his Pardon to "all ſuch of his Subjects, as ſhould declare for him within Three Months Time: The other, to "juſtify his Portugueze Majeſty's Taking up Arms, to reſtore the Li-"berty of the Spaniſh Nation, oppreſs'd by the Power of France; and to aſſert the "Right of his Catholick Majeſty, Charles III. to that Monarchy." Their Majeſties had reckon'd to be in a Readineſs to enter Spain by the Middle of May; but it was the Beginning of June before they reach'd Santarem, where they continued the reſt of the Spring Campaign.

† April 30. N. S.

The Kings of Spain and Portugal publiſh their Manifeſto's.

The Poſſeſſor of the Crown of Spain, ſtiled by the Allies Duke of Anjou, though the laſt in proclaiming War, was yet the firſt in maintaining his Title by the Sword; and having invaded Portugal, before his Enemies were in a Condition to oppoſe him, the Duke of Berwick, his General, took the Town of Segura by a Stratagem; and ſo intimidated the Governor of Salvaterra, that he deliver'd up the Place, without making any Defence, and conſented that himſelf, and his Gariſon, ſhould remain Priſoners of War. From Salvaterra, the Spaniards advanc'd further into the Country, and without any Reſiſtance, made themſelves Maſters of Cebreros. Pena Garcia ſtood ſome Diſcharges of Cannon, and then ſurrender'd to Count d' Aguilar. The Inhabitants of Zebredo abandon'd the Place, at the Approach of the Spaniſh Troops; and the Town of Ibana la Viella, rejecting the Summons of Don Joſeph Salazar, and the Marquis de Puyſegur, was ſtorm'd, and carried Sword in Hand. About the ſame Time, the Marquis de Jeuffreville, having entred Portugal on the Side of Almeida, put ſeveral Villages under Military Execution; and Prince Tſerclaes de Tilly being advanc'd to Aronches, rais'd great Contributions round about, whilſt the Marquis de Villadarias penetrated into Portugal another Way. Theſe uninterrupted Succeſſes of the Spaniards, caſt the Portugueze into great Conſternation; and General Fagel, who was poſted at Caſtelbranco, with Four Dutch Battalions, not thinking himſelf ſafe in that Place, retired towards Abrantes with Two Battalions. The other Two he poſted at Sovreira Formoſa, where they were ſoon after attack'd by the Duke of Berwick; and, after a brave Defence, moſt of them taken Priſoners, with Major-General Welderen. After this Succeſs, the Duke of Berwick paſs'd the Tagus, join'd another Body of Spaniards, commanded by Prince Tſerclaes de Tilly, and King Philip being arriv'd in the Army, inveſted Portalegre, whoſe Inhabitants forc'd the Gariſon to ſurrender at Diſcretion; and amongſt them an Engliſh Regiment of Foot, commanded by Colonel Stanhope. thereupon ſend the Duke of Berwick with a ſtrong Detachment, to obſerve the Por- tugueze, and it was from thence conjectur'd, that he would give over the Attack of Caſteldavide, yet the Duke of Berwick, finding that the Marquis Das Minas did not move forwards, return'd, ſoon after, before Caſteldavide. Hereupon Colonel Huſſey propos'd to the Portugueze to retire into the Caſtle, and defend it to the laſt Extremity; but the Militia open'd the Gates to the Spaniards, and ſo the whole Gariſon hot, King Philip ſent his wearied Troops into Quarters of Refreſhment; and not N. S. thinking it poſſible to preſerve all his Conqueſts, he order'd his Men to abandon them, except Marvan and Salvaterra, and to raze the Walls of Portalegre, Caſteldavide, and ſome other Towns. About the ſame Time, the Remainder of the Engliſh Forces march'd from Alentejo into the Province of Beira, and the Portugueze and Dutch into Quarters of Refreſhment about Pena Major.

The frequent ill News that came from Portugal to England, gave no ſmall Uneaſineſs to the Queen; and Mr. Methuen, (Senior,) the Engliſh Ambaſſador at Liſbon, having repreſented, that the Duke of Schomberg's imperious and haughty Deportment had bred Diviſions among the Generals, and occaſion'd ſeveral Miſcarriages, her Majeſty reſolv'd to remove him, and to beſtow the Command of her Forces in Portugal, on the Earl of Galway. This Choice was, in ſome Meaſure, owing to Mr. Methuen, who, while he was Lord Chancellor in Ireland, had contracted a great Intimacy with the Lord Galway, and now recommended him, as the fitteſt Perſon to mend what the other had done amiſs; and, by his Dexterity and Complaiſance, to reconcile jarring Humours and Intereſts. But tho' the Earl of Galway was heartily glad of being again employ'd, and had, in order to that, kept a conſtant Corre-ſpondence with Mr. Methuen; yet, when the Lord Godolphin acquainted || him with || June 23.
the Honour the Queen intended him, he ſlily endeavour'd to excuſe himſelf from O. S.
" accepting a Command, which, he ſaid, was already in much better Hands; al-
" ledging withal the Infirmities of Age, which render'd him almoſt incapable of " Action." The Queen not admitting of theſe Excuſes, the Earl of Galway, by an uncommon Strain of Policy, and feign'd Modeſty, offer'd to ſerve under the Duke of Schomberg; but this Propoſal being likewiſe rejected, he was appointed ∴ General, and Commander in Chief of her Majeſty's Forces in Portugal. This was no ſmall Mortification either to the Duke of Schomberg, who was laid aſide with Marks of Diſpleaſure, or to the Earl of Portmore, who was gone to Portugal, as Lieutenant-General, in Hopes, and with a Promiſe, that if the Duke were recall'd, he ſhould ſucceed him in the Command of the Engliſh Forces: But an unlucky Jeſt, which the Counteſs of Dorcheſter, his Wife, (a Lady of a moſt cutting, ſarcaſtick Wit) had paſs'd upon the Marlborough Family, rendred that Promiſe ineffectual; whereupon the Earl of Portmore left Portugal, and return'd diſguſted into England.
In the mean Time, the ſubtle Earl of Galway having repreſented the Neceſſity of augmenting the Queen's Forces, and the Train of Artillery, all his Demands were readily complied with, and Four Thouſand Men were order'd to be ſent to Portugal from England and Ireland; the States-General having agreed to ſend thither a pro-portionable Number of their Forces. The Earl of Galway having embark'd at Portſmouth, on board the Tartar Man of War, with ſeveral French Engineers and Volunteers, in Eight Days ſailing, ſafely arriv'd in  Liſbon, where the Duke of  July 30.
Schomberg reſign'd to him the Command of the Engliſh Forces: And this Change was O. S.
the more agreeable to the Court of Portugal, in that the Duke had taken this Opportunity to demand of them ſome Arrears due to his Father. About a Month after, the Earl of Galway having review'd the Portugueze and Auxiliary Forces, march'd with them over the little River Coa, and encamp'd near Almeida. On the 20th of September, the Kings of Spain and Portugal came to the Army, with Deſign to invade Caſtile; but when they came to the River Agueda, which they intended to paſs near Ciudad Rodrigo, they found the oppoſite Banks ſo well guarded by the Spaniards, commanded by the Duke of Berwick, that they did not think it adviſe-able to hazard the Loſs of their whole Army; and ſo retiring * further into the Territories of Portugal, they ſent their Troops into Winter-Quarters. On the other Hand, the Spaniards were ſo weaken'd, by the Detachments ſent under the Command of the Marquis de Villadarias, to attempt the retaking of Gibraltar, that they were contented to defend their own Country; and had no Thoughts of invading Portugal: So that Things were quiet on thoſe Frontiers, all the remaining Part of this Year.

* Oct. 9. N. S.

The taking of Gibraltar gain'd great Reputation to the Queen's Naval Strength, by extending the Engliſh Empire of the Seas, as far as the Mediterranean: And as the Confederate Gariſon in it, was a dangerous Thorn in the Side of the Spaniards, and a ſtanding Proof of the Advantage gain'd by the Allies in the late Sea-Fight, and at the ſame Time, very much leſſen'd the Credit of the French in Spain, ſo the Courts of Verſailles and Madrid us'd all poſſible Means to retake that Town. The Duke of Anjou wrote to the Count de Thoulouſe, That he ow'd to him the Preſervation of the Coaſts of Spain, of which he deſerved to be ſtiled the Deliverer; but that he expected greater Things from his Services by the Reduction of Gibraltar, which would be entirely due to his Aſſiſtance: But the Event proved otherwiſe. The Allies being Maſters at Sea, Sir John Leake, and Rear-Admiral Vander-Duſſen did, ſeveral Times, ſuccour the Gariſon, when they deſpaired almoſt of any Relief: And Monſieur de Pointis came into that Bay only to be Witneſs of the Defeat of his Squadron, and of the Loſs of Five large Men of War, Three of which were taken, the other Two burnt. The Mareſchal de Theſſe had no better Succeſs at Land, than the Marquis de Villadarias had had before him: So that the Enemy, after Six Months Toil, and fruitleſs Attacks, were at laſt forced to raiſe the Siege, by the obſtinate and brave Defence of the Engliſh Gariſon, under the Conduct and Command of the vigilant, indefatigable, and couragious Prince of Heſſe d' Armſtadt. The French were, in the Year 1704, more ſucceſsful in Italy, where the Imperialiſts were not in a Condition to hinder either the taking of Vercelli and Ivrea, or the Siege of Verue, which the Duke of Savoy's Troops were, at laſt, forced to abandon, though not 'till the whole Town had been reduced to a Heap of Rubbiſh. On the other Hand, the generous Endeavours of the Queen of Great Britain, and of the States-General, to accommodate Matters between the Emperor, and the Hungarian Malecontents, proved altogether unſucceſsful, both through the Intrigues of Monſieur de Verville, the French Envoy, with Prince Ragotzki, and the Stiffneſs of the Imperial Commiſſioners, who had ſeveral Conferences at Schemnitz, with thoſe of the Hungarians, under the Mediation of Mr. Stepney, and Monſieur Bruyninx, Miniſters of England and Holland.

May it pleaſe your MAJESTY,

Addreſs of the Scotch Parliament preſented to the Queen at Windſor, Sept. 24.

" WE your Majeſty's Dutiful and Loyal Subjects, the Noblemen, Barons and " Burgeſſes aſſembled in Parliament, humbly repreſent to your Majeſty, " our great Diſappointment, in not having the Original Papers, concerning what " was called in England, by the Houſe of Peers, the Scotch Conſpiracy, laid before " us, and the Perſons who were examin'd in that Matter, ſent hither, for which " there was Application made in the beginning of this Seſſions.

" We, therefore, humbly lay before your Majeſty, the Concern of the whole Na- " tion in this Affair, in which the intermeddling of the Houſe of Lords having been " declared in a Reſolve in this Seſſions to be an Intrenchment on the Independency " of this Nation, and your Majeſty's Prerogative, as Queen of Scotland; that you " will, in your Majeſty's great Wiſdom, take ſuch Meaſures, as may effectually " prevent all ſuch meddling for the future.

" We do alſo take Leave to offer to your Majeſty our Opinion, that nothing can " obſtruct more our coming into the Meaſures that have been recommended by your " Majeſty, in relation to the Succeſſion, than the Houſe of Lords Proceedings to " make any more Incroachments of that Nature. And we do humbly intreat your " Majeſty, that all Perſons and Papers relating to that Affair, that have been ex- " amin'd in England, may be ſent hither at the meeting of the next Seſſions of Par- " liament, that the Matter may be examin'd to the bottom, and thoſe that are un- " juſtly accus'd, may have Right done them, and thoſe who are guilty, be puniſh'd " according to their Demerits.

On the 29th of September, the Common-Hall of the City of London, proceeded to the Election of a Lord-Mayor; and having return'd Sir Thomas Cooke, and Sir Owen Buckingham, to the Court of Aldermen, they unanimouſly made Choice of Sir Thomas Cooke: But the latter, Five Days after, deſiring to be excus'd, as being, through his Indiſpoſition, diſabled from holding the ſaid Office, the Common-Hall proceeded to a new Choice, and return'd Sir Owen Buckingham and Sir Thomas Rawlinſon, to the Court of Lord-Mayor and Aldermen; who elected Sir Owen Buckingham to be Lord-Mayor for the Year enſuing.

Sir Thomas Cooke being elected Lord-Mayor, declines that Office; which is beſtowed on Sir Owen Buckingham, Oct. 6.

On the 9th of the ſame Month, Sir Cloudeſly Shovel, and ſeveral of his Captains, went to Windſor, to wait upon the Queen and his Royal Highneſs; and her Majeſty was pleaſed to confer the Honour of Knighthood upon Captain John Jennings, Commander of her Majeſty's Ship the St. George, for his ſignal Service in the late Sea-Fight in the Mediterranean. The Queen did, not long after, confer the ſame Honour on George Byng, Eſq; Rear-Admiral of the Red Squadron, and on Thomas Dilks, Eſq; Rear-Admiral of the White.

Several Sea Commanders Knighted.

On the 24th of October, the Parliament met at Weſtminſter, according to their laſt Prorogation; and the Queen being come to the Houſe of Peers, and the Houſe of Commons attending, her Majeſty made the following Speech to both Houſes:

The Parliament meets Oct. 24.

My LORDS and GENTLEMEN,

THE great and remarkable Succeſs with which God hath bleſſed our Arms in this Summer, has ſtirr'd up our good Subjects in all Parts of the Kingdom, to expreſs their unanimous Joy and Satisfaction; and I aſſure my ſelf, you are all come diſpos'd to do every Thing that is neceſſary for the effectual Proſecution of the War; nothing being more obvious, than that a timely Improvement of our preſent Advantages, will enable us to procure a laſting Foundation of Security for England, and a firm Support for the Liberty of Europe. This is my Aim; I have no Intereſt, nor never will have, but to promote the Good and Happineſs of all my Subjects.

The Queen's Speech to both Houſes.

Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons,

I muſt deſire ſuch Supplies of you, as may be requiſite for carrying on the next Year's Service, both by Sea and Land, and for punctually performing our Treaties with all our Allies; the rather, for that ſome of them have juſt Pretenſions depending ever ſince the laſt War; and I need not put you in Mind of what Importance it is to preſerve the Publick Credit, both Abroad and at Home.

I believe you will find ſome Charges neceſſary next Year, which were not mention'd in the laſt Seſſions, and ſome extraordinary Expences incurr'd ſince, which were not then provided for.

I aſſure you, that all the Supplies you give, with what I am able to ſpare from my own Expences, ſhall be carefully applied to the beſt Advantage for the publick Service; and I earneſtly recommend to you a ſpeedy Diſpatch, as that which, under the good Providence of GOD, we muſt chiefly depend upon, to diſappoint the earlieſt Deſigns of our Enemies.

My LORDS and GENTLEMEN,

I cannot but tell you, how eſſential it is for attaining thoſe great Ends Abroad, of which we have ſo hopeful a Proſpect, that we ſhould be entirely united at Home.

It is plain our Enemies have no Encouragement left, but what ariſes from their Hopes of our Diviſions. 'Tis therefore your Concern not to give the leaſt Countenance to thoſe Hopes.

My Inclinations are to be kind and indulgent to you all: I hope you will do nothing to endanger the Loſs of this Opportunity which GOD has put into our Hands, of ſecuring our ſelves, and all Europe; and that there will be no Contention among you, but who ſhall moſt promote the publick Welfare.

Such a Temper as this, in all your Proceedings, cannot fail of ſecuring your Reputation, both at Home and Abroad.

This would make me a happy Queen, whoſe utmoſt Endeavours ſhall never be wanting, to make you a happy and flouriſhing People.

The next * Day both Houſes preſented ſeverally their Congratulatory Addreſſes to her Majeſty: That of the Lords was as follows:

* Oct. 25.

We

A. D. 1704.

The Lords Addreſs.

" WE your Majeſty's moſt dutiful and loyal Subjects, the Lords Spiritual and " Temporal in Parliament aſſembled, beg Leave to return our humble " and hearty Thanks to your Majeſty, for your moſt gracious Speech to your Par- " liament: The Kindneſs and Indulgence your Majeſty hath expreſs'd for all your " Subjects: Your Care to create a perfect Union amongſt us, by forewarning us of " the Miſchiefs of Diviſion: Your Goodneſs in declaring your own Happineſs to " depend on that of your People: Your Deſire to ſee that Happineſs ſettled upon a " laſting Foundation: Your ſtrict Regard to Treaties; your Juſtice to publick En- " gagements Abroad, as well as at Home; and your noble Concern for the Sup- " port of the Liberty of Europe; comprehend all the Royal Qualities that can be " deſired in a Sovereign; and when they are all ſo manifeſtly united in your Royal " Perſon, We, and the whole Nation, ſhould be inexcuſable to GOD, and to the " World, to this Age, and to Poſterity, if we ſhould not endeavour effectually to " accompliſh all thoſe great and excellent Deſigns, which your Majeſty hath ſo " wiſely and graciouſly recommended.

" We, for our ſelves, faithfully aſſure your Majeſty, That we will do all in our " Power, to bring this Seſſion to a happy and ſpeedy Concluſion, and to im- " prove to the utmoſt, the bleſſed Opportunity which GOD hath put into your " Hands.

" Upon this Occaſion of approaching your Majeſty, we deſire humbly to congra- " tulate the great and glorious Succeſs of your Majeſty's Arms, in Conjunction " with thoſe of your Allies, under the Command of the Duke of Marlborough. We " can never enough admire your Wiſdom and Courage, in ſending that ſeaſonable " and neceſſary Aſſiſtance to the Empire: And we cannot too much commend the " Secreſy, Diſpatch and Bravery, with which your Orders were executed.

" What remains for us to do, is to beſeech GOD, That the like Succeſs may at- " tend your Majeſty's Arms, till you ſee the Proteſtant Religion, and the Liberty " of Europe, ſettled upon a firm and laſting Foundation, and that your Majeſty " may live many Years, to have the Pleaſure and Glory of beholding theſe Parts " of the World happy, in the Enjoyment of thoſe Bleſſings which your Majeſty " ſhall have procured for them.

Her Majeſty's Anſwer to this Addreſs was:

My LORDS,

I Am very ſenſible of the great Duty and Affection which you have expreſs'd in the ſeveral Particulars of this Addreſs.

I return you my hearty Thanks for your Congratulation of our great Succeſs, and for the Aſſurances of your Readineſs to concur in proſecuting it effectually.

The Addreſs of the Houſe of Commons was to this Effect:

Moſt Gracious Sovereign,

" WE your Majeſty's moſt dutiful and loyal Subjects, the Knights, Citizens " and Burgeſſes in Parliament aſſembled, do beg Leave to return your " Majeſty our moſt humble and hearty Thanks, for your Majeſty's moſt Gracious " Speech from the Throne; and to congratulate your Majeſty upon the great and " glorious Succeſſes, with which it hath pleaſed God to bleſs your Majeſty, in the " entire Defeat of the united Force of France and Bavaria, by the Arms of your " Majeſty, and your Allies, under the Command, and by the Courage and Conduct " of the Duke of Marlborough; and in the Victory obtain'd by your Maje- " ſty's Fleet, under the Command, and by the Courage and Conduct of Sir George " Rooke.

" Your Majeſty can never be diſappointed in your Expectation from us, your " faithful Commons, who all come diſpoſed to do every Thing that is neceſſary " for the effectual Proſecution of the War; and therefore your Majeſty may " depend on our providing ſuch Supplies, and giving ſuch ſpeedy Diſpatch to the " publick Buſineſs, as may enable your Majeſty to purſue thoſe Advantages, ſo " happily obtain'd over the common Enemy; which we can never doubt, but your " Majeſty's Wiſdom will improve, to the procuring a laſting Security for England, " and a firm Support for the Liberty of Europe.

" We are truly ſenſible, That nothing can be more eſſential for the attaining " theſe great Ends, than to be entirely united at Home. We ſhall therefore uſe " our utmoſt Endeavours, by all proper Methods, to prevent all Diviſions among us; " and

" and will have no Contention, but who ſhall moſt promote and eſtabliſh the " publick Welfare, both in Church and State. Thus your Majeſty's Reign will be " made happy, and your Memory bleſſed to all Poſterity. A. D. 1704.

The Commons having, in a Body, preſented their Addreſs to her Majeſty, " The " Queen return'd them many Thanks for it, and the Aſſurances they gave her, of " diſpatching the Supplies, and avoiding all Diviſions; both which, as they were " extreamly acceptable to her, ſo they would be advantageous to them, and bene- " ficial to the Publick. October. 29. The Queen's Anſwer.

The Lords Addreſs was univerſally applauded: But abundance of Perſons were ſhock'd with that of the Commons; particularly with their uſing the ſame Terms to commend the Duke of Marlborough's Victories, and the Advantages gain'd by Sir George Rooke. It was alſo obſerv'd, that the Promiſe the Commons made to the Queen, of uſing their utmoſt Endeavours to prevent all Diviſions, was, in a manner, reſtrain'd by the Addition of all proper Methods; which many look'd upon as ominous. However, after the Commons had taken the Services of the Army and Navy into Conſideration, and by an unanimous Vote ∴ deſired the Queen to beſtow her Bounty upon the Seamen and Land-Forces, who had behaved themſelves ſo gallantly, they went chearfully upon the Supply. The Several Sums they granted for the Navy, the Army, and other neceſſary Expences, amounted to Four Millions, Six Hundred Seventy Thouſand, Four Hundred Eighty Six Pounds, which they reſolv'd to levy by a Land-Tax of Four Shillings in the Pound; by continuing the Duties on Malt; by raiſing Eight Hundred Seventy Seven Thouſand, Nine Hundred Thirty One Pounds by Sale of Annuities, and by other Ways and Means. They made ſo great a Diſpatch, that on the 9th of December, the Land-Tax Bill receiv'd the Royal Aſſent: On which Occaſion, the Queen made a ſhort Speech to both Houſes, wherein, in particular, ſhe return'd Thanks to the Commons for their early Diſpatch of ſo great a Part of the neceſſary Supplies, which ſhe look'd upon to be a ſure Pledge of their Affections for her Service. ∴ Nov. 2. Supply of 4,670,486 l. granted. Ways and Means.

It was generally wiſh'd, and indeed expected, both in the Court, the City, and the Country, that the Bill to prevent Occaſional Conformity, which afforded Matter of Diviſion and Contention in the Two former Seſſions of this Parliament, would not have been ſet on foot again at this Juncture, when all Parties ought, at leaſt, to have ſuſpended their Animoſities, and join'd in one Voice to celebrate the Triumphs of her Majeſty's Arms. But, notwithſtanding all the Endeavours uſed by the Miniſtry, to engage the Leading Men of the High-Church Party to contain their pretended Zeal for the Church, till ſuch an Opportunity as the ſame might not appear to be a Deſign to obſtruct the publick Buſineſs; the Parliament had not ſat long, before Mr. William Bromley moved in the Houſe of Commons, That Leave be given to bring in that Bill. This Motion met with notable Oppoſition from all the moderate Party, among whom appear'd many Courtiers, particularly Mr. Boyle, Chancellor of the Exchequer, who ſpoke ſtrenuouſly againſt it; but tho' it was carried in the Affirmative, yet the Chief of the High-Church Party debated ſeveral Days in their private Aſſemblies, whether they ſhould bring in the Bill or no? Many urged ſtrong Reaſons for the Negative; but, however, the Bill was brought in *, read the firſt time, and the Queſtion put, Whether it ſhould be read a Second time? Which, after high and warm Debates, was carried in the Affirmative. This Second Struggle againſt the Bill, even in the Houſe of Commons, made them who puſh'd it forward juſtly apprehenſive, that it would never paſs by it ſelf through the Houſe of Lords; and therefore, after a long Conſultation in their chief Club, and, as was then whiſper'd, by the Suggeſtion of a Perſon † in whom they ſtill repoſed great Confidence, but who deſign'd to decoy them into a Snare, they reſolv'd to attempt the tacking of it to the Land-Tax Bill. Accordingly, on the Second ‖ Reading of the Conformity Bill, Mr. Bromley made a long Speech, wherein, among other Things, he urged, That the Practice of Occaſional Conformity was ſuch a ſcandalous Hypocriſy, as was no way to be excuſed upon any Pretence whatſoever. That it was condemn'd even by the better Sort of Diſſenters themſelves. That the employing Perſons of a different Religion from that eſtabliſh'd by Law, had never been practiſed by any wiſe Government, and was not allow'd even in Holland. That the Sacramental Teſt was appointed by the Wiſdom of the Legiſlature to preſerve the Eſtabliſh'd Church; which Church ſeem'd in as much Danger from the Diſſenters at this Time, as it was from Papiſts, when the Act was made. That this Law being ſo neceſſary, and having been twice refuſed in the Houſe of Lords, the only way to have it paſs was to tack it to a Money-Bill. That it had been an ancient Practice to tack Bills, that were for the Good of the Subject, to Money Bills; it being reaſonable, that while grievous Taxes were laid upon the People for Support of the Crown, the Crown ſhould, in Return, paſs ſuch Laws as were for the Benefit of the People. That the Proceedings about the Occaſional Conformity Bill. Motion to bring it in. * Nov. 23. † Robert H——ey, Eſq; ‖ Nov. 28. great Neceſſity there was for the Money-Bills paſſing, was rather an Argument for, than againſt this Proceeding: For what Danger could there be, that the Lords, who pretended to be ſuch great Patriots, ſhould rather loſe the neceſſary Supplies, than paſs an Act ſo requiſite for Preſervation of the Church? That, however, if they ſhould ſuppoſe them ſo unreaſonable, the Matter was not yet ſo bad, for it was only but proroguing the Parliament for a few Days, and then the Commons might paſs the Land-Tax again without the Tack. And ſo he concluded with moving, That the Bill to prevent Occaſional Conformity, might be tack'd to the Land-Tax Bill. This Motion occaſion'd a warm and long Debate in the Houſe, and a great deal of Anxiety both in Court and City; it being generally apprehended, that if the Queſtion had been carried in the Affirmative, the Diſſolution of this Parliament would have enſued; which would have been no ſmall Prejudice to the Affairs of the Grand Alliance: But by the crafty Management of Mr. Secretary Harley, and ſome other Courtiers, the Sticklers for the Bill were ſtrangely ſurprized and diſappointed, to find themſelves deſerted by above a Hundred Members, who before uſed to vote with them; ſo that the Negative prevail'd by a Majority of Two Hundred and Fifty One Voices againſt One Hundred and Thirty Four. Beſides, the obvious Argument that the Tacking Bills of another Nature to Money-Bills, takes away the Negative both from the Crown, and from the Houſe of Lords, gives the Commons the whole Legiſlative Power, and ſo tends to deſtroy the Conſtitution: Mr. Secretary Hedges and the Lord Cutts repreſented to the Houſe, That the Duke of Marlborough had lately concluded a Treaty with the King of Pruſſia for Eight Thouſand of his Men, to be employed towards the Relief of the Duke of Savoy, who was in moſt imminent Danger; That thoſe Troops were actually on their March, upon the Credit of a Vote of this Houſe, That they would make good her Majeſty's Treaties; and that the obſtructing the Money-Bills, which the Tacking would infallibly do, would put an immediate Stop to the March of thoſe Troops, and thereby occaſion the entire Ruin of the Duke of Savoy. My Lord Cutts urg'd, "That the Engliſh Nation was now in the higheſt Conſideration Abroad; that all "Europe were attentive to the Reſolutions of this Parliament; and that if any "Diviſions ſhould happen between the Two Houſes, it would caſt a Damp upon "the whole Confederacy, and give the French King almoſt as great an Advantage, "as we had gain'd over him at Bleinheim." Mr. Boyle, Chancellor of the Exchequer, ſpoke on the ſame Side, and in a Laconick Stile, ask'd, Whether any wiſe Man amongſt them would venture his whole Eſtate upon a Vote? And anſwering himſelf in the Negative; Then, added he, ſhall we now venture the Safety of all England, nay, of all Europe, upon this Vote? Sir John Hollis, perceiving that many Members had left the High-Church Party, did wittily expoſe them by ſaying, "That for his own Part, he had "been againſt this Bill from the Beginning; but he wonder'd, that thoſe Gentle-"men, who had all along pretended, that the Church of England was on the Brink "of Ruin, unleſs ſuch a Bill ſhould paſs, did not purſue the only Method that "might ſecure the paſſing of that Bill. I put it to the Conſcience of thoſe Gentle-"men, who are come over to us, added he, Whether they were before ſatisfied, as "to the Reaſonableneſs and Neceſſity of this Bill, ſince they now deſert their own "Friends? I wiſh they had voted on our Side Two Years ago, for 'twould have "ſaved us a great deal of Trouble, the greateſt Part of the Nation a great deal of "Uneaſineſs, and themſelves the Confuſion of abandoning their Party at a Pinch." Sir Thomas Littleton ſpoke on the ſame Side, and ſaid, Gentlemen, By the tacking of this Bill, we mean to throw a Neceſſity upon the Lords to paſs it: But ſuppoſe the Lords think fit to untack what we have tack'd, and to acquaint us, That they are ready to paſs the Money-Bill, but will conſider of the other: Pray, whoſe Fault will the Nation account it to be, that the Queen's Buſineſs is retarded? Againſt all which Reaſons, little was offer'd of any Weight; and ſo it was reſolv'd, that the Bill ſhould not be tack'd.

Mr. Bromley's Motion carried in the Negative.

Tho' after this Diſappointment, the High-Church Party plainly ſaw, that their long-ſtickled-for Bill was as good as loſt; yet for Form Sake, and to maintain their Credit, if not Abroad, at leaſt in the Houſe of Commons, they got the Bill to be read a Third Time, paſs'd, and ſent up to the Lords for their Concurrence. Upon the reading * of this Bill in the Houſe of Peers, the Archbiſhop of York declared, That he was for ſo much of it as concern'd the Church. Whereupon the Earl of Peterborow ſaid, "He was glad to hear that Learned Prelate make a Diſtinction "between the Eccleſiaſtical and Political Part of the Bill; and he hoped, that all "the Lords, who in their Conſciences were ſatisfied, as his Grace ſeem'd to be, that "this Bill was framed to ſerve a Temporal, as well as a Spiritual End, would vote "againſt it." Many other Speeches were made for and againſt the Bill, the Queen being preſent: But the Queſtion being put, Whether it ſhould be read a Second time, it was carried in the Negative by a Majority of Seventy one Voices againſt Fifty: To wit, Fifty one Members preſent, and Twenty Proxies, for ſtinging out the Bill; and Thirty three Peers in the Houſe, and Seventeen Proxies, for giving it a Second Reading. A. D. 1704.

By this Time, the Lords were taken up with an Affair that made no leſs Noiſe abroad than the Conformity-Bill, I mean the Lord Haverſham's Speech, which was uſher'd in with great Pomp. His Lordſhip having, on the 20th of November, acquainted the Peers, That he had Matters of great Importance to lay before them, but that he deſired it ſhould be in a full Houſe; all the Lords in Town, and in the Neighbourhood, were ſummon'd to attend Three Days after, when my Lord Haverſham ſpoke to them to this Effect:

My LORDS,

The Lord Haverſham's Speech, Nov. 23.

" I Am very ſenſible to what Cenſure he expoſes himſelf, who addreſſes your " Lordſhips in ſuch a Time; but this being the only proper Place for me to " mention what I have to offer of Complaint, I the more confidently hope your " Lordſhips Forgiveneſs.

" I would be far from detracting or leſſening any Man's juſt Praiſe, and do re- " ally believe, that the wonderful Victory obtain'd over the French under the Conduct " and Command of Prince Eugene and the Duke of Marlborough, if conſider'd in all " its Circumſtances, eſpecially the unuſual Secrecy with which the Orders were " executed, is the greateſt any Hiſtory can ſhew us.

" And tho' our Succeſs at Sea was not equal to what it was at Land, yet the Eng- " liſh Courage and Bravery ſhew'd it ſelf the ſame. I cannot, indeed, congratu- " late Sir George Rooke's entire Victory over the French; but I can, and do moſt hear- " tily, his ſafe Deliverance from them, and that, with a Fleet ſo unprovided, and ſo " weaken'd by Five or Six Dutch Ships being called home a little before the Engage- " ment, ſeems to me a conſiderable Piece of Service. To ſay more, would look " like Flattery; and to ſay leſs, would be unjuſt.

My LORDS,

" The Navy of England is its Glory, and its Guard; 'tis that which ſhould pro- " tect our Trade, and ſecure our Coaſts. Your Lordſhips were ſo ſenſible of this, " that you recommended theſe Two Heads to her Majeſty, in Two Addreſſes laſt " Seſſions, full of Reſpect, and yet very preſſing: But we have been ſo far from recei- " ving the Fruits we expected from your Lordſhips Care, that whoever will but take " a View of what was done laſt Summer, will ſee our Coaſts left naked, and our " Trade expos'd; St. Paul riding in the Channel, and our Merchants ſo far from " being protected, that even our Men of War themſelves are taken in our Sound- " ings. And what ſharpens our Misfortunes, is, to ſee our Enemies making uſe " of our own Ships againſt us, and to be provided with their very Naval Stores from " us; as the Count de Thoulouſe's Squadron was, if an Eye-witneſs thereof, now at the " Door, may be believ'd.

My LORDS,

" Let our Victories be what they will Aſhore, while France is thus powerful at " Sea, and more ſo daily, not only by his new Additions, but by our too eaſy " Conceſſions; as were thoſe of St. Chriſtophers, Newfoundland, and Hudſon's Bay; " while our Trade, if thus neglected, and your Lordſhips faithful and provident Ad- " vice baffled, by the dark Counſels of no body knows who; England, in my Opinion, " can never be ſafe.

" Another Thing that I ſhall take notice of, is, the preſent State of the Coin; and " I dare venture to ſay, That if ſuch vaſt Exportations be much longer continued and " allow'd, we ſhall have very little left at Home: France may be beaten, but Eng- " land muſt be beggar'd. I know we are not ſo ſenſible of this, becauſe there is a Pa- " per-Money now current; but ſhould there ever happen to be a Stop there, I pray God " preſerve us from Sinking all at once.

" The laſt Thing that I ſhall mention to your Lordſhips, is in relation to Scot- " land: I think I need but lay before your Lordſhips the true Matter of Fact, to " convince you how much it deſerves your Conſideration. A little before the laſt " Sitting down of the Parliament there, it was thought neceſſary to make ſome Al- " teration in that Miniſtry; and accordingly, ſome were diſplac'd, to make Room " for others; taking ſome from each Party, who might influence the reſt. Things " being thus prepar'd, and a motly Miniſtry ſet up; the Parliament met about " the 6th of July laſt: And tho' the Succeſſion to the Crown in the Proteſtant Line, " was the main Thing recommended with the greateſt Earneſtneſs, by the Queen, " in her Letter to them, yet was it ſo poſtpon'd and baffled, that at length it came

A. D. 1704.

" to nothing; partly, becauſe the Miniſtry was ſo weak and divided, that inſtead " of doing every Thing, they could do nothing; and partly, from a receiv'd O- " pinion, that the Succeſſion it ſelf was never ſincerely and cordially intended, either by " the Miniſtry there, or by thoſe that manag'd the Scotch Affairs here.

" This is evident; for, at the very Opening of the Seſſion, my Lord Secretary " himſelf diſtinguiſhes between a ſecret and reveal'd Will. And not only that, but " upon the Fourth Sederunt, (as they call it) a Motion was made for a Bill of EX- " CLUSION; I take it formally to be ſo, tho' it bears the Title of an Act of SE- " CURITY; (a) which was read the firſt Time on the 7th, and order'd to lye on " the Table till they heard from England; and on the 10th, it paſs'd into a Law. " Nor can any reaſonable Man believe, that thoſe who promoted a Bill of EXCLUSION " there, or thoſe who here advis'd the Paſſing of it, could ever be really and cordially for " the Engliſh SUCCESSION. I know there is an Exception in the Act it ſelf; " but 'tis ſuch an one, as might have, full as well, been left out: For he that " aſks, what he knows before will never be granted, only aſks the Denial. And yet this " is not all; but in this very Bill of EXCLUSION, as I call it, all the Heretors and " Boroughs are not only allow'd, but ordain'd (as the Word is) to be Arm'd, and to " Exerciſe their Fencible Men once every Month.

" This being the Fact, (and, I think, I have ſtated it very truly) ſurely, My " Lords, it is what deſerves your Conſideration; and I ſhall make but one or two " Obſervations to your Lordſhips. There are Two Matters of all Troubles; Much " Diſcontent, and great Poverty; and whoever will now look into Scotland, will find " them both in that Kingdom. 'Tis certain, the Nobility and Gentry of Scotland " are as Learned, and as Brave, as any Nation in Europe can boaſt of; and theſe are " generally diſcontented. And as to the common People, they are very numerous, and " very ſtout, but very poor. And who is the Man who can anſwer what ſuch a Multitude, " ſo arm'd, ſo diſciplin'd, with ſuch Leaders, may do, eſpecially ſince Opportunities do ſo " much alter Men from themſelves? And there will never be wanting all the Promiſe, and " all the Aſſiſtance France can give.

" Beſides this, My Lords, I take it to be of the laſt Danger to England, that there " ſhould be the leaſt Shadow or Pretence of a Neceſſity to keep up Regular and Standing " Troops in this Kingdom in Time of Peace; for I ſhall always be of the ſame Opi- " nion, That what has been, may be.

" In ſhort, My Lords, I think every Man wiſhes theſe Things had not been; and, " in my Opinion, there is no Man but muſt ſay, They ſhould not have been. I ſhall " end with an Advice of my Lord Bacon's: Let Men, ſays he, beware how they ne- " glect, or ſuffer Matter of Troubles to be prepar'd; for no Man can forbid the Spark, " that may ſet all on Fire.

" If any Thing I have ſaid deſerves it, your Lordſhips will take it into your " Conſideration; if not, I'm ſure I ought to aſk a Thouſand Pardons, for ſo long " Abuſe of your Patience.

(a) By this ACT, it was enacted, " That in the Event of the Queen's Death, or of any of her Heirs " and Succeſſors, this preſent, or any other Parliament then in being, ſhould not be diſſolv'd; and if " there ſhould be no Parliament in being, then the Eſtates or Members of the laſt preceding Parliament, " ſhould meet at Edinburgh on the Twentieth Day after the ſaid Death. That no Papiſt, Engliſhman or " Foreigner, having a Scotch Title, and not having an Eſtate of 12000 l. (Scotch) yearly Rent, in Scot- " land, have Place and Vote in the ſaid Meeting of Eſtates. That the ſaid Eſtates be impower'd, upon " the Demiſe of her Majeſty, or of any ſucceeding King or Queen, leaving Heirs or Succeſſors, after ha- " ving read to the Heir or Succeſſor the Claim of Right, and deſir'd them to accept the Government in " the Terms thereof, to require of, and adminiſter to them, by themſelves or their Commiſſioners, the " Coronation Oath, with all convenient Speed, in order to the Exerciſing of the Royal Power. That in " Caſe the Heir or Succeſſor be under Age, (which, as to the Exerciſe of the Government, was declar'd " to be until their reaching the Seventeenth Year compleat) the ſaid Eſtates ſhould order and ſettle a " Regency, until the Heir or Succeſſor ſhould take the Coronation Oath. That upon the Death of the " Queen, or of any other King or Queen, without lawful Heir or Succeſſor, the Eſtates might nominate " and declare the Succeſſor, and ſettle the Succeſſion on the Heirs of the ſaid Succeſſor's Body; the ſaid " Succeſſor, and the Heir of the Succeſſor's Body, being of the ROYAL LINE of Scotland, and of the True " PROTESTANT RELIGION; Provided that the ſame be not the Succeſſor to the Crown of England: Unleſs " in this, or any other enſuing Parliament, during her Majeſty's Reign, there be ſuch Conditions of Go- " vernment ſettled and enacted, as might ſecure the Honour and Sovereignty of the Kingdom of Scotland, " the Freedom, Frequency, and Power of Parliaments, the Religion, Liberty, and Trade of the Scotch " Nation, from Engliſh, or any Foreign Influence; with Power to the ſaid Eſtates, to add ſuch further " Conditions of Government, as they ſhould think neceſſary. And for a further Security to this King- " dom, That all Proteſtant Heretors, and Burghs, ſhould forthwith provide themſelves with Fire-Arms, for all " the fencible Men; and be impower'd and ordain'd to diſcipline and exerciſe the ſaid fencible Men, at leaſt once " in the Month. And that upon the Deceaſe of the Queen, or any of her Heirs or Succeſſors, the Com- " miſſions of all Officers of the Standing Forces, above a Captain, ſhould immediately become void and " null, till further Orders from the Eſtates.

The

A. D. 1704.

The Lords were variouſly affected with this Speech; which, tho' generally approv'd, as to that Part of it that related to the Scotch Affairs; yet was it no leſs unwelcome than unexpected, to ſee the preſent Miniſtry reflected upon, to whoſe wiſe Counſels and Management the Nation ow'd its Proſperity at Home, and, in great Meaſure, its Succeſſes Abroad. And beſides, ſome Peers thought it derogatory to the Duke of Marlborough's Glory, that Prince Eugene ſhould be nam'd before his Grace, in the Mention of an Action, in which that Prince acted but a Second Part. However, this Speech was ſeconded by the Earls of Rocheſter and Nottingham; the firſt of whom did, particularly, lament the ill Conſequences of the Exportation of the Coin, and inſiſted on the Neceſſity of putting a Stop to that Evil. The Lord Treaſurer, who took this to be a ſide-wind Reflection upon himſelf, ſaid, "That tho' it would not be difficult to demonſtrate, "that there never was ſo great a Plenty of Money in England, as at preſent; "yet there was a ſure Way to increaſe that Plenty, and prevent the Exporta- "tion of Coin; and that was, by Clapping up a Peace with France: But then, ad- "ded he, very ſhrewdly, I leave it to the Conſideration of any wiſe Man, whether "we will not thereby be ſhortly in Danger of loſing not only all our Coin, but all "our Land to-boot?

The Lords variouſly affected with this Speech.

The Scotch Buſineſs being the moſt material Part of the Lord Haverſham's Speech, the 29th of November was appointed to conſider of it; upon which Day, the Queen went to the Houſe of Peers incognito, both to hear the Debates about that important Matter, and to allay, by her Majeſtick Preſence, any Heats that might ariſe. This, however, had not all the deſir'd Effect: For the Earl of Nottingham having reflected on the late King William, with relation to the Treaty of Partition, the Lord Somers roſe up, and ſaid, It was unbecoming a Member of that Houſe to ſully the Memory of ſo great a Prince; and he doubted not, but a Man who could reflect on King William, before his Succeſſor, would do the ſame by her preſent Majeſty, when ſhe was gone. As to the Treaty mention'd by the Lord Nottingham, he added, That there was a Noble Lord there preſent, (meaning the Earl of Jerſey) who was the principal Agent and Plenipotentiary in that Treaty; and whoſe Duty, as well as Intereſt, it was, to vindicate both the Memory of his late moſt Gracious Maſter, and his own Conduct. In the mean Time, the Lord Mohun conſulted with ſeveral Peers, whether they ſhould move to ſend the Earl of Nottingham to the Tower? But this being the firſt Time the Queen did the Houſe the Honour to come to hear their Debates, they thought fit to decline that Motion, out of mere Reſpect to her Majeſty. As to the main Buſineſs of the Day, the Earls of Nottingham and Rocheſter urged the ill Conſequences of the Act of Security paſſed in England: And it being anſwer'd, That the ſame was granted to prevent the Danger of a Rebellion in that Kingdom; it was reply'd, That if the Scots had rebell'd, they would have rebell'd without Arms; whereas if they had a mind to rebel now, this Act had legally ſupplied them with Neceſſaries to ſupport their Rebellion. The moſt moderate among the Lords repreſented, that like ſkilful Phyſicians, and wiſe Legiſlators, they ought rather apply preſent Remedies to a known Evil, than to loſe Time in enquiring whether or no it might have been prevented: And after having ſpent ſeveral Days on this Affair, her Majeſty, for the Reaſons above-mention'd, being ſtill preſent, the Grand Committee of the Peers came to theſe Reſolutions, "That the beſt Method to prevent the Inconveniences which might happen by the "late Acts paſſed in Scotland, was by making ſuch Laws here for that Purpoſe; That "*the Queen be enabled by Act of Parliament, on the Part of England, to name "Commiſſioners to treat about an UNION with Scotland, provided that thoſe Powers "be not put in Execution till Commiſſioners ſhould be named on the Part of Scot- "land, by the Parliament there. That †Scotchmen ſhould not enjoy the Privileges "of Engliſhmen, except ſuch as are ſettled in this Kingdom, in Ireland, and the "Plantations, and ſuch as are, and ſhall be in our Land and Sea Service, until an "Union be had, or the Succeſſion ſettled as in England. That ‖ the bringing of "Cattle from Scotland into England be prevented. That ∴ the Lord Admiral, or "Commiſſioners of the Admiralty for the Time being, be required to give Orders "to her Majeſty's Ships, to take ſuch Ships as they ſhall find trading from Scotland "to France, or to the Ports of any of her Majeſty's Enemies; and that Cruiſers be "appointed for that End. And * that the Exportation of Engliſh Wool into Scot- "land be carefully hinder'd." Theſe Reſolutions being approved by the Houſe, the Judges were order'd to reduce them into Bills: One of which, for an entire Union with Scotland was read a third Time, and paſs'd the 20th of December, and ſent to the Commons for their Concurrence. Two Days after †, the Lords preſented an Addreſs to the Queen, importing, "That having taken into Conſideration divers Acts "of Parliament lately paſs'd in Scotland, and duly weigh'd the dangerous and per- "nicious Effects which were likely to follow from thence, they were preparing Bills

My Lord Duke of Marlborough,

" THE happy Succeſs that hath attended her Majeſty's Armies, under your " Grace's Command in Germany, the laſt Campaign, is ſo truly great, ſo " truly glorious in all its Circumſtances, that few Inſtances in the Hiſtory of for- " mer Ages can equal, much leſs excel the Luſtre of it.

" Your Grace has not overthrown young, unſkilful Generals, raw and undiſci- " plin'd Troops; but your Grace has conquer'd the French and Bavarian Armies: " Armies that were fully inſtructed in all the Arts of War; ſelect veteran Troops, " fluſh'd with former Victories, and commanded by Generals of great Experience " and Bravery.

" The glorious Victories your Grace has obtain'd at Schellenberg and Hochſtet, " are very Great, very Illuſtrious in themſelves; but they are greater ſtill in their " Conſequences to her Majeſty, and her Allies.

" The Emperor is thereby reliev'd; the Empire it ſelf freed from a dangerous " Enemy, in the very Bowels of it; the exorbitant Power of France is check'd; " and, I hope, a happy Step made towards reducing of that Monarch within his " due Bounds, and ſecuring the Liberties of Europe.

" The Honour of theſe Glorious Victories, great as they are; (under the imme- " diate Bleſſing of Almighty GOD) is chiefly, if not alone, owing to your Grace's " Conduct and Valour.

The Duke of Marlborough entertain'd by the City, Jan 6.

Two Days before, Dr. Delaune, Vice-Chancellor of Oxford, accompanied by ſeveral of the Heads of both Houſes, the Proctors, and other principal Members of the Univerſity, attended the Queen with a printed Copy of the Speeches and Verſes which were ſpoken in the Theatre on New-Years-Day, upon the following Themes, viz. Strenæ Oxonienſes; Carolus Tertius Hoſpes; Clades Hocſtadienſis; Bavarus Profugus; Res Germana Reſtituta; Marlburius Germanicus; Fœdus Luſitanicum; Calpe Expugnata; Imperium Pelagi Prolatum; Rookius Invidiâ Major; Landava Recepta; Mercurius Pariſienſis; Vota Academiæ. They preſented, at the ſame Time, an Addreſs to her Majeſty, ſetting forth, That the Exerciſe perform'd in their Theatre, was in Honour of the great Succeſs of her Majeſty's Arms the laſt Year in Germany, under the admirable Conduct, and invincible Courage of the Duke of Marlborough; and at Sea, under the moſt brave and faithful Admiral, Sir George Rook: Actions as beneficial as they were glorious; by which the Empire was freed from the Power of France, and Treachery chery of Bavaria, Charles the IIId poſſeſs'd of Gibraltar, a happy Preſage of his ſpeedy Settlement in his Kingdoms; Commerce in the Mediterranean ſecured; and the greateſt Check that was ever given to the ambitious Deſigns of France. Concluding with their Prayers to God, that he would ſtill reward her Majeſty's pious Care and Concern for the Eſtabliſh'd Church, by the Continuance of Victory to her Arms. The Queen return'd a dry Anſwer to this Addreſs, deſiring, indeed, Mr. Vice-Chancellor to let the Univerſity know, how kindly ſhe took this Inſtance of their Zeal: But added, that as they might be aſſured of her Protection, ſo ſhe would not doubt of their Care to encourage thoſe PRINCIPLES, which would promote the Peace and Welfare of her ſelf, and all her Subjects. The Truth is, moſt People at Court, which at this time chiefly conſiſted of the Duke of Marlborough's Relations, Friends, and Retainers, were highly offended with an Addreſs, that ſet the Actions of the Admiral upon the ſame Level with thoſe of the Captain-General. And as the Univerſity of Oxford ſpoke the Senſe of the whole High-Church Party, ſo was it not long before the Court, who now eſpouſed the oppoſite Intereſt, ſhew'd their Reſentment of it.

The Queen's Anſwer to their Addreſs.

On the 11th of January, the Commons took into Conſideration the great Services perform'd by the Duke of Marlborough the laſt Summer; and Sir Chriſtopher Muſgrave, who in a former Seſſion had chiefly oppoſed a Motion for rewarding his Grace, being now made eaſy, and ſilenced by a Promiſe of a Place for his Son, it was unanimouſly reſolv'd to preſent an Addreſs to her Majeſty, expreſſing the great "Senſe this Houſe had of the glorious Victories obtain'd by the Forces of her Ma- "jeſty and her Allies, under the Command of the Duke of Marlborough; and hum- "bly deſiring her Majeſty to conſider of ſome proper Means to perpetuate the Me- "mory of the great Services perform'd by his Grace." The Queen took a few Days to conſider of this Addreſs; and on the 17th, Mr. Chancellor of the Exchequer deliver'd to the Commons a Meſſage from her Majeſty, importing, That ſhe did incline to grant the Intereſt of the Crown in the Honour and Manor of Woodſtock, and Hundred of Wooton, to the Duke of Marlborough and his Heirs, and deſired the Aſſiſtance of this Houſe upon this extraordinary Occaſion: And that the Lieutenancy and Rangerſhip of the Parks, with the Rents and Profits of the Manor and Hundreds, being granted for Two Lives, her Majeſty thought it proper that Incumbrance ſhould be cleared. Hereupon the Commons order'd a Bill to be brought in, to enable the Queen to grant the Honour and Manor of Woodſtock, and Hundred of Wooton, to the Duke of Marlborough and his Heirs; and reſolv'd to addreſs her Majeſty, to advance the Money for clearing the Incumbrances above-mention'd. The beneficent Queen not only comply'd with this Addreſs, but likewiſe order'd the Comptroller of her Works to build in Woodſtock Park, a moſt ſtately Palace or Caſtle, call'd Bleinheim-Houſe, which would, indeed, have proved a worthy Monument of the Duke of Marlborough's Immortal Actions, if the Skill and Genius of the Architect had been equal to the Queen's Liberality. The Day before her Majeſty ſent the Meſſage above-mention'd, ſhe gave the Royal Aſſent to an Act for raiſing Monies by Sale of Annuities; and to an Act for continuing the Duties on Malt.

By this Time, Sir George Rooke had been laid aſide, and it was publickly declared *, That the Lord High-Admiral had appointed Sir Cloudeſly Shovel, Admiral of the White Squadron, to be Rear-Admiral of England, and † Admiral and Commander in Chief of her Majeſty's Fleet. Sir John Leake, who had diſtinguiſhed himſelf in the late Sea-Fight, and had been very ſucceſsful in the ſeaſonable Relief of Gibraltar, was, at the ſame time, appointed to be Vice-Admiral of the White Squadron; Sir George Byng, Vice-Admiral of the Blue; Sir Thomas Dilks, Rear-Admiral of the Red; William Whetſtone, Eſq; Rear-Admiral of the White; || Sir John Jennings, Rear-Admiral of the Blue, in the room of Sir James Wiſhart, who laid down his Commiſſion; Thomas Jennings, Eſq; to be one of the principal Officers and Commiſſioners of Her Majeſty's Navy; and Captain Thomas Harlow, to be a Commiſſioner of the Victualling in his room. Some time before, Chriſtopher Muſgrave, Eſq; was, by the Queen's Command, ſworn one of the Clerks of her Majeſty's Privy-Council in Ordinary, in the room of Sir John Nicholas, Kt. of the Bath, lately deceas'd.

On the 14th of February, the Baron de Spanheim, Ambaſſador Extraordinary from the King of Pruſſia, had a publick Audience of her Majeſty, and his Royal Highneſs Prince George, to notify the Death of her late Majeſty the Queen of Pruſſia; his Excellency, and the Gentlemen of his Retinue, being in long Mourning-Cloaks, and attended by a great Number of Servants, all in deep Mourning. Four Days after, the Court left the Mourning they were in for the Dutcheſs Dowager of Holſtein, Siſter to Prince George of Denmark, (who died the 30th of October, 1704.) and went into it again for the Queen of Pruſſia, who departed this Life the laſt Day of January, (N. Swelling in her Throat, leaving that Court, and that of Berlin, under an unſpeakable Grief. She was the only Daughter of the late Elector of Hanover by the Princeſs Sophia, and Great Grand-Daughter to King James I. born the 20th of October, 1668. N. S. and married to the late King of Pruſſia in 1684. She left no other Iſſue than the Prince Royal Frederick William, who was in Holland, ready to embark for England, when that afflicting News oblig'd him to return to Berlin. She was a Princeſs equally reſpected, admir'd and belov'd by all, who either had the Honour to approach her, or to hear her Character from thoſe that had. She was the firſt of thoſe of her Rank in Beauty, and yielded to none in the Juſtneſs of Thought, the Delicacy of Expreſſion, or the Graces of Converſation. Her Perſon was of the middle Size; all her Features extremely regular; her Complexion fair and lively; her Eyes Blue, and her Hair Coal-black: Her Reading was infinite, and ſhe was converſant in all manner of Subjects: Nor was ſhe more admired for her inimitable Wit, than for her exact Knowledge of the moſt abſtruſe Parts of Philoſophy. No body ever better underſtood the Art of giving an improving Reliſh to all Entertainments: But her favourite Diverſion was Muſick, in which ſhe excell'd both in the Performance on the Harpſichord, and the Compoſition. She lov'd to ſee Strangers, and to inform her ſelf of all that's worthy or remarkable in their ſeveral Countries: And ſhe had ſo juſt an Idea of Government, that in all Germany ſhe was ſtiled the Republican Queen. The Loſs of a Princeſs of ſo uncommon Merit, could not but be generally lamented in all Proteſtant Countries.

Her Character.

Some Days before the Death of this Excellent Queen was notify'd, the Houſe of Commons * took into Conſideration the Treaty lately concluded by the Duke of Marlborough, and unanimouſly reſolv'd, "That an humble Addreſs be preſented to "her Majeſty, returning the Thanks of this Houſe to her Majeſty, for concluding "the late Treaty with the King of Pruſſia, which was ſo ſeaſonable a Support to "the Duke of Savoy, and ſo great an Advantage to the common Cauſe: And alſo to "aſſure her Majeſty, That her faithful Commons would effectually enable her Ma-"jeſty to make good the ſaid Treaty with the King of Pruſſia, who, upon ſo many "Occaſions, had ſignaliz'd his Zeal for the Proteſtant Religion, and Liberty of "Europe." The next † Day Mr. Secretary Hedges acquainted the Houſe, That her Majeſty return'd them many Thanks for the Aſſurances they gave her in their Addreſs; and was very well pleaſed to find they had ſo juſt a Senſe of the King of Pruſſia's Zeal for the Proteſtant Religion, and the Liberty of Europe. The 26th of the ſame Month, Mr. Speaker reported, That the Houſe had attended her Majeſty with their Addreſs, That her Majeſty would be pleaſed to uſe her Intereſt with her Allies, that they might the next Year furniſh their ſeveral compleat Quotas, both by Sea and Land, according to their reſpective Treaties; and to continue her Endeavours for an Accommodation between the Emperor and his Subjects now in Arms in Hungary, in order to the better and more effectual carrying on the preſent moſt neceſſary War: And that her Majeſty was pleaſed to give Anſwer, That ſhe would continue to uſe her beſt Endeavours to obtain a Compliance from the Allies, with what was deſired in the Commons Addreſs: And as to the Accommodation with the Malecontents in Hungary, That ſhe had made Application to the Emperor ſeveral times upon that Point, and ſhould continue to preſs him in it, with all the Earneſtneſs imaginable.

Court of Queen's-Bench. This being a Caſe of the higheſt Conſequence, the Judges put off the Hearing of it till the laſt Day of the Term; that they might have the more Time to look into Precedents, and that thereby their Opinions might carry the greater Weight. Mr. Page, Mr. Montague, Mr. Lechmere, and Mr. Denton, who were Council for the Priſoners, ſeverally rais'd Objections to their Commitment; and inſiſted, That they ought to be bail'd, and releas'd. On this Occaſion, Mr. Nicholas Lechmere diſtinguiſh'd himſelf, and diſcover'd thoſe great Parts and Abilities, of which he was Maſter: The End of his Pleading, was as follows. "To con- "clude, in ſpeaking for the Priſoners, I'm arguing for the Sovereignty of the "Law; for, in England, there is no Power above the Law; none, but the Power "that makes it: I mean, the Power of the Queen, Lords and Commons. He "that tranſgreſſes the Law, criminally forfeits his Freedom: It becomes a Pledge "to the Publick, till the Law is ſatisfy'd: But he that obeys the Law, he that "purſues, and acts conformably to the Law, is intitled to its Protection, be the "Conſequence what it will. And therefore, ſo long as Magna Charta continues, "and this does remain a Court; and eſpecially, ſo long as your Lordſhip preſides "here; whoever feels the Attempts of an irregular Power on any Part of his Pro- "perty, and ſeeks Relief here, is ſure to find it: And no Regard to the Greatneſs "of any Body, can cauſe any Variation from the Steadineſs of your Lordſhip's "Juſtice. For theſe Reaſons, I pray they may be diſcharg'd." The youngeſt Judge, as alſo Juſtice Powis and Judge Powel, declar'd, That the Priſoners ought to be remanded; but the Lord Chief-Juſtice Holt deliver'd his Opinion, That they ought to be diſcharg'd. "I am ſenſible, ſaid he, of the great Diſadvantage I lye under, becauſe Eleven of "the Judges are againſt my Opinion. The Caſe being of Moment and Concern, I "did deſire to confer with them, before I deliver'd my Thoughts; and 'tis a Se- "cond Diſadvantage, that I have ſo great an Eſteem for their Sentiments, that I "would willingly reſign my Opinion to theirs: But then, I lye under another, "which is, to encounter an Opinion and Judgment of the Houſe of Lords. I muſt "confeſs, the Commons of England are intruſted with, and are very zealous for our "Liberties; and therefore I would think it a Misfortune to lye under their Diſplea- "ſure: Yet there is another Thing which lies upon me, which, at all Events, I am "to take care of; and that is, a good Conſcience. I am upon my Oath, to judge "impartially and juſtly: I do not think this ſuch an Impriſonment, that the Free- "men and Subjects of England are to be bound by; and it will affect all the King- "dom, if, by any Declaration, or Prohibition made by the Houſe of Commons, "they are reſtrain'd from bringing a lawful Action. Neither of the Houſes of Par- "liament, ſeparately or jointly, have any Power to diſpoſe of the Liberty or Pro- "perty of the Subject; It muſt be, with the QUEEN added: This is the Conſtitu- "tion of the Engliſh Government. It is ſaid in the Return, that the Priſoners "are guilty of a Breach, for bringing an Action: I muſt therefore declare my "Opinion, That Commencing a Suit, is no Breach of Priviledge; tho' it be againſt a "Member himſelf; ſo he be not affected in his Perſon, or Lands. The Second Crime "mention'd in the Commitment and Return, is, Proſecuting: What is meant there- "by, ſeems not to be ſo clear; becauſe, Proſecuting may be taken ſeveral ways; "as, entring of a Continuance, which cannot be ſaid to be any Breach of Privi- "ledge; the Perſon of the Member, or his Eſtate, not being diſturb'd thereby. In- "deed, if you diſtrain the Perſon of a Member, or do any Act to reſtrain his "Liberty, then it is a Breach, and puniſhable by the Houſe. Again, the Houſe "of Commons ſhould have ſhewn, that they have a Priviledge: For if the High "Conſtable of England ſhould not ſhew his Authority, we ſhould not take more "Notice of him, than of the Conſtable of St. Martin's. The Law of the Land "muſt take Place. A Man may legally Commence, and Proſecute an Action againſt "a Man that is not privileg'd, tho' vexatious or wrong; as appears by 2 Ric. III. 9. "where all the Judges were of Opinion, That there was no Puniſhment for bring- "ing an Action, tho' wrong. If an Action is ſued and proſecuted againſt a Peer; "no Action de Scandalis Magnatum will lye, if there was any probable Cauſe of "Action. I do not think that any Inſtance can be ſhewn, that ever Priviledge did "extend ſo far, as to exclude or debar any Man from bringing any Action, but "eſpecially where there is a juſt Cauſe. This Caſe has undergone a great and high "Judgment above, upon the Queen's Writ of Error. My Brother Powis ſays, that "he does not know, that this is the ſame Caſe with that of Aſhby and White: But "if he will look upon the Return, he will be ſoon ſatisfy'd that it is. Another "Part of the Return ſays, That the Proſecution was contrary to the Declaration, and in "Breach, &c. I do not well know, what is meant by a Proſecution contrary to a De- "claration: But ſuppoſe there was a Declaration; I much queſtion, if that Decla- "ration will make that a Breach of Privilege, which was not ſo before. There is "no

" no Precedent for it ; and if any Man can bring ſuch a Precedent, it will go " a great way with me. Priviledge is not unlimited, but is eſtabliſh'd by the " Rules of Law. If a Member break the Peace, he muſt find Sureties ; or, if he " commit High-Treaſon, or Felony, ſitting the Houſe, he muſt anſwer. If the De- " claration does claim a Priviledge, and ſays it is ſo ; yet, if it was not ſo before, " the People of England are not eſtopp'd to ſay, it is not ſo ; ſo neither the one " Houſe, nor the other, can enlarge their Privileges. They concern the Liberties " of the People in a high Degree ; and nothing but an Act of Parliament can make " a Man's Perſon ſubject to Impriſonment, but where originally he was ſo ſubject. " The Reaſon why Judges do not give their Opinions to the Lords about their Pri- " viledges, is, becauſe it is Lex Parliamenti ; and the Lords themſelves being always " there, are preſum'd to know their Priviledges beſt themſelves : But whenever the " Queſtion is about Priviledge in Weſtminſter-Hall, we muſt judge of it according as " it appears to us, and according to the Law of the Land. Suppoſe, in this Caſe, " the Houſe of Commons had not interpos'd ; the Plaintiffs had gone on, and the " Defendants had pleaded the whole Matter of the Priviledge eſpecially, and Plain- " tiffs had demurr'd ; We then ſhould have judg'd of it, becauſe it would have " been a Plea to the Juriſdiction of the Court. All appears upon Record now " before the Court ; and therefore we are to judge of it, as much as if it had " been pleaded. The Parliament-Law of Priviledge, is Lex Terræ, as much as any " Law us'd in Weſtminſter-Hall ; and my Lord Clarendon gives us an Account of Pri- " viledge, in the Firſt Volume of his Hiſtory, Pag. 310, 311, 312. If it was Pri- " viledge of the Houſe before ; then how comes it, that Aſhby was not committed, " who was the Ringleader, but is ſtill at Liberty ? Another Obſervation upon " this Return, is, That they do not ſay for a Breach, but in Breach : Neither " do I ſee, how bringing an Action at Law in one Court, is in Contempt of " another Court. This Court here can hold Plea in any Action whatſoever : The " Houſe above, cannot award Proceſs there ; and then I cannot ſee, how a Man " ſuing here, can be guilty thereby of a Breach of the Priviledges of that Court. Theſe " Words are terrible, and would affrighten Men when ſaid, In Contempt of the " Priviledges of the Houſe of Commons ; becauſe every Man is bound to maintain " them in their Lawful Priviledges. No doubt but they can commit in any Caſe " of Priviledge, or for a Contempt committed in their Court : But when the Fact is " mention'd, and the Cauſe is a juſt Cauſe of Action at Law ; no doubt, but the " Proceeding in ſuch Action is juſt, and no Contempt ; ſuch an Action being ground- " ed on the Common-Law. As to my Lord Shaftſbury's Caſe, it was for Facts be- " ing done in the Houſe ; and the Houſe may at any time commit a Man for a " Contempt in the Face of the Houſe : Whereas the Priſoners are committed, not " for a Breach of Priviledge, or Contempt ; but becauſe they have brought their Acti- " ons, which are legal, and ſo adjudg'd by the Lords in the Writ of Error. To " conclude ; The Caſe of the Lord Paxbury is conſiderable with me : He petition'd " the Houſe of Lords to ſit, and alſo to have the King's Leave. The Lords de- " termin'd, he was not a Lord : Yet when he was brought upon an Indictment, by " the Name of Charles Knowles, Eſq; he here pleaded, and inſiſted, that he was a " Peer ; which Plea was allow'd, and he was not try'd.

Ruſhworth's Collections, Vol. 438, 725, 730.

The Priſoners remanded to Newgate.

Tho' the Lord Chief-Juſtice Holt's Judgment was clear, ſolid and convincing, yet the other Three Judges being of a contrary Opinion, the Majority prevail'd ; and ſo the Priſoners were remanded to Newgate.

This Affair making a great Noiſe, and the heroical Reſolution of the Lord Chief-Juſtice being no leſs generally applauded, than his Integrity, Penetration and Learning univerſally acknowledg'd, the Commons were highly offended at the bringing of thoſe Writs of Habeas Corpus. But what incens'd them yet more, was the Behaviour of John Paty and John Oviat, Two of the Priſoners, who thinking themſelves wrong'd in their being remanded to Newgate, humbly petition'd the Queen for a Writ of Error, in order to bring the Judgment of the Court of Queen's-Bench before her Majeſty in Parliament. The Commons were no ſooner inform'd of theſe Petitions, but they reſolv'd to addreſs her Majeſty, to lay before her the undoubted Right and Priviledge of the Commons of England in Parliament aſſembled, to commit for Breach of Priviledge ; and that the Commitments of this Houſe are not examinable in any other Court whatſoever : And that no ſuch Writ of Error was ever brought, nor doth any Writ of Error lie in this Caſe : And that as this Houſe had expreſs'd their Duty to her Majeſty, in giving Diſpatch to all the Supplies, ſo they had an entire Confidence in her Majeſty's Goodneſs and Juſtice, that ſhe would not give Leave for the bringing any Writ of Error in this Caſe ; which would tend to the overthrowing the undoubted Rights and Priviledges of the Commons of England. They alſo reſolv'd, That whoever had abetted, promoted, countenanc'd or aſſiſted, the Proſecution of the ſeveral Writs of Habeas Corpus,

Feb. 24. Votes of the Commons, relating to that Affair.

Corpus, brought for the Priſoners committed by this Houſe, and ſince their being remanded, had endeavoured the procuring Writs of Error, were guilty of conſpiring to make a Difference between the Lords and Commons in Parliament aſſembled, were Diſturbers of the Peace of the Kingdom, and had endeavour'd, as far as in them lay, to overthrow the Rights and Privileges of the Commons of England. After which, a Committee was appointed to examine what Perſons had been concerned in ſolliciting, proſecuting, or pleading upon the Writs of Habeas Corpus, or Writs of Error, on the behalf of the Perſons committed to Newgate, for Breach of the Privilege of that Houſe; or what other Perſons had promoted or abetted the ſame.

An Addreſs having been preſented to the Queen, purſuant to the firſt of theſe Reſolutions, her Majeſty was pleaſed to * return an Anſwer, importing, That ſhe was much troubled to find the Houſe of Commons of Opinion, That her granting the Writs of Error, mention'd in their Addreſs, was againſt their Privileges, of which her Majeſty would always be as tender, as of her own Prerogative: And therefore they might depend her Majeſty would not do any Thing to give them any juſt Occaſion of Complaint: But this Matter, relating to the Courſe of judicial Proceedings, being of the higheſt Importance, her Majeſty thought it neceſſary to weigh and conſider very carefully what might be proper for her to do in a Thing of ſo great Concern. The ſame Day her Majeſty's Anſwer was reported by Mr. Secretary Hedges, the Commons proceeded to carry their Reſentments to greater Extremities, and having continued ſitting till the Evening, they voted, "That Mr. Francis Page, Mr. James Montague, Mr. Nicholas Lechmere, and "Mr. Alexander Denton, in Pleading upon the Return of the Habeas Corpus, on be- "half of the Five Priſoners committed by this Houſe, were guilty of a Breach of "Privilege; ordered them to be taken into Cuſtody of their Serjeant at Arms; And, tho' they had reſolv'd before to take her Majeſty's Anſwer into Conſideration, yet being apprehenſive leſt her Majeſty ſhould grant the Writs of Error, whereby the Five Ayleſbury Men might be diſcharg'd from their Impriſonment, they order'd them to be remov'd from Newgate, and taken into the Cuſtody of their Serjeant at Arms; which Order was executed at Midnight, with ſuch Circumſtances of Severity and Terror, as have ſeldom been exerciſed towards the greateſt Offenders.

The Aylesbury Men remov'd from Newgate.

The Lords were ſo ſollicitous to avoid any Thing that might interrupt the neceſſary and early Proviſion for the War, that tho' they were ſenſible, that the Impriſonment of theſe Men was a manifeſt Attempt to elude the Judicature of Parliament, and of pernicious Example to the Liberty and Property of the Subject; yet they forbore to take Notice of it, till they were, in a manner, enforced by Petitions from the Priſoners, preſented the 24th of February, and by the unjuſtifiable Proceedings of the Houſe of Commons the ſame Day. But then the Lords found it abſolutely neceſſary to enter into a Conſideration of the whole Matter, as it appeared to them; and upon the 27th of February, they came to the following Reſolutions, viz. 1. That neither Houſe of Parliament has any Power, by any Vote or Declaration, to create to themſelves any new Privilege, that is not warranted by the known Laws and Cuſtoms of Parliament. 2. That every Freeman of England, who apprehends himſelf to be injured, has a Right to ſeek Redreſs by Action at Law; and that the commencing and proſecuting an Action at Common-Law, againſt any Perſon (not entituled to Privilege of Parliament) is no Breach of the Privilege of Parliament. 3. That the Houſe of Commons, in committing to Newgate, Daniel Horne, Henry Baſs, John Paton, Jun. John Paty, and John Oviat, for commencing and proſecuting an Action at the Common-Law againſt the Conſtables of Ayleſbury, for not allowing their Votes in Election of Members to ſerve in Parliament, upon Pretence that their ſo doing was contrary to a Declaration, a Contempt of the Juriſdiction, and a Breach of Privilege of that Houſe, have aſſumed to themſelves alone a Legiſlative Authority, by pretending to attribute the Force of a Law to their Declaration; have claimed a Juriſdiction not warranted by the Conſtitution, and have aſſumed a new Privilege, to which they can ſhew no Title by the Laws and Cuſtoms of Parliament; and have thereby, as far as in them lies, ſubjected the Rights of Engliſhmen, and the Freedom of their Perſons, to the Arbitrary Votes of the Houſe of Commons. 4. That every Engliſhman, who is impriſoned by any Authority whatſoever, has an undoubted Right, by his Agents or Friends, to apply for, and obtain a Writ of Habeas Corpus, in order to procure his Liberty, by due Courſe of Law. 5. That for the Houſe of Commons to cenſure or puniſh any Perſon, for aſſiſting a Priſoner to procure a Writ of Habeas Corpus, or by Vote or otherwiſe, to deter Men from ſolliciting, proſecuting, or pleading upon ſuch Writ of Habeas Corpus in behalf of ſuch Priſoner, is an Attempt of dangerous Conſequence, a Breach of the many good Statutes provided for the Liberty of the Subject, and of pernicious Example, by denying the neceſſary Aſſiſtance to the Priſoner, upon a Commitment of the Houſe of Commons, which has ever been allow'd upon all Commitments by any Authority whatſoever. And, 6. The Lords Reſolutions in Oppoſition to the Proceedings of the Commons.

A. D. 1704.

Right; and ought not to be denied to the Subject when duly applied for; (tho' at the Request of either Houſe of Parliament) the Denial thereof being an Obſtruction of Juſtice, contrary to Magna Charta. Theſe Reſolutions being deliver'd to the Commons at a Conference the 28th of February, they took Time to conſider of them till the 7th of March; upon which Day, at their Deſire, a ſecond Conference was held. What was delivered by the Commons at that Conference, conſiſted chiefly of injurious Invectives and Expoſtulations againſt the Houſe of Lords, about their Proceedings in this Matter, and tedious Recitals of Precedents, in no Sort applicable to the preſent Subject of Debate: But tho' it ſeem'd apparent, that the Deſign of the Commons was either to provoke the Lords to ſuch a Degree, as might neceſſitate them to break off all manner of Correſpondence, or by engaging them in new Matters, to draw Things to ſuch a Length, as might prevent the bringing thoſe Debates to any Iſſue, during this Seſſion; yet the Lords immediately deſired a Free Conference, which was had with the Commons the 9th of March. That the ſame ended without Succeſs, is not to be wonder'd, conſidering the Temper with which the Commons came to it; and which appears from the Votes they made the Day * before, after they had agreed to the Free Conference. For upon Information that their Serjeant at Arms had been ſerv'd with Two Writs of Habeas Corpus, returnable before the Lord Keeper, in behalf of Mr. Montague, and Mr. Denton, Two of the Gentlemen who had been of Councel with the Five Priſoners, they came to theſe Reſolutions, "That "no Commoner of England, committed by the Houſe of Commons for Breach of "Privilege, or Contempt of that Houſe, ought to be, by any Writ of Habeas Corpus, made to appear in any other Place, or before any other Judicature, during "that Seſſion of Parliament, wherein ſuch Perſon was ſo committed: That the "Serjeant at Arms attending the Houſe do make no Return, or yield any Obedience to the ſaid Writs of Habeas Corpus; and for ſuch his Refuſal, that he have "the Protection of the Houſe of Commons: And that the Lord-Keeper be acquainted with the ſaid Reſolutions, to the end that the ſaid Writs of Habeas Corpus might "be ſuperſeded, as contrary to Law, and the Privilege of the Houſe." Five Days † after, the Commons order'd the Report of the Free Conference, which was made by Mr. Bromley to be entred upon the Journals: Reſolved, That the Proceedings of the Houſe, in Relation to the Ayleſbury Men, committed by the Houſe for Breach of Privilege, and the other Proceedings of that Houſe in that Matter, were in Maintenance of the ancient and undoubted Rights and Privileges of the Commons of England; And order'd all the Proceedings in relation to the Ayleſbury Men, the Report of the Lords Journal, and the Report of the Conferences, and of the Free Conference, to be printed. The next ‖ Day, the Lords attended the Queen with an humble Repreſentation and Addreſs, wherein having recited the Matter of Fact relating to this Affair, they laid before her Majeſty, "That the Proceedings of the Houſe of Commons againſt the Ayleſbury Men, were wholly new and unprecedented; That it is the Birth-Right of every Engliſhman, who apprehends himſelf to be injured, to ſeek for Redreſs in her Majeſty's Courts of Juſtice; That if there be any Power can controul this Right, and can preſcribe when he ſhall, and when he ſhall not be allowed the Benefit of the Laws, he ceaſes to be a Freeman, and his Liberty and Property are precarious. That the Crown lays claim to no ſuch Power; and their Lordſhips were ſure the Law has truſted no ſuch Authority with any Subjects whatſoever. They urged, That in former Times, the Opinion of the Houſe of Commons was very different from what it was at preſent; of which their Lordſhips gave ſeveral Inſtances; and concluded with an humble Requeſt, That no Importunity of the Houſe of Commons, nor any other Conſideration whatſoever, might prevail with her Majeſty, to ſuffer a Stop to be put to the known Courſe of Juſtice, but that ſhe would be pleaſed to give effectual Orders for the immediate iſſuing of the Writs of Error. The Queen was pleaſed to anſwer, "That ſhe ſhould have granted the Writs of Error deſired in this "Addreſs; but finding an abſolute Neceſſity of putting an immediate End to this "Seſſion, ſhe was ſenſible there could have been no further Proceedings upon that "Matter:" Which being reported to the Houſe of Lords, their Lordſhips order'd, That the humble Thanks of their Houſe be preſented to her Majeſty for her moſt gracious Anſwer, in which ſhe had expreſs'd ſo great a Regard to the Judgment of their Houſe, ſo much Compaſſion to the Petitioners, and ſuch Tenderneſs to the Rights of the Subject. Thus ended the famous Diſpute, between the Two Houſes, about the Ayleſbury Men, which afforded juſt Matter of Wonder, to ſee the Lords aſſert, and, on the contrary, the Commons give up the Rights and Liberties of the People, of which they are the natural Guardians. The Truth is, the Leaders of the High-Church-Party were ſo cunning as to engage the Majority of the Houſe of Commons warmly to eſpouſe a Controverſy, which they had ſtarted up, only to ſhew their Reſentment for the Loſs of the Occaſional Conformity Bill. The ſame Day that the Lords preſented their Repreſentation, the Queen came to their Houſe with the uſual State; and the Commons mons being ſent for up, and attending, her Majeſty, gave the Royal Aſſent to Thirteen Publick Acts, particularly to an Act for the effectual ſecuring the Kingdom of England from the apparent Dangers that may ariſe from ſeveral Acts lately paſs'd in the Parliament of Scotland; an Act for enabling her Majeſty to grant the Manour of Woodſtock, &c. to the Duke of Marlborough, and his Heirs; and to ſeveral private Bills: After which her Majeſty made the following Speech to both Houſes:

My LORDS and GENTLEMEN,

I Cannot put an End to this Seſſion, without doing you the Juſtice to acknowledge, you have made good the Aſſurances you gave me at the beginning of it, by the great Readineſs you have ſhewn in the Diſpatch of the Publick Buſineſs: And I make no doubt, but this Diſpatch will prove a real Advantage to us, and a great Diſcouragement to our Enemies. The Queen's Speech to both Houſes.

Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons,

I return you my hearty Thanks, in Particular, for the great Supplies, with which you have enabled me to carry on this neceſſary War: I aſſure you, they ſhall be carefully applied to the Uſes for which they have been given; and I perſuade my ſelf, I ſhall always have the chearful Aſſiſtance of my dutiful and loving Subjects in the Proſecution of the preſent War; till our Enemies are obliged to ſuch a Peace, as ſhall be a laſting Advantage and Security to us and our Allies.

My LORDS and GENTLEMEN,

We have, by the bleſſing of God, a fair Proſpect of this great and deſirable End, if we do not diſappoint it, by our own unreaſonable Humour and Animoſity; the fatal Effects of which we have ſo narrowly eſcaped in this Seſſion, that it ought to be a ſufficient Warning againſt any dangerous Experiments for the future.

I conclude, therefore, with exhorting you all to Peace and Union, which are always commendable, but more particularly neceſſary at this Time, when the whole Kingdom being ſhortly to proceed to new Elections, it ought to be the Care of every Body, eſpecially ſuch as are in Publick Stations; to carry themſelves with the greateſt Prudence and Moderation: Nothing will contribute more to our Reputation Abroad, and our Security at Home.

And then the Lord-Keeper, by her Majeſty's Command, prorogued the Parliament to Thurſday, the 1ſt of May next. The Parliament prorogued.

Before we leave this Seſſion of Parliament, we muſt take Notice of ſome remarkable Paſſages, which have been purpoſely omitted before, that the Readers might have an uninterrupted View of more material Tranſactions. The Tory Party, who prevail'd in the Houſe of Commons, both to make themſelves Popular, by a Self-denying Act, and to mortify ſome eminent Members, who had left them, and were now in Places of Profit and Truſt, brought * in a Bill for excluding out of the Houſe of Commons, all Perſons in any Offices or Employments, erected ſince the 6th Day of February, 1684, or to be erected. This Bill had a quick and eaſy Paſſage through the Houſe of Commons, but being † ſent up to the Houſe of Lords, the latter made ſeveral Amendments to it, which were ‖ diſagreed to by the Commons, and ſo the Bill was loſt. There was another Bill ſet ∴ on Foot in the Houſe of Commons, To prevent Perſons, who are entitled by their Offices to receive any Benefit by Publick annual Taxes to be granted, from being Members in Parliament, while they are in ſuch Offices: Which being levell'd againſt many worthy Members, who ſerv'd the Nation, both by Sea and Land, occaſion'd no ſmall Murmurings. To ſtifle theſe, the Commons empowered the  Committee to receive a Clauſe, to except out of that Bill, all Flag-Officers in the Navy, and Captains of Ships, all General Officers in the Army, and all Colonels in the Land-Forces, and in the Marines; but notwithſtanding this Modification, the Bill being come to †† a Third Reading, it was reſolv'd that it ſhould not paſs.

Among the many Ways and Expedients, by which the Tory Party of the Houſe of Commons, endeavour'd to ſecure their Intereſt againſt a new Election, they thought it neceſſary to procure an Act, whereby the Commiſſions of the Peace ſhould be lodg'd in the Hands of Men of Eſtates: And thereupon a Bill was brought in, and ‖ paſs'd, for Qualification of Juſtices of the Peace; but the ſame being ſent up to the Lords, their Lordſhips did not think fit to give it their Concurrence. As alſo that for Qualification of Juſtices of the Peace.

acting in the Houſe, to the Freeholders of the ſaid County, the ſaid Tredbalds was order'd to be taken into the Cuſtody of the Serjeant at Arms; and Reſolv'd, "That to aſperſe any Member of the Houſe of Commons, with being in the Intereſt "of the pretended Prince of Wales, or the French Government, for, or in reſpect of "his Behaviour and Proceedings in the Houſe of Commons, is Villainous and Seditious, deſtructive of the Liberties of Parliament, and the Freedom of Elections; "and tends to create a Miſunderſtanding between her Majeſty and her Subjects.

Vote againſt aſperſing the Members of the Houſe of Commons as Jacobites.

Towards the end of the Seſſion, the Lords paſs'd a Bill, For the further preventing the Growth of Popery; which being ſent down * to the Commons, it was generally wiſh'd by the Well-affected, that ſo wholeſome an Act might meet with no Obſtruction. But the Commons made ſuch Amendments (a) to it, as came little ſhort of the Bill for preventing Occaſional Conformity; which, being like to occaſion new Diſputes between both Houſes, thoſe at the Helm reſolv'd to prevent the ſame. Hereupon, when the Queſtion was putting, that the ſaid Bill be read the Third Time, Mr. Aſton, Deputy Gentleman Uſher of the Black-Rod, ſummon'd † the Commons to attend the Queen in the Houſe of Lords, and ſo her Majeſty put an End to the Seſſion.

Some Time ‖ before, the Lords preſented an Addreſs to the Queen, concerning the Miſmanagements of the Navy; ſetting forth in Particular, That, for the Three laſt Years, The Charge of the Navy had exceeded what was deſign'd by the Parliament, the Sum of Three Hundred Sixty Six Thouſand Thirty Two Pounds, Seventeen Shillings and Two Pence. That in the Year 1704, One Thouſand Five Hundred Sixty Six Seamen were wanting, to make up the Number of Thirty Five Thouſand, who, with the Five Thouſand Marines, ought to have been employ'd at Sea, to make up the Number of Forty Thouſand Men, provided for by Parliament. That there were, the laſt Year, Ten Flags in Sea-Pay, viz. Three Admirals, Three Vice-Admirals, and Four Rear-Admirals, and that Three of theſe were not in their Poſts. That Mr. Churchill, Admiral of the Blue, had not been at Sea, in any Year of this War. That Mr. Graydon, Vice-Admiral of the Red, had been a-Shore all this laſt Year: And that Sir James Wiſhart, (though a Rear-Admiral) had been, the laſt Year, Captain to the Admiral of the Fleet. That there were Two Vice-Admirals of the Red, and Two Rear-Admirals of the Blue, but no Vice-Admiral of the White; which, to their Lordſhips, ſeem'd to have been very irregular, and to have been done in Favour of Mr. Graydon, to continue him in the Service, although this Houſe had voted, that his Behaviour, in letting the Four French Ships eſcape, was a Prejudice to her Majeſty's Service, and a great Diſhonour to the Nation; and that his Proceedings in Jamaica, had been a great Diſcouragement to the Inhabitants of that Iſland, and prejudicial to her Majeſty's Service; and hereupon the Lords did, on the 29th of March laſt, make an humble Addreſs to her Majeſty, That the ſaid Graydon might not be employ'd any more in her Service; but having been acquainted, ſince the Report made to them from their Committee, That the ſaid Mr. Graydon was diſcharg'd, They beſought her Majeſty, That they might be no more employ'd in her Majeſty's Service. After this, their Lordſhips took Notice of the vaſt Increaſe of Penſions, as appear'd by the Navy-Books; particularly of a Penſion of Three Hundred and Nineteen Pounds, to Sir John Munden, though he had not done his Duty in the Expedition to Corunna; whereas the Penſion to Admiral Nevil's Widow, had not been paid for Two Years paſt; and ſome Officers of the Fleet had been laid aſide, without any Penſion or Conſideration, though no Miſbehaviour had been laid to their Charge. They further obſerv'd, That in the ordinary Eſtimate of the Navy, there was put down Seven Thouſand Pounds for the Prince's Council; though they were only Five in Number in 1702; Five in 1703; and Six in the Year 1704: And it did not appear that more than One Thouſand Pounds apiece had been paid to them. And that Mr. Churchill's Appointments from the Navy were, as Prince's Council, One Thouſand Pounds; for Penſion Five Thouſand Pounds; as Admiral of the Blue, One Thouſand Two Hundred Seventy Seven Pounds, Ten Shillings; and for Table-Money, (though not at Sea) Three Hundred Sixty Five Pounds; in the whole, Three Thouſand One Hundred Forty Two Pounds, Ten Shillings. They likewiſe repreſented, That there was not a ſufficient Number of proper Ships for Cruizers and Convoys. And concluded with reſting aſſured, That her Majeſty would conſider of the fitteſt Methods, and give the moſt effectual Orders for reſtoring and eſtabliſhing the Diſcipline of the Navy, the Encouragement of Seamen, the guarding of the Coaſts, and the Protection of Trade. This Addreſs being very ungrateful to the Queen, as reflecting on the Supineneſs of her Royal Conſort, her Majeſty made a dry Anſwer to it; That it contain'd many Obſervations, which ſhe would conſider particularly, and give ſuch Directions upon them, as might be moſt for the Advantage of the publick Service. From this Addreſs we may obſerve, that, by this time, both Whigs and Tories began to be jealous of the great Power that was lodg'd in one Family: For as the Duke of Marlborough had the abſolute Command of the ARMY; ſo his Brother, Admiral Churchill, had the chief Management of the NAVY, under an indolent High-Admiral; all the COURT FAVOURS were diſpenſed by his Dutcheſs; and the TREASURY in the Hands of the Father to his Son-in-Law: So that the Diſpoſal of all Offices, Civil and Military, and of the Wealth of the Kingdom, ſeem'd to depend on one ſingle Perſon.

(a) They inſerted the following Clauſe in the ſaid Bill, viz. Provided always, That all Perſons, who by Virtue of this Act, ſhall be obliged to take the Oaths of Allegiance and Supremacy, and ſubſcribe the Declaration, ſhall, at the ſame Time, declare himſelf to be a Member of the Church of England, as now by Law eſtabliſh'd; ſuch Declaration to be entred on the ſame Roll, where the ſaid Oaths and Declarations, ſo to be taken and ſubſcribed, are to be entred. And in Caſe any ſuch Perſons ſhall, after their taking ſuch Oaths, and making ſuch Declarations, as aforeſaid, knowingly or wilfully reſort to, or be preſent at any Conventicle, Aſſembly, or Meeting, under Colour or Pretence of any Exerciſe of Religion, in other Manner, than according to the Liturgy and Practice of the Church of England, in any Place within this Kingdom, ſhall forfeit the Sum of one Hundred Pounds, for every Time he ſhall be preſent at ſuch Aſſembly, Conventicle or Meeting.

The Queen's Anſwer.

Growing Jealouſy of the Duke of Marlborough's Power.

But notwithſtanding theſe Advantages, the prime Miniſter being conſcious of the ill Step he had made, in ſuffering the Act of Security to be paſs'd in Scotland; and dreading the Menaces (a) of his Enemies, who had a great Sway in the Houſe of Lords, reſolv'd to ſtrengthen his Family Intereſt, by a nearer Conjunction with the moſt powerful and wealthy Men among the Whigs. The Queen was averſe to this Counſel, and unwilling to part with the Duke of Buckingham and Normanby, for whom ſhe retain'd a ſingular Eſteem: But not daring, at the ſame time, to ſtand an Argument with the Earl of Godolphin, to whoſe Wiſdom ſhe paid a juſt Deference; ſhe employ'd her Royal Conſort, to endeavour to diſſuade the Treaſurer from his Purpoſe. But tho' the Prince of Denmark aſſured the Earl, more than once, that, at all Events, the Queen would ſtand by him; yet the Treaſurer perſiſted in his Reſolution, and, at laſt, told the Prince, That neither the Queen, nor his Royal Highneſs, nor any body elſe, could tell, what a Parliament could do. Hereupon, the Queen yielded; and both before, and after the Riſing of the Parliament, ſome conſiderable Changes were made. The Duke of Buckingham having reſign'd * the Privy-Seal, the Cuſtody of it was committed † to the Duke of Newcaſtle, a Perſon of immenſe Riches, and great Intereſt among the Whigs; and, about the ſame time, the Earl of Peterborow and Monmouth, and the Lord Cholmondley, were ſworn of the Privy-Council. The Lord Cutts was appointed to command her Majeſty's Forces in Ireland under the Duke of Ormond; But this ſeeming Preferment was, in reality, a Kind of Diſgrace, occaſion'd by his Lordſhip not being ſo flexible and ſubmiſſive to the Captain-General, as ſome other Generals, particularly the Iriſh. About the ſame time, Frederick Hamilton, Eſq; the Lord Windſor, the Lord Raby, and Colonel Tidcomb, were advanc'd from the Poſt of Brigadiers to that of Majors-General; and the Honourable Colonel Mordaunt, Colonel Blood, and Colonel Stanhope, were made Brigadiers.

Military Promotions.

The Biſhoprick of Lincoln being vacant by the Death of Dr. Gardiner, the Learned Dr. Wake, who in the moſt difficult Times had ſhew'd his Zeal for the Proteſtant Cauſe, was nominated to that See: And there being Four Candidates for the Biſhoprick of St. David, vacant by the Deprivation of Dr. Watſon, the Queen declared, She would not beſtow that Preferment, before ſhe had the Advice of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury. Her Majeſty having ask'd his Grace, why he had not yet ſpoke in Favour of any of the Four that ſtood for that Biſhoprick? The good Archbiſhop reply'd, "That if her Majeſty would give him Leave to ſpeak for any "Body, he would recommend one who had done ſuch ſignal Services to the Chriſtian "Religion, as had been ſolemnly acknowledged, even by the moſt conſiderable Part "of the Roman Communion, the Gallican Church, and whoſe Merit had nevertheleſs been hitherto unrewarded in England. And ſo his Grace named the Learned Dr. Bull, who thereupon was made Biſhop of St. David. Not long after, the Queen created Ralph Earl of Mountague, Marquis of Mount-Hermer, and Duke of Montague, in England.

It having been provided by a Clauſe in the Act for prohibiting all Trade and Commerce with France, That her Majeſty's Subjects might trade with the Dominions of Charles the IIId, King of Spain; the Queen thought it juſt not to diſturb the Dutch in their Trade with France: To which Purpoſe, an Order was made in Council on the 15th of March.

A. D. 1704.

According to the Triennial-Act, the preſent Parliament was near expiring; but in order to preſerve the Crown's ancient Prerogative of diſſolving Parliaments, a Proclamation was iſſued ‖ out for diſſolving this preſent Parliament, and declaring, that her Majeſty would ſpeedily call a new one. Five Days ∴ after, the Queen and her Royal Conſort went from St. James's to Newmarket, where, on the 12th, the Univerſity of Cambridge waited on her Majeſty, and humbly deſired her to honour them with her Preſence at Dinner. Her Majeſty, having accepted the Invitation, went to Cambridge on the 16th, and was magnificently entertain'd in Trinity College Hall. Upon that Occaſion, the Dukes of Devonſhire, Grafton, and Bolton; the Marquis of Hartington; the Earls of Kent, Kingſton, Sunderland, Orford, and Albemarle; the Lords Wharton, Lovelace, Byron, Halifax, Harvey, Hallirgton, and Sherard; Sir Thomas Hanmere, Sir John Jacob, Sir John Tyrwhit; William Fielding, Eſq; and John Noel, Eſq; were admitted Doctors in Law: Mr. Moſs, Chaplain in waiting to her Majeſty; Mr. Talbot, Chaplain to the Duke of Somerſet, Chancellor of the Univerſity, and Fifteen more, were made Doctors of Divinity; and Mr. Arbuthnot, Mr. Pellet, and Mr. Vernon, Doctors of Phyſick. On the 21ſt of April, the Queen return'd from Newmarket to St. James's; and Two Days * after, a Proclamation was publiſh'd for calling a new Parliament: The Writs being to bear Teſte the 2d of May, and to be returnable on the 14th of June next enſuing. As ſoon as the Writs were iſſu'd, the Elections were diſputed with equal Induſtry, and more than ordinary Warmth and Animoſity by the High-Church and Low-Church Men. The latter endeavour'd to render their Competitors odious, upon account of the late Attempt to tack the Occaſional Conformity Bill to the Land-Tax; and, on the other hand, the Tories aſſerted the late Proceedings, and maintain'd the Church of England to be in Danger: But whether convinc'd by their own Reaſon and Obſervation, or influenc'd by more prevailing Arguments, which thoſe at the Helm were not wanting to make uſe of; it ſoon appear'd, that the Generality of the Nation had different Thoughts; and ſo the major Part of the Elections went in Favour of the Whig Party.

One of the Pamphlets whereby the High-Church Party endeavour'd to influence the Electors was entitled, The Memorial of the Church of England, humbly offer'd to the Conſideration of all true Lovers of our Church and Conſtitution: Which, among others, contain'd the following malicious and ſcandalous Inſinuations. "Thoſe that "look no deeper than the Surface of Things, are apt to conclude, without Heſita- "tion, that the Church of England is in a very flouriſhing Condition: Its Dignities and "Preferments make a very goodly Shew, and the Patronage of the Queen ſeems to "promiſe a Continuance of Proſperity: But for all this fine Complexion and fair "Weather, there is a Hectick Fever lurking in the very Bowels of it; which, if not "timely cur'd, will infect all the Humours, and, at length, deſtroy the very Being of "it. The Nation has a long time abounded with Sectaries, who, in the preceding "Century, violently overturn'd both Church and State: Tho' their own Extravagance "and Confuſions, thro' a ſpecial Providence, contributed more than human Wiſdom to "the Re-eſtabliſhment of them. Nor can we blame 'em; for if any Man is perſua- "ded (as many of our Sectarians avow themſelves to be) that the Diſcipline and "Worſhip of the Church of England are an Abomination, his Conſcience will readily "ſuggeſt to him, that he ought to do his utmoſt to purge the Land from ſuch Abo- "mination; and upon this Pretence has the Church been once already entirely ſub- "verted, though rais'd again by GOD, in a miraculous manner. This laſt Reflection was viſibly levell'd againſt the Duke of Marlborough, and the Lord High-Treaſurer; and the reſt of that Libel containing no leſs injurious Inſinuations againſt the Queen her ſelf, for removing ſome of her Miniſters; the Grand-Jury of the City of London and County of Middleſex, no doubt, by Direction from thoſe in Power, at the Seſſions held at the Old-Baily the 31ſt of Auguſt, with the utmoſt Indignation and Reſentment, did preſent one Book lately printed by a notorious * Criminal, (convicted in that Court for Printing and Publiſhing a ſeditious and treaſonable Libel, for which he was fin'd and pillory'd, and was now fled from Juſtice) intitled, The MEMORIAL of the Church of England, &c. to be a falſe, ſcandalous and traiterous Libel, ſecretly, but induſtriouſly ſpread abroad, to advance and accompliſh traiterous and wicked Deſigns; highly impeaching the Truth and Sincerity of her Majeſty's Royal Reſolutions, and pious Aſſurances, to ſupport and preſerve our Government both in Church and State; the Rights, Liberties and Properties of all her People; and alſo craftily deſign'd to reproach and ſcandalize her wiſe and faithful Miniſtry, divide her Councils, create Variances, Diſputes and Diſcords in her Parliament; and to raiſe and fo- ment Animoſities, Fears and Jealouſies, amongſt all her People. About the ſame Time, Count Gallas, the Imperial Envoy Extraordinary, having notified the Death of the Emperor Leopold V. and the Acceſſion of his Eldeſt Son Joſeph to the Imperial Throne; it was debated in Council, whether the Queen, and the Court, ſhould go into Mourning for the late Emperor? gave their Opinions for the Negative; becauſe the Emperors of Germany, aſſuming too great a Superiority over other Crown'd Heads of Europe, had hitherto refus'd to mourn for the Monarchs of Great Britain: But Count Gallas having, in his Maſter's Name, promis'd that, for the future, the Emperor would mourn for the Kings and Queens of England; her Majeſty went into Mourning for the late Emperor: Which is a Particular worth taking notice of. Some Time after, the Earl of Sunderland, Son-in-Law to the Duke of Marlborough, was ſent Envoy Extraordinary, and Plenipotentiary to Vienna; to make Compliments of Condoleance and Congratulation to the Imperial Court, and to endeavour to mediate an Accommodation with the Hungarian Malecontents. About the ſame Time, the Queen advanc'd the Lord Raby, her Envoy Extraordinary to the King of Pruſſia, to the Character of Ambaſſador Extraordinary at that Court, where he was in high Favour.

Let's now take a View of the Affairs of Ireland. On the 10th of February 170⅘, the Parliament of that Kingdom met again at Dublin; and both Houſes having ſpent ſome Days in framing and preſenting their reſpective congratulatory Addreſſes, both to the Queen, and to the Duke of Ormond, Lord Lieutenant; the Commons, on the 5th of March, came to a Reſolution; "That a Sum not exceed-" ing One Hundred and Fifty Thouſand Pounds be granted to her Majeſty, for the " Support of the neceſſary Branches of the Eſtabliſhment for Two Years, commen-" cing the 29th of September 1705, and ending the 29th of September 1707." Not many Days after, the Lower-Houſe of Convocation, of the Clergy of the Church of Ireland, being inform'd, "That Heads of a Bill for the better Improvement " of the Hempen and Flaxen Manufactures of that Kingdom, were brought into " the Houſe of Commons; wherein there was a Clauſe to aſcertain the Tythes of " Hemp and Flax, which they apprehended might prove very prejudicial to the " Rights and Properties of the Clergy of Ireland, with the Care of which they were " intruſted: They therefore * preſented a Memorial to the Houſe of Commons, " deſiring that the ſaid Clauſe might not paſs in the ſaid Bill, until their Reaſons, " which they were ready to offer againſt it, were firſt heard:" Which Meſſage was ſign'd by the Prolocutor, and deliver'd by their Actuary, who was a Servant to the Upper-Houſe of Convocation. Upon the Receipt of that Memorial, the Commons voted, "That the Perſon that brought it, was guilty of a Breach of the " Priviledge of that Houſe; order'd him to be taken into the Cuſtody of their " Serjeant at Arms; and further reſolv'd, That it appear'd to them, that the " Convocation, in pretending to have the Care of the Civil Rights of the Cler-" gy, were guilty of a Contempt, and Breach of the Priviledge of that Houſe." The Commons expected, that the Convocation ſhould make a Submiſſion, and acknowledge, "That they had nothing to do with the Civil Rights; and that their " meddling with thoſe Rights, was a Contempt, and a Breach of Priviledge:" But, inſtead of that, the Convocation ſent them a Letter, wherein they endeavour'd to juſtify their Memorial, "as no ways encroaching upon the Priviledges of " the Houſe of Commons, and conſequently, no Breach of Priviledge." Hereupon the Commons voted, "That all Matters relating to the Memorial above-mention'd, " ſhould be razed out of the Journals and Books of Convocation:" Which being like to raiſe greater Heats, the Duke of Ormond thought fit to † ſend a Meſſage to both Houſes, that they ſhould adjourn to the 1ſt of May enſuing; which was done accordingly.

† March 22. The Parliament adjourn'd.

During this Adjournment, the Duke of Ormond made a Progreſs into the North of Ireland; and having taken ſome able Engineers along with him, caus'd Plans and Schemes to be made, to increaſe the Strength of ſeveral fortify'd Towns. The People, in all the Places his Grace honour'd with his Preſence, gave joyful Demonſtrations of their Loyalty and Affection to the Queen, and of their Reſpect and Eſteem for his Grace's Perſon. Among the reſt, the Preſbyterians, who had been miſrepreſented, upon Account of ſome late Tranſactions in Scotland, thought this a proper Opportunity to clear themſelves of the Aſperſions caſt upon them; and therefore, while the Duke of Ormond was at Antrim and Londonderry, divers of the Preſbyterian Miniſters waited upon his Grace, and deliver'd to him very dutiful Addreſſes. Upon his Grace's Return to Dublin, the Parliament ſat again; and the Houſe of Commons taking notice of the reſtleſs Endeavours of the Enemies of the Publick Peace, to create Diviſions among the Proteſtants of that Kingdom, to ſtrengthen the Intereſt of the pretended Prince of Wales, and obſtruct the Succeſſion in the Proteſtant Line, came, on the 25th of May, to the following unanimous Reſolutions: "I. That " endeavouring to create or promote Miſunderſtanding betwixt the Proteſtants of " this Kingdom, tends to the Advantage of the Papiſts, and weakening the Prote-" ſtant Intereſt; is ſeditious, and of dangerous Conſequence to her Majeſty's Go-" vernment, and the Succeſſion in the Proteſtant Line, as by Law eſtabliſh'd.

The Commons Reſolutions againſt creating Miſunderſtandings among Proteſtants, and aſſuring the Eſtabliſh'd Church not to be in Danger.

" II. That

" II. That by writing or diſperſing Pamphlets, or otherwiſe, to inſinuate Danger " to the eſtabliſh'd Church, from the Succeſſion as by Law eſtabliſh'd, tends to pro- " mote Popery, and the Intereſt of the pretended Prince of Wales. III. That it is " the indiſpenſible Duty of all Magiſtrates in this Kingdom, to put the Laws ſtrict- " ly in Execution againſt all Perſons, who ſhall be guilty of ſuch pernicious Pra- " ctices. A. D. 1705.

Not many Days after *, Mr. Attorney-General reported from the Committee appointed to conſider the State of the Nation, the following Reſolutions, which were unanimouſly agreed to by the Houſe, viz. " I. That to ſuggeſt by Words or Writing, " that the eſtabliſh'd Church is not well affected to the Succeſſion of the Crown in " the Proteſtant Line, as ſettled by Acts of Parliament, or any way inclin'd to " countenance Popery, is a falſe and malicious Aſperſion, and tends to create a dan- " gerous Diviſion amongſt Proteſtants, and to promote the Deſigns of Papiſts and " Traytors, in Favour of the pretended Prince of Wales. II. That the erecting " and continuing any Seminary for the Inſtruction and Education of Youth in Prin- " ciples contrary to the eſtabliſhed Church and Government, tends to create and per- " petuate Miſunderſtandings amongſt Proteſtants. III. That ſaying Maſs, preach- " ing or teaching in ſeparate Congregations, by Perſons who have not taken the " Oath of Abjuration; and hearing, maintaining, and countenancing ſuch Perſons, " tends to defeat the Succeſſion of the Crown in the Proteſtant Line, and to encou- " rage and advance the Intereſt of the pretended Prince of Wales. IV. That all " Judges and Magiſtrates are under the higheſt Obligation to make moſt diligent " Inquiry into all ſuch wicked Practices, and, to their utmoſt, endeavour to diſco- " ver and puniſh the Authors of them; and ſuch as wilfully neglect the ſame, ought " to be look'd upon as Enemies to her Majeſty's Government and the Proſperity of this " Kingdom." Theſe vigorous Reſolutions were, chiefly, owing to Mr. Moleſworth.

* June 1.

And the Church's Loyalty. And againſt Popery.

On the other Hand, the Convocation of the Clergy, to clear themſelves of the Aſperſion of being Enemies to the Proteſtant Succeſſion, paſs'd the following Reſolutions; viz. 1. " That this Church and Nation, having lately been in the utmoſt " Danger of being over-run by Popery and Tyranny, were happily deliver'd from " both by means of the late Revolution, brought about (under God's Providence) by " his late Majeſty King William III. of Glorious Memory. 2. That the Continuance " and Improvement of theſe Bleſſings are due (next under GOD) to the auſpicious " Reign, and happy Government, of her Majeſty Queen Anne, whom Almighty " God long preſerve. 3. That the future Security and Preſervation of this Church " and Nation, depends wholly (under GOD) on the Succeſſion of the Crown, as it " is now ſettled by Law, in the Proteſtant Line. 4. That if any Clergyman of this " Church ſhall either by Word, or Writing, declare any Thing in Oppoſition to the " foregoing Reſolutions, (which we hope will never happen) we ſhall look upon him " as a Sower of Diviſions among the Proteſtants of the eſtabliſh'd Church, and as an " Enemy to our Conſtitution. And after this publick and ſolemn Declaration, we " hope no Perſon whatever will be ſo unjuſt and uncharitable, as to declare, or inſi- " nuate, that the Clergy of the Church of Ireland, as by Law eſtabliſh'd, were not " entirely in their Affections for the late King William of glorious Memory, or are " not in the true Intereſt of the preſent Government; or that they are any way diſ- " affected to the Succeſſion in the Proteſtant Line, as by Law eſtabliſh'd." But to theſe Four Reſolutions the Convocation added a Fifth, levell'd againſt the Preſbyterians; viz. 5. " That for any Perſon to teach or preach againſt the Doctrine, Go- " vernment, Rites, or Ceremonies of this Church; or to keep up and maintain " Schools and Seminaries for the Education of Youth, in Principles contrary to thoſe " of the eſtabliſh'd Church, is a Contempt of the Eccleſiaſtical Laws of this King- " dom, is of pernicious Conſequence, and ſerves only to continue and widen the un- " happy Schiſms and Diviſions in the Nation.

On the 14th of June, the Commons unanimouſly reſolv'd to return their Thanks both to the Queen for the many good Bills tranſmitted this Seſſion, and to the Lord-Lieutenant for his good Adminiſtration, and his being inſtrumental in obtaining thoſe Bills. On the 16th, the Duke of Ormond gave the Royal Aſſent to ſeveral publick and private Acts; and then the Parliament was prorogued to the 13th of June, 1706. Not many Days after, his Grace embark'd for England, leaving the Adminiſtration of the Government of Ireland, in the Hands of Sir Richard Cox Lord-Chancellor, and of the Lord Cutts, Commander in Chief of the Queen's Forces, who were appointed Lords-Juſtices during the Duke's Abſence.

Acts paſs'd, June 16. The Parliament prorogued.

The Affairs of Scotland now beſpeak our Attention. The Engliſh Miniſters having narrowly eſcaped being attack'd, upon Account of the Act of Security paſs'd in Scotland, reſolv'd to uſe their utmoſt Endeavours, both to get the Proteſtant Succeſſion ſettled there, and to procure an Union of the Two Kingdoms, as the only Means to retrieve trieve the former falſe Step. The Dukes of Queenſberry and Argyle took this Opportunity to ſerve each other; and ſo they did ſeverally repreſent to the Whig Lords (now the prevailing Party in England) "That the Marquis of Tweedale, and his "Party, had been zealous Promoters of the Act of Secutity; That they were ſo in- "ſignificant, and ſo deſpiſed through the whole Nation, that they could do nothing; "but granting they ſhould prevail, and carry the Succeſſion with the Limitations in- "ſiſted upon, of what dangerous Conſequence muſt even that prove; ſince thereby "a great Part of the chief Means England had to continue Scotland in Dependance, "was removed, perhaps, never to be recover'd? That the Duke of Queenſberry had "been laid aſide for no Crime, and no Reaſon given, but what teſtify'd his Firmneſs "and Reſolution, in oppoſing every Thing that was diſagreeable and inconvenient "to England. And that the Duke of Argyle, being a young Man, of a forward, "bold Spirit, and lively natural Parts, who had gain'd the Leading of the Preſbyte- "rians, as his Father had done before him, was therefore a proper Perſon to be em- "ploy'd at this Juncture." Theſe and the like Conſiderations had the deſired Effect with the Whig Lords, who prevailed with the Queen and her Miniſters to lay aſide the Motly Miniſtry of Scotland; and ſo the Marquis of Tweedale, the Earls of Rothes, Roxburgh, and Selkirk, the Lord Belhaven, Baily of Jerviſwood, and Mr. Johnſtoun, were removed, and the chief Management of Affairs was committed to the Duke of Queenſberry, tho' with the bare Title of Lord Privy-Seal. At the ſame Time, the Duke of Argyle was declared her Majeſty's High-Commiſſioner to the next Parliament; the Earl of Seafield reinſtall'd Chancellor; the Marquis of Annandale and the Earl of Loudon made Secretaries of State; Sir James Murray of Philiphaugh, Regiſter; and all the Privy-Councellors laid aſide by the laſt Miniſtry (except Sir James Foules of Colingtoun, and Mr. Lockhart of Carnwath) were reſtor'd.

Great Alterations in the Miniſtry of Scotland.

At the Opening of the Seſſion of Parliament, which met the 28th of June, 1705, there appeared Three different Parties; viz. the Cavaliers, or Anti-Revolutioners; the Squadrone volante, or flying Squadron, conſiſting of diſcarded Courtiers, who pretended to hold and caſt the Balance of the contending Parties; and the preſent Courtiers, which conſiſted of ſtanch Preſbyterians and Revolutioners. Before the Parliament met, the Duke of Hamilton, who headed the Cavaliers, contracted a great Familiarity and Intimacy with the Earl of Mar, in hopes to have drawn him from the Duke of Queenſberry. But a Scotch * Writer aſſures us, "That the Earl gain'd ſuch "an Aſcendant over the Duke of Hamilton, and impoſed upon him ſo far, that his "Grace's appearing with leſs Zeal and Forwardneſs in this, than in former Parlia- "ments, was owing to ſome private Agreement between them: And, in particular, "that the Duke of Hamilton promiſed not to oppoſe the Queen's Meaſures, and "chiefly her having the Nomination of the Commiſſioners to the intended Treaty, "provided he himſelf ſhould be one of the Number; which was agreed to." On this Occaſion the ſame Author gives us the following Character of John Earl of Mar. "He was (ſays he) deſcended from, and the Repreſentative of a Family, noted for "its Loyalty on many Occaſions, both ancient and modern, and much beholden to "the Bounty of the Crown. 'Tis true, indeed, his Father embark'd with the "Revolution: But if all be true that is reported, his Lordſhip gave a particular, "tho' fatal, Sign of his Remorſe and Repentance. This preſent Gentleman's For- "tune being in bad Circumſtances; when he came to Age, he devotd himſelf to the "Duke of Queenſberry, and the Court Meaſures; to which he always ſtuck cloſe, "till in the Year 1704. he headed ſuch of the Duke of Queenſberry's Friends, as op- "poſed the Marquis of Tweedale, and his Party's Deſigns; and that with ſo much "Art and Diſſimulation, that he gained the Favour of all the Tories; and was, by "many of them, eſteemed an honeſt Man, and well inclined to the Royal Family. "Certain it is, he vow'd and proteſted ſo much many a Time; but no ſooner was "the Marquis of Tweedale, and his Party, diſpoſſeſſed, than he returned, as the Dog "to the Vomit, and promoted all the Court of England's Meaſures, with the greateſt "Zeal imaginable. He was not a Man of a good Preſence, and was a very bad, "tho' very frequent, Speaker in Parliament: But his great Talent lay in the cun- "ning Management of his Deſigns and Projects, in which it was hard to find him "out. And thus he ſhew'd himſelf to be a Man of good Senſe, but bad Morals.

The Cavaliers apply'd to the Marquis of Tweedale, and his Party the Squadrone, to perſuade them to unite again, to oppoſe the Courtiers; but they poſitively refuſed to treat or concert Meaſures with the Cavaliers, reſenting to the greateſt height the Diſappointments they met with laſt Year. The principal Speaker amongſt them was John Lord Belhaven, of whom the Scotch Memorialiſt gives the following Account. "He was a Man that could not be fixed to any Party or Prin- "ciple, being a mighty Projector, and ſtill plodding how to advance himſelf; and, "for that End, ſteer'd his Courſe to many oppoſite Shores; by which Means he be- "came diſtruſted both by Cavaliers and Revolutioners. " on moved him to desert the Country-Party, and go over with the Marquis of Tweedale: But as soon as he found them going down the Hill, he left them altogether, " and returned to his old Friends; tho' there's too much Reason to believe, he acted " a double Part. In Parliament, he affected long, premeditated Harangues, wherein, having a prodigious Memory, he used to be very full in citing such Passages of " History, as made for what he advanced; drawing Parallels between preceding and " present Times. He was a well accomplish'd Gentleman in most Kinds of Learning; well acquainted with the Constitution of this Kingdom; very dextrous in " chusing the proper Seasons and Means of managing a Debate in Parliament; " and a forward, useful Member in a Party.

The Duke of Queensberry's Power and Influence.

The Presbyterians and Revolutioners were headed by the Dukes of Queensberry and Argyle; whose Characters the Scotch Memorialist illustrates in this * Manner: " The " Duke of Queensberry pretended Sickness, and some Excuse or other, to avoid being present at the Beginning of this Session, that he might see how Affairs were " like to go, and whether he might venture himself in Scotland: And likewise to let " the World see, that tho' the Duke of Argyle was Commissioner, yet he was not " able to oppose the Cavaliers, unless he came down, and by his Presence and Influence assisted and supported him. And indeed, while he was absent, such of his " Friends as were left to follow their own Inclinations, and join with the Cavaliers " last Session, still continued that Way; and so the Court Measures were baffled in " every Thing that came before the Parliament: But no sooner was his Grace " amongst them, than he persuaded them all to act as he proposed and directed, " tho' against their own Inclinations and Judgments." The other Duke, says † the same Writer, " was not, strictly speaking, a Man of sound Understanding and " Judgment; for all his natural Endowments were sullied with too much Impetuosity, Passion, and Positiveness; and his Sense rather lay in a sudden Flash of Wit, " than a solid Conception and Reflection: Yet nevertheless he might well enough " pass for an accomplish'd Gentleman. He was extremely forward in effecting " what he aim'd at; which he owned and promoted above-board, being altogether " free from Dissimulation, and his Word so sacred, that one might entirely depend on " it. His Head ran more upon the Camp than the Court; and, it seem'd Nature had " form'd him accordingly: Being altogether incapable of the servile Dependances, " and flattering Insinuations requisite in the last; and endow'd with that chearful, " lively Temper, and personal Valour, esteem'd and necessary in the other." The Scotch Memorialist gives not so fair a Character of the Marquis of Montross, who sided with the Dukes of Queensberry and Argyle. " When the Marquis, says he ·:·, " first appeared in the World, he had enough to recommend him to the Love and " Affection of the Nation, by being the Representative of that noble, loyal, and " worthy Family: And his Interest increas'd to so great a Degree, by his good " Behaviour, after he came from his Travels, and in the first Session of this Parliament, that, had he continued in those Measures, he had the fairest Game to " play, of any young Man that ever was in Scotland; since, undoubtedly, he would " have been acknowledged, and followed, as the Head and Leader of the Cavaliers. " But being of an easy, mean-spirited Temper, governed by his Mother, and her " Relations, the Family of Rothes, and extremely covetous, he could not resist the " first Temptation the Court threw in his Way; and from the Time he first engaged " with them, he adhered closely to their Interest, and with the greatest Vehemency " prosecuted their Measures, notwithstanding all the Friends of his Father's Family " remonstrated to him against it; and thus he lost the Esteem and Favour " of the Cavaliers. He was a Man of good Understanding, yet was led by a Set " of Men whom he far surpass'd: And never, in all his Life, did one material " Action, that was prudent and discreet." These Things being premised, let's now attend the Proceedings in Parliament.

Many Members being absent at the opening * of the Session, the Lord Commissioner adjourn'd the Parliament, to the 3d of July; when being met again, the Queen's Letter to them was read, wherein her Majesty " Recommended to them " with the greatest Earnestness, the settling of the Succession in the Protestant " Line; and to prevent any Objection to the said Settlement, that could be suggested from the Views or Fear of future Inconveniencies that might happen to " Scotland from thence, her Majesty told them, she should be ready to give the " Royal Assent to such Provisions and Restrictions, as should be found necessary and " reasonable in such a Case. In the next place, the Queen being fully satisfied, " that great Benefits would arise to all her Subjects, by an Union of Scotland and " England; and that nothing could contribute more to the composing of Differences, " and extinguishing the Heats raised and fomented by the Enemies of both Nations, " than the promoting of every Thing that tended to the procuring the same;

A. D. 1705.

" Therefore her Majeſty earneſtly recommended to them, to paſs an Act for a Com-
" miſſion to ſet a Treaty on Foot between the Two Kingdoms, as her Parliament
" of England had done. Concluding with the uſual Demand of the neceſſary Sup" plies; and acquainting them with her Choice of the Duke of Argyle to be her
" Commiſſioner; whom ſhe had fully impower'd to declare her firm Reſolutions
" to maintain the Government both in Church and State, as by Law eſtabliſh'd;
" and to conſent to ſuch further Laws, as ſhould be thought neceſſary for that End,
" for the better improving of Trade and Manufactures, and generally for the Good
" and Advantage of the Kingdom." The Lord Commiſſioner, and the Earl of Seafield, Lord Chancellor, in their reſpective Speeches, enforc'd the Neceſſity of what was recommended in the Queen's Letter; and the ſame Day was read another Letter from her Majeſty to the Lord Commiſſioners, appointing Lord Archibald Campbel, Firſt Couſin to his Grace, to have the Place and Vote of Lord High-Treaſurer, in this Seſſion of Parliament.

On the 6th of July, the Marquis of Annandale preſented a Propoſal, That the Parliament would go upon the Conſideration of ſuch Limitations and Conditions of Government, as ſhould be judged proper for the next Succeſſor in the Proteſtant Line; and that, at the ſame Time, a Committee be appointed to conſider the Condition of the Coin of the Nation, and the State of its Commerce, or Trade, as to Export and Import, and to prepare and bring in the moſt proper Remedies and Regulations for that End. Hereupon the Earl Marſhal preſented a Reſolve; That the Houſe, previous to all other Affairs, would make ſuch Regulations of the Trade and Coin of this Kingdom, as might be moſt for the Advantage of the Nation: Another Reſolve was alſo preſented by the Earl of Mar, That the Houſe would take into their Conſideration, the Nation's Circumſtances, as to England, and how to enter into a Treaty with them. After ſome Debate, theſe Two Queſtions were put; Whether to proceed, firſt to conſider Coin and Trade? Or Limitations of Government? And it was carried, to proceed firſt on Coin and Trade.

* Lockhart, Ubi Supra, p. 142, & ſeq.

It was the Opinion of many *, that the Cavaliers made a wrong Step in poſtponing the more material Affairs, and trifling away the beginning of this Seſſion on Matters of no great Importance; for had they immediately call'd for the Queen's Letter, in order to return an Anſwer to it, the Treaty with England would naturally have fallen under Conſideration, and the Duke of Queenſberry's Friends not being yet gone off from them, they might either have rejected it, or at leaſt clogg'd it as they pleaſed, and choſen ſuch Members as they thought fit to be Commiſſioners.

† July 10, 12, and 13.

Whatever Streſs may be laid on this Conjecture, 'tis certain that the Three † next, and many other Sederunts, or Sittings, were ſpent on the Conſideration of Trade; in relation to which, ſeveral Overtures, or Propoſals, were laid before the Houſe, ſome of which paſs'd into Laws, and the others were rejected. Among the reſt, we muſt take Notice, that there were Two Propoſals made for ſupplying the Nation with Money, by a Paper-Credit: The firſt was offer'd by Dr. Hugh Chamberlayne, whoſe Project of a Land-Bank, had, ſome Years before, miſcarried in England, and reduced him ſo low, that he was neceſſitated to fly from his Creditors into Scotland: The other was propoſed by John Law, the Son of a Goldſmith in Edinburgh, a Man of ſubtile Parts, who having ſquandered away his ſmall Fortune, was forc'd to live by Gaming; but, who being an agreeable Debauchee, found the way to ingratiate himſelf, both with the Duke of Argyle, and with the Leaders of the Squadrone. Upon the Confidence of their Support, he preſented a very plauſible Scheme, which was readily eſpouſed by all the Courtiers, and many of the Squadrone, becauſe it was ſo framed, that, in Proceſs of Time, it would have brought all the Eſtates of the Kingdom to depend on the Government: But the Houſe rejected the Propoſal, and came to a Reſolution, That the eſtabliſhing any kind of Paper Credit, ſo as to make Bills paſs for current Coin, was an improper Expedient. We muſt likewiſe obſerve, That a Council of Trade was appointed, with Power to put the Laws relating thereto in Execution; and it was recommended to them, to bring the Export and Import of the Nation to a Balance, and lay the ſame before the Houſe next Seſſion.

Proceedings on the Trade of the Nation. Propoſals for a Paper Credit rejected.

Council of Trade appointed, Aug. 14.

Before this Act was brought to Perfection, the Cavaliers made all poſſible Efforts to prevent the ſettling of the Succeſſion; for which Purpoſe the Duke of Hamilton preſented ‖ the following Reſolve: " That this Parliament will not proceed to the " Nomination of a Succeſſor, 'till we have had a previous Treaty with England, in " relation to our Commerce, and other Concerns with that Nation: And further, it " is reſolv'd, That this Parliament will proceed to make ſuch Limitations and Con-" ditions of Government, for the Rectification of our Conſtitution, as may ſecure " the Liberty, Religion, and Independency of this Kingdom, before they proceed to " the ſaid Nomination." The Court, and moſt of the Squadrone, united againſt this Reſolve: But the Cavaliers inſiſted vigorouſly upon it, and by the Aſſiſtance of ſome of the Duke of Queenſberry's Friends, carried it by a great Majority. Upon this Occaſion the Lord Belhaven ſpoke to this Effect.

‖ July 17. The Duke of Hamilton's Reſolve for Poſtponing the Nomination of a Succeſſor, till a Treaty be had with England.

My

A. D. 1705.

My LORD CHANCELLOR,

The Lord Belhaven's Speech.

" BY what Experience I have had in this World, I always found, that when " Diviſions are once come to that Conſiſtency, as to form themſelves in " Factions, upon different Meaſures, and oppoſite Deſigns; that then Reaſon and " Reaſoning make but a very ſmall Impreſſion upon either of the Parties: There- " fore I ſhall not enter into the Merits of this Reſolve, nor of its Expediency or Un- " expediency, at this Time, that I may not give the leaſt Riſe to Debate, or Occaſion " of Miſunderſtanding amongſt our ſelves. What I ſhall ſay on this Head, is to " advance this Poſition, viz. That there is more Danger to our Nation, and Natio- " nal Concerns, by Diviſions and Factions, than by any Miſtake in fit and adequate " Meaſures, if they be unanimouſly gone upon.

" A wrong Meaſure, eſpecially in Reſolutions, may be ratified and redreſſed, " when we come to a fuller View of the Affair: And though ſometimes they prove " Unſucceſsful, yet Unanimity endures a Shock with Firmneſs; but Diviſions and " Factions increaſe and multiply, and that from very ſmall Beginnings, ſo as to " render all Perſuaſions abortive; and that more eſpecially amongſt Men of Ho- " nour; who, as they are generally more grateful, conſtant, and firm to their " Words and Parties, ſo upon Diſappointments, they are more prone to Reſentment " and Revenge, the moſt dangerous of all Paſſions, and the moſt fatal to the very " Being of Nations.

" What I plead for, my Lord, at this Time, is Unity. Would you have Limi- " tations? Go upon them unanimouſly. Would you have a Treaty? Do the like. " Would you ſettle the Succeſſion upon Limitations without a Treaty? Would you " ſettle the Succeſſion upon a Treaty without Limitations? Would you have neither " done at this Time? In ſhort, Whatever you would have done, let it be done " Nemine Contradicente, and it will not want its own Weight; for I am perſuaded, " that whatever Reſolution this Honourable Houſe ſhall come to, a wrong Meaſure " is preferable to a good one, if there be Unanimity in the one, and Faction at " the bottom of the other.

" My Lord, I could bring in Inſtances from the Hiſtories of Europe, to confirm " what I have ſaid, and from none more, than that of our Neighbours, the States of " Holland, whoſe Unity has raiſed them to the Grandeur and Riches they are poſ- " ſeſs'd of at this Day. They wanted not wrong Meaſures, and unſucceſsful At- " tempts, but their unanimous Firmneſs in the Vindication of their Liberty, hath " made good the Verity of their Motto: Concordiâ Res parvæ creſcunt.

" But waving what is foreign, I ſhall confine my ſelf to our own Hiſtories, and " by Four Examples I ſhall make it evidently appear, that our Predeceſſors, when " in a good Underſtanding amongſt themſelves, were always in a Condition to de- " fend their Rights and Liberties againſt the Engliſh, and that they never did prevail " over us, ſave when we were divided and broke by Factions.

" The firſt Inſtance is, of that famous Controverſy about the Right of Succeſſion " of Alexander the Third. The Story is ſo well known, that I ſhall not give this " Honourable Houſe the Trouble of hearing it repeated, but ſhall only ſay, we di- " vided upon it. What followed upon that? The King of England gave us a King: " What was the Conſequence of that? Both of us paid very dear for it. For as the " Hiſtorians of both Nations tell us, there followed upon it the longeſt and moſt " bloody War that ever was betwixt two Nations: Then, and not before, could it " be ſaid, that England had any Pretence of Homage from us.

" Pray, my Lord, had it not been better, that our Predeceſſors had, of themſelves, " choſen the worſt of Competitors, yea, the worſt Man of the Nation by a general " Conſent, rather than to have ſuſtained thoſe Calamities which followed on that " Diviſion?

" The other Time, my Lord, that we groaned under Engliſh Bondage, was by Crom- " well, who knew as well how to divide, as how to fight. We had called home King " Charles the Second, as Succeſſor to his Father; Cromwell enters Scotland with an " Army, and prevails: What was the Reaſon of it? Was his Army comparable to " ours for Number? He knew very well King Charles the Firſt, his Maſter, had come " upon us with a far better Army, and we leſs prepared, and leſs accuſtomed to " War, and yet, tho' Sword in Hand, he was neceſſitated to give us a valuable " Treaty at the Birks. He knew very well, that we had the Remains of that gal- " lant Army, which had procur'd us ſo good Conditions at the Treaty of Rippon; " and who afterwards had raiſed the Parliamentary Power above that of their So- " vereign. He knew that we had the brave Troops that had preſerved the North of Ireland from the Iriſh Rebels. Whence, then, came all theſe Hopes of Oliver? It

A. D. 1705.

" came, my Lord, from our Diviſions. We were united in thoſe former Times, and " broken then. In ſhort, we had the Hamiltons, Grahams, and Campbells, each dri- " ving on oppoſite Deſigns. Nay, my Lord, Faction was come to that Height of " Enthuſiaſm, that when we came to fight Cromwell at Dunbar, we would not fight but " as Gideon did the Madianites, altho' we had no ſuch Warrant for it. I pray GOD, " My Lord, Things come not to ſuch a Height now, eſpecially when we, as they, " mind more, who ſhall do ſuch and ſuch Things, than what Things are fitteſt to " be done; ſo that every Commiſſioner now muſt have the Board ſwept clean, be- " fore he undertakes the Queen's Buſineſs. I ſpeak not this, My Lord, out of any " Reſentment that I have by being lately turn'd out of a Poſt. I profeſs I have not " the leaſt Reſentment upon it; Why ſhould not the Queen employ what Servants " ſhe thinks fit? But I ſpeak of it, becauſe I am afraid it proves a Seed to Faction, " it having proved ſo Prolifick already, as to have Two Crops in one Year, tho' in " this Northern Climate.

" The Two Inſtances where our Unity preſerv'd us from the fatal Conſequences of " War with England, are thoſe of King David, and King James the Firſt, after we " had recovered our Liberty under the Conduct of the Noble Bruce, who had forced " the Grand-Child, by a moſt ſolemn Renunciation, to yield up the Claim of Ho- " mage, unjuſtly impoſed by the Father upon us. Two unhappy Accidents put " theſe Two Kings in the Hands of the Engliſh: Did they let go the Opportunities to " trump up their Claim of Homage? No, my Lord. What hinder'd them to pro- " ceed further? King David had loſt a conſiderable Battel, was there made Priſoner " himſelf, many of the Nobility killed and taken, England ſucceſsful againſt France at " the ſame Time, and their King Priſoner in England: King James the firſt was their " Priſoner, being forced to fly from the unjuſt Deſigns of his Uncle Robert, and as " unjuſtly made Priſoner by them: Theſe Occaſions, my Lord, did appear favoura- " ble enough for England to make uſe of; but our firm Unanimity put a Stop to their " Deſigns: We declared we would not obey our Kings as long as they were under " Engliſh Power and Influence, and ſo both our Armies in France, and Peers in Scot- " land, refuſed their Orders, as long as they were in England; looking upon them " not as their Kings Commands, but the Commands of an Enemy: And thus we " were preſerved, and our Kings delivered to us upon Ranſom.

" My Lord, I have obſerv'd, that England never let go any Opportunity, neither " before nor ſince the Union of the Two Crowns, to bring us under their Power; " and I am perſuaded, that the Heats and Animoſities amongſt us theſe ſeveral Seſ- " ſions of Parliament paſt, have, amongſt other Things, occaſion'd that threatning " and unaccountable Act of Parliament, wherein they characterize our Miniſters, " and criticize our Acts, as it hath alſo given Birth to thoſe contemptible and igno- " rant Pamphlets, publiſh'd of late againſt the Sovereignty and Independency of our " Nation. Will you prevent the Conſequences of what is deſigned againſt us? " Be as united as they in your Actings againſt them: Did Whig and Tory differ " about us? No, my Lord: The Two Houſes, tho' in civil War amongſt themſelves " did vye with one another, which of them ſhould have the Honour to give us the " ſharpeſt and ſevereſt Blow.

" To conclude, Would you quench the Fire that appears to be rais'd againſt us in " England? Would you have a ſucceſsful Treaty and good Limitations? Be unani- " mous, and I hope the Caſe is not as yet ſo deſperate; but what our Predeceſſors " have found, we may yet find the like.

" It may be aſked, My Lord, how we ſhall be unanimous, and who ſhall yield? " I think Providence has made that very eaſy, with Relation to this Reſolve; for " ſuppoſe ſome be for Limitations, that are not for a Treaty; and others for a Trea- " ty, that are not for Limitations: And that thoſe who are againſt a Treaty, are " againſt it, becauſe they do not expect reaſonable and good Conditions from England: " And that thoſe who are againſt Limitations, are againſt them, becauſe they would " prove of no long Continuance, and conſequently look upon them only as Amuſe- " ments to bring us to the Engliſh Succeſſion: There is no Reaſon, My Lord, in all " this, why both Parties ſhould not agree in the Reſolve. For ſuppoſe all thoſe Sup- " poſitions ſhould prove true, ſhall we then be in any worſe Condition than we are " at preſent? Shall it be ſaid, we will not ſo much as reſolve to treat with England; " or that Limitations, which are in our own Power, both to make and to keep, " ſhall be look'd upon by us, as Things unpracticable, and of no Duration? No, " my Lord, we have a Gracious Queen that will aſſiſt us in both; and who, in her " Gracious Letter, ſeems to deſire both.

" I do conſider England, with Relation to the Succeſſion of Britain, as ſo many " Fiſhes incloſed in a large ſtrong Net: They have Room to ſwim, toſs and tumble, " but as long as the Fiſherman keeps his Hold, they cannot break through. I be" lieve

" lieve by this Time they are ſenſible, that the Succeſſion to the Two Kingdoms in " Britain, ought not to have been deſign'd, much leſs ſettled, without acquainting " one Part of Britain with the Deſign, and that one Part independent upon the " other; therefore if we be united, and keep our Hold, and make no unreaſonable " Demand, either of Limitations from our Queen, or Conditions from England, but " merely ſuch as the Neceſſity of this Nation requires, I hope by the Bleſſing of " GOD upon our juſt Endeavours, and the Cordial Support of our excellent Sove- " reign, that we ſhall have all our Deſires granted, and a good Underſtanding be- " twixt the Two Nations promoted; not for this Time only, but for ever: Which, " if they do ſlight at this Time, I dare pretend to propheſy, that the Time will come, " when they will give more with leſs Ceremony.

" Thus, my Lord, I have frankly told you my Mind, and that with all Defe- " rence and Submiſſion to this honourable Houſe; and tho' I do not pretend to the " Thanks of this Parliament, as the Lord Haverſham had of the Houſe of Lords; " yet I will not yield to his Lordſhip, as to my Integrity and ſincere Concern for " the Commonwealth of Britain: And in one Thing, I think, I have the Advan- " tage, that what I have ſaid, tends to the compoſing of Differences: Firſt, amongſt " our ſelves, and then betwixt our Neighbouring Nation and us. Whereas his Lord- " ſhip's Speech, if I be not as much miſtaken, as his Lordſhip was at the Time he " ſpoke it, tends directly the quite contrary Way. Therefore I am for the Reſolve, " and for beginning with the Limitations." This Speech carried ſuch Weight with it, that after ſome Debate, the Duke of Hamilton's Reſolve was approved. Three Days * after the Parliament met again, and read the Draught of a Letter preſented by the Marquis of Tweedale, in Anſwer to her Majeſty's Letter to the Parliament; as alſo a Draught of an Act for a Treaty with England, preſented by the Earl of Mar; Another Draught of an Act for a Treaty with England, preſented by the Marquis of Lothian; a Draught of an Act concerning the Way of chuſing Officers of State, Privy-Councellors, and Members of the Exchequer and Treaſury, in Caſe of her Majeſty's Deceaſe, without Heirs of her Body to ſucceed her, preſented by the Earl of Rothes; and ſome other Draughts of Acts relating to Trade. All which were ord- der'd to be printed.

The Duke of Queensberry makes a publick Entry in Edinburgh.

On the 23d of July the Duke of Queenſberry arrived at Edinburgh, where he made a publick Entry with greater Splendor and Magnificence, and was receiv'd with greater Demonſtrations of Joy, than the Three Times he had been Commiſſioner. The next Day his Grace went to Parliament, where the Draught of the Letter in Anſwer to the Queen's, was read, intimating, " The Parliament's Readineſs to eſta- " bliſh the ſame Succeſſor with England, begging her Majeſty would grant them ſuch " Limitations on her Succeſſors, as were neceſſary for that Purpoſe: And, aſſuring " her Majeſty, that if this were once done, they would chearfully ſet about the " Work." But a Motion being made, that, preferable to that Letter, the Houſe ſhould take into Conſideration the Acts relating to Trade; the ſame was agreed to.

The Cavaliers promote the Limitations, and why.

This being over, the Cavaliers inclined to proceed upon the Limitations; propoſing thereby in the firſt Place, to obſtruct the Succeſſion's being eſtabliſhed, in Caſe the projected Treaty ſhould fail; for they knew the Court would not grant them the Royal Aſſent; and that the Succeſſion would then miſcarry; in the next Place, to make the beſt they could of an ill Bargain, by clogging the Monarch, in Caſe the Houſe of Hanover ſhould come to the Crown; and laſtly, to ingratiate themſelves with the People, who groaned under the Oppreſſion of England, and were extremely fond of every Thing that ſeemed to free them of it. A Motion being made † to grant a firſt Reading to an Act and Commiſſion for a Treaty with England, the Duke of Hamilton, in Oppoſition thereto, moved, that the Houſe would proceed to the enacting of Limitations; and a Vote being ſtated in theſe Terms, Proceed to conſider the Act for a Treaty, or Limitations, the latter was carried. In the ſubſequent ‖ Sederunt of Parliament, ſeveral Acts for that Purpoſe were preſented, the moſt conſiderable of which was, An Act for regulating the chuſing the Officers of State, enacting, " That from and after her Majeſty's Deceaſe, without Heirs of her Body, all Offi- " cers of State, and Privy-Councellors, and Lords of Seſſion, ſhould be choſen and " appointed by the Parliament; and in Caſe of the Deceaſe of any of them, during " the Vacancy of Parliament, the Office to be ſupply'd by one nominated by the " Council, who ſhould continue in the ſame till next Seſſion of Parliament: And " that all the ſaid Officers of State and Privy-Counſellors ſhould be accountable to " the Parliament." The Court offered ∴ a Clauſe, giving the Power of chuſing Officers of State, (which, by this Act, was ſolely lodged in the Parliament) to the King, with Conſent of Parliament, which was carried in the Negative; as was alſo a Motion, that there ſhould be Three Preſidents of the Seſſion, to preſide per vices each Two Months; and then * the whole Act was approved. An Act for a Triennial Parliament, Aug. 23.

Act for a Triennial Parliament was read in theſe Terms: "Our Sovereign Lady "being willing to reſtore to her ancient Kingdom, their ancient Cuſtom and Right to "Frequency of Parliaments, does therefore, with the Advice and Conſent of Par- "liament, ſtatute and ordain, That there ſhall be a new Parliament call'd and "indicted, to meet, ſit and act; and that once every Third Year, after the 1ſt "of Auguſt, in the Year - - - - -. And her Majeſty does hereby declare, with "Conſent aforeſaid, That this preſent Parliament ſhall not continue and endure "any longer, than the 1ſt of Auguſt aforeſaid; and this without Prejudice of her "Majeſty and Succeſſors Royal Prerogative, and Power to diſſolve Parliaments "ſooner than the ſaid Term of Three Years, as ſhall be thought fit. And fur- "ther, with the Advice aforeſaid, ſtatutes and ordains, That from and after the 1ſt "Day of Auguſt aforeſaid, no Farmer or Collector of her Majeſty's Cuſtoms or Ex- "ciſe, or any other Branch of her Revenue, ſhall be capable to be a Member of "Parliament, nor to ſit and vote therein, after the Date aforeſaid: And it ſhall be "a ſufficient Objection againſt any Member, that he is concern'd, directly or indi- "rectly, as a Farmer or Collector, in any Part of her Majeſty's Revenue, to re- "move him from his Place and Vote in Parliament." The Courtiers ſaw it was to no Purpoſe to oppoſe this Act; and being afraid of a new Parliament, they only propos'd, that this Act ſhould not take Place during her Majeſty's Life. The Cavaliers, on the other Hand, inſiſted, that it ſhould commence immediately; but many Members, who doubted their own Intereſt to be elected a-new, propos'd a Medium betwixt the Two; viz. That it ſhould take Place Three Years after the Date, that is, the 1ſt of Auguſt 1708. with which (as the leaſt of the Two Evils) the Courtiers join'd, and carry'd it; and ſo the whole Act was approved. Another Act, ordaining, that the Scotch Ambaſſadors, repreſenting Scotland, ſhould be preſent, when the Sovereign had Occaſion to treat with Foreign Princes and States, and accountable to the Parliament of Scotland, was alſo approved: But ſeveral other Overtures were made, that never were engroſs'd into Acts. Nor did the above mention'd Act obtain the Royal Aſſent, tho' the Court promis'd it often to many of the Members; and thereby kept them in good Humour, while the Act for a Treaty was framing: They thinking themſelves in a tolerable good State, by thoſe Acts of Limitations, and never imagining that the Treaty would terminate as it did. But Mr. Fletcher of Salton having, in a long Diſcourſe, ſet forth the deplorable State to which the Scotch Nation was reduc'd, by being ſubjected to Engliſh Councils and Meaſures, while the ſame Perſon was King of both Kingdoms; concluded, that thoſe Acts were not ſufficient; and therefore preſented a Scheme of Limitations, which he propos'd to be engroſs'd into an Act, and taken into Conſideration; viz.

Act appointing Scotch Ambaſſadors, Sept. 11.

But had not the Royal Aſſent.

Fletcher of Salton's Scheme of Limitations.

"I. That Elections ſhould be made at every Michaelmas Head-Court, for a new Par- "liament every Year, to ſit the 1ſt of November next following, and adjourn them- "ſelves from Time to Time till next Michaelmas. That they chuſe their own Pre- "ſident; and that every Thing be determin'd by Balloting, in Place of Voting. "II. That ſo many leſſer Barons ſhould be added to the Parliament, as there had "been Noblemen created ſince the laſt Augmentation of the Number of Barons: "And that in all Time coming, for every Nobleman that ſhould be created, there "ſhould be a Baron added to the Parliament. III. That no Man ſhould have "a Vote in Parliament, but a Nobleman, or elected Member. IV. That the King "ſhould give the Royal Aſſent to all Laws offer'd by the Eſtates; and that the "Preſident of the Parliament be impower'd by his Majeſty to give the Royal Aſ- "ſent in his Abſence, and have Ten Pounds Sterling a Day of Salary. V. That "a Committee of Thirty one Members, of which Nine to be a Quorum, choſen "out of their own Number, by every Parliament under the King, ſhould have the "Adminiſtration of the Government, be his Council, and accountable to the Par- "liament; with Power, on extraordinary Occaſions, to call the Parliament toge- "ther: And that, in the ſaid Council, all Things be determin'd by Balloting, in- "ſtead of Voting. VI. That the King, without Conſent of the Parliament, ſhould "not have the Power of making Peace and War, or that of concluding any Trea- "ty with any other State or Potentate. VII. That all Places and Offices, both "Civil and Military, and all Penſions formerly conferr'd by the Crown, ſhould "ever after be given by Parliament. VIII. That no Regiment, or Company of "Horſe, Foot, or Dragoons, be kept on Foot, in Peace or War, but by Conſent of "Parliament. IX. That all the ſencible Men in the Nation, betwixt Sixty and "Sixteen, be arm'd with Bayonets and Firelocks, all of a Caleever; and continue "always provided in ſuch Arms, with Ammunition ſuitable. X. That no General "Indemnity, or Pardon for any Tranſgreſſion, ſhould be valid, without Conſent of "Parliament. XI. That the Fifteen Senators of the College of Juſtice, ſhould be "incapable of being Members of Parliament, or of any other Office, or Penſion;

"but

" but the Salary that belongs to their Place, to be increas'd as the Parliament ſhould " think fit. That the Office of Preſident ſhould be in Three of their Num- " ber, to be nam'd by the Parliament; and that there be no extraordinary Lords. " As alſo, that the Lords of the Juſtice-Court, ſhould be diſtinct from thoſe of the " Seſſion, and under the ſame Reſtrictions. XII. And, That if any King ſhould " break in upon any of theſe Conditions of Government, he ſhould, by the Eſtates, " be declar'd to have forfeited the Crown." Mr. Fletcher enlarg'd on every particular Article; demonſtrating, That the firſt Eight were neceſſary to prevent Engliſh Influence over Scotch Affairs; the Ninth, to enable the Nation to defend its Rights and Liberties; and the Tenth, to deter Miniſters of State, from preſuming to give the King bad Advice, and doing Things contrary to Law. The Earl of Stair having ſpoken againſt this Scheme, Mr. Fletcher, in Anſwer thereto, ſaid, It was no wonder his Lordſhip was againſt it; for, had there been ſuch an Act, his Lordſhip had long before been hang'd, for the Advices he gave K. James, the Murder of Glenco, and his Conduct ſince the Revolution. The Eleventh, Mr. Fletcher ſaid, was neceſſary to preſerve the Judicatories from corrupt Judges: And if the Twelfth, concluded he, be not approved; ſure I am, this Houſe muſt own, the laſt King James was barbarouſly and unjuſtly treated. But however, this Scheme of Limitations never was fram'd into an Act. A. D. 1705.

Another material Point under the Conſideration of this Parliament, was, the Plot. They had, in the former Seſſion, addreſs'd the Queen, to tranſmit to them ſuch Perſons as were Evidences in, and ſuch Papers as related to, that Affair; and, in the Beginning of this Seſſion, the Dukes of Hamilton and Athol were very deſirous to proſecute it to the greateſt Height: But the Cavaliers were not ſo forward; firſt, becauſe they were under a kind of Engagement to the Earl of Mar, and Sir James Murray of Philiphaugh, that if the Duke of Queenſberry's Friends oppos'd the Marquis of Tweedale and his Party, as in the former Seſſion, they ſhould not inſiſt on that Affair; which would irritate his Grace's Friends to ſuch a Degree, that many of them would not concur in oppoſing the Act for a Treaty. In the next Place, the Cavaliers rightly conſider'd, that the Edge of many People's Indignation againſt the Plot, was blunted by its lying ſo long dormant: And being, at the ſame Time, apprehenſive of being baffled, if they attempted any Thing againſt the Duke of Queenſberry, they wiſely reſolv'd to ſtand Neuter; at leaſt, till they ſaw, whether the Dukes of Hamilton and Athol could prove any Thing. It being * mov'd, That the Houſe might be acquainted what Anſwer the Queen had return'd to the Addreſs above-mention'd; the Lord Commiſſioner declar'd, That he had receiv'd a Letter from her Majeſty, relating to that Matter, and would ſignify her Majeſty's Pleaſure therein to the Parliament, in a few Days. Accordingly, on the 11th of September, the Lord Chancellor acquainted the Houſe, That the reſt of the Papers relating to the late Plot, were now tranſmitted; and that they ſhould be given to the Clerk Regiſter, to be peruſed by the Members of the Houſe. But when the Houſe took thoſe Papers into Conſideration, it was urg'd, that they were only Copies; and that the principal Evidences, ſuch as Sir John Macleane, Mr. Keith, and others, remain'd in London; and that the Parliament could not proceed any farther in that Affair, unleſs the Original Papers, and the Perſons who were Evidences, were at their Command. However, the Dukes of Hamilton and Athol, and Faily of Ferviſwood, made Speeches in their own Vindication; aſſerting, That the Accuſation againſt them, in the Diſcovery of the pretended Plot, was falſe and calumnious. The Duke of Athol, in particular, made a long Narrative of the Beginning, Progreſs, and Concluſion of the whole Affair; accus'd the Duke of Queenſberry of endeavouring to give the Queen ſiniſter Impreſſions of her good Subjects; produc'd Copies of Letters from him to her Majeſty, affirming, that all the Cavaliers had a Hand in the Plot, or, at leaſt, were Enemies to her: And that, the better to carry on his Deſign, he had employ'd, and held Correſpondence with Frazer, or Lord Lovat. But notwithſtanding this great Bluſter, no further Notice was taken of this Affair.

The Parliament's Proceedings in relation to the Plot.

* Aug. 28.

The Buſineſs which the Court had principally at Heart, was, the Act for a Treaty with England: The Earl of Mar had, in the Beginning of this Seſſion, preſented an Act for appointing Commiſſioners, to treat with Commiſſioners from England, of an Union; which lay upon the Table, till moſt of the Overtures in relation to Trade, and the Limitations, were diſcuſs'd; but theſe being over, the other was reaſſumed. This Act was much of the ſame Nature and Import with the Act paſs'd in England, both impowering Commiſſioners to meet and treat of an Union of the Two Kingdoms of England and Scotland, and reſtraining them from treating of any Alterations of the Church-Government, as by Law eſtabliſh'd, in the reſpective Realms. The only material Difference was, that the Engliſh Act not only gave the Account of the Act for Treaty of Union.

Queen the Nomination of the Commiſſioners on the Part of England, but required alſo, that the Queen ſhould name and appoint the Scotch Commiſſioners; whereas in the Draught preſented by the Earl of Mar, there was a Blank for the Power of the Nomination. This gave Occaſion to Mr. Fletcher of Salton, in a pathetical Speech *, to inveigh againſt the haughty and imperious Proceeding of the Engliſh in this Affair; exhorting the Houſe to reſent this Treatment, as became Scotchmen; for which Purpoſe he offer'd an Addreſs to be preſented to her Majeſty, importing, "That the Act paſs'd in the Parliament of England, "containing a Propoſal for a Treaty of Union of the Two Kingdoms, was "made in ſuch injurious Terms to the Honour and Intereſt of the Scotch Nation, "that they, who repreſented that Kingdom in Parliament, could no ways comply "with it; which they had the greater Regret to refuſe, becauſe a Treaty of Union "had, in this Seſſion, been recommended to them by her Majeſty: But that they "ſhould be always ready to comply with any ſuch Propoſal from the Parliament of "England, whenever it ſhould be made in Terms no ways diſhonourable or diſad-"vantageous to the Scotch Nation." The Houſe rejecting this Motion, call'd for the Earl of Mar's Draught, and for the Engliſh Act, both which were read. The Cavaliers † and Country Parties obſerving, that there was a great Inclination in the Houſe to ſet a Treaty on Foot, thought it improper to oppoſe it any longer in general Terms; and therefore reſolved to endeavour to clog the Commiſſion with ſuch Reſtrictions and Proviſions, as ſhould retard the Treaty's taking Effect: In order thereto, the Duke of Hamilton preſented a Clauſe to be added to the Act, importing, That the Union to be treated on, ſhould no ways derogate from any fundamental Laws, ancient Privileges, Offices, Rights, Liberties and Dignities of the Scotch Nation. This the Courtiers vigorouſly oppoſed, as inconſiſtent with the intended entire, or incorporating Union, of which the aboliſhing of Scotch Parliaments was a neceſſary Conſequence: And thereupon they urged, "That ſince Scotland and England were un-"der one Sovereign, who mediated between her Two Kingdoms, and England had "already given ample Powers to their Commiſſioners, it would be unbecoming in "Scotland to reſtrain their Commiſſioners. That it would ſhew a Jealouſy of her "Majeſty; and might put a ſtop to the Treaty; ſince England could not but ex-"pect that the Scotch Commiſſioners ſhould have as ample Powers as theirs: That "there could be no Danger in giving unlimited Powers to their Commiſſioners, "ſince it was expreſly provided, that no Matter, or Thing treated of, and agreed "to, ſhould be of any Force, unleſs it were firſt approved of, and ratify'd by the "Parliaments of both Kingdoms: And therefore when their Commiſſioners ſhould "make their Report of the Scheme of Union that ſhould be agreed on, then it "would be proper for the Houſe to conſider, whether they would ratify, or reject "the ſame. To this it was anſwer'd, That Scotland and England's being under one "Sovereign, made this Clauſe neceſſary; ſince woful Experience taught them, and "it had been often complained of in the Houſe, that their Sovereign was under "Engliſh Influence, and ſubject to the Councils of her Engliſh Miniſters, who re-"garded the Intereſt and Honour of Scotland, no farther than was conſiſtent with "that of England: That the adding of this Clauſe, could never imply the leaſt "Miſtruſt of the Queen's Inclinations towards her ancient Kingdom; ſince all that "could be made of it was, That the Scotch Parliament being ſenſible, that the "Queen was not in a Capacity to know the Intereſt and Circumſtances of Scotland, "ſo well as thoſe of England, had taken Care to prevent any Inconveniencies that "might ariſe from thence: That there were ſome Things ſo Sacred, that the leaſt "Innovation, or Alteration, much leſs the abrogating or ſuſpending of them, was "never to be attempted, or the Subject of any Treaty: And the Particulars of "this Clauſe, ſuch as, the Sovereignty, Independency, and Freedom of the Nation, be-"ing of this Nature, ought therefore to be added: That England could not take it "amiſs, ſince they themſelves had reſtrain'd their own Commiſſioners from treat-"ing of any Alteration in the Church-Government of that Kingdom: That the "Scotch were a free independent People, and had a Power to give what Inſtructi-"ons, Powers, and Reſtrictions they pleaſed, to their Commiſſioners: Neither was "it to be imagin'd, that England would refuſe to treat, upon Account of this "Clauſe, becauſe the very ſame Clauſe, in the ſame expreſs Words, was inſerted "in the Act of Treaty, in the Reign of King James the VIth, and to the ſame "Purpoſe in moſt of the ſubſequent Acts of Treaty; and yet neither that King, "(who would have had good Reaſon to be offended at any Diſreſpect or Diſtruſt "ſhewn towards him) nor his Succeſſors, nor the Parliament of England, made "any Scruple upon that Account, to meet and treat with the Commiſſioners "of Scotland. Theſe, and many other Arguments were urged, for and againſt the "Clauſe; but the Queſtion being put, whether it ſhould be added, or not? It was carried in the Negative, by Two Voices only, through the Neglect of Seven or Eight of the Cavaliers, and Country Parties, who happen'd to be abſent. A. D. 1705.

This being over, another Clauſe was offer'd, importing, "That the ſaid "Commiſſioners ſhould not go out of Scotland, to enter into any Treaty with "thoſe to be appointed for England, until there were an Act paſſed by the Parlia-"ment of England, reſcinding that Clauſe in the Engliſh Act, by which it was en-"acted, That the Subjects of Scotland ſhould be adjudged, and taken as Aliens, af-"ter the 25th of December, 1705." The Cavaliers inſiſted upon this Clauſe, as neceſſary to vindicate the Honour of the Nation, from the Injuſtice of the Engliſh in that Act; upon a Belief, that if it were added, the Engliſh would not comply with it, and ſo the Treaty would come to nothing. Upon the ſame Conſideration, the Courtiers oppoſed it; but obſerving it took with the Houſe, they did not preſume to do it openly, but by this artful Motion, viz. That the Clauſe ſhould be approved, though not, as was propoſed, engroſſed with the Body of the Act for a Treaty; but a Reſolve of the Houſe paſs'd, that, after the foreſaid Act were finiſhed, the Houſe would immediately proceed to conſider, whether the Clauſe ſhould be of Force by a particular Act, or by an Order of the Houſe; and the Queſtion being ſtated; Add the Clauſe to the Act, or by a ſeparate way, the latter was carried. By this the Courtiers were ſure of having a Treaty; for, if the Clauſe was turned into an Act at the cloſe of the Seſſion, (when they had no more to require of the Parliament) they might grant the Royal Aſſent to the Act of Treaty, or refuſe it to this, as they ſhould be directed from England: And in Caſe the Clauſe was turned into an Order of the Houſe, then they might diſſolve the Parliament; by which Means the Act, impowering Commiſſioners to treat, remain'd in Force, and the Order ceaſed. Before the Vote was ſtated, upon the Act for a Treaty, the Duke of Athol enter'd his Proteſtation in theſe Terms: In regard, that "By an Engliſh Act of Parlia-"ment, made in the laſt Seſſion thereof, intituled, An Act for the effectual ſecu-"ring England from the Dangers that may ariſe from the ſeveral Acts lately paſs'd in "Scotland, the Subjects of this Kingdom are to be adjudged Aliens, born out of "the Allegiance of the Queen, as Queen of England, after the 25th of December, "1705: I do therefore proteſt for my ſelf, and in the Name and Behalf of all ſuch "as ſhall adhere to this my Proteſtation, That, for ſaving the Honour and In-"tereſt of her Majeſty, as Queen of this Kingdom, and maintaining and preſerv-"ing the undoubted Rights and Privileges of her Subjects, no Act for a Treaty "with England ought to paſs in this Houſe, unleſs a Clauſe be adjected thereto, "prohibiting and diſcharging the Commiſſioners that may be nominated and ap-"pointed for carrying on the ſaid Treaty, to depart the Kingdom, in order there-"to, until the ſaid Act be repealed, and reſcinded by the Parliament of England: To which moſt of the Cavaliers and Country Parties, and all the Squadrone, did adhere, making in all Twenty Four Peers, Thirty Seven Barons, and Eighteen Boroughs. While the Rolls were calling upon this Reſolve, (it being very late) many of the Members, after they had given their Votes, went out of the Houſe, expecting the Parliament would not have proceeded to any more Buſineſs that Night: But immediately after the laſt Name in the Roll was called, the Duke of Hamilton addreſſing himſelf to the Chancellor, moved, That the Nomination of the Commiſſioners for the Treaty ſhould be left wholly to the Queen. Upon this unexpected Motion, Fourteen or Fifteen of the Cavaliers ran out of the Houſe in Rage and Deſpair, ſaying, aloud, 'twas to no Purpoſe to ſtay any longer, ſince the Duke of Hamilton had deſerted, and ſo baſely betray'd them: However, thoſe that remain'd, ſtrenuouſly oppoſed the Motion, and a hot Debate aroſe upon it, wherein the Cavaliers uſed the very Arguments that the Duke of Hamilton had often urged before. What! leave the Nomination to the Queen? No: She is, in a manner, a Priſoner in England; and the Eſtates of Scotland had taught us our Duty, in a Caſe nearly related to this, during the Captivity of King James the Firſt. Our Queen knows none of us, but as introduc'd by her Engliſh Miniſtry, and recommended by our Inclinations to ſerve that Kingdom. Our Queen never had an Opportunity to know the true Intereſt of our Country; and though ſhe did, yet, in her preſent Circumſtances, cannot ſhew her regard for it; and who then ſo proper to nominate Scotch Commiſſioners to treat of Scotch Affairs, as a Scotch Parliament? Little or nothing was offer'd in Anſwer, either to theſe Arguments, or againſt the Motion, That no Perſon that had any Eſtate in England, ſhould be of the Number of the Commiſſioners, which was levell'd at the Duke of Hamilton: But the Courtiers ſtill inſiſting, that the Senſe of the Houſe might be known in this Matter, the Queſtion was put, Whether the Nomination of the Commiſſioners be left to the Queen, or to the Parliament? And, by reaſon of the Abſence of the Members before-mention'd, it was carry'd for the Queen, by a Majority of Eight Voices only. The Duke of Hamilton's Proceeding in this Affair, was highly reſented by the

Cavaliers; but his Grace endeavour'd to vindicate himſelf, by alledging, That after the Parliament had rejected the ſeveral Clauſes that were propoſed to be added to the Act, he thought it in vain to contend any longer; and ſince the Court would have had a Majority, to give the Nomination to the Queen, he might be allow'd to make her the Compliment. Beſides, it was his Grace's Opinion, That if the Commiſſioners named by the Queen, ſhould do any Thing that ſhould not be approved in the ſubſequent Parliament, they might be the more ſeverely cenſured for it, than if the Parliament had named them: But the Scotch Memorialiſt aſſures us, That the Duke had a Mind to be one of the Commiſſioners himſelf, and fearing he ſhould not be named by the Parliament, he reſolv'd to rely upon the Duke of Argyle's and the Earl of Mar's Promiſe of his being named by the Queen. To ſupport this Conjecture, the ſame Writer ‖ aſſures us, That the Queen having refuſed to name the Duke of Hamilton, the Duke of Argyle reſented it ſo far, that he would not ſuffer himſelf to be named; and even threaten'd to oppoſe the Union, tho' Means were afterwards found to induce him to alter his Mind. To return to the Parliament, in their next * Sitting, Two Draughts of an Addreſs were preſented, one by the Earl of Sutherland, the other by Mr. Fletcher of Salton, beſeeching her Majeſty to uſe her Endeavours with the Parliament of England to reſcind that Part of the Engliſh Act, declaring the Subjects of Scotland to be Aliens; both which Draughts were read, as was alſo the Overture of an Act, ordaining that the Commiſſioners on the Part of Scotland ſhould not enter upon the Treaty for an Union with England, until the ſaid Clauſe were repealed. Hereupon the Courtiers moved, That the Parliament ſhould proceed by way of Order to their Commiſſioners, and by Addreſs to her Majeſty, and not by way of Act; and, after ſome Debate, the Queſtion being put, was carried for the Order and Addreſs, which were immediately drawn up, and unanimouſly agreed to. Then an Overture of an Act was preſented, diſcharging the Peers of Scotland from going into England, without Leave of the Privy-Council: But the next Day * after a firſt Reading of this Overture, the ſame was rejected. After this, the Houſe conſider'd the Act for a Treaty with England, and made ſome Amendments to the Clauſe containing the Powers to be given to the Commiſſioners. The Cavaliers took this Occaſion to renew the Motion, That the Union ſhould not derogate from any fundamental Laws, ancient Privileges, Offices, Rights and Dignities, and Liberties of the Kingdom of Scotland; but after ſome Debate, the Queſtion being put, Whether that Clauſe ſhould be added, it was carried in the Negative; and then the Act was approved. However, the Duke of Athol proteſted againſt it, for the Reaſons contained in his former Proteſt, and was adhered to by Twenty Noblemen, Thirty Three Barons, and Eighteen Boroughs. Two Days † after, the Act for granting to the Queen a Supply of Six Months Ceſs, amounting to the Sum of 432,800 l. (Scotch Money) for maintaing the Army, Gariſons and Frigats for one Year, was approved. On the 18th of September, the Houſe went upon the publick Accounts, and allowed to the Commiſſioners of the ſame 200 l. Sterling each; 50 l. to the Clerk, and 20 to other Servants: 1500 l. to the Lord Bellaven; 300 l. to the Duke of Queenſberry, and 2000 l. to the Duke of Argyle, as being due to his Grace; which Sums were to be paid out of the 50000 l Sterling, granted to the Queen. Three Days * after, the Lord High-Commiſſioner gave the Royal Aſſent to the Act for a Treaty with England; the Act for a Supply, and to ſome other Publick (a) and private Acts; and then the Parliament was adjourn'd to the 20th of December next. Before we diſmiſs this Seſſion, we muſt take notice, that on the 10th of Auguſt, it was moved and reſolved, That Mr. James Anderſon, Writer to her Majeſty's Signet, having written a Book, entituled, An Hiſtorical Eſſay, ſhewing that the Crown and Kingdom of Scotland is imperial and independent, have a Reward of 4800 l. Scotch for that good Service; and that the Thanks of the Parliament be given him by the Lord-Chancellor, in Preſence of the Lord High-Commiſſioner; which was done accordingly. It was alſo moved and reſolv'd, That Mr. James Hodges, who, in his Writings, had ſerved the Intereſt of the Scotch Nation, ſhould have the like Reward of the Sum of 4800 l. Scotch. But, on the other Hand, Complaint being made of a Book, entituled, The Superiority and direct Dominion of the Imperial Crown of England, over the Crown and Kingdom of Scotland; and alſo of the Pamphlet, entituled, The Scots Patriot unmaſk'd, as ſcurrilous, full of Falſhoods, and reflecting upon the Honour and Independency of the Scotch Nation; both written by William Atwood: The ſame were order'd to be burnt by the Hand of the

Not long after the Adjournment of the Parliament, the Earl of Mar, who during the whole Seſſion had done conſiderable Service to the Court, was made * Secretary of State in the Room of the Marquis of Annandale, who was appointed Lord-Preſident of her Majeſty's Council in Scotland. The Account which the Scotch † Memorialiſt gives of the latter, is, that he was a Man framed for Buſineſs, extremely capable and extremely aſſiduous; of a proud, aſpiring Temper, and a great Affector of Popularity: But that he had ſhifted Sides ſo often, and been guilty of ſuch mean Compliances to gain the Favour of the Party he deſign'd to engage, that no Man placed any Truſt in him; And that the Reaſon why he was removed from the Secretary's Office, was, becauſe he was thought to hold a private Correſpondence with the Squadrone, being rather inclined to favour the Proteſtant Succeſſion without, than with an Union; and therefore would not follow the Duke of Queenſberry's Dictates farther than he pleaſed; upon which Account he was much careſſed by the Cavaliers.

Let's now attend foreign Affairs, ſo far as they relate to the grand Confederacy. The Duke of Marlborough having in the Year 1704. delivered the Empire, by the ever famous Victory at Bleinheim, his Grace, during the Winter, employ'd his Thoughts how to improve that great Succeſs; and having communicated his ſeveral Projects to the Cabinet Council, none ſeem'd ſo judiciouſly laid, as the making an Impreſſion on the Frontiers of France, on the Side of the Moſelle. To carry on this Deſign, Two Things were abſolutely neceſſary: Firſt, the Concurrence of the cautious Dutch, who were unwilling to let their Troops go ſo far from their Frontiers, leſt they ſhould loſe, in one Campaign, the Barrier they had gain'd in Two or Three: And the quickning the natural Slowneſs of the Germans, without whoſe joint Aſſiſtance the Duke of Marlborough could not act on the Moſelle, with Probability of Succeſs. Upon his Arrival ‖ at the Hague, his Grace had ſeveral Conferences with the Penſionary, aud other Members of the States-General, wherein he laid before them the great Advantages that would accrue to the whole Confederacy, from the vigorous Proſecution of his Deſign; which would deprive France of the Means either of enlarging her Conqueſts in Piedmont, or of protecting Spain; by putting her upon the Neceſſity of defending her ſelf at Home. The Dutch were ſoon made ſenſible of the Plauſibleneſs of the Duke's Project; but the greateſt Difficulty remain'd behind. In order to remove it, his Grace reſolv'd to have a Conference with Prince Lewis of Baden, and ſent Brigadier General Cadogan to his Highneſs to manage an Interview between them. On the other hand, the French being inform'd of the Duke of Marlborough's Deſign, endeavour'd to break his Meaſures, by an early Attempt upon the Places which his Grace had conquer'd, near the Moſelle and the Saar, after the Battel of Bleinheim. In order to that, the Mareſchal de Villars having aſſembled a conſiderable Number of Forces near Saar-Louis, with a ſeeming Deſign to attack Saarbruck, march'd on a ſudden, towards Homburgh, which was inveſted ∴ by Thirty Squadrons, and a Thouſand Grenadiers. Immediately upon his Arrival, the Mareſchal ſummoned the Governor to ſurrender; declaring, that the Place being unable to reſiſt his Army, he would cauſe him to be hang'd, and the Gariſon put to the Sword, if he offer'd any Reſiſtance. The Commander anſwer'd, That he was glad to hear, that Monſieur de Villars was ignorant of the true Condition of the Place; and ſorry that he ſhould have ſo mean an Opinion of him; but that he hop'd he ſhould convince him of his Miſtake, in Relation to thoſe Two Points: And thereupon he order'd the Cannon to play upon the Enemy, which obliged them to keep at a convenient Diſtance. The next Morning, the Mareſchal de Villars was much more civil than the Day before, and ſent a Perſon to tell the Commander, that he was not come with a Deſign to take the Place, but only to ſurprize Count Naſſau-Weylburgh, who, as he had been inform'd, was with a Body of Troops at Landſtoul. The Commander anſwer'd, that he ſuddenly expected Count Naſſau; and therefore Monſieur de Villars, would certainly ſee him, if he would but tarry a Day or Two; but the French General being apprehenſive that the Count de Noyelles, who had the Command in chief in Triers, and the neighbouring Gariſons, and who was aſſembling his Forces, might fall upon him; thought fit to retire towards Saar-Louis, without any other Advantage from his Expedition than the ſeizing the Baggage of ſome German Troops, which quitted their Quarters with too much Precipitation.

that were to be left on the Maeſe, and the Engliſh that were to march to the Moſelle, his Grace ſet out † for Coblentz, where he arriv'd the 17th, and intended, Two Days after, to proceed to Creutznach; but on the 18th, Baron Forſtner, Counſellor to Prince Lewis of Baden, came from Raſtadt to Coblentz, to acquaint the Duke, That his Highneſs, being very much indiſpoſed, could not meet him at Creutznach, as he deſign'd. Hereupon, the Duke reſolv'd to go and confer with the Prince at Raſtadt, where he was receiv'd ‖ by his Highneſs with all outward Demonſtrations of Friendſhip and Eſteem: But it was obſerv'd by ſome of his Grace's Attendants, that the Prince's Indiſpoſition was not ſo great, as to have hindred him from meeting the Duke at Creutznach: And therefore they look'd upon this Piece of German Statelineſs, as an ill Omen for the enſuing Campaign. However, the Prince and the Duke had a private Conference together, wherein it was reſolv'd to leave a ſufficient Number of Germans, for the Security of the Lines of Lauterburg, and Stolhoffen, under the Command of General Thungen, and that Prince Lewis ſhould march with a ſtrong Detachment towards the Saar, to act in Concert with the Duke. On the 22d of May, his Grace went to view the Lines of Biehl and Stolhoffen; came to Manheim the next Day, in his way to Triers, where he arrived the 26th; and having aſſembled all the Troops in the Neighbourhood of that Place, the Engliſh and Dutch Forces which were encamp'd near Igel, on the other ſide the Moſelle, paſs'd the River on the 3d of June, over ſeveral Bridges; and from thence march'd to thoſe prepar'd for them over the Saar, which River they likewiſe paſs'd at Conſaarbrug. The Heſſians, Danes and Lunenburghers, paſs'd the Saar at the ſame Time, and ſo all the Forces join'd, without any Interruption from the Mareſchal Villars, who, with a numerous Army, was encamp'd near Sirk. After a long March of near Eight Hours, they came with their Right within a quarter of a League of Sirk; and the next Morning they made a Motion, and took the Camp at Elſt, the Right being at Perle, near Sirk, on the Moſelle, and the Left at Hollandorp. Upon the Appearance of the Allies the Day before, the Enemy immediately retired, with great Precipitation, from Sirk, towards Coningſmacheren, poſſeſſing themſelves of a very advantageous Camp, which they made yet ſtronger, by caſting up Intrenchments, and felling down Trees: So that it was not poſſible to attack them in that Poſt, with the leaſt Probability of Succeſs.

‖ May 20.

His Grace confers with Prince Lewis of Baden.

The Duke encamps at Elſt, in Sight of the French Army.

Nor was this the Duke of Marlborough's Deſign: For, it ſeems, his Grace was advanc'd ſo far, only to cover the Siege of Saar-Louis, which was to be carried on by the Detachment of the Imperial Troops Prince Lewis of Baden had promis'd to bring from Lauterburg, and by ſome Forces in the Pay of England and Holland. The taking of that Place was of great Importance; and Time being very precious, becauſe Forage was ſo ſcarce, that the Engliſh and Dutch Forces could not long ſubſiſt between the Moſelle and the Saar, the Duke diſpatch'd frequent Expreſſes to quicken the March of the Imperialiſts, Wirtembergers, Pruſſians, and Palatines, and to exhort the Princes who had engag'd to furniſh Artillery, Horſes and Waggons, to ſend the ſame with all Expedition. His Grace's Exhortations, and thoſe of the States-General, were to little Purpoſe: But whether that Delay was occaſion'd by the Death of the late Emperor, which left the Imperial Army unprovided, 'till all was redreſſed, and put again into Motion, by the vigilant Application of the new Emperor; or, as ſome ſurmis'd, by Prince Lewis's Unwillingneſs to contribute towards the Advancement of the Duke of Marlborough's Glory, I ſhall leave undetermin'd. 'Tis true, ſome Imperial Troops were detach'd from Lauterburg, for the Moſelle, but they march'd their own natural Pace, that is, ſo ſlowly, that inſtead of being on the Saar the 9th or 10th of June, (N. S.) as was expected, they were not arriv'd the 20th, nor were there either Horſes or Artillery provided. Prince Lewis of Baden, who had promis'd to come in Perſon, advanc'd, indeed, as far as Creutznach, and then falling Sick, took an Opportunity to go to the Waters of Swalbach, leaving thoſe Forces under the Command of the Count de Friſe. The Duke of Wirtemberg made a little more Haſte with his Four Thouſand Men in the Pay of the States; and the Pruſſians, arriv'd before the Grand Army was neceſſitated to decamp.

Prince Lewis of Baden fails to join the Duke of Marlborough.

In the mean Time, the Forces of the States-General being very much weaken'd by the Detachments ſent to the Moſelle, it was thought fit, that their Army under Monſieur d' Auverquerque, conſiſting only of Thirty Battalions, and Seventy Two Squadrons, ſhould ſtand on the Defenſive, and, for that Purpoſe, intrench themſelves on the Hill of St. Peter, near Maeſtricht, expecting that the Elector of Bavaria, and the Duke of Villeroy, who commanded the French and Spaniſh Army in the Netherlands, ſhould ſend a ſtrong Detachment towards the Moſelle. They were deceiv'd in that Expectation: For the Enemy being inform'd how Things paſs'd on the Moſelle, reſolv'd to take Advantage of their own Superiority on the Maeſe, and coming out of their Lines the 21ſt of May, they march'd to Val-Notre-Dame, near Huy, which Place they inveſted the 28th. The 30th, Mareſchal de Villeroy, and the Count d' Artagnan, having ſeveral Times ſummon'd the Town, which was of no Defence, it was thought fit, to prevent the Ruin of the Inhabitants, and to come to ſuch an Agreement about it, as was made when the Duke of Marlborough came before it; and ſo the Gariſon retired into the Caſtle. The next Day the Enemy ſtorm'd Three times Fort St. Joſeph, but were repuls'd with conſiderable Loſs. The 3d of June, (N. S.) after a vigorous Attack and Reſiſtance, they made themſelves Maſters of Fort Picard, and of another call'd the Red-Fort, and then batter'd the Caſtle and Fort of St. Joſeph, with a great deal of Fury. The neceſſary Preparations for a general Aſſault being made, the Governor beat a Parley on the 10th, but could obtain no other Conditions, than that the Gariſon ſhould march out of the Breach with their Arms, and afterwards lay them down, and ſurrender themſelves Priſoners of War: That Part of the Gariſon which was in the Fort of St. Joſeph and La-Saar, march'd out in like Manner. Three Days after, the French Army march'd from Huy to Horrion, and the next † Day drew nearer to Liege, and inveſted the Citadel of that Place.

Huy inveſted by the Enemy.

The Caſtle of Huy ſurrender'd June 12. and the whole Gariſon made Priſoners of War.

† June 15. N. S.

The News of the taking of Huy, having reach'd the Duke of Marlborough's Army, the Deputies of the States repreſented to his Grace, " That it was impoſſible " to ſubſiſt any longer in his Camp. That the Germans having by that Delay, " fruſtrated the Deſign of beſieging Saar-Louis, and defeated all the other Projects " on the Moſelle, it was to no Purpoſe to continue any longer in thoſe Parts, when " their Forces might be better employ'd in the Netherlands, in ſtopping the Progreſs " of the Enemy." The Duke was as ſenſible of that melancholy Truth, as the Deputies themſelves, but being willing to tarry to the laſt Extremity, that the Imperialiſts might have no manner of Excuſe for diſappointing him, he did not decamp from Elſt, his Head Quarters, 'till the 17th of June, (N. S.) The French ſaw the Confederate Army retire ſtill with greater Tranquillity than they had ſhew'd upon its firſt advancing that way: And the Duke of Marlborough being arrived at Triers, held a great Council of War, wherein it was reſolv'd, That the Forces under his Command, ſhould march back to the Maeſe, except Seven Thouſand Palatines, in the Pay of England and Holland, who were unfortunately left for the Security of Triers, and other Poſts on that Side, under the Command of Lieutenant-General Aubach. They were to be join'd by part of the Troops of Weſtphalia; and the Twelve Thouſand Pruſſians, with the Four Thouſand Men of Wirtemberg, were order'd to march to Lauterburg, to reinforce Prince Lewis of Baden.

The Duke of Marlborough decamps from Elſt, June 17. N. S.

Mareſchal de Villars having now no Enemy before him, made a Detachment to reinforce the Elector of Bavaria; another for the Army under Mareſchal de Marſin in Alſace; and advanc'd with the reſt towards the Saar. Upon the firſt Notice of his Approach, the Palatine General ſent private Orders to the Governor of Saerbruck, to quit that Caſtle, and blow up the Fortifications, as ſoon as the Enemy ſhould appear, which was punctually perform'd. This Overſight was but the Preliminary of the unpardonable Blunder committed by Monſieur d' Aubach: For even before any Enemy appear'd in Sight, he * deſtroy'd all the Magazines the Engliſh and Dutch had, at a vaſt Expence, erected in Triers; blew up the Fortifications; burnt the Boats deſign'd to make Bridges, and quitted that important Poſt. The French having taken Poſſeſſion of it Four Days after, Mareſchal de Villars march'd to join Mareſchal de Marſin, and in Conjunction with him, beat the Imperialiſts from the Lines of Croon Weyſſemburgh. General Thungen had much ado to maintain himſelf in the Lines of Lauterburgh; the ſame fatal Influence which diſappointed the Duke of Marlborough's Projects on the Moſelle, having kept the German Troops diſpers'd, to give, one would imagine, an Opportunity to the French to beat General Thungen over the Rhine, and retake Landau. Theſe unaccountable Miſmanagements, oblig'd the Duke of Marlborough to ſend Colonel Durel, one of his Aids de Camp, to repreſent the ſame to the new Emperor: Which had a very good Effect.

* June 25.

General d' Aubach abandons Triers, and deſtroys the Magazines there.

Colonel Durel ſent to Vienna to repreſent the Miſmanagements of the Germans.

The Infantry under the Duke of Marlborough, with the Train of Artillery, march'd from Triers the 19th of June, (N. S.) under the Command of General Churchill. The 20th, his Grace follow'd with the Horſe, and encamp'd at Hopital; the 21ſt, he came to Bibrich; the next Day, to Pruyn, where he halted the 23d; and the 24th, to Dreyborn. Upon Advice from Monſieur d' Auverquerque, that the French had inveſted the Citadel of Liege, his Grace ſent Orders, the 21ſt, to General Churchill, to detach a Hundred Men, with all the Grenadiers, out of each Battalion, under the Command of the Earl of Orkney, Lieutenant-General, to meet the Horſe at Duren the 26th; and having receiv'd a Second Information from the Dutch Velt-Mareſchal

The Duke of Marlborough marches back from Triers, to the Netherlands, with incredible Expedition.

A. D. 1705.

Mareſchal, that the Enemy had been retarded Two or Three Days before Liege, for want of their Artillery; his Grace ſent freſh Orders to the Earl of Orkney to haſten his March, ſo as to be at Duren the 25th, or early the next Day: His Grace making this extraordinary Diligence, that he might join Monſieur d' Auverquerque Time enough to ſave the Citadel of Liege, or give Battel to Mareſchal de Villeroy, before he could draw off his Cannon.

The Siege of the Citadel of Liege rais'd, June 27.

It cannot be deny'd, but that this rapid and long March coſt the Allies abundance of Men, who either died under the Fatigue, or took this Opportunity to deſert; and a vaſt Number of Horſes: But yet it had this good Effect, that it chang'd entirely the Face of Affairs in the Netherlands: For the Enemy, upon Advice of his Grace's Approach, ſent back their Artillery to Namur; and, on the 27th, in the Morning, quitted the City of Liege, (of which they had taken Poſſeſſion ſome Days before) and retir'd to Tongeren. On the other hand, the Duke of Marlborough continued his March the 25th, with the Horſe, from Dreyborn to Duren; where the Earl of Orkney was already arriv'd, with the Detachment of Foot. The ſame Day, upon Advice from Monſieur d' Auverquerque, that the Enemy's Forces were preparing to retire from before Liege, his Grace thought fit to make a Halt with the Horſe, on the 26th; but the Detachment of Foot continued their March: And that Day, General Churchill join'd the Duke his Brother, with the reſt of the Foot. The 27th, his Grace having left Orders for all the Troops to advance by eaſier Marches, came away from Duren; arriv'd, about Noon, at Maeſtricht; and concerted Meaſures with Monſieur d' Auverquerque, to march, on the 1ſt of July, (N. S.) to the Enemy: But that very Day the French retir'd from Tongeren, and encamp'd at Monteraken, within a League and a half of their Lines; whereupon the Engliſh and Dutch Generals thought fit to give their weary'd Troops one Day's Reſt more. The next * Day, the Duke of Marlborough's Army paſs'd the Maeze, over Two Bridges, near Viſelle, and advanc'd to Honeff; and the Forces commanded by Monſieur d' Auverquerque march'd, at the ſame Time, to Theis upon the Jaar. The Enemy having Notice of this March, decamp'd that very Evening, with great Precipitation, and retir'd into their Lines; having ſent away moſt of their Baggage the Day before. The 3d of July, (N. S.) the Confederate Armies made a Halt; but march'd the next Day, That under the Duke of Marlborough to Lens les Beguines, and the Dutch under Monſieur d' Auverquerque to St. Servalin and Lative. The French having ſecur'd themſelves by their precipitate Retreat within their Lines, the Confederate Generals reſolv'd to retake the Caſtle of Huy, before they proceeded further; and for that Purpoſe, they made a Detachment under General Scholten, which inveſted that Place the 6th of July N. S. The next Day, the Duke of Marlborough made a ſmall Motion, extending the Right of his Army to Courtis, and the Left to Avennes on the Mehaigne, the better to cover the Opening between that River and the Jaar; and the Army of the States march'd at the ſame Time to the Left, encamping near Vignamont, that it might be near at hand, to cover, and help to carry on the Siege of Huy. On the 9th, Fort Picard, and the Red Fort, were abandon'd by the French; and the 10th and 11th, Two Batteries were brought to play againſt the Caſtle with ſuch good Succeſs, that the Enemy beat a Parley, deſiring Leave to march out, and be conducted to Namur; which being refus'd, they ſurrender'd upon the ſame Conditions as were allow'd to the Dutch Gariſon, when the French took that Place a Month before; and ſo were made Priſoners of War. The 12th, the Gariſon march'd out, to the Number of Four Hundred and fifty Men, beſides the ſick and wounded, and were carry'd to Maeſtricht. Lieutenant-General Scholten, having caus'd the Approaches to be levell'd, and left Two Battalions to gariſon Huy, march'd the 16th of June, N. S. with the reſt of the Detachment under him to Tourinne, and join'd, the next Day, Monſieur d' Auverquerque's Army; which made, at the ſame Time, a ſmall Motion over the Mehaigne, in order to be nearer to the Duke of Marlborough's. Colonel Durell, whom his Grace had ſent Expreſs from Triers to Vienna, to give the Emperor an Account of the Reaſons which induc'd him to return towards the Maeze, arriv'd at his Grace's Camp the 16th, with a very obliging Anſwer from the Emperor to his Grace's Letter.

The Duke of Marlborough arrives at Maeſtricht, June 27.

* July 2. N. S.

The French retreat within their Lines.

The Caſtle of Huy inveſted by the Confederates;

And retaken, July 11.

The Duke of Marlborough reſolves to force the French Lines.

The Diſappointment on the Moſelle lying heavy on the Duke of Marlborough's Mind, his Grace reſolv'd to recover that Misfortune, by attempting ſomething of Eclat, on the Maeſe: And as no Undertaking appear'd more difficult in it ſelf, and more advantageous in its Conſequences, than the Attack of the Enemies Lines; his Grace ſent General Hompeſch to propoſe it to the States-General. Monſieur Hompeſch being return'd with their High-Mightineſſes's Anſwer, "That having an entire Confidence "in the Conduct and Prudence of his Grace, they left it entirely to him, to do "whatever he ſhould think fit for the Good of the Common Cauſe." The Duke of of Marlborough held Two Councils of War, wherein the Generals of both Armies were preſent. Some of the Dutch oppos'd the Propoſal of attacking the Lines, and gave ſtrong Reaſons againſt it; but Monſieur d' Auverquerque, the Hereditary Prince of Heſſe Caſſel, Count de Noyelles, and ſome others, declar'd their Opinion, That the Enterprize was neither dangerous, nor the Succeſs of it improbable, if the judicious Meaſures propos'd by the Duke of Marlborough were put in Execution; and ſo the Attack was reſolv'd upon. The Enemy were poſted along the Lines with near a Hundred Battalions, and a Hundred and forty ſix Squadrons; and the Allies having Ninety two Battalions, and a Hundred and ſixty Squadrons, the two Armies were pretty near equal. It was therefore reſolv'd to make a Feint, to divide the Enemy's Forces; and accordingly, the Army under Monſieur d' Auverquerque decamp'd from Vigramont, the 17th of July N. S. and march'd towards Bourdine, on the other ſide of the Mehaigne; and the Duke of Marlborough made a Motion at the ſame Time, as if he intended to ſupport Monſieur d' Auverquerque in the Attack of the Lines about Meffelen, where they were not ſo ſtrong, as in other Parts. This Stratagem ſucceeded to Wiſh: For, the paſſing of the Mehaigne having given great Jealouſy to the French, they bent their Attention on the ſide of Gerbiſé, towards Namur; whereupon the Duke of Marlborough made a Diſpoſition to march with the whole Army, on the Night between the 17th and 18th. Lieutenant-General Scholten having rejoin'd the Army with Ten Battalions, and Ten Squadrons only; Thirteen Squadrons more, out of the Right of the Duke of Marlborough's Second Line, were added to them; and Five of thoſe Squadrons were given to Colonel Chanclos, who being perfectly acquainted with the Lines, and the Nature of the Ground, was order'd to march at the Head of all. Eleven Battalions, and all the Horſe of the Right Wing of his Grace's Army, to the Number of Twenty four Squadrons, were alſo detach'd, in order to march at the Head of the firſt Line: And thoſe Two Detachments were to be commanded by Count Noyelles, General of the Infantry. On the 17th, about Four in the Afternoon, his Grace gave Orders for the whole Army to get ready to march; That all the Baggage ſhould aſſemble at Six, near Tourine, behind the Camp, under the Guard of a Colonel, with Four Hundred Foot, and a Hundred Horſe: That at Nine in the Evening, Count Noyelles ſhould advance with the Two Bodies before-mention'd, filing off by their Right, directly towards Wangen and Elixheim; which two Poſts they were to attack, if the Poſture the Enemy were in would permit. That his Grace's Army ſhould march likewiſe at Ten a-Clock, following in the ſame Route which the Two Detachments took. That the Artillery ſhould move, at the ſame Time, on the Right of the Army: That Monſieur d' Auverquerque's Artillery ſhould follow the ſame way. That an Hour before the Army march'd, all the Horſe of the Left Wing of his Grace's Army, ſhould move along the Two Lines, and repair to the Right of the Infantry. That the Body of Horſe commanded by the Earl of Albemarle, ſhould advance forwards from their Camp. That Monſieur d' Auverquerque's Army ſhould repaſs the Mehaigne, over the Twelve Bridges made there for that Purpoſe, and ſhould join with the Right of his Foot, the Left of his Grace's Army. That when Monſieur d' Auverquerque ſhould begin to move, he ſhould detach a ſtrong Party of Dragoons towards Gerbiſé, to alarm the Enemy's Lines on that ſide; and that the Detachment commanded by my Lord Albemarle, ſhould bring up the Rear of all. This Diſpoſition being made, and the Gun which is uſually fir'd for the Tat-too, being now the Signal for taking down the Tents; the two Armies began their March between Ten and Eleven in the Evening, filing off by their Right, in Two Columns, and marching directly towards the Line, where the Two firſt Detachments were to attempt to force their Paſſage at Elixheim, Caſtle of Wangh, and the Villages of Wangh, Neerheſpen, and Ooſtmalen.

Some Dutch Generals are againſt it: But the Duke's Opinion prevails.

The Diſpoſition in order to attack the Lines.

The extream Darkneſs of the Night, ſomewhat puzzled the Guides that conducted the Detachments; which ſo retarded their March, that 'twas Half an Hour paſt Four in the * Morning, and broad Day, when they arriv'd before the forementioned Poſts; which, according to Information, were found to be but thinly guarded. Count de Noyelles caus'd the Caſtle of Wangh, which defended a Stone-Bridge, that was on the Geet, to be attack'd: But the Enemy immediately abandon'd that Poſt, and gave an Opportunity to the Grenadiers, that were order'd upon that Service, to march forwards, and attack the Barrier of the Line; which the Guard there did not defend much better, than the other had done the Caſtle of Wangh; and ſo the Troops enter'd the Line, on that ſide, with little or no Oppoſition; altho' the Enemy had Twelve Squadrons of Dragoons encamp'd behind Ooſtmalen, (within a Cannon-ſhot of the Place where the firſt Detachment enter'd) which immediately mounted their Horſes, but durſt not advance to defend their Barriers. At the ſame Time, Three Battalions poſſeſs'd themſelves of the Bridge

A. D. 1705. and Village of Heilisheim, a quarter of a League from Wargh, on the Left, which was done with as little Oppoſition: Nor did Lieutenant-General Scholten meet with greater Reſiſtance at the Villages of Over-heſpen, and Neer-heſpen: So that being Maſters of thoſe Bridges and Barriers, and having made ſeveral other Bridges, the Horſe went over the ſame, and immediately form'd themſelves on the Height, extending their Right towards the Village of Hackendoren; and ſome Battalions drew up along the Line, and behind the Horſe. The Duke of Marlborough arriving thereupon with the whole Army, his Cavalry went over the Lines with extraordinary Expedition, and march'd towards the Enemy, who, by this Time, being reinforc'd to the Number of Fifty Squadrons and Twenty Battalions, had advanc'd beyond the hollow Way, from Elixheim to Tirlemont. Some Battalions of the Confederates fired ſo briſkly upon them, that they were obliged to retire beyond the Reach of their Muſkets, which having given an Opportunity to the Confederate Horſe to paſs the hollow Way, the Duke of Marlborough put himſelf at their Head, and charg'd the Enemy with ſo much Vigor and Succeſs, that their Horſe being ſoon broke and routed, their Infantry had much ado to get away in Diſorder. In this Action the Marquis d'Alegre and Count de Horne, Lieutenants-General, a Major-General, Two Brigadiers-General, ſeveral other Officers of all Ranks, and Abundance of private Men were made Priſoners; beſides which, the Allies took Ten Pieces of Cannon, Nine Standards, Four Colours, and one Pair of Kettle-Drums. After this Misfortune, the Elector of Bavaria and Mareſchal de Villeroy, wiſely conſulted for the Safety of the reſt of their Army; and decamped, in Sight of the Confederates, paſs'd the Great Geete and the Dyle, with all imaginable Diligence, and poſſeſs'd themſelves of the ſtrong Camp at Parck, with their Left at Rooſelar, and their Right againſt the Height of Lowain. The ſame * Day, the Duke of Marlborough's Army paſs'd the Great Geete, and encamp'd with the Right at Roſebeeck, and the Left behind Tirlemont; and that of Monſieur d'Auverquerque extended it ſelf with the Right to Grain, and the Left to Elixheim. On the 9th of July (N. S.) the Confederate Army moved; and in their March through the Plain of Parck took above a Thouſand Priſoners, who could not follow the precipitate Retreat of the Enemy's Army. In the Evening, the Duke of Marlborough encamp'd with the Right at the Abbey of Ulierbeck, and the Left before Birbeck, under the Canon of Louvain: But tho' by this Succeſs the Enemy were forc'd to abandon Dieſt, Sichem, Arſchot, and ſome other ſmall Places, yet the ſuffering them to take the advantageous Poſt at Parck, which might eaſily have been prevented, and whereby they ſecured Louvain, Bruſſels, and Antwerp, was certainly an Overſight, which Hiſtory knows not where to charge: Some pretending that the Troops were too much fatigu'd to march to that Camp the Day of the Action: and others, that ſome Dutch Generals oppoſed that March. Be that as it will, Colonel Richards, one of the Duke of Marlborough's Adjutants, was ſent to Vienna, to give the Emperor an Account of that Succeſs; and Colonel Durel, his Grace's Aid-de-Camp was diſpatch'd to the Queen of Great Britain, for the ſame Purpoſe. Hereupon a Proclamation was iſſued † out, appointing the 23d of Auguſt for a Day of Publick and General Thankſgiving; which prompted the Biſhop and Clergy of Exeter, and the Magiſtrates of Dover, to ſend up Addreſſes to her Majeſty, congratulating the Duke's Victory. However, their Example was not followed by other Corporations; and it appearing that the Forcing of the Lines was not attended with ſuch advantageous Conſequences as were at firſt expected; it was even whiſper'd at Court, That the Thankſgiving Day would not have been ſolemnized, but for the good News, which, at this very Juncture, was brought from Prince Eugene's Army, and for which the Guns of the Tower were fired.

Overſight of the Confederate Generals.

† July 21. O. S.

To return to Flanders. On the 30th of July, N. S. the Confederates made an unſucceſsful Attempt to paſs the Dyle; and the Attack of the Enemy proving impracticable on that Side, the Duke of Marlborough ſent Lieutenant-General Hompeſch to propoſe a new Scheme to the States-General. Their High-Mightineſſes ſeem'd to cloſe with his Grace, and directed their Deputies, in Monſieur d'Auverquerque's Army, to permit the Duke to make Two or Three Marches, without calling a Council of War. Hereupon the Two Armies march'd to Genap, where they join'd ‖ into one Body; and on the 17th of Auguſt, N.S. advanc'd to Fiſchermont, the Right being at Hulpen, and the Left at Braine-la-leu. Upon this Motion, the Elector of Bavaria and the Mareſchal de Villeroy, only ſtretch'd out their Right to Over-Iſche, near the Wood Soignies, and kept ſtill their Left at Nether-Iſche, with the little River Iſche before them, whereby they cover'd both Bruſſels and Louvain. Early the next ∴ Day, the Confederate Army paſs'd the long narrow Road of the Line, near Hulpen, and about Noon, drew up in Sight of the Enemy, whom the Duke of Marlborough and Monſieur d'Auverquerque reſolv'd to attack immediately, without giving them Time to recover the apparent Conſternation they were under. But the Artillery not being yet come up, as ſome pretended, through General Slangenburgh's Fault; and that General, who had a Pique againſt the Duke, for attempting the Paſſage of the Lines without either his Privity or Conſent, having perſuaded ſome other Dutch Commanders to join with him in oppoſing his Grace; They made their unanimous Report to the States-Deputies, that the Enterprize was neither adviſeable nor practicable; whereupon the Deputies abſolutely refuſed to conſent to it. His Grace ſubmitted, tho' with a great deal of Regret, as appears by the expoſtulatory Letter he wrote the next Day to the States-General, which being made publick at the Hague, undoubtedly by his Grace's private Directions, occaſion'd great Murmurings among the People. On the other Hand, the Dutch Deputies and Generals endeavour'd to juſtify their Conduct, by ſeveral Letters they wrote to the States-General, which were alſo induſtriouſly diſpers'd: But nevertheleſs their High Mightineſſes thought fit to ſend Monſieur Buys, Penſioner of Amſterdam, to Tirlemont, to aſſure his Grace of their Readineſs to give him all reaſonable Satisfaction, for the Diſguſt he had taken at ſome Paſſages at Over-Yſche, and to make him, for the future, more eaſy in his Command. Nor was this an unpolitick Step in the Dutch: For the Generality of the Engliſh Nation, did, at this Time, ſo warmly eſpouſe the Duke of Marlborough's Reſentment, that very ſevere Reflections were made, in Print, on the Hollanders in general, and on the States Field-Deputies in particular, for not ſuffering his Grace to fight the Enemy; and the Earl of Pembroke, Lord Preſident of the Council, was named to go Envoy Extraordinary to Holland, chiefly to expoſtulate the Matter with the States: But their High Mightineſſes prevented his Journey, by giving Satisfaction to the Duke of Marlborough, in removing General Slangenburgh. Towards the End of October, N. S. the Duke of Marlborough gave the neceſſary Directions for the Attack of Sandvliet, which made no long Reſiſtance, and ſurrender'd to Count de Noyelles on the 29th; but while the Allies were employ'd in this Siege, a Detachment of the French Army, under the Command of Count d'Artagnan, ſurpriz'd the Gariſon of Dieſt. And ſo the Armies on both Sides went into Winter-Quarters.

The Duke of Marlborough's Deſign to attack the French at Over-Yſche oppoſed by the Dutch.

General Slangenburgh removed.

Sandvliet taken by the Allies, and Dieſt by the French.

Some Days before, upon a preſſing Invitation from the Emperor, the Duke of Marlborough ſet out * for Vienna, both to concert the Operations of the next Campaign, and to forward the Negociation of his Son-in-law, the Earl of Sunderland, who ſome Time before had been ſent Envoy Extraordinary to the Imperial Court, to endeavour to compoſe the Troubles in Hungary, in Conjunction with Mr. Stepney, alſo Envoy Extraordinary from the Queen; and the Baron Rechteren, and Monſieur Bruyninx, Envoys from the States-General. Upon his Arrival at Duſſeldorp, his Grace was complimented on the Part of the Elector Palatine, who, the next † Day, met his Grace on the Road, about Two Leagues from his Reſidence at Bernſberg, and entertain'd him magnificently under ſeveral Tents. On the 30th of October, N. S. his Grace receiv'd Compliments from the Elector and Chapter of Triers; and on the 31ſt arrived at Frankfort, where he was, the next Day, entertain'd at Dinner, by the Duke of Shrewſbury, who was lately come there with his new Wife Adelaida de Paleotti. The Duke of Marlborough intended to have gone, the next Day, to Heydelberg, to confer with Prince Lewis of Baden, but the latter reſolv'd to return his Grace the Compliment he paſs'd on his Highneſs, in going ſo far as Radſtat to ſee him, and ſo came to Frankfort that very Day. The Prince and Duke conferr'd together that Night, and the next * Morning, in the Preſence of Monſieur Geldermalſin, Plenipotentiary of the States-General, who entertain'd them both at Dinner; after which, Prince Lewis return'd to his Army; and on the 3d early, his Grace continued his Journey to Vienna, where he arrived the 12th by Water from Ratiſbonn. At his Landing, his Grace was attended by the Earl of Sunderland and Mr. Stepney, who were lately return'd from Preſburgh and Tyrnau, where they had ſeveral fruitleſs Conferences with the Imperial Commiſſioners, and thoſe of the Hungarians. His Grace had, the next † Day, his Audience of their Imperial Majeſties, and of the Arch-Dutcheſſes; and the 14th and 15th receiv'd and return'd ſeveral Viſits. The 16th, he had a Conference with the Prince of Salme, and other publick Miniſters, at which the Emperor was preſent; and being afterwards ſeized with a ſmall Fit of the Gout, which confined him for Three Days to his Chamber, he was viſited by all Perſons of the greateſt Diſtinction. On the 19th, the Earl of Sunderland had his Audience of Leave of the Emperor and Empreſs; and Three Days || after, the Duke of Marlborough going to ſee the famous Chamber of Rarities, the Emperor met him, and, in a very obliging Manner, preſented him with a Ring of conſiderable Value. Moreover, in Conſideration of the ſignal Services done by his Grace to the Auſtrian Family, and the Empire, the Emperor was pleaſed to make him a Grant of the Lordſhip of Mindelheim, in Suabia, lately poſſeſs'd by Duke Maximilian

On the 22d in the Evening, his Grace had his Audience of Leave of all the Imperial Family: The next Day he ſet out from Vienna, accompanied by the Earl of Sunderland; and having viſited the Courts of Berlin and Hanover, where they were both received with extraordinary Marks of Diſtinction and Reſpect, they arriv'd at the Hague, on the 14th of December, N. Affairs in Italy.

The moſt important Affair which the Duke of Marlborough negotiated at the Hague, was the taking Ten Thouſand Men more into the Pay of England and Holland, to reinforce Prince Eugene's Army in Italy, where Things were, at this Time, in a very dubious Poſture. The long and brave Defence of Verue, had, indeed, ſomewhat diſordered the Enemy's Projects, and given Time to the Duke of Savoy to caſt up new Intrenchments at Chivas, to ſave his Capital City from being beſieged, till the Imperial Army were in a Condition to give a ſtrong Diverſion to the French. But though Prince Eugene, with admirable Conduct, Reſolution and Succeſs, croſs'd the Lake of Garda, open'd himſelf a Paſſage through the Mountains of the Breſcian; ſurmounted all the Obſtacles he met in his Way, poſſeſs'd himſelf of the Poſts on the Oglio, and advancing to the Adda, drew the Enemy into the Battle of Caſſano, where, without gaining a compleat Victory, he had his principal Aim, which was, to diſable the French from beſieging Turin this Year; yet the German Forces were ſo reduced, that they were not in a Condition, either to maintain themſelves long in their Poſts, or to protect the Duke of Savoy, unleſs they receiv'd ſtrong Supplies.

Affairs in Germany.

In Germany, Things had, at firſt, a very diſmal Aſpect: For upon the Duke of Marlborough's Diſappointment on the Moſelle, the French retook Triers, Hombourg, and ſome other Poſts: But yet they found it impoſſible to force the German Camp at Lauterbourg, which was bravely maintain'd againſt both the Mareſchals de Villars and Marſin, 'till Prince Lewis of Baden could draw together a ſufficient Force to enter the Enemy's Lines; after which his Highneſs took Druſſenheim, Haguenau, and other Poſts, and extend his Quarters into the Enemy's Country, the advanced Seaſon not permitting him to recover Hombourg.

Affairs of Portugal.

The Campaign in Portugal, had, this Year, a very ſmiling Beginning: For the vigorous Defence of Gibraltar, as it obliged the French and Spaniards to draw moſt of their Forces that Way, ſo gave it an Opportunity to the Portugueze, and their Allies, to invade Spain, both on the Frontiers of Beyra, and thoſe of Alentejo. This, however, was undertaken againſt the Advice of ſome great Men at the Court of Liſbon, who urged, that, conſidering how much the Auxiliary Forces had been weakned, by the Detachments ſent by the Lord Galway to Gibraltar, the Confederate Army could not take the Field, 'till they were join'd by the Recruits expected from England and Holland: But the Earl of Galway over-rul'd that Pretence, and by his indefatigable Care and Induſtry, the Preparations for an early Campaign were not much retarded by the King of Portugal's Indiſpoſition, during which the Queen Dowager of England was entruſted with the Regency of the Kingdom. Moſt of the Troops appointed to take the Field, being aſſembled near Eſtremos, they began their March from thence on the 24th of April, N. S. the Conde das Galveas, a Portugueze, having the chief Command; the Conde de la Corſona, the Earl of Galway, and Baron Fagel, commanding under him, each his Week, alternately; the Conde de Villaverde being General of the Horſe, and the Viſcount of Barbacena, General of the Artillery. Four Days after, the Army being join'd by a conſiderable Number of Horſe and Foot from Elvas, was found to conſiſt of above Twenty Four Thouſand Men; and having no Enemy to oppoſe them in the Field, the Gerals reſolv'd to attack their fortify'd Towns. Valencia d' Alcantara, was firſt beſieged, and carried † by Storm: The Gariſon of Albuquerque fearing the ſame Fate, ſurrendred ‖ the Place upon Articles; after which, ſeveral Councils were held, in which the Earl of Galway, and General Fagel, propoſed the Siege of Badajox; but the ſame was oppoſed by the Portugueze, upon ſeveral Pretences. The Engliſh and Dutch Generals continuing their Inſtances, and offering ſeveral Expedients to remove all Difficulties, it was reſolv'd to draw near Badajox, and endeavour to fall on the Mareſchal de Theſſé, who was poſted with about Four Thouſand Horſe and Foot, on the Banks of the Guadiana, to cover that important Place. Accordingly, the Army march'd on the 4th of June, N. S. and made ſome Preparations to paſs the the Guadiana, but not being able to get a ſufficient Number of Pontons to make Bridges, and wanting other Neceſſaries for a Siege, it was thought fit to put off that Enterprize; and, in the mean Time, to ſend the Troops into Quarters of Refreſhment. While theſe Things paſs'd on the Side of Alentejo, the Marquis das Minas, who commanded the Portugueze Forces in the Province of Beyra, attack'd the Town of Salvaterra, and made the Gariſon Priſoners of War; after which the Portugueze plunder'd and burnt Sarca, which the French Gariſon, and Inhabitants, had abandon'd upon their Approach. But the Marquis das Minas's Progreſs was ſoon ſtopp'd, by a Body of French and Spaniards that march'd againſt him, and obliged him to retire to Penamacor. A. D. 1705.

Notwithſtanding the Earl of Galway's inceſſant Sollicitations, and indefatigable Care, and the ſolemn Engagements of the Portugueze to King Charles, to take the Field in the beginning of September, in order to give the Spaniards a Diverſion, they continued in their Quarters 'till the End of that Month; when all the Confederate Forces being drawn together in the Neighbourhood of Elvas, ſeveral Councils of War were held to regulate the Operations of the Autumn Campaign. Some propoſed to march directly to Merida, to deſtroy the Magazines the Enemy had in that Place; others, to march into Spain another way, than by Eſtremadura; and others again, the Siege of Badajox, which was, at laſt, reſolv'd upon, as the moſt reaſonable and advantageous Enterprize. The Generals being ſenſible, that the Diviſions amongſt them, about the Niceties of Command, had hitherto been a great Hindrance to the Execution of their Projects, reſolv'd, if poſſible, to prevent the like Inconveniencies for the future, and, in order thereto, agreed, that the Earl of Galway, Baron Fagel, and the Conde de Corſana, ſhould command each, in Turn, for a Week, as Camp-Maſters-General, under the Marquis das Minas, Generaliſſimo. This great Difficulty about the Command being remov'd, the Army march'd on the 1ſt of October, N. S. towards Badajox, which they reach'd the 3d, and open'd the Trenches the next Day. The Siege was carried on with ſo good Succeſs, that it was thought almoſt impoſſible the Enterprize ſhould miſcarry, as it did by an unforeſeen Accident. On the 11th of October, in the Afternoon, a Bomb of the Enemy falling on one of the Batteries of the Beſieged, and blowing up the Powder, with ſome of the Gunners, the Earl of Galway, and Baron Fagel, repair'd thither immediately, to encourage the Soldiers, and give the neceſſary Directions; and as they had both their Arms lifted up, a Cannon-Ball from the old Caſtle came between them, took off the Sleeve of Monſieur Fagel, and ſtruck off the Lord Galway's Right Hand, a little below the Elbow. His Lordſhip being obliged to be carried away, and have his Arm cut off, General Fagel took upon him the Command of the Army, and Direction of the Siege; and the Batteries continued firing with ſo great Execution, that the Beſiegers reckon'd to ſtorm the Place on the 15th. But the Marquis de Theſſé having aſſembled Three Thouſand Horſe, and Five Thouſand Foot at Talavera, march'd the Night between the 13th and 14th, with ſuch Expedition and Secrecy, that in the Morning they were drawn up in Battalia, flanking the Left Wing of the Confederates. After ſome Time ſpent in Conſultations, the whole Confederate Army paſs'd the Guadiana, in order to fight the Enemy; but the Marquis de Theſſé having thrown a Relief of a Thouſand Men into Badajox, retired over the Chevora, with as great Diligence as he came up; and Two or Three Days after *, the Confederates thought fit to raiſe the Siege. Baron Fagel, who being weary of a Service where there was little or no Harmony among the Generals, had ſome Time before demanded and obtain'd to be recall'd, ſet out immediately for Liſbon, and there embark'd for Holland, with the Mortification of having the Miſcarriage before Badajox laid at his Door, of which he endeavour'd to clear himſelf, in Print. As for the Earl of Galway, beſides his being condoled with by the King of Portugal, and receiving a handſome Preſent from the Queen his Miſtreſs, upon the Loſs of his Right Hand, he had alſo the good Fortune to have it generally imagin'd, that had it not been for that Accident, Badajox had certainly been taken.

The Siege of Badajox raiſed.

By this Time, all Europe was attentive to the wonderful Succeſs of the Confederates in Catalonia. Towards the latter End of May, the Engliſh Fleet, with about Five Thouſand Land-Forces on Board, under the joint Command of Sir Cloudeſly Shovel, and the Earl of Peterborow, ſail'd from St. Hellens, and arrived at Liſbon the 20th of June, N. S. a Week after the Dutch Fleet, commanded by Admiral Allemonde, was come into that River. The Earl of Galway, with the other Generals, being about the ſame Time come to Liſbon, ſeveral Councils were held, about the intended Expedition of the Confederate Fleet; and upon the preſſing Inſtances of the Earl of Peterborow, the Earl of Galway was prevail'd with to let him take with him the beſt Part of Two Engliſh Regiments of Dragoons, viz. the Lord Raby's and Cunningham's. Juncture at Liſbon, from Gibraltar, gave King Charles the Third poſitive Aſſurances of the Inclinations of the Province of Catalonia, and Kingdom of Valencia, to declare for his Majeſty; which, together with his being weary of Portugal, made him reſolve rather to try his Fortune with the adventurous Earl of Peterborow, than to remain in a doubtful, melancholy, and idle Condition in Liſbon. This Council, however, (out of what Motives, is uncertain) was vehemently oppoſed by ſome Spaniſh Grandees; but their Reaſons being over-ruled by the Earl of Peterborow's ſtronger Arguments, the Catholick King was confirm'd in his Reſolution, and having ſent back the Prince of d'Armſtadt to Gibraltar, to get the Gariſon of that Place in Readineſs to embark, his Majeſty went on Board the Ranelagh, with the Earl of Peterborow. They put to Sea the 28th of July, N. S. and a few Days after, arrived in the Bay of Gibraltar, where his Catholick Majeſty was receiv'd as lawful Sovereign; and having taken on Board the Battalion of Engliſh Guards, and Three old Regiments, which had lately ſo valiantly defended the Place, and left Two new raiſed Battalions in Gariſon there, they ſailed again the 5th of Auguſt, N. S. Six Days after, they came to an Anchor in the Bay of Altea, in order to water; and thereupon the Earl of Peterborow cauſed a Manifeſto to be publiſh'd in Spaniſh, declaring, "That "he was not come into theſe Parts to take Poſſeſſion of any Place in the Name of "her Britannick Majeſty, or of the States-General, but to maintain the juſt Right "of the moſt Auguſt Houſe of Auſtria to the Monarchy of Spain, and to defend the "good and loyal Subjects of the ſaid Monarchy, and to free them from the inſup-"portable Yoke of a Government of Foreigners." Hereupon, all the Inhabitants of Altea, and of the neighbouring Villages, came to acknowledge his Catholick Majeſty, imploring his Protection; and brought with them Fruits of the Country, and other neceſſary Proviſions. At the ſame Time, about Eight Hundred or a Thouſand Men in the adjacent Mountains, being weary of the French Yoke, declared for King Charles III. and ſeized the Town of Denia, not far from Altea Bay; whereupon his Catholick Majeſty appointed Major-General Ramos, who had aſſiſted the Prince of Heſſe d'Armſtadt in the Siege of Gibraltar, to be Governor of that Place, ſending with him about Four Hundred Men for its greater Security. All this while the Motions of the Confederate Fleet not only kept the French and Spaniards in Alarms, but the Allies themſelves in ſuſpence; there being various Conjectures about the true Deſign of this Expedition. It appears by a Letter * from a good Hand on Board the Britannia, in Altea Bay, "That the Earl of Peterborow having "got Nineteen Battalions of good Infantry, about One Thouſand Three Hundred "Horſe, with a good Train of Artillery, and the King of Spain on Board the "Fleet, his Lordſhip deſigned to have gone directly for Italy, where with the For-"ces that were to join him, either from the Duke of Savoy, or Prince Eugene, he "might have driven the French out of Italy, and ſet his Royal Highneſs at Li-"berty to employ his Forces another Way. But when Letters arrived at Liſbon "from Turin and Genoa, adviſing of the good Diſpoſition of the Catalans in Favour "of Charles the Third; and that Four Thouſand of them had actually taken up "Arms, this broke his Lordſhip's former Meaſures, and obliged him, contrary to "his Inclinations, to frame Deſigns upon Catalonia, according to new Orders." Be that as it will, the Fleet having ſail'd from Altea Bay, about the Middle of Auguſt, N. S. arrived in the Bay of Barcelona the 22d of the ſame Month.

K. Charles III. goes on Board the Confederate Fleet.

* Dated Aug. 14. N. S.

The Prince of d'Armſtadt being ſent before with Two Frigats, to enquire into the Poſture of Affairs in thoſe Parts, his Highneſs put into Mataro, Four Leagues from Barcelona; and having adviſed the People of Vich, who had declared for King Charles, to come down to the Sea-Side, he rejoined the Fleet on the 23d of Auguſt, and thereupon the Infantry were landed, not only without any Diſturbance, but even with the Aſſiſtance of the Country People, who expreſs'd great Joy for the Arrival of the Fleet, and of the Catholick King. The next † Day, the Dragoons, and Part of the Horſe, were ſet on Shore, and join'd the reſt of the Forces, which were encamp'd about a quarter of a League from the Town of Barcelona, on the Eaſt Side, in a Place well fortified by Nature: This Camp extending it ſelf on the Left near to the Sea, and being cover'd on the Right by the River Secchia, and defended on the Rear by the River Baſſoz, and by divers Hills and Defilees. The Circumference of the Town being ſo large, that the Forces from the Fleet were not ſufficient to inveſt it, the People of the Country aſſiſted them in ſecuring all the Avenues.

† Aug. 24. N. S.

After the Artillery and heavy Baggage were landed, King Charles reſolv'd to go on Shore to encourage this Expedition by his Preſence, and ſhew himſelf to the People of the Country, who came from divers Parts, in great Multitudes, to ſee him. Accordingly, his Majeſty landed the 28th, at Four in the Evening; and when he went from on Board, the whole Fleet ſaluted him; that by this the Inhabitants of Barcelona might be aſſured, that his Catholick Majeſty was come with the Fleet.

A. D. 1705.

As ſoon as his Majeſty got on Shore, an infinite Number of People, who came from Vich, and divers other Towns and Villages, with great Acclamations and repeated Cries of, Long live the King, ran to the Water Side, caſt themſelves at his Majeſty's Feet, and kiſſed his Hand with all poſſible Demonſtrations of Joy; inſomuch that it was a difficult Matter for his Majeſty to get from among ſo great and joyful a Multitude: But, at laſt, mounting on Hoſeback, he rid to the Camp, where the Forces were all drawn up in a Line to receive him; and when his Majeſty was got to his Quarters, they ſaluted him with a treble Diſcharge of their ſmall Arms. The King having taken his Quarters near St. Martin's, behind the Right Wing of the Camp, the Earl of Peterborow order'd a Line to be drawn, to ſecure both againſt any Enterprize; and placed advanc'd Guards at convenient Diſtances for the ſame Purpoſe.

Before the King landed, it was propoſed to attack the Town in form, and to open the Trenches on the ſame Side where the Confederate Army was encamp'd; of which Don Franciſco de Velaſco, Viceroy of Catalonia, who commanded in Perſon in Barcelona, being apprehenſive, he cauſed a new Work to be caſt up between the Two Baſtions, that were moſt like to be attack'd; and beſides, the Ground proving marſhy on that Side, and unfit to make the Approaches, that Deſign was laid aſide. The Truth is, upon encamping * " before this City, the Earl of Peterborow found " the Scene of Affairs quite otherwiſe, than he either expected, or was promiſed he " ſhould meet with. Inſtead of Ten Thouſand Men in Arms to cover his Landing, " and ſtrengthen his Camp, he ſaw only ſo many Higglers and Suttlers flocking into " it; inſtead of a City in a weak Condition, and ready to ſurrender upon the Ap- " pearance of his Troops, he found an orderly Gariſon, and a Force almoſt equal to " his Army. In theſe Circumſtances, his Lordſhip called frequent Councils of War, " wherein for near a Fortnight together, it was ſometimes unanimouſly, and always " by a Majority, agreed, That conſidering the Weakneſs of the Confederate For- " ces, and the Strength of the Enemy; conſidering that the Batteries would be al- " moſt as long a raiſing as the Fleet could well ſtay; in ſhort, conſidering " the extreme Want of every Thing neceſſary towards ſuch an Enterprize, the " Siege was utterly impracticable. The Earl of Peterborow, indeed, did twice " give his Vote for the Undertaking; but rather out of the extreme Paſſion he had " to comply with the Deſires of the King of Spain, (who ſeem'd to lay the whole " Streſs of his Affairs upon making an Attempt on Barcelona for Eighteen Days,) " than out of any Confidence he had of ſucceeding. At the ſame Time, his Lord- " ſhip propoſed and offer'd to his Majeſty, either to ſail with the Fleet to Italy, in " order to ſupport the Duke of Savoy; or to march by Land, along the Sea-Coaſt, " where with the Countenance and Aſſiſtance of the Fleet, many Towns of Conſe- " quence might be reduced, the whole Country diſpoſed to declare for his Catholick " Majeſty, and upon any reaſonable Encouragement from Catalonia, and the King- " doms of Valencia and Arragon, Winter-Quarters might be ſecured, and a Body " of Troops raiſed, which might enable his Majeſty to march to Madrid next " Spring." According to his Lordſhip's firſt Deſign, the Council of War came at laſt, † to an unanimous Reſolution, That the Forces be immediately embark'd for the probable Service, and Support of the Duke of Savoy. But the King of Spain, undoubtedly by the Advice of the Prince of d'Armſtadt, taking a ſudden Reſolution to ſtay by his Catalans, the Earl of Peterborow ſaw himſelf reduced to this Dilemma, either to go Home without attempting any Thing, or to take this Attempt upon himſelf, contrary to the Opinion of the other Generals. On the other hand, the Sea-Officers, who were all very hearty and unanimous for the Attack, propoſed, That the Town might be bombarded and cannonaded by the Ships, at the ſame Time that the Approaches were carried on by Land: But the King not conſenting to have that fair City deſtroy'd, all Thoughts of attacking it ſeem'd to be entirely laid aſide. All this while, the Prince of Heſſe d'Armſtadt, whoſe Honour and Credit were moſt at Stake, as being the chief Adviſer and Promoter of this Expedition, was contriving ſuch Methods of carrying on the Siege as might be liable to the leaſt Hazard and Difficulty: And (according to the beſt Information I could procure) propoſed, at laſt, to the Earl of Peterborow, as a Thing moſt expedient, and at the ſame Time very feaſible, to take the Citadel and Caſtle of Montjuich by Surprize, which would be a Means to reduce the City of Barcelona with the greater Eaſe, by reaſon of the advantageous Situation of that Fort, which commands the Place; and deſired that his Lordſhip would give him only a Thouſand Men for that Purpoſe, offering himſelf to conduct and command them. The Earl of Peterborow having taken a View of the Fort of Montjuich, and of the Town of that Side, and maturely weigh'd his Highneſs's Reaſons, and conſider'd the Manner in which he intended to proceed in the Attack, not only concur'd with the Prince, and readily granted him the Thouſand ſand Men he deſir'd; but likewiſe reſolv'd to ſupport his Highneſs himſelf with a Thouſand Men more, and ſome Dragoons.

A late * Writer, who made it his Buſineſs to extol and vindicate the Earl of Peterborow's Conduct, pretends, That his Lordſhip now made uſe only of his own Thoughts, and, by an uncommon Artifice, made that never-to-be-forgotten Attack upon Fort Monjuich, the very Foundation of our Footing in Spain: That the brave Prince of Heſſe had, indeed, too great a Share in this Undertaking; but as he had no Command in the Army, ſo he was not in the leaſt concern'd in the Forming of this Deſign: That the injudicious, or rather impracticable Propoſals made by the Prince of Heſſe, and inſiſted upon by him to the laſt, were the Occaſion of thoſe unanimous Councils of War, againſt an Enterprize which promiſed ſuch certain Ruin; and the Freedoms taken in Diſcourſe by that Prince, had, for ſome Time, prevented any Correſpondence between him and the Earl of Peterborow. That ſo far was this Project from being propoſed by that Prince, that, in truth, the Earl was forc'd to make it a Secret even to the Court; where Reſentments were very publick and remarkable, upon Orders to embark the Artillery and the King's Baggage, which his Lordſhip gave out, the better to diſguize his real Deſign. That the Excuſe the Earl of Peterborow made to the Prince of Heſſe, for inviting him to aſſiſt in an Action he could not yet acquaint him with, was, that the indiſpenſible Neceſſity of deceiving the Enemy, had made him reſolve to ſurprize his Friends in an Attempt, which, however deſperate, was yet the only poſſible Way of carrying on the Siege with Succeſs. That 'twas own'd by all who were there, that, had not his Lordſhip ſhewn an unexampled Vigor and Courage, and expos'd himſelf more than perhaps became one in his Poſt, the Efforts of the Enemy, and the Miſtakes of ſome of his own People, had put this important Enterprize beyond all Retrieve: So that few Generals could have accompliſh'd what he did, and that fewer, conſidering his Circumſtances, would have attempted it. Thus far the Earl of Peterborow's Panegyriſt and Apologiſt: And as I would do no Injuſtice either to his Lordſhip, or to the Memory of the Prince of Heſſe, I leave my Readers at full Liberty to determine, which of the Two had the greater Share in the Enterprize againſt Fort Monjuich; and ſhall purſue relating Matters of Fact.

* Dr. John Friend, ubi ſupra, p. 32, & ſeq.

The better to conceal this Deſign from the Enemy, the Cannon, Stores and Baggage, were drawn off to be reimbark'd; and 'twas given out, that the Army was to march by Land, to meet the Fleet at Terragona. In the mean Time, Scaling-Ladders, and all Things neceſſary for the Attempt upon Monjuich being got in Readineſs; on Sunday the 13th of September, N. S. about Six a-Clock in the Evening, a Detachment of Four Hundred Grenadiers, under the Command of Colonel Southwell, with Six Hundred Foot to ſupport them, were order'd to march by the way of Seria, towards Terragona; but about Ten at Night, the Earl of Peterborow order'd them to march directly to Fort Monjuich. About Midnight, that firſt Detachment was follow'd by another of a Thouſand Men more; and to theſe were join'd ſome Dragoons, who poſted themſelves in a Place call'd the Cover'd Croſs, to oppoſe any Horſe that ſhould attempt to come out of the Town. The greateſt Part of the Way not being paſſable for above one Man a-breaſt, and the Night very dark, it was Break of Day before the firſt Detachment could reach the Foot of the Mountain: And ſome Miquelets, belonging to the Enemy, having given the Alarm to thoſe in the Caſtle, and in the Town, the Prince of Heſſe, upon his Arrival, found the Gariſon in Arms, who receiv'd the Confederates with a general Diſcharge of their Artillery and Muſkets. Hereupon the Prince, and the Lord Charlemont, who commanded as Brigadier, order'd Colonel Southwell to begin the Attack; which he did with ſo much Vigor and Bravery, that he enter'd the Cover'd Way, and the Ditch, got upon a Curtain not yet finiſh'd, and, notwithſtanding the continual Fire of the Enemy from all Parts, drove them from all their Out-works, and obliged them to retire into the Caſtle. Upon this Succeſs, the Prince of Heſſe advancing, with great Eagerneſs, thro' all the Fire from Two Bulwarks and a Curtain, without any Shelter, was unfortunately ſhot with a Muſket-Ball, which paſſing thro' his Thigh, tore an Artery; by which he loſt ſo great a Quantity of Blood, that after he had march'd about Fifty Paces, ſtill animating his Men, as tho' he knew nothing of his being wounded, at laſt he dropt down; and being carry'd to an adjacent Cottage, expir'd, before the Surgeon could look upon his Wound. This Accident caſt an immediate Damp upon the Spirits of the Soldiers, who had great Confidence in the Prince: And as one Misfortune is generally attended by another, it happen'd that the Enemy, who was retir'd into the Donjon, perceiving ſome Diſorder among the Confederates, either to deride, or decoy them, cry'd out, Long live King Charles! and, by Signs, invited the Aſſailants to come to them. Hereupon Colonel Allen, with about Two Hundred and fifty Men, advanc'd towards the Fort, whoſe Gate the Spaniards open'd, the better to cover their Stratagem; but when he came near it, they put themſelves in a Poſture to fire upon him, and his Men, and bid him ſurrender; which he was oblig'd to do, there being no Poſſibility of retreating. What diſhearten'd the Beſiegers yet more, was, that the Marquis de Riſbourg, marching out of Barcelona to ſuccour the Line of Communication, eaſily diſpers'd ſome Catalans that guarded a Paſs, and ſo brought a Supply of about Two Hundred Grenadiers into the Citadel: Whereupon the Officer that commanded in Chief, order'd all the ſeveral Detachments of the Confederate Forces to retreat. The News of theſe Miſchances being ſpeedily brought to the Earl of Peterborow, (by Colonel Rieutort, the late Prince of Heſſe's Aid de Camp) his Lordſhip, juſtly tranſported with Indignation at the Orders that had been given for a Retreat, immediately order'd the Troops to face about; and drawing his Sword, and throwing away the Scabbard, ſaid, He was ſure, all brave Men would follow him. With that, he put himſelf at the Head of the Detachments, and ſo animated them by his Example, that they ſoon regain'd all the Ground they had quitted: His Lordſhip expoſing himſelf to the greateſt Danger, and poſting himſelf at the Foot of the Donjon. Hereupon the Marquis of Riſbourg, who had contributed to the taking of Colonel Allen, having reinforc'd the Gariſon of the Caſtle with Part of his Grenadiers, and ſent the Engliſh Priſoners to the Town, and fearing to be intercepted himſelf by the Earl of Peterborow, retir'd thither with all Speed. A little while after, the Miquelets made themſelves Maſters of St. Bertram's Fort, whereby the Communication between the Town and the Citadel was entirely cut off.

The Confederates having made Lodgments to cover themſelves, began to batter the Caſtle with Five Pieces of Cannon, that were found in St. Bertram's Fort, and Four others gain'd by the Engliſh in another Poſt; but theſe Pieces being of too ſmall a Bore, and the Walls very thick, this Cannonading had but little Effect. Hereupon it was reſolv'd to ply the Enemy with Bombs and Grenadoes, to oblige them to ſurrender; but the Prince Caraccioli della Torrella, a Neapolitan, who commanded in the Abſence of the Governor, held out reſolutely for Two Days. On the 17th of September, (N. S.) the Fort ſurrender'd, by this extraordinary Accident: Colonel Southwell, who commanded in the Trenches, obſerving that the Bombs thrown by a Dutch Bombardier from a ſmall Mortar in the Trenches, fell to the Left of the Fort, and concluding, that there was a Magazine in the Place, he travers'd the Mortar himſelf more to the Right, and fir'd it; and the Bomb falling directly into a little Chapel, where the Gariſon kept their Powder, blew up the Commanding-Officer, with Three or Four more. As ſoon as the Blaſt was over, all the Gariſon came running out, and ſurrender'd themſelves Priſoners to Colonel Southwell; who, upon the Succeſs of the Bomb, was already advancing Sword in Hand, at the Head of his Men, to improve the Confuſion which he obſerv'd the Gariſon to be in. In Acknowledgment of this ſignal Piece of Service, the King of Spain, and the Earl of Peterborow, made him Governor of that Fortreſs.

Fort Monjuich taken.

This Succeſs was the more conſiderable, in that it facilitated the Attack of the Town of Barcelona, whoſe Fortifications were weakeſt on that ſide. Nor did the Earl of Peterborow (who, being rid of his Rival, was now to have all the Honour of the Enterprize) loſe any Time in improving that Advantage: For as ſoon as Stanhope's Brigade, and ſome other Troops were come up, he caus'd the Trenches to be open'd, and Four Batteries of Cannon, and Two of Mortars, to be erected; in which Service, both the Miquelets, and the Engliſh and Dutch Seamen were very uſeful. In the mean Time, the Bomb-Veſſels threw above Four Hundred Shells into the Town, which occaſion'd a great Conſternation among the People; and the Batteries fir'd with ſo much Succeſs, that on the 4th of October N. S. Don Franciſco de Velaſco conſented to capitulate; and thereupon Brigadier Stanhope was exchanged with Count de Ribeira, as Hoſtages. The Viceroy made ſeveral extravagant Demands, the debating of which continued till the 9th; when it was agreed, That the Gariſon ſhould march out with all the Marks of Honour, be tranſported by Sea to St. Felix, near Palamos, and conducted from thence to Gironne: But upon Advice that Gironne had ſurrender'd to King Charles III. it was agreed, that Don Franciſco de Velaſco, with his Gariſon, ſhould be tranſported to Roſes; which, by this Time, was the only Place in Catalonia, that had not declar'd for the Houſe of Auſtria. Thus was accompliſh'd the Conqueſt of the largeſt and richeſt Province of Spain, with an Army ſcarce double the Number of the Gariſon of Barcelona!

Barcelona capitulates, and ſurrenders, Oct. 9. N. S.

Gironne ſurrenders alſo.

King Charles III. having made his Entry into that City, and receiv'd the Oath of Fidelity of his Subjects; a Council of the Land and Sea Generals was held, wherein it was thought fit to comply with his Catholick Majeſty's Reſolution, of venturing his own Perſon with the Catalans; and that the Earl of Peterborow ſhould continue with that Prince, with the Land-Forces, and as many of the Marines as could be ſpar'd from the Service of the Ships. The Seaſon of the Year being far ſpent, it was, at the ſame Time, reſolv'd, That Sir Cloudeſly Shovel and Admiral Allemonde

A. D. 1705. ſhould make the beſt of their way Home; that Twenty Five Engliſh, and Fifteen Dutch Men of War, ſhould Winter at Liſbon, under the Command of Sir John Leake, and Rear-Admiral Waſſenaer; and that Four Engliſh, and Two Dutch Frigats, ſhould be left at Barcelona. The Fleet ſail'd from thence, a few Days after; and Don Franciſco de Velaſco, not thinking himſelf ſafe at Roſes, and having deſired to be tranſported to Malaga and Alicant, was, accordingly, landed there, with about a Thouſand Men of the Gariſon of Barcelona. The reſt having readily liſted themſelves in the Service of King Charles, a Regiment of Five Hundred Dragoons was form'd out of them, for his Majeſty's Guard; and Six other Regiments, were afterwards raiſed by the States of Catalonia.

The Kingdom of Valencia reduced by Colonel Nebot, and Major-General Ramos.

While the well-affected Miquelets and Catalans, ſome of them headed by the Count de Cifuentes, and aſſiſted by the Engliſh and Dutch Forces, ſecured themſelves in the Cities and Towns of Terragona, Tortoza, Lerida, San Mattheo, Gironne, and other Places, Don Raphael Nebot, a Catalan, having quitted King Philip's Service, came with his whole Regiment (of Five Hundred Horſe, and One Hundred and Fifty Horſe more that join'd him) to Denia, where being reinforc'd by Major-General Ramos, with Part of the Gariſon, they made themſelves Maſters of Xabea, Oliva, Gandia, and Alzira, in the Kingdom of Valencia. Fluſh'd with theſe Succeſſes, they march'd to the Capital City, with a Thouſand Horſe, Five Hundred Foot, and a great Number of the Militia, and, by the Aſſiſtance of ſome of the Inhabitants, made themſelves Maſters of that Place, where they took the Marquis de Villa-Garcia, the Viceroy, and the Archbiſhop, Priſoners. Hereupon the whole Kingdom of Valencia, the Towns of Alicant and Peniſola, excepted, declared for King Charles the Third, who immediately raiſed Colonel Nebot to the Poſt of a Major-General, and, a few ∴ Days after, appointed the Count de Cifuentes Viceroy of Valencia, at which the Earl of Peterborow, who began to grow jealous of that Count, was not a little diſguſted.

* See the Earl of Peterborow's Conduct, &c. p. 197, & ſeq.

In the firſt Conſultation * about the War, after the taking of Barcelona, the Engliſh General was of Opinion, That the Forces ſhould be divided; and the better Half march immediately into Valentia, the reſt into Arragon. The Major-Generals Conyngham and Schrotenbach, were againſt fatiguing and diminiſhing the Troops, ſince they were hardly ſufficient to defend the Places already poſſeſs'd in Catalonia. The latter Opinion had its Weight, and prevail'd: But, however, the Earl of Peterborow obtain'd univerſal Conſent, to ſend a good Body to Lerida, and about One Thouſand Foot, and Two Hundred Horſe, to Tortoſa. With this ſmall Force, his Lordſhip impatiently preſs'd for marching into Valentia; but there were ſome at Court, who were better pleaſed, that the Reduction of that Kingdom ſhould be procured by their Correſpondence and Management, than that it ſhould be owing to the Engliſh General, who treated King Charles, and his Miniſters, with more Frankneſs, and Familiarity, than is agreeable to the German Gravity and Grandeur. In the mean Time, the City of Valencia was brought to declare for the Houſe of Auſtria; but the Rejoicings upon this Occaſion, were of ſhort Continuance, and the Diviſions at the Court of Barcelona, gave the Enemy Time to bring a Body of Three Thouſand Horſe, and as many Foot, into the Kingdom of Valencia, under the Command of the Conde de las Torres, an experienced General, who laid Siege to San Mattheo, where Colonel Jones, a brave Welſhman, commanded ſome Hundreds of Miquelets. This Place being of great Importance by its Situation, in regard that all Communication between Catalonia and Valencia muſt have been cut off, had it fallen into the Enemy's Hands, the News of its being beſieged, gave great Alarms to the Court. However, upon a Report, that the Country People of Catalonia, Valencia, and Arragon, had taken up Arms, to the Number of Sixteen Thouſand Men; that they had ſurrounded Count Tilly, who had with him One Thouſand Horſe, and One Thouſand Foot; and that there was nothing wanting to the entire Deſtruction of thoſe Troops before St. Mattheo, but a few Officers, and ſome of the Diſciplin'd Troops that were in Tortoſa, to encourage and direct this Multitude, ſo conveniently poſted, the King of Spain order'd †, or rather deſir'd the Earl of Peterborow to give ſpeedy Directions in it. His Lordſhip regretted the loſt Time too much, to loſe one Moment more, and inſtead of ſending to a Subaltern the Orders required, he immediately went Poſt to Tortoſa; and though St. Mattheo was above Thirty Leagues from Barcelona, in about Eight Days from his Departure, he found ways to raiſe that Siege, though he found the Report of the Country being up in Arms, entirely falſe; and though he had nothing to depend upon, but One Thouſand Foot, and Two Hundred Dragoons. The Methods his Lordſhip purſued in this, and other remarkable Services, were ſo uncommon and extraordinary, that notwithſtanding all the Care a late Writer ‖ has taken, to relate what paſs'd, with the utmoſt Veracity and Exactneſs, the Account of them has more the Air of

The Siege of San Mattheo raiſed.

‖ Dr. Friend, Ubi ſupra, p. 196.

Romance, than Hiſtory. After the raiſing of the Siege of San Mattheo, the Earl of Peterborow, reſolv'd to make a Shew of purſuing the Enemy, without entirely expoſing his little Body, if they ſhould be better inform'd, and lay aſide their panick Fear. So while they march'd through a narrow Plain, leading to Valencia, his Lordſhip took along the Edge of it, to a Place call'd Albocazor. Here he receiv'd an Expreſs from the King, with the diſmal Account, "That the Duke of Noailles "was entring, with near Eight Thouſand Men, into Catalonia, from the Side of "Rouſſillon; that the Body under Prince Iſerclaes Tilly, in Arragon, was Four Thou- "ſand, or Five Thouſand, preſſing upon all the Places near Lerida; that the Duke "of Anjou, with Mareſchal de Theſſé, was forming a Body of Ten Thouſand Men "near Madrid, which would ſoon be in Motion; beſides the Troops under the "Duke of Berwick, on the Side of Portugal. At the ſame Time, the King ac- "quainted his Lordſhip, that he was obliged to countermand the One Thouſand "Foot, and Three Hundred Horſe, which were appointed to join him, and were "already come almoſt as far as Tortoſa." And the other Letters from Court repreſented the Neceſſity of defending Catalonia, and above all, the Care and Preſervation of the King's Perſon; but in this Matter his Lordſhip had no poſitive Orders from the King. In theſe Circumſtances, his Lordſhip adviſed with his Officers, who were unanimouſly of Opinion, that all Endeavours ought to be uſed, for the ſpeedy ſupport of Catalonia: Whereupon his Lordſhip ſo far comply'd with the Council of War, as to give Orders to the Foot, with a ſmall Party of Horſe, to march back to Vinaros, Six Leagues diſtant from Tortoſa, where, in caſe of Neceſſity, he could embark the Foot in Boats, and ſling them ſecurely into the Ebro; but being fully reſolv'd never to repaſs that River, without poſitive Orders from the King, he ſet out with a Party of Horſe to purſue the Enemy. The Earl expreſs'd himſelf very freely upon that Subject, in a Letter he wrote from Alcala * to the King, wherein he told him, That if his Majeſty would have believed him, he probably had not only had, at this Time, a Viceroy of Valencia, but the Kingdom; concluding, That if the Time loſt expoſed his Lordſhip to a Sacrifice, at leaſt he would periſh with Honour, and as a Man deſerving a better Fate. At the ſame Time, the Earl ſent Orders to the One Thouſand Spaniſh Foot, and Three Hundred Horſe, to enter into Valencia; and in Caſe the King ſhould again remand them to Lerida, his Lordſhip had ſent poſitive Orders for Colonel Wills to march immediately with an equal Number of Horſe and Foot to his Aſſiſtance. This Reſolution produced the deſired Effect; and Orders were ſent from the Court at Barcelona, to the Spaniſh Forces, to follow the Direction of the Engliſh General. Hereupon the Earl of Peterborow continued the Purſuit of the Enemy, who retired from him with the ſame Precipitation, as they fled from San Mattheo, being ſtill, (by the ſame Artifices and Stratagems uſed to make them raiſe the Siege) perſuaded, that they were follow'd by conſiderable Forces. After ſeveral Days March, his Lordſhip poſſeſs'd himſelf of Nules, where he began to form that Cavalry which ſecured the Kingdom of Valencia, and afterwards contributed to ſave Barcelona; taking near Two Hundred Horſe in a Place, where the Enemy had Three Thouſand Men the Day before. After this, his Lordſhip came to Caſtillon de la Plana, a Town populous, rich, and well affected, where having procured and bought near Eight Hundred Horſes, he not only recruited the diſmounted Engliſh and Spaniſh Dragoons, but form'd a new Regiment of Dragoons out of Part of the Lord Barrymore's Regiment of Foot, the Command of which new Corps, he gave to Lieutenant-Colonel Pierce, ordering the remaining Officers of the Old to return to England, to recruit the ſame. Having drawn together Ten Squadrons of Horſe and Dragoons, and Four Battalions of Foot, regular Forces, beſides about Three Thouſand Militia, his Lordſhip march'd to Morviedro, the ancient Saguntum, ſo famous in the Roman Hiſtory, Four Leagues diſtant from Valencia, where Brigadier Maboni, an Iriſh Officer, had under his Command about Eight Hundred Men, near half of whom were his own Regiment of Dragoons. The Town and Caſtle were an old Fortification, ſecured by a River, which the Earl of Peterborow was to paſs, and ſo were capable of making ſome Reſiſtance: But Brigadier Maboni having conſented to have an Interview with the Engliſh General, the latter made ſo advantageous a Shew of his Strength, that Maboni was, at laſt, perſuaded to ſurrender the Town, being allow'd to withdraw his Troops. At the ſame Time, the Earl of Peterborow ſo dextrouſly raiſed Jealouſies of Maboni, in ſeveral of the Spaniſh Officers, and in the Duke of Arcos, who had ſucceeded the Conde de las Torres, that his Lordſhip met with no Diſturbance in his March through the Plain from Morviedro to Valencia, where his Lordſhip was receiv'd with extraordinary, and, indeed, extravagant Demonſtrations of Joy. Whole Bodies of Prieſts and Fryars, in their ſeveral Habits, were regimented, and drawn up under Arms, Arms, to attend him, publickly acknowledging they ow'd their Preſervation to his Lordſhip's unparallel'd Reſolution and Activity.

About this Time, a conſiderable Action happen'd near St. Iſtevan de Litera. Major-General Connyngham, who was lately advanc'd to the Poſt of Lieutenant-General, and commanded in Lerida, with a ſtrong Gariſon of Engliſh and Dutch, having Intelligence, † that the Enemy about Balbaſtro, deſign'd to attack ſome of his Dragoons at Tamarite, he immediately ſent thither Colonel Wills, with Six Hundred Men: Whereupon the Enemy repaſs'd the River, and retired to Balbaſtro. Three Days after, ‖ the Chevalier d' Asfeld, with Nine Squadrons of Horſe and Dragoons, and as many Battalions of Foot, all French, advanc'd to attack Colonel Wills, who, the Day before, had march'd to St. Iſtevan de Litera, with no more than Four Hundred Foot, and Thirty Dragoons. Upon the Enemy's Approach, Colonel Wills drew out his ſmall Number, and attack'd their advanc'd Guard ſo briſkly, that he beat them back to their Body; and purſuing them a League, obliged them to retire in Confuſion to Fons and Almana. At Night, Colonel Wills was join'd by Lieutenant-General Connyngham, and Colonel Palm, with the reſt of the Troops, to the Number, in all, of between Eleven and Twelve Hundred Men. The next Morning, the Chevalier d' Asfeld advanc'd with his Troops to attack the Confederates, who thereupon drew out, and poſted their Foot on a Hill, towards which the Enemy's Foot was marching. About Eight a Clock they were fully engag'd, and the Enemy puſh'd Two Companies of Engliſh Grenadiers; but Major Buſton march'd up with ſome Plotoons, and beat them back again: At which Time Lieutenant-General Connyngham receiv'd a Shot through his Belly, and was carry'd off. Colonel Wills having then the Command, continu'd the Fight 'till Three in the Afternoon; but though the Enemy employ'd a great Part of their Forces to drive the Confederates from the Hill, yet the latter kept their Ground with ſo much Reſolutation, that the Enemy thought fit to retreat again to Fons and Almana. The Troops fought with extraordinary Bravery on both Sides, ſo that the Muzzles of their Pieces met. The Confederates had ſeveral Officers, and about One Hundred and Fifty private Men kill'd or wounded, but had no Priſoners taken from them; whereas the Enemy had Four Hundred Men kill'd; and left behind them a Lieutenant-Colonel, and a Lieutenant of Dragoons, who were made Priſoners. Colonel Wills continued till Five on the Field of Battel, and then march'd to Balaguer, where Lieutenant-General Connyngham died, Three Days after, of his Wounds. With this Action we ſhall conclude the Account of Foreign Affairs, during the Year 1705, and ſo return to England.

On the 29th of September, the Common-Hall of the City of London, (according to Cuſtom) proceeded to the Election of a Lord-Mayor; and having return'd Sir Thomas Rawlinſon, and Sir Robert Bedingfield to the Court of Aldermen, they unanimouſly made Choice of the Firſt, who was accordingly declared Lord-Mayor Elect, for the Year enſuing. A Week after, * her Majeſty was pleas'd to beſtow the Dignity of a Baronet of this Kingdom, upon William Fleming of Rydall, in the County of Weſtmoreland, Eſq; in Conſideration of the Antiquity of his Family, and the faithful adhering of him and his Anceſtors to the Intereſt of the Crown. Four Days after ∴, the Queen, and his Royal Highneſs went from Windſor to Kenſington; where, the next Day, her Majeſty in Council, was pleaſed to commit the Cuſtody of the Great-Seal to William Cowper, Eſq; one of her Majeſty's Learned Council in the Law, with the Title of Lord Keeper of the Great Seal of England: And the uſual Oaths being adminiſtred to him, his Lordſhip took his Place at the Board accordingly. About the ſame Time, her Majeſty thought fit to remove the Earl of Abingdon from being Lord-Lieutenant of Oxfordſhire, and Conſtable of the Tower of London: And on Tueſday, the 23d of October, being the firſt Day of the Term, the Lord Keeper went in great State to the Court of Chancery in Weſtminſter, being accompanied by many of the Nobility and Gentry. Two Days before, the Learned Dr. Wake, was conſecrated Biſhop of Lincoln, at Lambeth Chapel, where Dr. Kennet, preach'd upon that Occaſion, with great Applauſe. The 30th of the ſame Month, Dr. John Arburthnot was ſworn her Majeſty's Phyſician Extraordinary, by her Majeſty's ſpecial Command, in Conſideration of his good and ſucceſsful Services, perform'd as Phyſician to his Royal Highneſs.

turn'd to their own Houſe, where the Appearance was greater than had been known at the opening of any Parliament for Fifty Years paſt; no leſs than Four Hundred Fifty Six Members having now been ſworn. The whole Nation was at a Gaze, and no leſs divided in their Affections, than in their Hopes and Fears about the good or ill Succeſs of this Parliament, which, all Parties agreed, muſt depend upon the Choice of a Speaker. Nor was there leſs Contention within, than Expectation without: The Two Candidates for that high and important Station, were William Bromley, Eſq; one of the Repreſentatives of the Univerſity of Oxford, and John Smith, Eſq; the Firſt put up by the High-Church, the other by the Low-Church Party. On the other Hand, the Earl of Diſert recommended Mr. Bromley, and was ſupported by Sir Thomas Hanmer, Sir Edward Seymour, Sir William Drake, Mr. Frederick Herne, Mr. Anneſley, and Sir Roger Moſtyn: But after a Debate of about an Hour and Half, the Houſe divided, and Two Members being appointed to tell the Voices, Mr. Smith had Two Hundred Forty Eight, and Mr. Bromley Two Hundred and Five only. My LORDS and GENTLEMEN,

The Queen's Speech to both Houſes, Oct. 27.

" I Have been very deſirous to meet you as early as I thought you might be call'd " together, without Inconvenience to your ſelves.

" And it is with much ſatisfaction I obſerve ſo full an Appearance at the open- " ing of the Parliament, becauſe it is a Ground for me to conclude, you are all con- " vinc'd of the Neceſſity of proſecuting the juſt War, in which we are engag'd, " and therefore are truly ſenſible, that 'tis of the greateſt Importance to us, to be " timely in our Preparations.

" Nothing can be more evident, than that if the French King continues Maſter of " the Spaniſh Monarchy, the Balance of Power in Europe is utterly deſtroy'd, and he " will be able, in a ſhort Time, to engroſs the Trade, and the Wealth of the " World.

" No good Engliſhman could, at any Time, be content to ſit ſtill, and acquieſce " in ſuch a Proſpect: And at this Time we have great Grounds to hope, that, by " the Bleſſing of GOD upon our Arms, and thoſe of our Allies, a good Foundation " is laid for reſtoring the Monarchy of Spain to the Houſe of Auſtria; the Conſe- " quences of which will not only be ſafe and advantageous, but glorious for " England.

" I may add, We have learnt, by our own Experience, that no Peace with France " will laſt longer, than the firſt Opportunity of their dividing the Allies, and of " attacking ſome of them with Advantage.

" All our Allies muſt needs be ſo ſenſible, this is the true State of the Caſe, that " I make no doubt but ſuch Meaſures will ſoon be concerted, as that, if we be not " wanting to our ſelves, we ſhall ſee the next Campaign begin offenſively, on all " Sides, againſt our Enemies, in a moſt vigorous Manner.

" I muſt therefore deſire you, Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons, to grant me " the Supplies, which will be requiſite for carrying on the next Year's Service, both " by Sea and Land; and, at the ſame Time, to conſider, that the giving all poſ- " ſible Diſpatch, will make the Supply it ſelf much more effectual.

" The Firmneſs and Conduct which the Duke of Savoy has ſhewn amidſt extreme " Difficulties, is beyond Example.

" I have not been wanting to do all that was poſſible for me, in order to his be- " ing ſupported.

" I ought to take Notice to you, that the King of Pruſſia's Troops have been very " uſeful to this End; your Approbation of that Treaty laſt Seſſions, and the En- " couragement you gave upon it, leave me no Doubt of being able to renew it for " another Year.

" I take this Occaſion to aſſure you, that not only whatever ſhall be granted " by Parliament for bearing the Charge of the War, ſhall be laid out for that Pur- " poſe, with the greateſt Faithfulneſs and Management: But that I will continue " to add, out of my own Revenues, all I can reaſonably ſpare, beyond the neceſ- " ſary Expences for the Honour of the Government.

My LORDS and GENTLEMEN,

" By an Act of Parliament paſs'd the laſt Winter, I was enabled to appoint " Commiſſioners for this Kingdom, to treat with Commiſſioners to be impower'd

A. D. 1705.

" by Authority of Parliament in Scotland, concerning a nearer, and more compleat " Union between the Two Kingdoms, as ſoon as an Act ſhould be made there for " that Purpoſe: I think it proper for me to acquaint you, that ſuch an Act is late- " ly paſs'd there, and I intend, in a ſhort Time, to cauſe Commiſſions to be made " out, in order to put the Treaty on Foot, which I heartily deſire may prove ſuc- " ceſsful; becauſe I am perſuaded, that an Union of the Two Kingdoms will not " only prevent many Inconveniencies, which may otherwiſe happen, but muſt con- " duce to the Peace and Happineſs of both Nations; and therefore I hope I ſhall " have your Aſſiſtance in bringing this great Work to a good Concluſion.

" There is another Union, I think my ſelf oblig'd to recommend to you, in the " moſt earneſt and affectionate Manner, I mean an Union of Mind and Affections " amongſt our ſelves: It is that which would, above all Things, diſappoint and " defeat the Hopes and Deſigns of our Enemies.

" I cannot but with Grief obſerve, there are ſome amongſt us, who endeavour to " foment Animoſities; but I perſuade my ſelf, they will be found to be very few, " when you appear to aſſiſt me in diſcountenancing and defeating ſuch Pra- " ctices.

" I mention this with a little more Warmth, becauſe there have not been want- " ing ſome ſo very malicious, as, even in Print, to ſuggeſt the CHURCH of ENG- " LAND, as by Law eſtabliſh'd, to be in DANGER at this Time.

" I am willing to hope, not one of my Subjects can really entertain a Doubt of " my Affection to the Church, or ſo much as ſuſpect that it will not be my chief " Care to ſupport it, and leave it ſecure after me: And therefore we may be cer- " tain, that they who go about to inſinuate Things of this Nature, muſt be mine " and the Kingdom's Enemies, and can only mean to cover Deſigns, which they " dare not publickly own, by endeavouring to diſtract us with unreaſonable and " groundleſs Diſtruſts and Jealouſies.

" I muſt be ſo plain as to tell you, the beſt Proofs we all can give, at preſent, " of our Zeal for the Preſervation of the Church, will be to join heartily in proſe- " cuting the War againſt an Enemy, who is certainly engag'd to extirpate our Re- " ligion, as well as to reduce this Kingdom to Slavery.

" I will always affectionately ſupport and countenance the Church of England, as " by Law eſtabliſh'd.

" I will inviolably maintain the Toleration.

" I will do all I can to prevail with my Subjects to lay aſide their Diviſions, and " will ſtudy to make them all ſafe and eaſy.

" I will endeavour to promote Religion and Virtue amongſt them, and to encou- " rage Trade, and every Thing elſe that may make them a flouriſhing and happy " People.

" And they, who ſhall concur zealouſly with me, in carrying on theſe good De- " ſigns, ſhall be ſure to find my Kindneſs and Favour.

This pathetick and comprehenſive Speech, penn'd by the new Lord Keeper, was receiv'd with great Applauſe, by the Generality of the People, and the Majority in both Houſes of Parliament. On the 1ſt Day of November, the Lords attended the Queen with an Addreſs, wherein having taken Notice of what had been deliver'd from the Throne, they aſſured her, That they concurr'd in theſe her Majeſty's wiſe and noble Sentiments; and that no Dangers ſhould deter them, nor any Artifices divert them, from doing all that was in their Power, to aſſiſt her Majeſty in carrying on the War, till ſhe ſhould be enabled to procure ſuch a Peace for Europe, as ſhe had mention'd in her Speech. They commended, or, as they expreſs'd it, admired in her Majeſty, that tender and indulgent Affection to her People, which ſhe had ſhewn from the beginning of her Reign: That earneſt Deſire to unite them among themſelves, and to make them all eaſy, ſafe, and happy: That ſteddy Zeal for the Church of England, and that Compaſſion for thoſe who were ſo unhappy, as to diſſent from her. And promiſed, to do all they could to diſcountenance and defeat the Deſigns and Practices of thoſe who fomented Animoſities among her People; ever to ſhew the utmoſt Deteſtation of thoſe ungrateful and wicked Men, who labour'd to diſhonour her Majeſty's Reign, and diſtract her Subjects with unreaſonable and groundleſs Jealouſies of Dangers to the Church of England: And to be ready to concur in all Meaſures requiſite to put a Stop to the Malice of thoſe INCENDIARIES. The Queen return'd their Lordſhips her hearty Thanks for this Addreſs; aſſured them it was a great Satisfaction to her to find they were ſo ready to concur in thoſe Things ſhe had recommended to them: And the Commons having, Five Days * after, waited on her Majeſty with their Addreſs, wherein they alſo repeated, and concurr'd in all the eſſential Parts of her Speech, the Queen told them, She took very kindly the Confidence expreſs'd in her Care of the Publick, and their Concern for the Occaſion ſhe had to complain; and return'd them her hearty

On the 9th of November, the Commons, in a grand Committee, voted a Supply to her Majeſty; which Reſolution was, the next * Day, reported, and approv'd; and order'd, That Eſtimates of the Sea-Service, Land-Forces, and Office of Ordnance; as alſo, Accounts of other particular Expences; of the Number of Ships and Men employ'd in the Sea-Service, from the 1ſt of November 1704, to the ſame Day 1705; of the Sums of Money that had ariſen by Prizes, &c. might be laid before the Houſe: Which was readily comply'd with. Three † Days after, the Commons having taken the Queen's Speech into Conſideration, reſolv'd to "addreſs her Ma- "jeſty, to return her Thanks for her tender Regard to the Good and Welfare of "both her Kingdoms of England and Scotland; for her great Care and Endeavour to "ſettle the Succeſſion of the Kingdom of Scotland in the Houſe of Hanover; for "preſerving the Peace, and promoting the Union of the Two Kingdoms: And to "aſſure her Majeſty, That this Houſe would, to the utmoſt of their Power, aſ- "ſiſt her Majeſty to bring this great Work to a happy Concluſion. And like- "wiſe, That ſhe would be graciouſly pleas'd to direct, that the whole Proceed- "ings of the laſt Seſſion of Parliament in Scotland, relating to the Union of the "Two Kingdoms, and the Settlement of the Succeſſion of Scotland in the Houſe of "Hanover, be laid before this Houſe.

† Nov. 13. Addreſs of the Commons about the intended Union.

Two Days after, Mr. Secretary Harley acquainted the Houſe, That this Addreſs having been preſented to her Majeſty, She was pleas'd to give an Anſwer in theſe Words: I take very kindly the Senſe you expreſs of my Endeavours to promote the Proteſtant Succeſſion, and the Treaty of Union in Scotland. I have given Direction for complying with your Addreſs; and you ſhall have the State of that Matter, as ſoon as it can conveniently be ſent you.

The Queen's Anſwer.

On the 12th of November, the Lords took her Majeſty's Speech into Conſideration; and, after a long Debate, which was begun by the Earls of Rocheſter and Nottingham, a Committee was order'd to ſit the next Day, to draw up an Addreſs to the Queen, to deſire, That her Majeſty would be pleas'd to order all Papers, relating to the Proceedings of the laſt Seſſions of the Parliament of Scotland, to be laid before the Houſe: Which Orders the Queen gave accordingly. On the 15th, their Lordſhips went upon the State of the Nation, her Majeſty being preſent: And the Lord Haverſham made the following Speech:

Debate of the Lords Houſe about the State of the Nation.

My LORDS,

"IT may, perhaps, be expected, ſince I mov'd to you the State of the Nation, "that I ſhould ſay ſomewhat to you upon this Occaſion: And tho' I never la- "bour'd under more Difficulties than I do at preſent, yet being conſcious to my ſelf "of a Heart full of Loyalty and Duty to her Majeſty, and Zeal for her Service, as is "poſſible for any Subject to have; and knowing, that the beſt Way of preſerving Liberty "of Speech in Parliament, is, to make uſe of it; I will mention Three or Four "general Heads to your Lordſhips, and ſpeak to them with a great deal of Free- "dom and Plainneſs.

The Lord Haverſham's Speech.

"The firſt Thing I ſhall ſpeak to, is, the preſent Confederate War, in which "we are engag'd: And becauſe the beſt way of judging what we may reaſonably "expect for the future, is to conſider the Actions that are paſt; give me Leave a "little to take notice to your Lordſhips, of the Operations of the laſt Campaign. I "ſhall not ſay much of our Forcing the French Lines, and our Beating the French "Troops afterwards (tho' that was a very great and brave Action); but becauſe there "was ſuch a Mixture of Victory and Misfortune, and that this is ſuch a chequer'd Pi- "cture, I purpoſely forbear taking further Notice of it.

"But there were Two other Actions, which, I think, take in your whole Cam- "paign; The March of our Army to the Moſelle, and, the Buſineſs of Over-Yſche: In "both which, give me Leave to ſay, (not to give it a harder Term) I think, we "were not uſed, as we might have reaſonably expected. Our General, with a great "deal of Conduct, cover'd Prince Lewis of Baden's Army; nor can it be doubted, "he might eaſily have join'd us, if he had pleas'd, without the leaſt Danger "from the French; which if he had done, by the beſt Account I could ever get, "(and, I think, I have a very true one) we had been at leaſt Five and Twenty "Thouſand ſtronger than the French there: But being diſappointed of being join'd "by Prince Lewis, and of the Aſſiſtance we expected from him, that great De- "ſign prov'd abortive.

"The next, was the Buſineſs of Over-Yſche; where, by the Conduct of my Lord "Duke of Marlborough, we had a fair Opportunity of putting an End to the War

"at

A. D. 1705.

" at once. The Dutch held our Hand, and would not let us give the deciding " Blow.

" Thus ended your Campaign; tho' it began with more promiſing Hopes of Suc- " ceſs, than this next, I believe, will. You had then an Enemy to deal with, " whoſe Counſels were diſtracted, whoſe Troops were broke, and the Courage of his Ar- " my ſunk.

" From all this, give me Leave to conclude, That it is neither Men nor Money, " Courage and Conduct, that are the only Things neceſſary to carry on a ſucceſsful " Confederate War.

" Thoſe who command your Army, are Men of that Bravery, and every Com- " mon Soldier hath ſo much Courage, that no equal Number of Men in the World, " I think, can ſtand before them: But let our Supplies be never ſo full and ſpeedy, let " our Management be never ſo great and frugal; yet if it be our Misfortune to have " Allies that are as ſlow and backward, as we are zealous and forward; that hold " our Hands, and ſuffer us not to take any Opportunity that offers; that are " coming into the Field, when we are going into Winter-Quarters; I cannot " ſee, what it is we are reaſonably to expect.

" The next Thing I ſhall take the Liberty to ſpeak to, is, the Point of Trade: " Every one ſees, how our Merchants go off daily; and how low the Trade of this " Nation at preſent is. I know, My Lords, there is a Word we are very fond of, " which we call the Ballance of Power; but the Dutch, who are a very wiſe People, " have a double View, and take as much Care of the Ballance of Trade, as they do of " the Ballance of Power; and are as fearful of our Power at Sea, as of the Power of " France by Land. My Lords, The beſt Knowledge of Things, is by their Cauſes; " 'Tis Trade begets Wealth, as Wealth begets Power: And it ſeems very hard for Eng- " land, that while the Dutch live at Peace under the Protection of our Arms, we, if " we will have any Part of Trade with them, muſt have it under the Protection of " their Paſſes. But it will be yet much harder, if, after their having the Advan- " tage of a Trading War, we ſhould make a Tradeleſs Peace.

" I know, My Lords, the Dutch generally complain they are very poor: But, give me " Leave to ſay, I cannot ſee how they have been out of Pocket One Shilling ſince this " War; for they have more by Remittances, and Money from England, than all the " Money that goes out of their Country, to Portugal, Savoy, and the German " Princes.

" There is one Thing more, which I take to be of the greateſt Importance to us " all: 'Tis this I had chiefly in my Intention, and with which I ſhall conclude what " I have to ſay.

" But before I come to it, give me Leave to take notice of one Thing to your " Lordſhips: My Lords, 'Tis the Happineſs of England, and that which ever did, and " ever will keep the greateſt Miniſters in Awe; that, by the Law and Cuſtom of Parlia- " ment, the meaneſt Member of either Houſe has undoubted Right to debate on any Sub- " ject, and to ſpeak his Thoughts with all Freedom, without being liable to be call'd in " Queſtion by any Perſon whatever, till the Parliament it ſelf hath firſt taken any No- " tice of them. This is grounded on the greateſt Equity and Reaſon; becauſe that " which concerns all, ſhould be debated by all: Nor is it poſſible for a Parliament to de- " bate, or come to a clear Reſolution on any Queſtion, or to give Advice to her Ma- " jeſty, as they ought, without this Freedom. I give good Authority to juſtify what I " ſay: Sir * Robert Atkins tells us, in his Treatiſe of the Power and Privilege of Par- " liaments, of the Caſe of one Sir Thomas Haxey, in the Time of King Richard II. " who having deliver'd a Petition to the King, with which he was diſpleaſed; " the King ſent to the Speaker, to know who it was that deliver'd that Petition? By " which, ſays Sir Robert, it is apparent, the King cannot take notice of any Thing " done in Parliament, (he names the Houſe of Commons) but as it is repreſented to " him by the Houſe it ſelf.

" Having ſaid this, give me Leave to read to your Lordſhips a Paragraph of her " Majeſty's Speech to her laſt Parliament laſt Year: My Lords and Gentlemen, We " have, by the Bleſſing of God, a fair Proſpect of this great and deſirable End, if we do " not diſappoint it by our own unreaſonable Humour and Animoſity; the fatal Effects " of which we have ſo narrowly eſcap'd in this Seſſion, that it ought to be a ſufficient " Warning againſt any dangerous Experiments for the future.

" I ſhall not go about to ſhew the Grammatical Conſtruction of theſe Words, but " chuſe rather to ſay, That as we enjoy many Bleſſings under her Majeſty's happy " Government, ſo I hope we ſhall have this too, That her Majeſty will never give Ear " to any ſecret and private Information, but as it comes to her in a Parliamentary Way, by " the Houſes themſelves.

" The

A. D. 1705.

" The laſt Thing, My Lords, is that which I take to be of the greateſt Concern-
" ment to us all, both Queen and People : I love always to ſpeak very plain ; and
" ſhall do ſo in this Point.

" My Lords, I think there can be nothing more for the Safety of the Queen, for the " Preſervation of our Conſtitution, for the Security of the Church, and for the Advan- " tage of us all, than if the Preſumptive Heir to the Crown, according to the Act of " Settlement in the Proteſtant Line, ſhould be here amongſt us. 'Tis very plain, that " nothing can be more for the Security of any Throne, than to have a Number
" of Succeſſors round about it ; whoſe Intereſt is always to defend the Poſſeſſor from " any Danger, and prevent any Attempt againſt him, and revenge any Injury done him.
" Is there any Man, My Lords, who doubts, that if the Duke of GLOCESTER had " been now alive, her Majeſty had not been more ſecure than ſhe is ? We cannot think " of that Misfortune, without the greateſt Grief ; but yet we are not to neglect our " own Safety : And tho' a Succeſſor be not the Child of the Prince, yet is he the Child
" of the Queen and the People.

" Beſides, My Lords, the Heats and Differences which are among us, make it very " neceſſary, that we ſhould have the Preſumptive Heir reſiding here : The Duty and " Reſpect we pay her Majeſty, and the Authority of the Law, can hardly keep us in " Peace and Union amongſt our ſelves at preſent ; what then may we not fear, when
" theſe Bonds ſhall ever happen to be broken ?

" And would it not be a great Advantage to the CHURCH, for the Pre-
" ſumptive Heir to be perſonally acquainted with the Reverend the Prelates ? Nay,
" would it not be an Advantage to all England, that whenever the Succeſſor comes " over, he ſhould not bring a Flood of Foreigners along with him, to eat up and " devour the Good of the Land ?

" I will ſay no more to your Lordſhips, but conclude with this Motion :

" That an Humble Addreſs be preſented to her Majeſty by this Houſe, That her Majeſty
" will be graciouſly pleas'd to invite the Preſumptive Heir to the Crown of England,
" according to the Acts of Parliament made for ſettling the Succeſſion of the Crown in
" the Proteſtant Line, into this Kingdom, to reſide here.

This Motion was back'd by ſome Lords, but oppos'd by a great Majority ; ſo that after a Debate of Four Hours, the Queſtion being put, Whether the Princeſs Sophia ſhould be ſent for over into England, or not ? The previous Queſtion was put, Whether that Queſtion ſhould be put ? and carry'd in the Negative. However, ſome Lords, who were for the Affirmative, enter'd their Proteſts, in the following Words : We humbly conceive, that having a Preſumptive Heir to the Crown reſiding in the Kingdom, will be a great ſtrengthening to her Majeſty's Royal Hands, in the Adminiſtration of the Government, and Security of her Majeſty's Royal Perſon, and of the Succeſſion to the Crown, as by Law eſtabliſh'd, in the Proteſtant Line.

The Queſtion, Whether the Princeſs Sophia ſhould be invited to come into England ? carry'd in the Negative. Some Lords proteſt againſt it.

It was obſerv'd, that when the Lord Haverſham mention'd, in his Speech, the late Duke of Gloceſter ; the Queen was ſo touch'd with the Sound of that dear Name, that ſhe went out of the Houſe, to vent her Grief.

Tho' the Majority of the Houſe of Peers did not think fit to invite the Princeſs Sophia to come into England ; yet, to ſhew their Zeal for the Security of the Hanover Succeſſion, they appointed the 19th of the ſame Month, to take the ſame into Conſideration. The Queen was preſent in that Day's Debate ; which being over, it was carry'd without dividing, That a Bill be brought in, for the better Security of her Majeſty's Perſon and Government, and of the Succeſſion to the Crown of England, in the Proteſtant Line : And that for continuing the Adminiſtration of the Government in the Name of the next Proteſtant Succeſſor, (that may happen to be out of this Kingdom, at the Time of her Majeſty's Demiſe) until her or his Arrival, the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, the Chancellor, or Lord-Keeper of the Great Seal, the High-Treaſurer, the Preſident of the Council, the Lord Privy-Seal, the High-Admiral, and the Lord Chief-Juſtice of the Queen's-Bench, at that Time being, be conſtituted Lords Juſtices of England, and impower'd, in the Name of ſuch Succeſſor, to act, as if preſent. This Bill the Judges brought in accordingly Two † Days after ; and, at the ſame Time, the Lords order'd another Bill to be brought in, for Naturalizing the Houſe of Hanover, being Proteſtants. The ‖ next Day, the Lord Haverſham mov'd, That the Miſcarriages of the laſt Campaign, occaſion'd by the Allies, might be enquir'd into : Which being put to the Vote, was carry'd in the Negative by a great Majority. The 23d, their Lordſhips went upon the Scotch Affairs, the Queen being preſent ; and, after a long Debate, reſolv'd, " That, in order to come to an Union with the Kingdom of Scot- " land, the Act paſs'd the laſt Seſſion of the preceding Parliament, entituled, An " Act for the effectual ſecuring the Kingdom of England, from the apparent Dangers

It is to be obſerv'd, That the Queſtion * being propos'd by the Tory Party, and put, Whether it ſhould be referr'd to the Committee, to conſider, That in the Clauſe for adding Ten Thouſand Men, to act in Conjunction with the Dutch, it ſhould be provided, That they (the Dutch) be obliged to leave off Trading with France ? The Engliſh Nation had, a long Time, been kept in Suſpence, about the Succeſs of the Earl of Peterborow's Expedition, after the taking of Fort Monjuich, by reaſon of the Unfaithfulneſs of the Relations tranſmitted hither from France : But, at length, Captain Norris (of the Britannia) arriv'd at St. Helen's, the 22d of November, on Board the Canterbury ; being ſent Expreſs from Barcelona, to bring the welcome News of the Reduction of that City, in the manner before-mention'd. The Lord Shannon, and Brigadier-General (late Earl) Stanhope, came in the ſame Ship ; and brought Letters to the Queen from the King of Spain, the Junta of the Military Arm of Catalonia, the City of Barcelona, the City of Vich, and the Earl of Peterborow : Upon the Receipt of which, her Majeſty † went to the Houſe of Peers, and the Commons being ſent for up, ſhe was pleas'd to make the following Speech to both Houſes.

† Nov. 27.

My LORDS and GENTLEMEN,

The Queen's Speech to both Houſes, about the Succeſſes in Catalonia.

" HAving newly receiv'd Letters from the King of Spain, and the Earl of " Peterborow, which contain a very particular Account of our great and
" happy Succeſſes in Catalonia, and ſhewing, at the ſame Time, the Reaſonableneſs
" of their being immediately ſupported ; I look upon this to be a Matter of ſo
" much Conſequence in it ſelf, and ſo agreeable to you, that I have order'd a " Copy of the King of Spain's Letter to my ſelf ; a Letter from the Junta of the " Military Arm of Catalonia ; and another Letter from the City of Vich ; as alſo
" an Extract of the Earl of Peterborow's Letter to Me, to be communicated to both " Houſes of Parliament.

" I recommend the Conſideration of them to you, Gentlemen of the Houſe of Com-
" mons, very particularly, as the ſpeedieſt Way to reſtore the Monarchy of Spain to
" the Houſe of Auſtria : And therefore, I aſſure my ſelf, you will enable me to " proſecute the Advantages we have gain'd, in the moſt effectual manner ; and to " improve the Opportunity, which God Almighty is pleas'd to afford us, of putting " a proſperous End to the preſent War.

My LORDS and GENTLEMEN,

" I muſt not loſe this Occaſion, of deſiring you to give as much Diſpatch to
" the Matters before you, as the Nature of them will allow ; that ſo our Prepa-
" rations for next Year may be early, which cannot fail of being of great Advan" tage to us.

The Commons congratulate the Queen thereupon.

The Commons being return'd to their Houſe, Mr. Secretary Hedges laid before 'em the Letters mention'd in her Majeſty's Speech ; after the Reading of which, it was unanimouſly reſolv'd, " That an humble Addreſs be preſented to her Maje-
" ſty, to congratulate the glorious Succeſs of her Majeſty's Arms, and thoſe of her " Allies in Catalonia, and to aſſure her Majeſty, that this Houſe would, to the ut-
" moſt of their Power, enable her Majeſty to proſecute the great Advantages al" ready obtain'd there :" Which Addreſs being preſented the ſame Day, her Majeſty return'd them many Thanks for the Aſſurances they had given, which ſhe did not doubt would have a good Effect at Home and Abroad. Two Days * after, both Houſes attended the Queen with an Addreſs, importing, " That being juſtly alarm'd by the " many Artifices which the Emiſſaries of France had put in Practice the laſt Year,
" in order to raiſe Jealouſies, and create Miſunderſtandings amongſt the Allies ;
" and being apprehenſive leſt ſuch malicious Inſinuations, if they ſhould paſs un-

" rates, and, in a moſt particular Manner, to maintain and cultivate a ſtrict Friend-
" ſhip with the States-General of the United-Provinces; as alſo, by all proper Means,
" to excite the whole Confederacy to make early and effectual Preparations, and to
" exert their utmoſt Vigor in the Proſecution of the War againſt France." The Queen anſwer'd the Two Houſes, That their joining in this Addreſs, was a very particular Satisfaction to her: That their Opinion would always be of the greateſt Weight with her; That ſhe would readily comply with their Deſire; and that ſhe made no Queſtion but it would meet with a juſt Regard from all their Allies. The ſame * Day, the Commons, in a grand Committee, on the Supply, voted the granting of ſeveral Sums, and, in particular, Two Hundred and Fifty Thouſand Pounds, for her Majeſty's Proportion of the Charge of the proſecuting the Succeſſes already gain'd by King Charles the Third, for Recovery of the Monarchy of Spain to the Houſe of Auſtria.

* Nov. 29.

On the 15th of November, the Duke of Montague was in that Quality introduced into the Houſe of Peers; as was, on the 3d of December, the Duke of Argyle, of the Kingdom of Scotland, as Baron and Earl of the Kingdom of England, by the Stile, Name and Title, of Baron of Chatham, and Earl of Greenwich, in the County of Kent. The ſame † Day, the Queen came to the Houſe of Peers, with the uſual State, and gave the Royal Aſſent to An Act for exhibiting a Bill in this preſent Parliament, for Naturalizing the moſt excellent Princeſs Sophia, Electreſs and Dutcheſs Dowager of Hanover, and the Iſſue of her Body. The next ‖ Day, the Commons, in a Grand Committee, took into Conſideration the Papers communicated to their Houſe, relating to the Proceedings of the Parliament of Scotland, concerning the Union of the Two Kingdoms, and the Succeſſion of the Crown of Scotland in the Houſe of Hanover: Upon which Sir Thomas Hanmer, Baronet, made a Motion for inviting the Princeſs Sophia to come over. He was ſeconded by Mr. Benſon, and ſupported by Mr. Bromley, and ſome other Gentlemen of the Tory-Party: But another Motion being made, and the Queſtion put, That the Chairman leave the Chair, the ſame was carried in the Affirmative without dividing; and ſo Sir Thomas Hanmer's Motion dropp'd. It was, to the Generality, Matter of Wonder and Surprize, that the moſt apparent Means for ſecuring the Hanoverian Succeſſion, ſhould be propoſed by that very Set of Men, who were ſhrewdly ſuſpected of being no great Friends to that Succeſſion: But that Riddle was explain'd by thoſe who were acquainted both with the preſent Cabals, and the Arts often practis'd in Parliament; who plainly ſaw, That the Motion for inviting the Princeſs Sophia, was made by the Tories, with a Deſign to put a Slur upon it, being well aſſured, that the Court-Party would not come into it; which could not fail of being of ſome Uſe to the Jacobites.

Motion made by the Tories in the Houſe of Commons to invite the Princeſs Sophia, dropp'd.

Reaſons why the Tories made the ſaid Motion.

Notwithſtanding what her Majeſty had been pleaſed to declare, in her Firſt Speech to this Parliament, a great many People made it their Buſineſs to inſinuate, That the Church of England was in Danger: Wherefore, to juſtify her Majeſty's Aſſertion to the contrary, and to remove all unreaſonable and ill-grounded Jealouſies, the Lord Halifax mov'd the Houſe of Peers, That a Day might be appointed to inquire into that pretended Danger. The 6th of December being appointed accordingly, the Earl of Rocheſter began the Debate, (the Queen preſent) and told their Lordſhips, " That the Subject Matter of it was of ſo tender a Nature, that it was " difficult to ſpeak to it; for her Majeſty had expreſs'd her ſelf ſo concluſively in " her Speech, that it ſeem'd to be to contradict the Queen, to ſpeak freely; but in " regard that the Miniſters might be ſuppoſed to make the Speeches, he deſired,
" that what he ſaid might not be offenſive to the Queen, for whom he had all the " Affection and Reſpect that could be. He urged, that Miniſters might miſtake,
" and not always act for the publick Good; and inſtanc'd in the Miniſtry of Por-
" tugal, where the King was our Friend, but the Miniſtry ſeem'd to be otherwiſe;
" inſomuch, that that Alliance was of no Benefit to us: And added, That the Duke
" of Buckingham, and Archbiſhop Laud, were heartily in the Intereſt of King
" Charles the Firſt, but did many Things that very much injur'd him. The full " Expreſſions in the Queen's Speech, he compared to the Law in King Charles the " Second's Time, to make it Treaſon to call the King a Papiſt; for which very Rea-
" ſon, he ſaid, he always thought him ſo. The Reaſons he gave for his Fear of " Scotland; Secondly, the Heir of the Houſe of Hanover not being ſent for over;

" Thirdly, the not paſſing the Occaſional Bill. Upon the Firſt, he ſaid, the Preſby-
" terian Church in Scotland was fully eſtabliſh'd without a Toleration: That to arm

" powerful Party for their Friends, who never wanted the Will to deſtroy the

" that the Induſtry for oppoſing it, gave the greater Ground for Suſpicion."
When that noble Lord had ended, the Houſe ſate ſtill near a quarter of an Hour, expecting ſome Body would ſecond him; but no other Member ſpeaking on that Side, the Lord Halifax ſaid, " That he having moved for the preſent Debate, it " might be expected that he ſhould ſpeak to it. He ſaid, the Act of Security in " Scotland, was a National Thing, wholly Foreign to Church-Affairs: That it was " paſs'd only to prevent an immediate War, which the Scotch ſeem'd to have re-
" ſolv'd upon: That, in Caſe it ſhould ever be made Uſe of, it would be but as " other Wars with that Nation had been in former Days, wherein England was al" ways able to defend it ſelf, and would be ſure, hereafter, to be more able to do
" it, inſomuch as the Strength of England was increaſed much more, in Proportion,
" than that of Scotland; ſo that unleſs France, whoſe Hands were already too full,
" ſhould come into the Quarrel, it would ſignify little: But that, by GOD's Bleſſing,
" Things were ſo well compromiſed with the Scotch, and their former Heats ſo
" much abated, that there was no Reaſon to doubt of an amicable Iſſue of that " Difference. As to the Houſe of Hanover, he ſaid, that was a Danger bnt of Eight " Days Standing; for he durſt ſay, a Fortnight ago, no Body made the Abſence of " the Princeſs Sophia a Danger to the Church; and as for her Abſence upon the " Queen's Demiſe, that was now ſo well to be provided for, by the Act for Lords
" Juſtices, that he thought no Evil could poſſibly happen to the Church before her " Arrival: That he wondred the Houſe of Hanover ſhould be now eſteem'd ſuch a " Security to the Church, whereas, when the Laws were made for the Security of " that Succeſſion, it was generally reckon'd a Hardſhip upon the Church; urging,
" That a Clergyman, in a Company of Convocation-Men, had openly call'd the " Princeſs Sophia AN UNBAPTIZED LUTHERAN; the Truth of which he could

" upon her Majeſty's happy Succeſſion, for ſome Time, the Complaint was ſilent,
" but that when ſhe was pleaſed to make ſome Alterations in her Miniſtry, it was " immediately revived, and ever ſince continued; and ſo concluded, that the " Church was now in no Danger. The Biſhop of Lincoln coming into the Houſe juſt
" as theſe laſt Words were delivered, immediately took up the Lord Halifax; giving for his Reaſon, of the Church's being in Danger, That Prophaneneſs and Irreligion was ſo rife among us, and the Licentiouſneſs of the Preſs ſo intolerable, that a moſt vile Book had been lately publiſh'd, by a Clergyman in his Dioceſe, (meaning Mr. Hickeringhill) whom he had endeavour'd to puniſh, but that he had ſuch Subterfuges in the Quirks of the Law, that he could not come at him: And that Sermons were preach'd, wherein Rebellion was countenanced, and Reſiſtance to the Higher Powers encouraged. To this the Biſhop of Sarum reply'd, " That his Lordſhip ought to have been the laſt Man to " complain of that Sermon, (meaning Mr. Benjamin Hoadly's, now * Biſhop of " Bangor, before the Lord-Mayor) for if the Doctrine of that Sermon was not " good, he did not know what Defence his Lordſhip could make, for his appearing † Sir Humphrey Mackworth had made Uſe of it.

" Noble Lord, who began the Debate, gave for the Church's Danger, he replied, " That as to the Scotch Affairs, he was particularly acquainted with them, and " therefore he would venture to ſpeak with the more Aſſurance: That the Scotch " Kirk being eſtabliſh'd without a Toleration, was an unfair Allegation; for there " needed no Law for Toleration, where there was no Law to inhibit. The Epiſcopa- " lians were not forbid to worſhip God their own way, being only excluded from Li- " vings; and that there were, at that Time, Fourteen Epiſcopal Meeting-Houſes " in Edinburgh, as open as the Churches, and as freely reſorted to; in many of " which the Engliſh Liturgy was uſed, but that in ſeveral of them the Queen was " not pray'd for: And the Bill for giving Patrons Liberty of Conferring their Benefices " on Clerks Epiſcopally ordain'd, would have paſs'd, (at leaſt, King William had al- " low'd it) if they would have put in a Clauſe, to oblige 'em to take the Oath to " the Government; but upon the offering that Clauſe, the Perſon that ſollicited " it, let it drop. That if the Lord, who had mention'd the Act of Security, had " look'd Two Years backwards, he might have found another Law, which ſeem'd " much more to his Purpoſe; namely, the Act for confirming Preſbytery, 1°. Annæ; " but his Lordſhip was a Miniſter of State when that Act was paſs'd, and ſo perhaps " adviſ'd it." As to the Argument of the Hanover Family, it was not obſerved, that that Prelate offered any Thing remarkable; and for the Act againſt Occaſional Conformity, he ſaid, " It had been there already ſufficiently argued, and he was " glad that they were rid of it; but as to what a Noble Prelate had advanced, he " own'd, that the Church would always be ſubject to the Enmity of Prophaneneſs " and Irreligion; that the Devil would have his Agents in the World, be the Go- " vernment never ſo careful; but he hoped he might ſay, that Irreligion and Pro- " phaneneſs were not now at a higher Pitch than uſually; that he hoped quite the con- " trary, and thought the Society ſet up for Reformation in London, and other Cities, " had contributed conſiderably to the ſuppreſſing of Vice: He was ſure the Corpora- " tion for Propagation of the Goſpel, had done a great deal towards inſtructing Men in " Religion, by giving great Numbers of Books in Practical Divinity; by erecting " Libraries in Country Pariſhes; by ſending over many able Divines to the " Foreign Plantations; erecting Libraries for their Uſe, and ſetting up Schools " to breed up Children in Chriſtian Knowledge; that to his Knowledge, One Thou- " ſand Two Hundred Pounds, had been expended the Year before, in Books to " theſe Purpoſes, all collected by voluntary Contribution; but, in Truth, very lit- " tle from thoſe who appeared ſo wonderfully zealous for the Church. That the Preſs " was, indeed, become very Licentious, and Sermons were preach'd, wherein very " ſtrange Expreſſions were publiſh'd: That he would read ſome of them to their " Lordſhips; and then pulling out Tilly's and Madder's Sermons, and having read " ſome Paragraphs; theſe, ſaid he, were preached at Oxford, and theſe are the Men " picked out for publick Occaſions." Then the Lord Archbiſhop of York ſtanding up, ſaid, He apprehended Danger from the Increaſe of Diſſenters, and particularly from the many Academies ſet up by them; and moved, That the Judges might be conſulted what Laws were in Force againſt ſuch Seminaries, and by what Means they might be ſuppreſs'd. Hereupon the Lord Wharton moved, " That the Judges might " alſo be conſulted about Means of ſuppreſſing Schools and Seminaries held by " Nonjurors, in one of which, a Noble Lord of that Houſe had both his Sons edu- " cated." Upon which the ſame Archbiſhop ſtood up again, and ſaid, " He ſup- " poſed he was the Perſon meant, and therefore he muſt explain that Matter. He " own'd his Two Sons were taught by Mr. Ellis, a ſober, virtuous Man, and a " Man of Letters, who had qualified himſelf according to Law, when they were " ſent to him, but when the Abjuration Oath was enjoined, it ſeems, he refuſed it; " which, as ſoon as he was inform'd of, he took his Sons from him." The Lord Wharton having made a Reply to this, went on, and ſaid, " That although he had " been born and bred a Diſſenter, yet he ſoon conform'd to the Church, when he " grew up, and became acquainted with its Doctrine and Diſcipline: That he was " now firmly reſolv'd, by GOD's Bleſſing, always to continue in that Church, and " would go as far in defending it, as any Man; wherefore, if he were now ſenſible " that it was in any Danger, he would heartily concur in providing Remedies " againſt it; but that, after all the Cry and Expectation they were ſcrewed up to, " hearing wherein thoſe Dangers conſiſted, it appeared juſt as he expected, namely, " That it was only repeating the Memorial, which Pamphlet he had carefully read " over, but could learn nothing from it, except that the D—— of B——— *, the " E—— of R——— †, the E—— of N——— ‖, were out of Place. What theſe " B's, R's, and N's meant, he could not tell, perhaps there might be ſome Charms " in it for the Church's Security; but if theſe Letters meant ſome Noble Peers there " preſent, he remembred very well, that ſome of them ſate in the High-Commiſſion

Several Lords proteſt againſt it.

ſenting: Firſt, " Becauſe they conceived there might be Dangers to the Church, al- " ways impending on ſeveral Accounts: That the Prayers ſet forth to be uſed on the " ſolemn Faſt-Days, under the Head of a Prayer for Unity, imploring God Almighty's " Grace, that every Body may ſeriouſly lay to Heart, the great Danger we are in by our " unhappy Diviſions, ſhew'd plainly, that in the Opinion of the Compilers of the " Form of that Prayer, and in her Majeſty's Judgment, who commanded it to be " uſed in all the Churches and Chapels throughout England and Wales, there were " very many Dangers. Secondly, They conceiv'd the Church in Danger from a " neighbouring Kingdom, which, though under her Majeſty's Sovereignty, during " her Life, had not yet been induced to ſettle the ſame Succeſſion to the Crown, as " was eſtabliſhed in this Kingdom in the Proteſtant Line : But that on the contra- " ry, that Succeſſion had been abrogated by the Act of Security, which with ſeveral " other Acts paſs'd in that Kingdom, had been judged, by this Houſe, to be dan- " gerous to the preſent and future Peace of this Kingdom. Thirdly, They con- " ceived there might be very great Dangers to the Church, for want of a Law, to " prevent any Perſons whatſoever from holding any Offices of Truſt and Authority, " both in Church and State, who were not conſtantly of the Communion of the " Church eſtabliſh'd by Law ; and therefore on the Account of the unhappy Divi- " ſions in Points of Religion and Divine Worſhip, as alſo on the Account of the " Calamities of the Age, in the too publick and common diſowning any Religion " at all, the Church might be in Danger. Fourthly, Though they had an entire " Confidence in her Majeſty's Zeal and Piety to the Church, they durſt not, in " Duty to her Majeſty, and the Service of the Government, condemn all ſuch as " might have Fears, in relation to the Preſervation of the Church, and Safety " of the Crown. And, Fifthly, being ſincerely convinced, that theſe Reaſons, " among others, mention'd in the Debate, were ſufficient to juſtify their Fears, " they conceived, That it is not a proper Way to prevent Dangers, by voting there are " none. It being carried for the latter, by a Majority of Two Hundred and Twenty Two Voices againſt One Hundred and Sixty One, Mr. Bromley open'd the Debate with a Speech, wherein he endeavour'd to prove the Church to be in Danger, by the ſame Arguments that had been inſiſted on in the Houſe of Peers, ſuch as, " The Power of the Preſbyterians in Scotland, " where the Church of England was not ſo much as tolerated ; the Abſence of the " next Proteſtant Succeſſor, in caſe of the Queen's Demiſe ; the want of an Act " againſt Occaſional Conformity ; the Increaſe of Preſbyterian Schools and Seminaries ; " Prophaneneſs, Immorality, and Irreligion ; and the Act of Security, paſs'd in " Scotland : To which he added another, viz. the Abuſe, and ill Diſpenſation of " her Majeſty's late Bounty to the Clergy." Sir John Packington, who ſpoke on the ſame Side, urg'd the Licentiouſneſs of the Preſs ; and the great Numbers of Libels which were daily publiſh'd againſt the Church ; the Increaſe of Preſbyterian Conventicles ; and the Lords Reſolution it ſelf, which was the Subject-Matter of their Debate ; as Proofs of the Church's being in Danger : Adding, " That if the Commons agreed to that " Reſolve, the ſame would, in ſome Meaſure, have the Force of an Act of Parlia- " ment ; which would be a dangerous Weapon in the Hands of ill Miniſters of State, " who thereby might awe People into Silence, in Caſe the Fancy ſhould take them " to ſuppreſs Epiſcopacy." The oppoſite Party did ſolidly anſwer moſt of theſe Arguments ; and, after a long Debate, agreed with the Lords Reſolution ; but divided upon the latter Part, (viz. is now in a moſt ſafe, &c.) Two Hundred and twelve Members being for the Affirmative, and One Hundred and Sixty two for the Negative.

Three Days after, being examin'd before the ſame Secretary, he pretended he could fix it upon Three Gentlemen, Members of the Houſe of Commons ; viz. Mr. Pooley, Mr. Ward, and Sir Humphry Mackworth ; and related, That a Woman in a Maſk, with another bare-fac'd, brought the Manuſcript to him, and made a Bargain with him to have Two Hundred and fifty printed Copies of it ; which he deliver'd to Four Porters, ſent to him by the Perſons concern'd. But tho' the Woman, that came to Edwards's without a Maſk, and ſome of the Porters were found out, and taken up ; yet it was impoſſible to carry on the Diſcovery any further : Which gave Occaſion to a Member of the Houſe of Commons (Mr. Pooley) to ſay, " That it was not uſual to accuſe Members of their Houſe of being con- " cern'd in any Thing to the Prejudice of the Government, without naming their " Names.

Edwards's Diſcovery.

After this, the Commons proceeded, with great Chearfulneſs, in the Diſpatch of the publick Buſineſs ; and on the 16th of February, the Queen came to the Houſe of Peers, and gave the Royal Aſſent to the Malt-Bill ; to an Act for continuing an additional Subſidy of Tonnage and Poundage, certain Duties on Coals, &c. and additional Duties of Exciſe, for Payment of Annuities ; and to ſome other publick and private Acts ; after which her Majeſty made a Speech to both Houſes, wherein, in particular, ſhe thank'd the Commons for perfecting ſo great Supplies in ſo ſhort a Time. The Lords having, by the Regency Bill, (Intituled, An Act for the better Security of her Majeſty's Perſon and Government, and of the Succeſſion to the Crown of England, in the Proteſtant Line,) repeal'd the Clauſe inſerted in an Act paſs'd ſome Years before, for ſettling the Succeſſion ; by which, all Civil and Military Officers were made incapable to ſit, or vote, as Members of the Houſe of Commons, after her Majeſty's Deceaſe : And having ſent down that Bill to the Houſe of Commons, for their Concurrence ; the latter, who ſaw that Dike againſt the future Power, and Influence of the Court, thrown down, reſolv'd, in ſome Meaſure, to repair it, by admitting only Forty ſeven Civil and Military Officers into their Houſe ; and amongſt them, them, Ten Privy-Counſellors, Five Flag-Officers, and as many Land-Generals. The Bill thus amended, was ſent * up again to the Lords, who made ſome Alterations to the Clauſe inſerted by the Commons; their Lordſhips excluding only the Commiſſioners of the Prize-Office, and all ſuch new Officers, as the Court might create for the Time to come. Two Conferences were held about theſe reſpective Amendments, between the Two Houſes; and the Report of the latter Conference being made in the Houſe of Commons, on the 15th of February; the ſame occaſion'd a long and warm Debate. " The Court-Party endeavour'd to ſhew the In" juſtice of excluding from the Houſe, ſuch as are actually performing Services to " the Nation: Urging, that as all Counties, and Corporations of England, have,

" by their Charters, Liberty to elect ſuch as they think beſt qualify'd to repreſent
" them in Parliament; they ſhould, in great meaſure, be depriv'd of that Liber" ty, by this Excluſion of ſeveral Officers, Military and Civil; who, by reaſon of " the great Eſtates they have in thoſe Corporations, ſeldom fail, and have more " Right than any others, to be choſen. And that the Excluſion of thoſe Officers,
" would very much abate the noble Ardor which ſeveral Gentlemen ſhew'd at this " Juncture, to ſerve the Nation, in this juſt and neceſſary War; ſince they could " not but look upon it as a Diſgrace, to be made incapable of ſerving likewiſe
" their Country in Parliament." The oppoſite Party, which chiefly conſiſted of High-Church-Men, with whom not a few of the Low-Church were join'd, on this Occaſion, urged " the ill Uſe a bad Prince might make of a Parliament, in which " there ſhould be many of his Creatures; ſuch as generally are all thoſe that have " Employments immediately depending on the Crown:" And their Arguments had ſuch Weight, that the other Party, foreſeeing they ſhould loſe the Queſtion, agreed to the poſtponing of Three of the Lords Amendments, having already agreed to One of them. But, Three † Days after, the Court-Party being reinforc'd, by the Return of thoſe, who, for ſome Time, had voted on the contrary Side; the Lords Amendments were approved, with ſome few Alterations; to which the Lords agreed, on the 19th of February. The ſame Day, Mr. Secretary Hedges acquainted the Houſe, That their Addreſs relating to the Newfoundland Trade, having been preſented to the Queen; her Majeſty was pleas'd thereupon to ſay, That ſhe was fully ſenſible of the great Importance of the Trade and Fiſhery of Newfoundland, and would be very careful to encourage and protect it. Two ‖ Days after, the Commons proceeded to take into further Conſideration, the Accounts of the Revenues and Debts, ever ſince her Majeſty's Acceſſion to the Crown; and reſolved, " That it appear'd to " this Houſe, that the Publick Revenues, granted, or ariſen ſince her Majeſty's
" happy Acceſſion to the Crown, had been duly apply'd to the Advancement of " the Publick Credit, and for the Advantage and Honour of the Nation.

On the 27th of February, a Petition of the Gentry and Clergy of the South Parts of Lancaſhire, at their Monthly Meeting, (February the 12th, 1705.) in the Borough of Wigan, for ſuppreſſing Prophaneneſs and Immorality, was preſented to the Houſe, complaining of ſeveral Grievances they labour'd under from the Prieſts, Romiſh Gentry, and Popiſh Emiſſaries, and praying for Redreſs and Relief therein. After the reading of this Petition, it was unanimouſly reſolv'd, to " addreſs her
" Majeſty, That ſhe would be pleas'd to iſſue out her Royal Proclamation, for
" the putting in Execution the Laws in Force againſt all ſuch Perſons, as had,
" or ſhould endeavour to pervert her Majeſty's Subjects to the Popiſh Religion:" And order'd, That a Bill be brought in, for making more effectual the Act of the Eleventh Year of his late Majeſty's Reign, for the further preventing the Growth of Popery. This Bill was acordingly preſented, the next ∴ Day, by Sir James Montague, and read the firſt Time: And on the 1ſt of March, the Commons gave it a Second Reading, and went thro' it in a grand Committee. By the Act of the Eleventh Year of King William the IIId, for the further preventing the Growth of Popery, it was provided, That all Papiſts ſhould, within Six Months after they had reach'd the Age of Eighteen, take the Oaths of Allegiance and Supremacy, or declare themſelves Proteſtants; in Default whereof, their Eſtates were to go to the next Heirs, being Proteſtants. Now this Clauſe was ſo lamely expreſs'd, that the Roman-Catholicks found Two ways to evade it. Firſt, There being, in all Families, a Gradation of Age among the ſeveral Heirs to the ſame Eſtates; it happen'd, that tho' the Perſon that was come to the Age of Eighteen, did not take the Oaths preſcrib'd by that Law, yet the Title of the Proteſtant Heir remain'd undecided, as long as any next Popiſh Heir was under Age. Secondly, (and this was the main Inconveniency) It lying, by that Clauſe, upon the next Heir to him who at the Age of Eighteeen refus'd to declare himſelf Proteſtant, to prove that he had not made the ſaid Declaration; it was impoſſible for the ſaid next Heir to prove ſuch a Negative. Now, to make that Clauſe binding and effectual, it was enacted, in this Bill, That all Papiſts, and reputed

On the 2d of March, when Sir James Montague was to report to the Houſe the Amendments made to the Bill by the Grand Committee, the Duke of Norfolk, (the chief among the Roman Catholicks in England,) petition'd, "That he might be "heard by his Council, for Explanation of ſome Words in the Bill, and for ſuch "Relief to him, as to the Houſe ſhould ſeem meet. Upon the Reading of this Petition, the Commons order'd that the Duke of Norfolk be heard by his Council, as to the Property in the Office of Earl Marſhal of England only: But his Council not being then ready, the Houſe heard Sir James Montague's Report, and then order'd the Bill, with the Amendments, to be engroſs'd. Two Days † after, the Bill was read the Third Time, and ſeveral other Amendments were made to it, after which, the Queſtion was put, That the Bill do paſs? This occaſion'd a great Debate, wherein Colonel Godfrey, Mr. Boſcawen, and Mr. Aſgil, endeavour'd to ſhew the Injuſtice of ſuch a Law; urging, "That the depriving Papiſts of their Eſtates, was "almoſt as hard as taking away their Lives; that it would look as if they approv'd "the Perſecution exercis'd by the French King, and other Catholick Princes, over "their Proteſtant Subjects, if they ſhould imitate their violent Proceedings; and "that this Act would certainly diſoblige the Roman Catholick Powers in Alliance "with us, ſome of whom, out of Reſpect to the Engliſh Nation, had lately ſhew'd "ſome Favour to their Proteſtant Subjects." There was little ſaid againſt theſe Reaſons, and ſo the Bill was rejected, by a Majority of One Hundred and Nineteen Votes againſt Forty Three. The Lords had alſo made a Bill againſt Popery, but upon the Commons rejecting theirs, their Lordſhips alſo dropp'd their own; and contented themſelves with addreſſing ‖ the Queen, "That a more watchful Eye "ſhould be had over the Romiſh Prieſts, and Papiſts, for the future; and, for that "Purpoſe, that a diſtinct and particular Account ſhould be taken, of all Papiſts, "and reputed Papiſts, in the Kingdom, with their reſpective Qualities, Eſtates, "and Places of Abode;" and that the ſeveral Accounts of theſe Enquiries be laid before their Houſe, at the next Seſſion of Parliament. To this Addreſs the Queen anſwer'd, She was fully convinc'd, That the inſolent Behaviour of the Papiſts, had made what their Lordſhips adviſed neceſſary to be done, for the Safety of her Perſon and Government, and the Welfare of her People; and that ſhe would give the neceſſary Orders for every Thing their Lordſhips deſired: But whatever Orders were given in this Matter, they were but perfunctorily executed.

The Differences which had ariſen Four Years before, between the Two Houſes of Convocation, concerning the Manner of Synodical Proceedings, and, principally about the Right claim'd by the Lower-Houſe, of holding and continuing their Aſſemblies in the Intervals of the ordinary Prorogations, which the Upper-Houſe would never allow, maintaining, That the Archbiſhop has the ſole and undoubted Right of Proroguing the whole Convocation of the Upper and Lower Houſe, with Conſent of his Suffragans: Theſe Differences, I ſay, which, for ſome Time, had lain aſleep, were now unhappily revived; the Occaſion whereof will appear in the following Account of their reſpective Proceedings, during this Seſſion of Parliament.

The Differences between the Two Houſes of Convocation revive. Oct. 25. Proceedings of the Convocation.

The Convocation of the Prelates and Clergy of the Province of Canterbury met in St. Paul's Cathedral, the ſame Day with the Parliament, according to Cuſtom; and the Latin Sermon was preach'd by Dr. George Stanhope. After Divine Service in the Choir, the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, as Preſident of the Convocation, retired into the Chapter-Houſe, where he ordered his Regiſter to read over the Royal Writ, the Archiepiſcopal Mandate, the Biſhop of London's Certificatorium, and a Præconization of the Suffragan Biſhops, and then his Grace required the inferior Clergy to withdraw, and chuſe a Prolocutor, to be preſented to him at the next Seſſion, appointed by his Grace to be held in the Chapel of Henry the Seventh, at Weſtminſter. The Perſons nominated for the Office of Prolocutor, being the Preacher, Dr. George Stanhope, Dean of Canterbury, and Dr. William Bincks, Dean of Litchfield, the Majority of Votes fell upon the latter, who was thereupon declared Elect by the Chairman, Dr. Younger, and he choſe for his Preſenter the Dean of Chriſt-Church in Oxford, who accordingly preſented him the next Seſſion, with an elegant Latin Speech. In a following Seſſion, the Archbiſhop and Biſhops unanimouſly agreed on a Form of Addreſs to her Majeſty, and ſent down this Copy of it to the Lower-Houſe for their Concurrence; viz.

To the Queen's moſt excellent MAJESTY,

The Biſhops Addreſs in Convocation to the Queen.

" WE your Majeſty's moſt Dutiful and Loyal Subjects, the Archbiſhop and " Biſhops, with the reſt of the Clergy in the Province of Canterbury, " aſſembled in Convocation, do, with Hearts full of Gratitude, return our moſt " humble Thanks to your Majeſty, for your affectionate Care, and tender Concern " for the Church of England, as eſtabliſh'd by Law, from your firſt Acceſſion to " the Throne, to this Day. The Aſſurances hereof having been ſo amply con- " firmed, by your own exemplary Zeal for the Service of the Church, and con- " ſtant Attendance upon it, by your unparallel'd Munificence to the poorer Cler- " gy, and by your repeated Declaration, That the Church of England ſhall al- " ways be your chief Care; we are exceedingly grieved that any of your Subjects " ſhould be ſo ungrateful and unworthy, as once to ſuggeſt, that our Church can be " in Danger for want of ſuch Support and Encouragement in your Majeſty's Reign, " as may make it flouriſh in your own Time, and leave it ſecure after you. And al- " though 'tis no new Thing for deſigning Men to proſtitute the venerable Name of " the Church, to the Service of their own private Ends, yet we think it very " ſtrange, that any ſhould be found ſo extreamly weak and undutiful, as to be de- " luded by theſe groundleſs Clamours, when they have been ſo often, and ſo pub- " lickly confuted by your Royal Word and Actions, and when the happy State of " the Church of England is ſo much obſerved and eſteemed Abroad, that ſeveral of " Unity amongſt your Subjects; praying earneſtly for your Majeſty's long and " glorious Reign over us, as, under the Divine Providence, the greateſt Bleſſing and

" Security that either Church or State can enjoy" When this Form was read in the Lower-Houſe, thoſe Members, who thought it very reaſonable to join in it, moved, that it might be either immediately agreed to, or be read over Paragraph by Paragraph, in order to have Objections and Amendments made to it, if any ſuch could be made: But the Majority choſe rather to refer the Addreſs to a Committee, who, at the next Seſſion, made a Report by the Dean of Chriſt-Church, that they had conſidered of the Addreſs committed to them, and found it not ſo proper or eaſy to make any Amendments, as to draw up a new Form, which was as follows:

The Lower Houſe's Addreſs to the Queen.

" WE your Majeſty's moſt Dutiful and Loyal Subjects, the Lower Clergy of " the Province of Canterbury, in Convocation Aſſembled, cannot but ac-

This laſt Addreſs was approv'd by the Majority of the Lower-Houſe; and, together with their Lordſhips Addreſs, was carry'd up by the Prolocutor, attended by the Majority, to his Grace in the Upper-Houſe, on Monday the 19th of November. His Grace, and the Biſhops, being much ſurprized to find their own Addreſs rejected, without any Reaſon given, and a new Form ſubſtituted, and offer'd to them, did return this Anſwer in Writing:

Anſwer of the Biſhops to the Lower-Houſe, about their Addreſs.

We cannot receive the Addreſs you have offer'd to us; but do require you to go back to your own Houſe, and conſider the Addreſs we ſent down to you; and do expect, either that you agree to it, or bring up your Exceptions againſt it in Writing, the next Seſſion.

This Meſſage was referr'd to a Committee; wherein the Dean and Chancellor of Lincoln, and the Archdeacon of Huntingdon, were ſaid to have argued for the Duty and Decency of better conſidering their Lordſhips Addreſs; and ſo coming to ſuch an Anſwer as was required, and juſtly expected by his Grace, and the Biſhops: But the Majority thought fit, in Two ſeveral Meetings, to proceed in ſeveral Queſtions and Reſolutions thereupon; and on the 1ſt of December, the Prolocutor carry'd to the Upper-Houſe a Paper, wherein the Biſhops were beſought to receive the Form of Addreſs of the Lower-Houſe, which they again tender'd to their Lordſhips: But after the Reading of that Paper, the Biſhops refuſed once more to receive the ſaid Addreſs. The next * Day, Mr. Dean of Peterborough complain'd in the Lower-Houſe, " of " the many Irregularities that had been lately advanc'd, and were ſtill kept up in " that Houſe; which he, and many of his Brethren, had bore with, for ſome Time,
" in Hopes to ſee an Amendment of them; but finding that the Houſe did ſtill
" perſiſt in them, they thought themſelves obliged to draw up a Proteſtation againſt
" them:" Which was ſign'd by George Verney, Proctor of the Dioceſe of Lincoln; Samuel Freeman, Dean of Peterborough; Richard Willis, Dean of Lincoln; Charles Trimnel, Archdeacon of Norwich; White Kennet, Archdeacon of Huntingdon; Richard Bouchier, Archdeacon of Lewis; John Wickart, Dean of Wincheſter; William Haley, Dean of Chicheſter; William Lloyd, Proctor of the Dioceſe of Worceſter; Peter Allix, Proc. Cop. Sarum; and by other Perſons preſent, and Proxies, to the Number of Fifty one.

* Dec. 16. Proteſtation againſt the Irregularities of the Lower-Houſe.

The Dean of Peterborough holding this Paper in his Hand, offer'd to read it, in order to have it receiv'd by the Houſe; and, after ſome Debate, it was agreed, that the Dean ſhould read it: But by that time he had read Three or Four Lines, the Archdeacon of Totneſs ſtood up, and loudly interrupted him, and ſaid, It was not a Paper fit to be read to the Houſe; and would by no means ſuffer him to proceed in the Reading of it. Thereupon, thoſe Perſons who had ſubſcrib'd the Proteſtation, deſir'd the Queſtion to be put, Whether the Houſe would permit the Paper to be read, or not? But they, on the other ſide, would ſtart a new Queſtion; Whether the Reading of it ſhould be referr'd to a full Houſe? When the Dean of Peterborough, and other Proteſters, ſaw they could not obtain the Favour of having their Paper read, they all went out of the Houſe; and going directly to the Jeruſalem-Chamber, deſir'd to be admitted to the Archbiſhop and Biſhops then ſitting; which being readily granted, the Dean of Peterborough ſpoke to this Effect: " That " he himſelf, and many other Members of the Lower-Houſe, had all along diſſented
" from ſeveral new Practices, brought, of late Years, into the Proceedings of the " ſaid Houſe; and were now conſtrain'd to proteſt againſt them, in a Form of Pro-
" teſtation, which they had offer'd in their Houſe: But that, after Leave obtain'd " to read it, he had been violently interrupted in the reading of it; and could not " hope for the Favour to have it receiv'd and enter'd, as he and his Brethren " had propos'd in their own Houſe: For which Reaſon, he humbly begg'd his
" Grace, and their Lordſhips, that their ſaid ſolemn Proteſtation might be receiv'd,
" and enter'd in the Acts of the Upper-Houſe." After this, the Dean, and other Members, leaving the Paper on the Table, were order'd to withdraw: And being again call'd in, the Archbiſhop thank'd them for their Care and Zeal in preſerving the Conſtitution of the Church of England, and aſſerting the true Right and Privileges of this Provincial Convocation; and, according to their Deſire, admitted their Proteſtation to be enter'd in the Acts of the Upper-Houſe. Some Time after, the Convocation was prorogu'd to Friday the 1ſt of March: But the Queen being apprehenſive that, if the Lower-Houſe ſhould then ſit again, the Quarrel between the Two Houſes might increaſe; her Majeſty thought fit to ſend a † Letter to the Archbiſhop of Canter-

Canterbury, directing his Grace to prorogue the Convocation to ſuch further Time, as ſhould appear to be convenient.

The Archbiſhop of Canterbury, being at this Time indiſpoſed, appointed the Biſhop of Norwich to hold his Place of Metropolitan; and, as ſuch, to communicate her Majeſty's Letter to the Convocation, and prorogue the ſame. Accordingly, on the 1ſt Day of March, the Upper-Houſe of Convocation being ſat in the Jeruſalem-Chamber; the Biſhop of Norwich ſent for Dr. Bincks, Dean of Litchfield, and Prolocutor of the Lower-Houſe; who attended, with ſome other Members: But as the Biſhop was about reading the Queen's Letter, Dr. Atterbury, taking the Prolocutor by the Sleeve, deſir'd him to be gone; adding, they had no Buſineſs there. Hereupon the Biſhop of Sarum riſing from his Seat, and ſtepping to them, told them, 'Twas the greateſt Piece of Inſolence he ever ſaw, thus to refuſe to hear the Queen's Orders; and bid the Prolocutor, go at his Peril. Dr. Bincks being made ſenſible of his Duty, ſtay'd, and heard Part of the Queen's Letter read. In the mean Time, Dr. Atterbury, and ſome others, return'd to the Lower-Houſe; and Dr. Bincks being come there alſo, they adjourn'd themſelves to the Wedneſday following.

Act paſs'd, March 19.

There being, at this Juncture, no leſs than about Twelve Thouſand Seamen wanting to man the Fleet, both the Lords and Commons took, ſeverally, that important Affair into Conſideration; and the Commons having come to ſeveral Reſolutions thereupon, order'd the ſame to be inſerted in a Bill for the Encouragement and Increaſe of Seamen, &c. which being perfected, and paſs'd both Houſes in Four Days, the Queen, on the 19th of March, came to the Houſe of Peers; and the Commons being ſent for up, her Majeſty gave the Royal Aſſent to Seventeen publick, and Fifty three private Bills. After this, her Majeſty made a Speech to both Houſes; wherein ſhe told the Commons, She was extreamly ſenſible of the Diſpatch they had given to the publick Supplies; aſſuring them, ſhe would be very careful, that they might be apply'd for the Common Intereſt: And took notice of the Unanimity and Zeal, which ſhe had obſerved in both Houſes, with great Satisfaction, throughout this whole Seſſion, againſt every Thing that tended towards Sedition. And then the Lord-Keeper, by the Queen's Command, prorogued the Parliament to the 21ſt of May next.

The Parliament prorogued.

We may here obſerve, that the Duke of Marlborough's taking notice of Private Malice, in his Anſwer to the Thanks of the Houſe of Commons, was chiefly occaſion'd by ſome invidious Reflections caſt upon his Grace's Conduct laſt Campaign, in a printed Letter to the Author of the Memorial of the Church of England: Of which Mr. Stephens, Rector of Sutton in Surrey, being diſcover'd to be the Author, he was ſent for up, and examin'd before Mr. Harley, Secretary of State. At firſt, he ſeem'd obſtinate, in maintaining what he had advanc'd; but tho', upon better Thoughts, he publiſh'd a ſubmiſſive Recantation, by way of Letter to the Duke of Marlborough; yet having, in his former Libel, likewiſe reflected on Mr. Robert Harley, a Perſon of a vindictive Nature, he was afterwards ſeverely proſecuted; as ſhall be related in its proper Place.

Mr. Stephens aſperſes the D. of Marlborough; but tho' he writes a Recantation, he is proſecuted.

Purſuant to an Addreſs of the Lords, beſeeching her Majeſty to appoint Perſons to conſider of the moſt effectual Means for Manning the Fleet, which was preſented on the 19th of March, the Queen, Six Days after, ſigned a long Proclamation for the putting in Execution an Act of Parliament, for the Encouragement and Increaſe of Seamen. Not many Days after, a Chapter of the moſt Noble Order of the Garter was held * at Kenſington; where, the Sovereign and Ten Knights Companions being preſent, his Highneſs George Auguſtus, Electoral Prince of Brunſwick-Lunenburgh, was elected a Knight-Companion of that moſt Noble Order. Five † Days after, the Duke of Marlborough embark'd for Holland; and the next Day, was publiſh'd a Proclamation, againſt ſuch as endeavour'd to pervert her Majeſty's Subjects to the Popiſh Religion. On the 23d of the ſame Month, Signior Franciſco Corraro, Ambaſſador in Ordinary from the Republick of Venice, made his Publick Entry in London; and on the 25th, had his firſt Publick Audience of the Queen. Two Days after, Hamet Ben Hamet Cardenaſſh, Ambaſſador from the Emperor of Morocco, had alſo his Publick Audience of her Majeſty; to whom he deliver'd ſeveral Preſents from the Emperor his Maſter.

A Tranſaction of infinite Moment now beſpeaks our Attention: The Uniting of the Two Kingdoms of England and Scotland, was ever thought of ſo great Importance to the Wealth, Strergth, and Tranquillity of the Iſland of Great Britain, that ſeveral Attempts were made towards it, both before and after the Union of the Two Crowns, in the Perſon of King James the Iſt of England, and VIth of Scotland; of which Attempts, it will not be improper to give here a ſummary Account.

Account of the Treaty of Union between England and Scotland.

King

A. D. 1706.

King Henry the Eighth, to bring the Government of the Iſland under One Scepter, offer'd his Daughter Mary to King James the Fifth of Scotland; and, to prevent all Difficulties that might happen about the Succeſſion after his Death, he propos'd to make King James Duke of York, and Lord-Lieutenant, or Deputy-Governor of England, immediately upon the Match. The King of Scotland was inclinable enough to fall in with that advantageous Propoſal; but the French Court, and the Popiſh Clergy, who equally dreaded the Effects of ſuch a Conjunction, found Means to prevent it. This engag'd the Scotch Nation, againſt their Will, in a War againſt England, and occaſion'd their Defeat at Solan Moſſe; which brought their King to his Grave, upon an Apprehenſion, that his Nobility had conſpir'd againſt him.

Former Attempts towards an Union: In King Henry the VIIIth's Time.

King Edward the Sixth, purſuing his Father's Deſign of an Amicable Union of the Two Kingdoms, propos'd a Match betwixt himſelf and Queen Mary of Scotland; which had been agreed on in the Scotch Parliament in King Henry the Eighth's Time; but the French and Popiſh Faction broke that Agreement, and brought upon the Scots another War with England, which ended in their ſhameful Defeat at the Battel of Pinky, or Muſcleburgh. Notwithſtanding this great Victory, by which the Engliſh became poſſeſs'd of moſt of the South of Scotland, yet that Excellent Monarch, Edward the Sixth, and his wiſe Council, were ſo far from deſigning a Conqueſt of Scotland, or the overthrowing of the Conſtitution of that Kingdom, that his Uncle, the Duke of Somerſet, Protector of the Kingdom of England, publiſh'd a Declaration, to invite the Scots to Amity and Equality. We overcome in War, (ſaid that Declaration) and offer Peace; We win Holds, and offer no Conqueſt: We get in your Land, and offer England. What can be more offer'd, than Intercourſe of Merchandizes, and Intercharge of Marriages; the aboliſhing of all ſuch our Laws, as prohibit the ſame, or might be an Impediment to the mutual Amity? We have offer'd not only to leave the Authority, Name, Title, Right or Challenge of Conqueror, but to receive that, which is the Shame of Men overcome; to leave the Name of the Nation, and the Glory of any Victory, and to take the indifferent, old Name of Britons: Becauſe nothing ſhould be left, on our Part, to be offer'd; nothing, on your Part, unrefus'd; whereby ye might be inexcuſable. What Face has this of Conqueſt? We ſeek not to diſherit your Queen, but to make her Heirs Inheritors alſo of England. We ſeek not to take from you your Laws, nor Cuſtoms; but we ſeek to redreſs your Oppreſſion.

In K. Edward the VIth's Time.

This was a very generous Propoſal from a Conqueror; but the Popiſh and French Faction ſtill made it ineffectual, and brought Scotland under a Yoke of French Tyranny; which did ſo much incenſe the Scots, that when they ſet about the Reformation, (which they did to the Purpoſe, ſome few Years after) they pull'd up the Hierarchy by the very Foundations, and reduc'd the Eccleſiaſticks (who had then one Third of the Kingdom in their Poſſeſſion) to their ancient Dependance upon the State, as to their Maintenance and Benefices.

And in King James the Iſt's Reign.

King James the Firſt, ſoon after his Acceſſion to the Engliſh Throne, (viz. in March 1604.) mov'd the Parliament of England, for an Union betwixt the Two Kingdoms; "That as they were made One in the Head, ſo among themſelves they "might be inſeparably conjoin'd, and all Memory of by-paſt Diviſions extinguiſh'd." The Motion took well, at firſt, and ſeem'd to be generally deſir'd by both Nations; whoſe reſpective Parliaments appointed their Commiſſioners; the Engliſh, Forty four in Number, and the Scots, Thirty. They met accordingly at Weſtminſter; and agreed upon ſome Articles about the repealing all Hoſtile Laws, made either in England againſt Scotland, or in Scotland againſt England; and the mutual Communication of Commodities and Commerce: Reſerving the King's Prerogative, in the Preferment of Men to Offices and Honours in either Kingdom. The King recommended the Proſecution of that Buſineſs to the Parliament of England; but, of all the Articles agreed upon by the Commiſſioners, only that was enacted, which concern'd the aboliſhing of Hoſtile Laws. The King griev'd at this exceedingly; and conceiving that the Work would more eaſily be effected, if begun in Scotland, did call a Parliament there. The Eſtates, at the King's Deſire, did readily allow all the Articles concluded in the Treaty; with a Proviſo, that the ſame ſhould, in like manner, be ratify'd in the Parliament of England; otherwiſe, the Concluſions taken, not to have the Force of a Law. And it was alſo declar'd, That if the Union ſhould happen to take Effect, the Kingdom, notwithſtanding, ſhould remain an abſolute and free Monarchy, and the fundamental Laws receive no Alteration. But the Engliſh Puritans being too elated with the Hopes they had conceiv'd from an Union of the Two Nations, the High-Church Party grew jealous of them, and ſpoke boldly againſt the Scots, in Parliament, Convocation, and Pulpits, and defeated all Endeavours to accompliſh that Union. They ſoon found K. James's weak Side; and knowing, that his Inclination to a tow'ring Prerogative, carry'd the Aſcendant with him, above all other Things, they cut out other Work for him, which was to advance his Prerogative in Scotland, to the Subverſion of the Liberties of that Kingdom, both in Church and State, and concurr'd with him as heartily in it, as they oppos'd him in the Union.

In K. Charles the Iſt's Reign.

In the Reign of King Charles the Firſt, we don't find it to have been once mention'd; for the Prejudices againſt the Puritans ſtill increaſing, and the High-Church Party growing powerful at Court, by the Promotion of Laud to the Archbiſhop's See of Canterbury, an ill-timed and miſtaken Zeal for the Church of England, had ſo much the Aſcendant over that unhappy Prince, as to engage him with more Eagerneſs than his Father, to overturn the Conſtitution, and endeavour a Conqueſt of Scotland: Which was the fatal Riſe of all his Misfortunes.

In K. Charles the IId's Reign.

In the Reign of King Charles the Second, the Parliament of Scotland did, in 1670, paſs an Act, impowering his Majeſty to grant a Commiſſion under the great Seal of Scotland, for ſuch Perſons as he ſhould think fit to name, to treat with Commiſſioners of England about the Union; but with this Promiſe, That nothing they agreed upon ſhould ſtand, except confirm'd by the Parliament of Scotland. When the Commiſſioners met, the King ſent them the Five following Points to be conſider'd, as the Subject Matter of the Treaty: 1. "The preſerving to either Kingdom their Laws, Civil and "Eccleſiaſtical, entire. 2. The uniting of the Two Kingdoms into one Monarchy, "under his Majeſty, his Heirs and Succeſſors, inſeparable. 3. The reducing both "Parliaments into one. 4. The ſtating of all Privileges, as to Trade, and other "Advantages. 5. The ſecuring the Conditions of the Union: And it was agreed as "a Preliminary, that except all was agreed on, no particular Thing reſolv'd upon "ſhould be binding." When they came to conſider the Matter, Sir John Niſby, one of the Commiſſioners for Scotland, a great Lawyer, and the King's Advocate, urged, "That the Union could not be, as propos'd in the Second and Third Arti-"cles, becauſe they were deſtructive to the Fundamental Government of the King-"dom of Scotland, and tended to take away their Parliaments, which, he ſaid, "the Parliament it ſelf could not do; nor were the Commiſſioners appointed for "the Treaty, impower'd to diveſt the Electors of that Power; and alledg'd an "Act of Parliament, 8. Jac. 6. which declared it Treaſon, to attempt the Alteration of the Conſtitution of the Parliament. He alledg'd farther, That King James's "Commiſſion to treat, was not of that Nature, and that his Commiſſion ought to "be the Rule of the Treaty; adding, that in the Union among the Republicks of "Greece, each Republick reſerved their Sovereignty. And the Earl of Lauderdale, "ſaid, That it was the like among the United Provinces, the ſeveral Kingdoms of "Spain, and the Thirteen Cantons of Switzerland. It was urg'd, that it was the "ſame as to Poland and Lithuania; and as to the Republicks of Greece, they were "repreſented in their reſpective Commonwealths, at the general Council of the "Amphictyones." Then as to the Conſtitution of the Parliament, the Commiſſioners of Scotland reſolutely adher'd to it, "That none of the Conſtituent Mem-"bers of the Parliament of Scotland, ſhould be excluded from the Parliament of "Great Britain: For they could not exclude any of thoſe from whom they had "their Authority, but agreed, that his Majeſty might call together both Parlia-"ments, to conſult about the publick Affairs of the Monarchy." There were alſo Debates among 'em, about Appeals to Parliament from Courts of Judicature, whoſe Sentences in Scotland are not queſtionable, but by Parliament; and that it would be an Inconſiſtency, that one Part of the Monarchy ſhould be liable to Appeals before the Parliament, and the other not. As to the Union of both Kingdoms into one Monarchy, the Scotch Commiſſioners would agree to it on no other Terms, but in the Poſterity of King James the Sixth, in which the Engliſh made ſome Difficulty, and thought Heirs and Succeſſors enough; but the Scotch inſiſted upon it, and alledg'd, That by the 11th of Henry the Seventh, an Uſurper being crown'd, was reputed lawful Succeſſor in England. This is the Subſtance of what was tranſacted in that Treaty, which continued from the 13th of September, 1670, under ſeveral Adjournments, till the 14th of November following.

In the Reign of King James the IId, and King William the IIId.

In the Time of King James the Second, there was nothing done in the Union, the Court being ſufficiently taken up with other Deſigns: But though in the Reign of the late King William and Queen Mary, both Nations were too much diſtracted among themſelves, and the King and his Miniſters too buſy about other arduous Affairs, to think, in earneſt, of uniting the Two Kingdoms; yet the ſame being propoſed by the Scotch Convention of the Eſtates, who appointed Commiſſioners to treat upon that Matter with England; his Majeſty, in his Speech to both Houſes of Parliament, on the 21ſt of March, $16\frac{89}{90}$, "Recommended to their Conſideration, a "Union with Scotland. The Parliament took little Notice of this faint Recommendation from the Throne; ſo that no Anſwer was returned to the Scotch Parliament; and that Buſineſs reſted till the Year 1700, when the Court being at a Loſs how to retrieve a falſe Step they had made, in relation to Scotland, the King, in his Anſwer to the Lords Addreſs againſt the Scotch Settlement at Darien, took that Opportunity of putting the Houſe of Peers in Mind of what he recommended to his Parliament, ſoon after his Acceſſion to the Throne, "That they "would conſider of an Union between the Two Kingdoms: That his Majeſty was of "Opinion, that nothing would contribute more to the Security and Happineſs of "both; and was inclin'd to hope, that after they had lived near a Hundred Years "under the ſame Head, ſome happy Expedient might be found for making them "one People, in caſe a Treaty were ſet on Foot for that Purpoſe: And therefore he "very earneſtly recommended that Matter to the Conſideration of the Houſe." Hereupon the Lords fram'd and paſs'd a Bill, for authorizing certain Commiſſioners of the Realm of England, to treat with Commiſſioners of Scotland, for the Weal of both Kingdoms: But the Commons refuſing their Concurrence to this Bill, the Buſineſs of the Union went no farther. A. D. 1706.

Heaven, it ſeems, reſerv'd for the triumphant Reign of Queen Anne, the additional Glory of accompliſhing ſo great a Work; for though that important Negotiation, which was ſet on Foot ſoon after her Majeſty's Acceſſion to the Throne, did then unhappily miſcarry, through the Prevalency of the High-Church-Party; yet ſome ſubſequent Tranſactions in Scotland, having rendred an Union abſolutely neceſſary to ſecure, not only the Proteſtant Succeſſion, but the Engliſh Miniſters themſelves; the latter reſolv'd to ſpare neither Pains, nor Money, to bring it about. According to the Powers given to the Queen by the reſpective Parliaments of England and Scotland, to appoint the Perſons to treat, her Majeſty named * the following Commiſſioners on the Part of England, viz. Thomas Archbiſhop of Canterbury; William Cowper, Eſq; Keeper of the Great-Seal of England; John Archbiſhop of York; Sidney Lord Godolphin, High-Treaſurer of England; Thomas Earl of Pembroke and Montgomery, Preſident of the Council; John Duke of Newcaſtle, Keeper of the Privy-Seal; William Duke of Devonſhire, Steward of the Houſhold; Charles Duke of Somerſet, Maſter of the Horſe; Charles Duke of Bolton; Charles Earl of Sunderland; Evelin Earl of Kingſton; Charles Viſcount Townſhend; Thomas Lord Wharton; Ralph Lord Grey; John Lord Powlet; John Lord Somers; Charles Lord Halifax; John Smith, Eſq; William Cavendiſh, Marquis of Hartington; John Manners, Marquis of Granby; Sir Charles Hedges, Knight, and Robert Harley, Eſq; Principal Secretaries of State; Henry Boyle, Eſq; Chancellor, and Under-Treaſurer of the Exchequer; Sir John Holt, Knight, Chief-Juſtice of the Court of Queen's-Bench; Sir Thomas Trevor, Knight, Chief-Juſtice of the Court of Common-Pleas; Sir Edward Northey, Knight, Attorney-General; Sir Simon Harcourt, Knight, Sollicitor-General; Sir John Cook, Knight, Doctor of Laws, Advocate-General; and Stephen Waller, Doctor of Laws. the Houſe of Hanover, that he might diſcover what might afterwards be uſeful in the oppoſing the Deſign. The ſame Writer tells us *, That the Treaſurer of England, and Court Party there, did not at firſt deſign the Treaty of Union ſhould have gone the Length it afterwards did: It being a mighty Stroke to the Monarchy, and conſequently to them, who adviſed and directed the Queen in all Matters. But the Treaſurer being extremely blamed for allowing the Queen to paſs the Scotch Act of Security, and concerning Peace and War, knew the Tories, who only waited for a proper Time, deſign'd to lay hold on this as a Handle to pull him down; and therefore, to ſave himſelf, by amuſing England with the Hopes of an entire Union, he ſet this Treaty on Foot, with Deſign to have ſpun it out ſo long, as he was in Hazard of the Attempts and Malice of his Enemies. But the Whig-Party join'd moſt ſincerely in the Meaſure of an incorporating Union——— Beſides the general Intereſt and Security of England, or the eſtabliſhing the Succeſſion on the Two Thrones, their Deſign was, ſooner or later, to ſet up a Commonwealth, or, at leaſt, clip the Wings of the Royal Prerogative, and reduce the Monarch ſo low, that his Power ſhould not exceed that of a Stadtholder of Holland, or a Doge of Venice; which could be more eaſily brought about, when the Legiſlative Authority of Scotland was abrogated, by reducing the Repreſentative of that Nation to an inconſiderable Number, incorporated with a much greater, and ſubjecting her to the Laws, Regulations, and Government of another Kingdom, of which they had the chief Management and Direction; than if the Scotch Nation and Parliament remain'd a diſtinct and independent People, and were thereby in a Capacity to aſſiſt their Sovereign in maintaining his juſt Rights and Prerogatives in that, as well as his other Kingdoms. They remembred how the Scotch, in the Reign of King Charles the Second, did caſt the Ballance, and defeat their Deſign of excluding the Duke of York from ſucceeding to the Crown, and were reſolved, by this incorporating Union, to remove that Obſtacle to their future Projects and Deſigns. Leaving our Readers to lay what Streſs they ſhall think fit, on theſe Reflections and Conjectures, we ſhall now proceed to Matters of Fact, and attend the Treaty it ſelf.

The Treaty of Union opens, April 16.

On Tueſday, the 16th of April, the Lords Commiſſioners of both Kingdoms, met at the Council-Chamber in the Cockpit, near Whitehall (the Place appointed for their Conferences,) and their Commiſſions being open'd, and read by their reſpective Secretaries, the Lord Keeper of the Great-Seal of England, addreſs'd himſelf to the Lords Commiſſioners for Scotland, in theſe Words:

My LORDS,

The Lord Keeper's Speech.

" WE the Commiſſioners appointed by her Majeſty, and authoriz'd by the " Parliament of England, to conſult and treat with your Lordſhips, as " impowered in like Manner by her Majeſty, and the Parliament of Scotland, con- " cerning an Union of the Two Kingdoms, and ſuch other Things, as we, the Com- " miſſioners of both Parts, ſhall think convenient and neceſſary, for the Honour of " her Majeſty, and the common Good of both Kingdoms, do apprehend there ne- " ver was (in any Aſſembly of this Nature) ſo little Occaſion as at preſent, for " the Commiſſioners of England, to give any verbal Aſſurances of their Zeal to " promote and compleat (ſo far as in their Power) the great and good Deſign we " are met about; ſince it cannot be doubted, but that we bring along with us the " ſame Sentiments, which ſo lately appeared in the Parliament of England, when " they took Care to manifeſt, by a ſolemn Act, that they did poſtpone all other " Conſiderations to their evidencing a good and friendly Diſpoſition towards the " Kingdom of Scotland.

" The Parliament of England, in making that unexpected Advance, ſeem'd re- " ſolv'd, if poſſible, to attain that Union, which had been ſo long thought neceſ- " ſary, by all that wiſh well to the Proſperity of both Nations.

" And we moſt ſincerely aſſure your Lordſhips, That we accordingly meet your " Lordſhips, with Hearts fully reſolv'd, to uſe our utmoſt Endeavours to remove all " Difficulties in this Treaty, to prevent all Miſunderſtandings, to cheriſh and im- " prove the good Diſpoſitions to one another we meet with, to have the general and " joint Good of both Kingdoms, ſolely in our View, and not the ſeparate of " either; but to act, as if we were already united in Intereſt, and had nothing left " to conſider, but what Settlements and Proviſions are moſt likely to conduce to " the common Safety and Happineſs of this whole Iſland of Great Britain.

" Which Meaſures, if purſued on both Parts, we hope may enable us to pre- " pare ſuch Terms of Union, as may prove ſatisfactory to her Majeſty, and the " Parliaments of both Kingdoms.

In Anſwer to this, the Earl of Seafield, Lord High-Chancellor of Scotland, on the Part of the Lords Commiſſionersfor Scotland, ſpoke as follows:

My

A. D. 1706.

My LORDS,

The Chancellor of Scotland's Speech.

" THE Lords Commiſſioners for Scotland have deſired me to aſſure your Lord-
" ſhips, that they meet you, on this Occaſion, with great Willingneſs and " Satisfaction, to treat of an Union between the Two Kingdoms, and of ſuch other " Matters and Concerns, as may be for her Majeſty's Honour, and the maintain" ing a good Underſtanding between the Two Nations. We are convinced, that " an Union will be of great Advantage to both; the Proteſtant Religion will be " thereby the more firmly ſecur'd; the Deſigns of our Enemies effectually diſap-
" pointed, and the Riches and Trade of the whole Iſland advanced.

" This Union has been often endeavour'd, both before, and ſince the Kingdoms
" were united in Allegiance under one Sovereign; and ſeveral Treaties have been
" ſet on Foot for that End, though without the deſired Succeſs; but now we are " hopeful, that this ſhall be the happy Opportunity of accompliſhing it: Her Majeſty
" has frequently ſignified her good Inclinations towards it; and we are the more " encouraged to expect Succeſs in this Treaty, by the good Diſpoſition which ap-
" pear'd in the Parliament of Scotland for it, and by the friendly Proceedings in " the laſt Seſſion of the Parliament of England, which gave general Satiſ-
" faction.

" We have great Confidence in your Lordſhips good Intentions, and we ſhall be " ready, on our Parts, to enter into ſuch Meaſures with you, as may bring the " Treaty to ſuch a Concluſion, as may be acceptable to her Majeſty, and to the " Parliaments of both Kingdoms.

Theſe Speeches being over, it was agreed, and order'd, That Copies of the Two Commiſſions ſhould be prepared, and ſign'd by the reſpective Secretaries, and interchang'd againſt the next Meeting, which was put off 'till the Monday following.

Second Meeting April 22.

Accordingly, on the 22d of April, they met again, and the Lord Keeper, in the Name of the Lords Commiſſioners for England, deliver'd to the Board the following Articles of Preliminaries, viz. I. " That all Propoſals made by either Side, be " made in Writing, and every Point, when agreed, reduced into Writing. II. That " no Points, though agreed on, and reduced into Writing, be Obligatory on either " Side, 'till all Matters be adjuſted in ſuch Manner, as will be proper to be laid be" fore the Queen, and the Two Parliaments, for their Approbation. III. That " there be a Committee appointed, conſiſting of a certain Number of each Com-
" miſſion, to reviſe the Minutes of what paſſes, which are not to be inſerted by
" the Secretaries, in their reſpective Books, but by Order of the ſaid Committee,
" having firſt made Report thereof to the reſpective Commiſſioners, and received " their Approbation of the ſame. IV. That all the Proceedings of the Commiſ-
" ſioners of both Kingdoms, during the Treaty, be kept ſecret." The Lord Keeper alſo delivered to the Board the following Propoſal, viz. " That the Two Kingdoms
" of England and Scotland, be for ever united into one Kingdom, by the Name of " Great Britain: That the United Kingdom of Great Britain, be repreſented by one " and the ſame Parliament; and that the Succeſſion to the Monarchy of the united " Kingdom of Great Britain, in Caſe of Failure of Heirs of her Majeſty's Body,
" be, according to the Limitations mention'd in an Act of Parliament, made in " England, in the 12th and 13th Years of the Reign of the late King William, in-" tituled, An Act for the further Limitation of the Crown, and the better ſecuring the " Rights and Liberties of the Subject.

Articles of Preliminaries.

Third Meeting April 24.

After this the Commiſſioners adjourn'd to the 24th of the ſame Month, when the Lord Chancellor of Scotland acquainted the Board, That the Lords Commiſſioners of Scotland did agree to the Preliminary Articles propoſed at the laſt Meeting, for regulating the Methods of Proceeding in this Treaty: And then he deliver'd to the Board the following Propoſals, viz. 1. " That the Succeſſion to the Crown of Scot-
" land, in Caſe of Failure of Heirs of her Majeſty's Body, ſhould be eſtabliſh'd
" upon the ſame Perſons mention'd in an Act of Parliament made in England, in " the 12th and 13th Years of the Reign of the late King William. 2. That the " Subjects of Scotland ſhould, for ever, enjoy all Rights and Privileges, as Natives
" of England, in England, and the Dominions thereunto belonging; and recipro-
" cally, that the Subjects of England enjoy the like Rights and Privileges in Scot- " land. 3. That there be a free Communication and Intercourſe of Trade and " Navigation between the Two Kingdoms, and Plantations thereunto belonging,
" under ſuch Regulations, as in the Progreſs of this Treaty, ſhould be found moſt
" for the Advantage of both Kingdoms. 4. That all Laws and Statutes in either

A. D. 1706.

" Kingdom, contrary to the Terms of Union, be repeal'd." The Lords Commiſſioners for England, after a ſhort Conſultation by themſelves, return'd an Anſwer, " That they were ſo fully convinc'd, that nothing but an entire Union of the Two Kingdoms would ſettle perfect and laſting Friendſhip between them, that they therefore thought fit to decline entring into any further Conſideration upon the Propoſals now made by the Lords Commiſſioners for Scotland, as not tending to that End; and deſired that the Lords Commiſſioners for Scotland, would be pleaſed to give in their Anſwer to the Propoſal delivered by the Lords Commiſſioners for England, in order to an entire Union of both Kingdoms.

Fourth Meeting April 25.

The next Day, the Lord Chancellor, in the Name of the Commiſſioners for Scotland, deliver'd to the Board the following Anſwer, viz. " The Lords Commiſſioners for Scotland, have conſidered the Propoſal given in to them by the Lords Commiſſioners for England, on Monday, the 22d, Inſtant, and do agree, that the Two Kingdoms of Scotland and England, be for ever united into one Kingdom, by the Name of Great Britain: That the united Kingdom of Great Britain, be repreſented by one and the ſame Parliament, and that the Succeſſion to the Monarchy of the Kingdom of Great Britain, (in Caſe of Failure of Heirs of her Majeſty's Body) ſhall deſcend upon the moſt excellent Princeſs Sophia, Electreſs, and Dutcheſs Dowager of Hanover, and remain to her, and the Heirs of her Body, being Proteſtants, to whom the Succeſſion of the Crown of England, is provided by an Act made in the 12th and 13th Years of the late King William, Intituled, An Act for the further Limitation of the Crown, and better ſecuring the Rights and Liberties of the Subjects, and excluding all Papiſts, and who ſhall marry Papiſts, in the Terms of the ſaid Act; with this Proviſion, That all the Subjects of the united Kingdom of Great Britain, ſhall have full Freedom and Intercourſe of Trade and Navigation, to and from any Part or Place within the ſaid united Kingdom, and Plantations thereunto belonging; and that there be a Communication of all other Privileges and Advantages, which do, or may belong to the Subjects of either Kingdom.

After a private Conſultation, the Lord Keeper, in the Name of the Lords Commiſſioners for England, deliver'd to the Board the Reply following; viz. " The Lords Commiſſioners for England are of Opinion, that the Proviſion added by the Lords Commiſſioners for Scotland, to the Propoſal made by the Lords Commiſſioners for England, on the 22d Inſtant, is a neceſſary Conſequence of an entire Union: And therefore their Lordſhips do agree to the ſaid Proviſion, under ſuch Terms, as in the further Progreſs of this Treaty, ſhall be found to be for the common Advantage of both Kingdoms." The ſame Day, in Purſuance of the Third Article of Preliminaries, a Committee was appointed for Reviſing the Minutes, and there were nominated on the Part of England, the Lord Grey; John Smith, Eſq; Speaker of the Houſe of Commons; Sir Thomas Trevor; Sir John Cook; and Doctor Waller; or any Three of them: And on the Part of Scotland, the Earl of Sutherland; the Earl of Leven; the Lord Preſident of Seſſion; the Lord Juſtice Clerk; John Clark of Pennicook, or any Three of them.

Fifth Meeting April 29.

Four Days after, the Lords Commiſſioners met again, and the Lord Keeper, in the Name of the Engliſh, deliver'd to the Board the following Propoſal: viz. " That there be the ſame Cuſtoms, Exciſes, and all other Taxes; and the ſame Prohibitions, Reſtrictions and Regulations of Trade, throughout the united Kingdom of Great Britain." Hereupon the Scotch Commiſſioners propoſed, " That a Committee be appointed, of an equal Number of each Side, to adjuſt the ſeveral Points contain'd in that Propoſal; and deſired, that the Engliſh Commiſſioners would order an Accompt of the Taxes, and other Things, to be laid before the ſaid Committee.

The Engliſh Commiſſioners having propoſed to appoint a Committee, to conſiſt of Eleven of each Side, and of them, any Six to have Power to proceed, and that they ſhould be nominated the next Meeting: This was readily agreed to by the Scotch; and acordingly, on the 1ſt of May, the Lords Commiſſioners proceeded to the Nomination of that Committee. The Engliſh named the Dukes of Somerſet and Bolton, the Earl of Sunderland, the Lords Townſhend, Wharton, and Somers, the Speaker of the Houſe of Commons, the Marquis of Hartington, Mr. Secretary Harley, Henry Boyle, Eſq; and Sir Simon Harcourt. The Scotch appointed the Lord Chancellor, the Duke of Queenſberry, the Earls of Sutherland, Leven, and Stair, the Lord Duplin, the Lord Preſident of Seſſion, the Lord Juſtice Clerk, and Sir Patrick Johnſtoun: And it was agreed, that this Committee ſhould meet the next Morning, and have Power to adjourn themſelves.

Sixth Meeting May 1.

Fifteenth Meeting May, 21.

'Twould be tedious to attend the Progreſs of this Treaty, but we muſt take Notice, that on the 21ſt of May, the Queen being come to the Meeting, ſhe told the Lords

Lords Commiſſioners, That ſhe was ſo much concern'd for the Union of the Two Kingdoms, that ſhe could not ſatisfy her ſelf without coming, before ſhe went out of Town, to ſee what Progreſs they had made in the Treaty; and to recommend very earneſtly to them the bringing it to a happy Concluſion, with as much Diſpatch as the Nature of it would admit; not doubting of the general Satisfaction which her Subjects of both Kingdoms would receive, in finding them overcome all Difficulties, to attain ſo great and publick a Good. Hereupon, the Lord Keeper deſir'd to know of her Majeſty, if ſhe would be pleas'd to hear the Propoſals made on either Side, and the Reſolutions taken thereupon, read; which her Majeſty allowing of, the ſame were read accordingly; and then the Queen retired.

On the 26th of June, the Queen came again to the Meeting, and told the Commiſſioners, That ſhe was come thither once more, to ſee what further Progreſs they had made in this Treaty, and to preſs a ſpeedy Concluſion of it; in regard her Servants of Scotland could not, without great Inconveniency, be much longer abſent from that Kingdom. Hereupon, in the next * Meeting, the Engliſh Commiſſioners propoſed, That Four Commiſſioners of each Part be appointed, to draw up into Form the Articles of this Treaty, upon the Points already agreed, or which ſhould afterwards be agreed: To which the Scotch Commiſſioners having conſented, the ſaid Articles were brought to Perfection by the 22d of July; when the Commiſſioners of both Kingdoms ſign'd and ſeal'd the Inſtruments, and order'd, that the reſpective Secretaries of each Commiſſion, ſhould ſign each others Journals of the Proceedings; and afterwards enter in the Journals, the Articles of the Treaty of Union.

The next † Day, the Lords-Commiſſioners for both Kingdoms, went from the Cockpit, to attend the Queen at St. James's; where the Lord Keeper, in the Name of the Lords Commiſſioners for England, preſented to her Majeſty one of the Sign'd and Seal'd Inſtruments, containing the Articles of UNION; and made the following Speech;

The Queen's Speech to the Commiſſioners, June 26.

* June 28. Thirty-fifth Meeting.

The Articles of Union ſign'd and ſeal'd, July 22. being the Forty-fourth Meeting.

† July 23. The Lords Commiſſioners attend the Queen.

May it pleaſe your MAJESTY,

The Lord Keeper's Speech to her Majeſty.

" WE, the Commiſſioners appointed by your Majeſty, in Purſuance of the " Act of Parliament paſs'd in your Kingdom of England, to treat con- " cerning an Union of the Two Kingdoms, with the Commiſſioners of Scotland, " do (according to our Duty) humbly beg Leave to preſent to your Majeſty theſe " the Effects of our continued and faithful Endeavours to that End.

They are the Articles agreed upon between your Commiſſioners of both King- " doms, as the Terms or Conditions upon which the intended Union is to take " Place; if your Majeſty, and the Parliaments of both Kingdoms, ſhall think fit to " approve, and confirm the ſame.

" In theſe we have come to an Agreement, on every Point was judg'd neceſſary, " to effect a compleat and laſting Union; and we have endeavour'd not to ſtir into " any Matter, we had Reaſon to think was not ſo.

" And altho' we have unanimouſly carried this Treaty thus far, purely from a " Conviction, that we have done therein to GOD, your Majeſty, and our Coun- " tries good Service; yet we are far from thinking, that what we have done, will " or ought to be of any Weight or Authority elſewhere; but do moſt entirely ſub- " mit theſe our Labours to the high Wiſdom of your Majeſty, and both your Par- " liaments, to ſtand or fall, by the Reaſon, Juſtice, and publick Utility on which " they are founded.

" Your Majeſty's Royal Preſence, and ſeaſonable Admonition to us, at the fitteſt " Junctures, were (we moſt thankfully acknowledge) a very great Encourage- " ment and Aſſiſtance to us, in the Difficulties we met with.

" Your Majeſty's Glory is already perfect; and the Finiſhing this Work, is all " that is wanting, to compleat, as well as ſecure the Happineſs of ſo great a Peo- " ple, as your Subjects may now, without any Arrogance, pretend to be.

" May your Majeſty live, not only to give a Sanction to this univerſal Bleſ- " ſing to all your People; but alſo to ſee, in a long and proſperous Reign over us, " the many immediate, or near good Effects of it; but as for that great and main " Conſequence of it, for which your Majeſty is making, by a moſt gracious and " charitable Foreſight, this only effectual Proviſion; I mean, the Continuance of " Peace and Tranquillity in this Iſland, upon a Deſcent of the Crown, inſtead of " that Bloodſhed and Diſtraction, which would probably follow upon the fatal Divi- " ſion of it;

" May we be ſo happy, as never, in our Days, to experiment the Fitneſs of theſe " Meaſures, your Majeſty is now taking for that End; but may late, very late Po- " ſterity only, in that reſpect, reap the Advantage of them!

Then

A. D. 1706.

Then the Lord Chancellor of Scotland, in the Name of the Lords Commiſſioners for that Kingdom, preſented to her Majeſty one of the Inſtruments of the Articles of UNION, on the Part of Scotland, with the following Speech :

May it pleaſe your MAJESTY,

The Scotch Lord Chancellor's Speech to the Queen.

" THE Commiſſioners appointed by your Majeſty for the Kingdom of Scot-
" land, to treat of an Union of your Two Kingdoms, of Scotland and Eng- " land, have commanded me to return your Majeſty their moſt humble and du" tiful Acknowledgments, for the Honour your Majeſty has conferr'd on them, in " employing them to negotiate this moſt important Affair, which is of the great-
" eſt Conſequence to all your Majeſty's Subjects.

" We have endeavour'd to diſcharge this Truſt with all Fidelity ; and are now
" come, humbly to lay before your Majeſty the Articles and Conditions of Union,
" which we have treated of, and agreed upon ; and do ſubmit them to your Majeſty's
" Royal Conſideration.

" It is a great Satisfaction to us, that what we have concluded in this Matter, has " been done with Unanimity : And we muſt own, that the Knowledge we had of " your Majeſty's great Concern for Uniting your Two Kingdoms, and the Earneſt-
" neſs with which your Majeſty has been moſt graciouſly pleas'd to recommend it,
" hath enabled us to bring this Treaty to a happy and ſpeedy Concluſion, to
" the mutual Satisfaction of the Commiſſioners on both ſides ; and we ſhall eſteem
" it our greateſt Happineſs, if what we have prepar'd be acceptable to your Ma-
" jeſty, and ratify'd by the Parliaments of both Kingdoms ; without which, what " we have done can be of no Authority.

" An Union of the Two Kingdoms has been long wiſh'd for, it being ſo neceſſary
" for eſtabliſhing the laſting Peace, Happineſs and Proſperity of both Nations : And " tho' it has been frequently endeavour'd by your Majeſty's Royal Predeceſſors,
" without the deſir'd Succeſs ; yet the Glorious Succeſſes, with which GOD has
" bleſs'd your Majeſty's Endeavours for the Happineſs of your People, make us " hope, that this Great Work is reſerv'd to be accompliſh'd in your Majeſty's " Reign.

After which, her Majeſty was pleas'd to make the following Speech :

My LORDS,

Her Majeſty's Speech.

I Give you many Thanks for the great Pains you have taken in this Treaty ; and am very well pleas'd to find, your Endeavours and Applications have brought it to ſo good a Concluſion. The Particulars of it ſeem ſo reaſonable, that I hope they will meet with Approbation in the Parliament of both Kingdoms. I wiſh, therefore, that my Servants of Scotland may loſe no Time, in going down to propoſe it to my Subjects of that Kingdom : And I ſhall always look upon it as a particular Happineſs, if this Union (which will be ſo great a Security, and Advantage to both Kingdoms) can be accompliſh'd in my Reign.

The ſame Day, the Queen in Council, an Order was made, importing, That whoſoever ſhould be concern'd in any ſeditious Diſcourſe, or Libel, or laying Wagers relating to the Union, ſhould be proſecuted for ſuch their Offences, according to the utmoſt Rigor of the Law.

Campaign in Flanders, in the Year 1706.

While Great Britain was bleſs'd with the Proſpect of a Happy Union at home, her Majeſty's Arms, and thoſe of her Allies, were crown'd with wonderful Succeſſes abroad. The Duke of Marlborough having ſtay'd a few Days at the Hague, went from thence to Maeſtricht on the 12th of May N. S. ; view'd, the next Day, with Monſieur d' Auverquerque, the Army of the States at Tongeren ; and both repair'd, Four Days after, to Liege, to view the Citadel, and the new Works about that Place. In the mean Time, the Engliſh Forces having receiv'd Orders to take the Field, arriv'd at Bilſen the 19th of the ſame Month. The 20th, the Army of the States march'd from Tongeren to Borchloen ; and the ſame Day, the Engliſh join'd them between that Place and Cors-Warem.

The Court of France receiv'd, on the 15th of May N. S. the mortifying News of Count Thouloufe's ſudden Return to the Coaſt of Provence ; by which they eaſily judg'd, that the Siege of Barcelona, that had been undertaken ſix Weeks before by Mareſchal de Theſſé, had infallibly miſcarried : Which was a moſt fatal Blow, both to the Reputation of the Arms of France, and to the Duke of Anjou's Intereſt throughout the whole Monarchy of Spain. But, on the other hand, they were inform'd, inform'd, that the Confederate Army in the Netherlands was not yet compleat; that the Danes refus'd to ſtir from their Quarters, till their Arrears were paid; and that the Pruſſians, for other Reaſons, were ſo far behind, as that they could not join the Duke of Marlborough in ſeveral Weeks: Whereas the Army of the Two Crowns, under the Command of the Elector of Bavaria and the Mareſchal de Villeroy, was entirely aſſembled. Hereupon, they flatter'd themſelves, that they might retrieve the ſinking Credit of their Arms, by a conſiderable Action in the Netherlands; and, in that fond Imagination, poſitive Orders were ſent to the Mareſchal de Villeroy, to fight the Allies: So that the Duke of Bavaria, who was then at Bruſſels, had juſt Time enough to take Poſt-Horſes, to go and join the Army, which paſs'd the Dyle the 19th of May, and poſted themſelves at Tirlemont, with the Gheet before them. On the other hand, the Confederates were no leſs eager for an Engagement, but did not hope ſo ſoon to have an Opportunity for it: And the Duke of Marlborough being apprehenſive, that the French would play the ſame Game over again, and keep behind the Dyle, (as they had done the Year before) had ſeveral Times expreſs'd his Concern and Uneaſineſs about it, to thoſe who had an Intimacy with his Grace; and, by a wiſe Forecaſt, was already laying Schemes, to put the Enemy beſides their cautious Meaſures; when Providence threw into his Hands an unexpected Occaſion of ſignalizing again his Courage and Conduct. Upon the Enemy's paſſing the Dyle, his Grace ſent Orders to the Daniſh Horſe, who were coming from their Gariſons, to haſten their March; engaging his Promiſe, in Conjunction with the Field-Deputies of the States, that their Arrears ſhould be duly paid: Whereupon they made ſuch Expedition, that on Saturday the 22d of May N. S. they came up within a League of the Confederate Army. The next Day, being Whitſunday, about Four in the Morning, the Confederate Army march'd in Eight Columns towards Ramellies; a Village, near which the Gheet takes its Source; that they might avoid the Inconveniency of paſſing that River. They ſoon had notice, that the Enemy's Army, having decamp'd from Tirlemont, were likewiſe on their March towards the Allies; whom the Duke of Bavaria and Mareſchal de Villeroy were reſolv'd to engage, either that or the next Day; being apprehenſive that the Duke of Marlborough had a Deſign to inveſt Namur, and not in the leaſt ſuſpecting, that his Grace had been join'd by the Daniſh Troops.

Battel of Ramellies, May 23. N. S.

A little after Eight a Clock in the Morning, the advanc'd Guard of the Confederates, which conſiſted of Six Hundred Horſe, and had been ſent with all the Quarter-Maſters of the Army to view the Ground, arriv'd at the Height of Merdorp, (or Merdau) from whence they perceiv'd that the Enemy were in Motion, and march'd in the Plain of Mont St. André, extending themſelves as far as the Tomb of Hottomont, towards the Mehaigne. Hereupon they halted, and ſent Intelligence to the Duke of Marlborough and Monſieur d' Auverquerque; who being advanc'd about Ten a-clock to view the Enemy, they could not at firſt judge whether the Squadrons they ſaw, were only to cover their March into their Lines, or whether they were the Van of their Army, that came to offer Battel. His Grace, therefore, gave Orders for the Horſe to haſten their March; reſolving, if thoſe he ſaw had been only Covering-Squadrons, to attack them with his Cavalry only: But finding that the Enemy's whole Army approach'd, with an apparent Reſolution to fight, he made all the neceſſary Diſpoſitions to prevent them. The Enemy, whoſe Army conſiſted of Seventy ſix Battalions, and One Hundred and Thirty two Squadrons, ſeeing the Confederates ſo near them, poſſeſs'd themſelves of a very ſtrong Camp, placing their Right near the Tomb of Hottomont, againſt the Mehaigne, and their Left at Anderkerk, or Autreglize; and poſted a good deal of their Infantry in the Villages of Autreglize, Offuz and Ramellies; which laſt was near their Center: Beſides which, they put Five Battalions near the Hedges of the Village of Franquenies, on their Right. The Confederate Army, which conſiſted only of Seventy four Battalions, and a Hundred and Twenty three Squadrons, was, at the ſame Time, drawn up in Order of Battel; the Right Wing being poſted near Foltz, on the Rivulet Tauſe, with a little Moraſs in Front; and the Left near the Village of Franquenies, on the Mehaigne; where, beſides the Number of the Horſe belonging to that Wing, the Duke of Marlborough order'd the Daniſh Squadrons, being Twenty one in Number, to be poſted; rightly judging, by the Situation of the Ground, that the Streſs of the Action would be on that Side. All Things being thus diſpos'd, it was reſolv'd to attack the Village of Ramellies, which was the Enemy's principal Poſt: In order to which, Twenty Pieces of Cannon, of Twenty four Pounders, and ſome Hawbitzers, were brought up; and Twelve Battalions, to be ſupported by the whole Line, were order'd to make the firſt Onſet, under the Command of Lieutenant-General Schultz.

A. D. 1706.

About Half an Hour paſt One, the Artillery of the Confederates having begun to play, was immediately anſwer'd by the Enemy's Cannon; and both continued firing, with conſiderable Execution. Whilſt the Duke of Marlborough was at the Head of the Lines, to give neceſſary Orders every where, Velt-Mareſchal d' Auverquerque repair'd to the Left, where perceiving that the Enemy's Foot, poſted in the Hedges of Franquenies, galled the Horſe of that Wing; he commanded Four Battalions, with Two Pieces of Cannon, under Colonel Wertmuller, to diſlodge them from thence; which they perform'd with great Vigor and Reſolution. Hereupon, the Enemy detach'd Two Battalions, and Fourteen Squadrons of Dragoons, on Foot, to regain that important Poſt; but Monſieur d' Auverquerque commanded, at the ſame Time, the whole Wing of Dutch Horſe to attack the Enemy, which not only prevented their Deſign, but put thoſe Dragoons into ſuch Diſorder, that they were not able either to reach the Village, or to recover their Horſes, which they had left a good way behind the Tomb of Hottomont; and ſo were moſt of them, either cut in pieces, or taken Priſoners. The Dutch Cavalry charg'd, with a great deal of Bravery, Sword in Hand; and ſoon after, the Engagement was ſuſtain'd by the Daniſh Squadrons; but having to deal with the French King's Houſhold, and other choice Troops which were in the Enemy's Right, the Conflict was obſtinate, and the Succeſs doubtful, for above an Hour. The Daniſh Horſe, which fought on the Left of all, behav'd themſelves with ſuch Gallantry, that they forc'd the Enemy to give Ground, and broke ſeveral of their Squadrons; but at the ſame Time, the French had almoſt an equal Advantage againſt the Dutch Horſe of the Right of the Left Wing, whom they put into great Confuſion. To remedy this, the Duke of Marlborough ſent for Twenty Squadrons of Horſe from the Right Wing; rallied ſome of the broken Squadrons, and gave his Orders for others to charge. In this Place, his Grace was in the Extremity of Danger: For being ſingled out by a Party of the moſt reſolute of the Enemy, and having the Misfortune to fall from his Horſe, he had been either kill'd, or taken Priſoner, if ſome of the Confederate Foot, that were near at hand, had not come very ſeaſonably to his Aſſiſtance. After this, his Grace had ſtill a greater Eſcape; a Cannon-Ball taking off the Head of Colonel Brindfeild, his Grace's Gentleman of the Horſe, as he was holding the Stirup for the Duke to remount. The Twenty Squadrons his Grace had ſent for from the Right, to reinforce the Left, had but little Share in the Defeat of the Enemy's Right: For by that Time they were come up, the Dutch and Danes having charg'd them, both in Front and Flank, had almoſt compleated that ſignal Piece of Service, cutting in Pieces the beſt Part of the King's Houſhold. In the mean while, the Village of Ramellies was vigorouſly attack'd by General Schultz, with the Twelve Battalions under him. The Enemy having the Advantage of the Ground, defended themſelves with great Reſolution and Obſtinacy; till ſeeing the whole Line of the Confederate Infantry in Motion to ſupport General Schultz, and the Dutch and Daniſh Horſe advancing to ſurround them, they bethought themſelves of making their Retreat, but were intercepted by the victorious Horſe, and moſt of them either kill'd or taken Priſoners. Hereupon, the reſt of the Enemy's Infantry endeavour'd likewiſe to make their Eſcape, which they did in better Order, being favour'd by the Horſe of their Left Wing; who being cover'd by a Rivulet and Moraſs, had not yet been attack'd; and form'd themſelves in Three Lines, between Offuz and Autreglize. But the Engliſh Horſe, having found Means to paſs the Rivulet, very briſkly charg'd the Enemy, who being (at the ſame Time) attack'd by the Engliſh and Dutch Foot, gave way on all ſides. Their Horſe rallied again in the Plains, to cover the diſorderly Retreat of their Foot; but they were ſo cloſely purſued by the Confederate Cavalry, that they were forc'd to divide themſelves into Three ſmall Bodies, that they might fly the faſter Three different Ways. Thoſe that took to the Left, were purſued by the Dutch and Danes, who made great Slaughter amongſt them, and took abundance of Priſoners. Thoſe that fled to the Right, were chaced by the Regiments of Lumley, Hay, and Roſs; which Two laſt fell in with the Foot-Regiment Du Roy, of whom having kill'd many, the reſt threw down their Arms, and begg'd Quarter, which was generouſly granted. The headmoſt Regiments of Engliſh Horſe that purſued the Enemy's Center, were thoſe of Lieutenant-General Wood, commanded by himſelf, and Windham's (afterwards Palmes's) Carabiniers, headed by Major Petry. When they came upon a Riſing-Ground, they eſpy'd Seven Squadrons of the Spaniſh and Bavarian Guards; amongſt which was the Elector in Perſon, and Mareſchal de Villeroy, who hoped, with theſe few choice Troops, to make good their Retreat, and ſave their Cannon, which was marching in a Line before them. General Wood gallop'd, with his own Regiment, upon the Enemy's Left, and charg'd them ſo vigorouſly, that he broke them all to pieces, killing many of them, and taking not a few few Priſoners. He alſo took the Standard of the Elector's Guards, Two of his own Trumpets, and kill'd his Kettle-Drummer; the Elector himſelf, and Mareſchal de Villeroy, very narrowly eſcaping. Major Petry, at the Head of Wyndham's Carabineers, fell upon the Enemy with equal Briſkneſs and Reſolution, put many of them to the Sword, and took ſeveral Priſoners. The Engliſh Horſe and Dragoons follow'd the Chace through and by Judoigne, 'till Two of the Clock in the Morning, and both they, and the Dutch and Danes, made themſelves Maſters of all the Enemy's Cannon, to the Number of about Fifty Pieces; moſt of their Baggage, about One Hundred and Twenty Colours and Standards, and ſeveral Pairs of Kettle-Drums. The Enemy's Loſs of Men, according to the moſt general Computation, amounted to Five Thouſand ſlain; and among them, Prince Maximilian, and Prince Monbaſon; and about Four Thouſand private Soldiers, and near Six Hundred Officers taken Priſoners. The Perſons of Note among the latter, were Meſſieurs Palavicini and Mezieres, Majors-General; the Marquiſs de Bar, Brigadier-General of Horſe; the Marquis de Nonant, Brigadier General of Foot, the Marquis de la Faume, Son to the Mareſchal de Tallard; Monſieur de Montmorency, Nephew to the late Duke of Luxemburgh, a Nephew of the Lord Clare, and ſeveral others.

The French entirely defeated.

A General Revolution in the Low-Countries, follow'd the Loſs of the Battel of Ramellies. The Cities and Towns of Louvain, Malines, Lier, Bruſſels, Antwerp, Ghent, and Bruges, open'd their Gates to the Conquerors; acknowledg'd King Charles for their lawful Sovereign; and the People, oppreſs'd by the heavy Government of France, receiv'd, every where, the Confederate Generals as their Deliverers, and the Reſtorers of their ancient Liberties. The Victorious Army purſu'd the Elector, who was oblig'd to quit the Field, with the broken Remnant of the French Army, and ſeek a Sanctuary under the Cannon of the fortified Towns. Moreover, Diſcord, which generally attends the Unfortunate, and which ſeem'd to be baniſh'd the French King's Armies in the late Wars, began now to reign among the Generals: The Elector complaining of Villeroy, and Villeroy of the Elector. Upon this terrible Diſaſter, which ſtruck as general a Conſternation in France, as if the Confederate Army had been near the Gates of Paris, the Court of France had no other immediate Reſource, but to ſend, with all Expedition, for the beſt Part of their Forces on the Rhine, to make up their Loſs in Brabant; which deliver'd the Empire from the Fears of a new Invaſion.

General Revolution in the Low-Countries.

At the ſame Time, the Council of France, fondly believing that the ſhifting of Generals might alter the Courſe of Fortune, recall'd the Duke of Vendoſme from Italy, to give him the Command of their Army in Flanders, as a Chief, able to reſtore to the Troops that Spirit of Fortitude and Audaciouſneſs, ſo natural to the French Nation; and ſent the Duke of Orleans, and Mareſchal de Marſin, to ſupply his Place in Italy. But the Event ſhew'd, that the Diſgraces of France were not yet compleated. The Duke of Vendoſme had ſcarce receiv'd his new Patent, when he had the Mortification to ſee Prince Eugene paſs the Adige, without being in a Condition to hinder it: Before he left Italy, he learn'd that Oſtend, a Sea-Port Town, which formerly ſtood a Siege of Three Years, Three Months, and Three Days, was now, by the Aſſiſtance of the Engliſh Bomb-Ketches, reduc'd, in Eight Days, open Trenches; and he came to the Netherlands, only to be Witneſs of the taking of the ſtrong Town of Menin, the Key of the French Conqueſts; and of Dendermond and Aeth whoſe Gariſons were all made Priſoners of War.

The Duke of Vendome recall'd from Italy.

Oſtend, Menin, Dendermond, and Aeth, taken by the Allies.

The Courts of France and Spain took ſuch early Meaſures to attack King Charles, both by Sea and Land, before he could be reliev'd by the Maritime Powers, that his Affairs were brought to the laſt Degree of Deſpair. The Duke of Anjou, (or King Philip) ſet out in February from Madrid, in order to open the Campaign with the Sieges of the City of Valencia, and of Gironne, that he might afterwards the more eaſily attack Barcelona; but this Scheme was alter'd, upon the Arrival of a Courier from France; and it was then reſolv'd to attack the Center, before the Extremes of King Charles's growing Conqueſts. On the 6th of April, (N. S.) the Duke of Anjou's Army, which conſiſted of Thirty Seven Battalions, and Thirty one Squadrons, open'd the Trenches before Mont-Juich, which, through the obſtinate Reſiſtance of the Engliſh and Dutch in Gariſon there, and the Slowneſs of the Attacks, occaſion'd by the Death of the French Ingineer Lapara, was not ſurrendred 'till the 25th of the ſame Month. The City of Barcelona was ſoon after reduc'd to the laſt Extremity, and King Charles to great Danger; though ſtill firmly reſolv'd to ſtand all Events. The brave and fortunate Sir John Leake, who with the Confederate Fleet, was detain'd by contrary Winds, was, with great Concern, inform'd of the ſad Condition the Beſieged were in, which was the more deſperate, in that they had no News from the Fleet. Count Toulouze, who, with his Squadron, kept the Town block'd up by Sea, had landed a prodigious Quantity of Artillery and and Ammunition; and the Beſieged were reduc'd to defend their ruin'd Walls by Coupures; ſo that notwithſtanding their Reſolution, notwithſtanding the Zeal of the Inhabitants, the Valour of the Country People, who continually haraſs'd the Beſiegers, and the Arrival of the Earl of Peterborow, with ſome Troops from Valencia, their falling into the Enemy's Hands ſeem'd inevitable. All Things were ready for an Aſſault, when Providence, which was ever conſpicuous in Sir John Leake's Expeditions, wafted the Fleet, with ſome Land-Forces, into Barcelona, on the 8th of May, (N. S.) from whence Count Toulouze was precipitately retired the Night before. Theſe unexpected Succours, caſt the Enemy into ſuch a Confuſion, that no Orders their Commanders gave, as to the blowing up of Mont-Juich, the deſtroying of their Guns, Mortars, Ammunition, and Proviſions, were well executed, except the Care Mareſchal Theſſé took to recommend One Thouſand Five Hundred of his Sick and Wounded, to the Humanity and Generoſity of the Earl of Peterborow. In this univerſal Conſternation, King Philip raiſes the Siege, and abandons his well-ſtored Camp, being ſtill haraſs'd and purſued in his inglorious and haſty Retreat, by ſeveral Thouſands of Catalans, as far as the Paſſage of the Ter. And to compleat his Diſgrace, he was forced to go out of his diſputed Kingdom, and to fetch a great Compaſs, with the miſerable Remains of his Army, to re-enter Spain. This remarkable Event of the raiſing of the Siege of Barcelona, happening on the 12th of May, when the Sun ſuffer'd a total Eclipſe, afforded plentiful Matter of Speculation and Alluſion: The French Monarch having aſſum'd the Emblem of the Sun for the Body of his Device, with this Motto, Nec pluribus impar: But though the Downfal of the great Power of France, may, with more Reaſon, be dated from the Battel of Blenheim; yet we may fix here the Epoch of the ill Fortune that generally attended the united Forces of France and Spain.

Sir John Leake relieves Barcelona.

However, when the Way ſeem'd level and eaſy towards the Conqueſt of all Spain, by the ſhameful Retreat of the Enemy's Army, the Confederates were not ſo diligent in improving that Advantage, as the Occaſion was favourable. The Marquis Das Minas, and the Earl of Galway, who begun their March from Portugal in the Month of April, had, in a ſhort Time, reduc'd Alcantara, Placentia, and other Places; nor was the Duke of Berwick, (ſince made a Mareſchal of France) able to hinder them from going directly to Madrid, where the Court was in terrible Alarms: But a Diſappointment ſuſpended their juſt Apprehenſions. The Portugueze Army had no manner of Advice from Barcelona; and ſeveral falſe Reports, made the Generals uneaſy and uncertain as to the Fate of that Place, and of King Charles; ſo that before their Doubts were clear'd, it was thought adviſeable to march back, in order to ſecure Ciudad-Rodrigo. During this * Interval, King Philip came Poſt to Madrid, and all Things ſeem'd to concur to raiſe the Hopes of his Party, when to his great Surprize, he was inform'd, that the Portugueze, and Confederate Army, were on their March into the Heart of Spain, through Salamanca and Valladolid. Hereupon he abandon'd Madrid, which, on the Approach of the Portugueze Army, acknowledg'd Charles the † Third. Other Cities and Towns follow'd their Example; whilſt the Confederate Fleet, ſtill under the Command of Sir John Leake, reduc'd, firſt Carthagena, and afterwards Alicant. All Spain had infallibly ſubmitted to King Charles, if precious Time had been well huſbanded. Several Expreſſes and Parties were ſent to his Catholick Majeſty, to preſs him to repair to his Capital City, with as many Troops as he could poſſibly bring along with him, in order to prevent the Enemy, who advanc'd through Navarre. Much Time paſs'd, and no Anſwer came, which occaſion'd various and groundleſs Reports, (even of the King's Death) which cool'd the early Affection of ſome, diſheartned others, and gave an Opportunity to the oppoſite Party to ſtir. At laſt, certain Advice was brought, that King Charles had accepted the Invitation made to him by the City of Saragoſſa, where he had been proclaim'd, and that he was marching to join the Confederate Army, where, indeed, he arriv'd the 8th of Auguſt, N. S. But the Enemy, who had Leiſure to recover their Fears, and gather Strength, were, by this Time, advanc'd near the Gates of Madrid, being ſuperior to the Confederates, by Twenty Five Squadrons, and Thirteen Battalions. After both Armies had a long Time been in View, and vainly endeavour'd to gain Ground upon each other, the Confederates having conſum'd all their Proviſions, reſolv'd, at laſt, to march towards the Frontiers of Valencia, diſpoſing their Quarters in ſuch Manner, as that they might cover that Kingdom, Arragon and Catalonia; maintain a free Entrance into Caſtile, and ſecure their Communication with the Sea-Port Towns; which was executed, notwithſtanding the Enemy's Oppoſition. 'Tis true, the Duke of Berwick, by the Superiority of his Forces, did afterwards retake Carthagena; but this Loſs was abundantly countervail'd, by the Reduction of the Iſlands of Majorca and Ivica, with which Sir John Leake ended his Glorious Campaign.

A. D. 1706.

The Arms of the Two Crowns were, in the Beginning of this Year, attended with ſome Succeſs in Italy, but in the End, their great Projects on that Side, were as effectually baffled, as the other had been in Flanders and Spain. The Fortreſs of Montmelian, after a Year's Blockade, had ſurrendred the 17th of September, N. S. 1705; Nice was beſieg'd in the Depth of Winter, and oblig'd to ſurrender to the French on the 4th of January, 1706; and about that Time, Prince Eugene thought fit to take a Journey to Vienna, to repreſent the State of Things to the Imperial Court, and ſollicit for Reinforcements. Hereupon the Duke of Vendoſme reſolv'd to take Advantage of his Highneſs's Abſence, and having attack'd the Imperialiſts at Calcinato, before they had receiv'd the Succours they expected, gain'd a ſignal Victory over them, on the 19th of April, N. S. Fluſh'd with this good Fortune, the Court of France ſent Orders to the Duke de la Feuillade to lay Siege to Turin, the Duke of Savoy's Capital City, and laſt Fortreſs; which he did accordingly about the beginning of June. There was all the Reaſon to fear the Enemy's Enterprize would have been attended with Succeſs, but the Gariſon, commanded by Count Thaun, defended themſelves with ſo much Bravery and Reſolution, that they held out 'till the Arrival of the Succours in September. The Duke of Savoy, who with great Prudence and Forecaſt had taken the Field, that he might the better be able to give his Orders every where, did moſt happily baffle the Enemy, who very unpolitickly hunted his Royal Highneſs, inſtead of carrying on the Siege with Vigor. On the other Hand, 'tis Matter of Wonder to conſider with what Rapidity Prince Eugene remov'd all the Obſtacles that had been laid in his way along the Adige; how, afterwards, he croſs'd a Country full of deep Ditches and Canals, paſs'd the Po, penetrated into the Ferrazeze, and the Modeneze, took Final, Carpi, Regio, and other Places; and how having march'd to the Enemy towards Guaſtalla, and obſerv'd that they repaſs'd the Po, he turn'd ſhort into the Parmeſan, and Placentine, which Countries he travers'd without Oppoſition, and went through the important Paſſage of Stradella, where he might eaſily have been ſtopp'd: Inſomuch that after Thirty Four Marches, he join'd the Duke of Savoy, and made way for the famous Battel of Turin, which was fought on the 7th of September, and which, in Two Hours Time, defeated both the Forces and ambitious Projects of the Enemy. The main Army which had join'd the Beſiegers, and expected the Imperialiſts, behind deep Intrenchments, was forc'd, and put to the Rout; its broken Remains were oblig'd to fly towards Pignerol, in the greateſt Confuſion; their Camp was abandon'd, with all their great Stores and Baggage; the Duke of Orleans wounded, Mareſchal Marſin kill'd, and Turin reliev'd.

The Baron de Hohendorf, who was ſent by the Duke of Savoy, and Prince Eugene, to notify this ſignal Victory to the States-General, and to the Queen of Great Britain, preſented to their High-Mightineſſes the following Relation, which deſerves to be tranſmitted to Poſterity.

High and Mighty LORDS,

Baron de Hohendorf's Account of that Victory.

" I Am very happy in being choſen by his Royal Highneſs the Duke of Savoy, " and by Monſieur Prince Eugene, to bring your High Mightineſſes the News " of the glorious Victory which they gain'd over the Enemy, the 7th of this " Month, in the Neighbourhood of Turin. His Royal Highneſs and Prince Eugene " hope, you will take no leſs Part in their good Fortune, than you have in their " Glory, by the great Succours you ſo generouſly ſent to the Prince, who, of all " the World, moſt deſerves them. At length, after having paſs'd Four great Ri- " vers, which ſerv'd for Ditches to the Four Intrenchments the Enemy had made " to hinder our Paſſage: At length, after Thirty Four Marches, our Army arriv'd " near Turin, the 30th of Auguſt.

" The 1ſt of September, his Royal Highneſs join'd us with his Horſe, and the " whole Army paſs'd the Po the 4th, between Moncalier and Carignan, towards " Quiras. Four Battalions, and Ten Thouſand Militia, were left under the Com- " mand of Count Santona, with a certain Quantity of Powder to be thrown into " Turin, in Caſe the Enemy ſhould quit the Hill, to oppoſe our Army with all their " Forces The 5th we encamp'd near the Doria, and his Royal Highneſs having " Intelligence, that a Convoy of One Thouſand Three Hundred Mules was coming " from Suza, he caus'd the Marquis de Viſconti to paſs the Ford of Elpignan, with the " Horſe of the Firſt Line of the Left Wing, and the Marquis de Langallerie to paſs " below Pianeſſa, with the Horſe of the Second Line of the ſame Wing; and ſo the " Convoy being come into the Neighbourhood of that Town, was inclos'd between " them. Mr. de Bonel, who commanded the Guard of the Convoy, was beaten, and the " Regiment of Chatillon entirely defeated. That Day Eight Hundred loaded Mules

A. D. 1706.

" were taken, and at Night the Caſtle of Pianeſſa, into which the reſt of the Con-
" voy, and of the Regiment of Chatillon had eſcap'd, ſurrendred, with its Gariſon,
" conſiſting of Eighty Foot, at Diſcretion.

" The 6th we paſs'd the Doria, and encamp'd with the Right on the Bank of " that River, before Pianeſſa, and the Left on the Stura, before the Venerie. At " Night, all were order'd to be ready to fight the next Day; which Order was re-
" ceiv'd with inexpreſſible Joy.

" The 7th at Day-break, we march'd to the Enemy, who were intrench'd up to " the Teeth, having the Stura on their Right, the Doria on their Left, and the " Convent of the Capuchins de Notre-Dame de la Campagne in the Center; beſides
" Luſcingo, and ſeveral other fortified Caſſines, flanked their Intrenchment. Our " Foot march'd in Eight Columns, Four in the Firſt Line, and as many in the " Second, all the Grenadiers of each Column in the Van: The Artillery was di" vided in Proportion among the Foot: Our Right mov'd along the Side of the " Doria, and our Left along the Stura. Behind the Foot march'd the Horſe, the " Firſt Line in Six Columns, the Second in Brigades. Never was any Thing ſeen
" ſo bold, and ſo terrible, as this March. The Enemy fir'd continually with Forty " Pieces of Cannon, but all their Fire ſerv'd only the more to inflame our valiant " Soldiers. Within half Cannon-ſhot we formed into Battalia. All the Generals " took their Poſts; the Cannon began to fire, and all the Inſtruments of War to " ſound. We left a proper Diſtance betwixt the Brigades of our Foot, to which we " might march our Horſe, in Caſe of Need; which Precaution was of great Uſe to " us afterwards. Upon Notice that all was in Order, the whole Army mov'd in a " Moment. Our Infantry march'd up, with their Muſkets on their Shoulders, to " the Foot of the Intrenchment. Then the great Fire of the Muſkets began, and
" as by the unequal Situation of the Ground, our Left Wing ſuſtain'd alone, for " ſome Time, the Efforts of the Enemy, they were, for a little while, put to a " Stand, but without giving Ground. That very Moment Prince Eugene came up,
" drew his Sword, and putting himſelf at the Head of the Battalions on the Left,
" broke into the Enemy's Intrenchments in an Inſtant. His Royal Highneſs did
" the like in the Center, and in our Right near Luſcingo. In Concluſion, we tri-" umph'd on all Sides; and, at the ſame Time, our Horſe advancing through the " Intervals left for them, 'twas no longer a Fight, but a Purſuit of Runaways; and " our Horſe look'd upon it as a Scandal to their Valour, to cut down Men that " fled with ſo great Precipitation; which ſav'd many of the Enemy's Lives. By " Noon, the Victory was wholly ours, and the City entirely deliver'd; for the " Enemy abandon'd their Attack, and all their Camp retired, with the Remains " of their Army, to the other Side of the Po. The reſt of the Day was ſpent in " taking ſeveral Caſſines and Redoubts poſſeſs'd by the Enemy, who all yielded
" themſelves Priſoners of War, and his Royal Highneſs enter'd triumphantly his " Capital, that Evening.

High and Mighty LORDS,

" This is a true Relation of what our Army has done in Piedmont. I forbear to " ſpeak of the Actions of the Two great Princes that commanded it, being at a " Loſs for Words to deſcribe them. I have the Honour to be ſent hither, rather " to publiſh the eternal Acknowledgment they promiſe you, than the great Va-
" lour by which they have rendred themſelves worthy of your Friendſhip. I do it
" by theſe Lines, profeſſing my ſelf, at the ſame Time, with moſt profound " Reſpect, &c.

The Baron de Hohendorf having perform'd his Commiſſion at the Hague, went to the Army in Flanders to make his Report, and deliver Letters to the Duke of Marlborough: Which done, he ſail'd for England, with other Letters from the Duke of Savoy, and Prince Eugene, to the Queen of Great-Britain; acknowledging her Majeſty's powerful Aſſiſtance, which had ſo much contributed to their Succeſſes. 'Tis certain, that as the Britiſh Nation reſcued the Empire from its Inteſtine and Foreign Enemies, in the Year 1704, by their Armies; ſo they did in the Year 1706, ſupport the Common Cauſe with a Loan of Two Hundred and Fifty Thouſand Pounds, which, in Five Days, was ſubſcrib'd for Prince Eugene, and which mainly contributed to the glorious Campaign his Highneſs made in Italy.

250000 l. ſubſcrib'd for Prince Eugene.

The French, to buoy up the ſinking Spirits of the People; and in ſome Meaſure to palliate their irreparable Loſs at Turin, highly magnify'd a Victory gain'd by their General Medavi, near Caſtiglione, over the Hereditary Prince of Heſſe-Caſſel. This Action unhappily fell out Two Days after the Battel of Turin; and had it been put off Two or Three Days longer, 'till Monſieur Medavi and the Prince had Intelligence gence of the other, 'tis very probable the French General would not have hazarded an Engagement. The Prince of Heſſe, who commanded a Body of Auxiliary Troops, had taken Goito; and went near to poſſeſs himſelf of Caſtiglione, when Count Medavi, having drain'd the Gariſons of ſeveral Places, fell upon him unawares, and forc'd him to an Engagement. In the Action, his Highneſs behaving himſelf with his uſual Valour, had all the Advantage, took ſome Cannon from the Enemy, and turn'd them againſt themſelves: But the French, who were much ſuperior in Number, renewing the Charge, and being like to ſurround him, he was oblig'd to retire to Valeggio, which he did in pretty good Order, and without any Interruption from the Enemy; ſo that this Action had no other ill Conſequences, than to retard the taking of Caſtiglione, which, ſoon after, fell of Courſe. The French, whoſe Intereſt it was to palliate their Defeat before Turin, remain'd ſome Time about Feneſtrelles and Briançon, as if they deſign'd to return with an Army into Piedmont; and, to give an Air of Truth to their Rodomontade, made ſome unſucceſsful Attempts to paſs through the Valley of Aoſta: But the Two Victorious Princes, diſregarding the Reports ſpread by the French, and which vaniſh'd into Smoak, were only wiſely intent upon improving their late Victiry. All the Places poſſeſs'd by the Enemy in Piedmont, Montferrat, Milaneze, and the neighbouring Provinces, were reduc'd one after another; ſome voluntarily, as Milan, others by main Force; and among the reſt, Pavia, Mortara, Alexandria, Piccighitone, Tortona, whoſe Gariſon was put to the Sword; and Cazal, the Gariſon whereof were made Priſoners of War, as well as thoſe of many other Towns: So that, excepting Cremona, Valenza, and the Caſtle of Milan, which were block'd up, France loſt a vaſt Country, the invading and keeping whereof, had coſt her prodigious Sums of Money, by a Revolution no leſs wonderful and ſurprizing, than that which happen'd at the beginning of the Campaign in the Netherlands. 'Twas very happy for Germany, that the Slowneſs and Weakneſs of its Efforts on the Rhine, were made up by the Victories of the Allies every where elſe: But 'twas a great Misfortune, that the Peace of Hungary, which was thought ſo near a Concluſion, met with the ſame Obſtacles that ſtood formerly in its Way, and which baffled the Care and Application, both of the ordinary and extraordinary Miniſters from England and Holland, ſent to Vienna, to mediate that long-wiſh'd for Accommodation.

Fight at Caſtiglione.

Campaign in Germany inconſiderable. The Negotiation for the Peace of Hungary miſcarries.

On the contrary, a Treaty of Peace on a ſudden, put an End to the long, obſtinate, and bloody War, that diſtracted Poland, which may well be reckon'd as one of the moſt wonderful Events of the Year 1706. The crowning of King Staniſlaus, which had been attended with a Treaty between that Prince and the King of Sweden, had oblig'd King Auguſtus to return from Saxony to Poland, to make a ſtrict Alliance with the Czar: But the Army which was to follow him from Saxony, was no ſooner arriv'd near Frowſtadt in February, than it was defeated by the Swediſh General Renſchild. 'Twas then the general Opinion, that the King of Sweden would not have given him Time to repair that Loſs by the Muſcovite Succours, and that he would purſue him cloſely, in order to make him abandon Poland and Lithuania; but it ſince appear'd, that he had another Deſign in View, the better to compaſs his Ends. The Campaign there was ſpent on both Sides in Marches, and in exacting Contributions; after which the King of Sweden having reinforc'd his Army, and left Two Bodies in Poland and Lithuania, he march'd ſuddenly into Saxony in September, and thereby hindred King Auguſtus from receiving any Supplies from his own Dominions. The Affairs of the latter were in this deſperate Condition, when another Event, no leſs unexpected, ſeem'd to buoy up the ſinking Spirits and Hopes of his Party, by the Victory he gain'd on the 29th of October, near Kaliſh, over General Mardefelt, and the Palatine of Kiow. But the News of this Battel was ſcarce made Publick, when the Scene was ſhifted again, by a Peace, ſtill more ſurprizing than all the reſt, ſince it was ſigned the 24th of September, above a Month before the Battel; and which is more ſtrange, the ſubſequent Victory occaſion'd no Alterations in the Articles of the Treaty, whereby King Auguſtus gave up the Kingdom of Poland; renounc'd all Right to the great Dukedom of Lithuania, and ſolemnly acknowledg'd Staniſlaus as true, rightful King of Poland, and Great Duke of Lithuania. On the 17th of December, the King of Sweden, and King Auguſtus, had an Interview at Alt-Ranſtadt, where, in Remembrance of the Peace, a Yearly Fair was granted, call'd Urede-Mart, or Fair of Peace. This Year died the Biſhop of Munſter, a Prince ever inclin'd to entertain a good Intelligence with his Neighbours: His Death having made way for Two Competitors to ſupply that vacant See; the Biſhop and Prince of Paderborn was elected by the Majority of Votes; but the contrary Party declar'd in Favour of the Prince of Lorrain, Biſhop of Oſnabrug; which conteſted Election was at laſt decided in favour of the former. This Year was alſo fatal to Don Pedro, King of Portugal, who was the moſt zealous and hearty Perſon

A. D. 1706.

Perſon of all his Court in the Intereſt of the Confederacy : His Death, at ſo critical a Juncture, would have been a great Loſs to the Allies, had not his Son and Succeſſor, Don Juan, ſolemnly declar'd, and caus'd to be notify'd to them, that he would religiouſly perform all the Engagements enter'd into by his Father, and carry on the War againſt France with redoubled Vigor.

Deſign of a Deſcent upon France.

The Confederate Fleet, commanded by Admiral Shovel, with a Body of near Ten Thouſand Land-Men, under the Command of the Earl Rivers, which at this very Juncture happen'd to be in the River of Liſbon, did not a little contribute to the diſappointing the ſecret Cabals of the French Faction in the Court of Portugal. The Occaſion of that great Armament was this : Beſides the Methods which, ſince the Beginning of the War, had been purſued to diſtreſs the common Enemy, it was, this Year, reſolv'd to attempt a Deſcent upon France, where the Perſecution of the Proteſtants, and the Oppreſſion of all the Subjects, ſeem'd to have prepar'd them to a general Revolt ; of which, clear Indications had lately appear'd, in ſeveral Riſings, in different Provinces. The Queen and her Council had, Three Years before, ſhew'd their Inclinations to relieve and aſſiſt the Proteſtants in the Cevennes ; and the States-General had readily concurr'd in that generous Deſign : But the Endeavours formerly uſed for that Purpoſe having prov'd ineffectual, it was now thought proper to cloſe with the Propoſals of the Abbot de la Bourlie, Brother to the Count de Guiſcard ; who, upon ſome Diſguſts from the French Court, retir'd (Two Years before) into Swiſſerland, and from thence repair'd to the Court of Turin, where he ſtil'd himſelf Marquis of Guiſcard. His bold Spirit, Ambition, and Thirſt of Revenge, ſuggeſting to him the Thought of making himſelf the Chief of the Malecontents of France ; he firſt attempted, with Four Tartanes, and a Handful of Men, to make a Deſcent on the Coaſt of Languedoc, in order to join the Cevennois, or Camiſars : But the Succeſs was anſwerable to the Raſhneſs of the Enterprize ; tho' it muſt be own'd, that the contrary Winds were the more immediate Cauſe of his Diſappointment. Some Time after his Return to Turin, he went from thence to the Hague, where both the Great Penſionary and the Duke of Marlborough gave him Hopes to employ him, in caſe any Deſcent was attempted upon France ; and, in the mean while, the States-General provided for his Subſiſtance. By this Time, the Marquis de Miremont, having obtain'd a Commiſſion of Lieutenant-General in the Queen's Service, and of Commander in Chief of the Forces to be employ'd in Savoy, towards the Relief of the French Proteſtants, was alſo come from London to the Hague, to ſollicit both the Concurrence of the States in his Project, and their Quota towards the Charge of that Enterprize. But thoſe who had the Management of Affairs at the Hague, were divided in their Opinions ; ſome inclining for the Marquis de Guiſcard, whoſe Project was to reſtore the ancient Liberties of the whole Kingdom of France, as the beſt Security the Proteſtants could have for the Enjoyment of their Religion and particular Privileges ; and others ſiding with the Marquis de Miremont, who, having nothing in View but the Reſtoration of the Proteſtants of France, thought it improper to make uſe of Roman-Catholicks for that Purpoſe. Some Endeavours were uſed, to reconcile the Two Marquiſſes : But Monſieur de Miremont ſtiffly refuſing to act in Concert with a Papiſt, they prov'd an inſeparable Obſtacle to each other's Schemes ; ſo that nothing was concluded in Favour of either at the Hague. Both being tir'd out with a tedious and fruitleſs Negotiation, the Marquis de Miremont came back to England, and Guiſcard, upon the News of the ſucceſsful Expedition to Catalonia, repair'd with all Speed to Barcelona. His Projects were the more reliſh'd by King Charles and the Earl of Peterborow, in that they ſeem'd to promiſe a powerful Diverſion to the Forces, which the French would not fail pouring into Spain : So that it was eaſy for the Marquis de Guiſcard to procure Recommendations from his Catholick Majeſty, both to the Queen of Great Britain, and to the States-General ; with which he embark'd for England, and, after a tedious and dangerous Voyage, arriv'd at London in February 170⅞. The Letters he brought from King Charles and the Earl of Peterborow, beſpoke him a very favourable Reception at Court ; where he found beſides, ſeveral powerful Protectors, particularly the Dukes of Devonſhire and Ormond. With theſe Advantages, ſupported by tolerable good Parts, and inſinuating Addreſs, it was not difficult for this bold Adventurer to work himſelf into the Intimacy and good Opinion of ſome Miniſters, particularly of Mr. Henry St. John, then Secretary at War, and of many other eminent Perſons of both Sexes ; ſo that at length he got the Aſcendant over the Marquis de Miremont, his Competitor ; who having refus'd ſome Offers that were made him, Guiſcard was pitch'd upon to be employ'd in a Deſcent intended to be made upon France, under the Command of the Earl Rivers, as a moſt proper Perſon to contribute to the Succeſs of ſuch an Enterprize. Hereupon, the Queen honour'd him with the ſame Rank of Lieutenant-General, which he had before in the Emperor's Service; gave him the Command of a Regiment of Dragoons, and the Direction of Six Regiments of Foot; all Seven form'd out of the Refugee Officers on the Iriſh Eſtabliſhment, who rais'd about the Third Part of their Complements in England. Beſides theſe Regiments, England furniſh'd towards this Expedition, Eight Engliſh Battalions of Foot, (without including the Marines) and Two Regiments of Dragoons; and the Dutch, Four Battalions of Foot, and Three Squadrons of Dragoons: All which amounted to about Ten Thouſand Men. The Command of the Fleet was given to Sir Cloudeſly Shovel; who, with the Engliſh Men of War and Tranſports, ſail'd from St. Helens on the 10th of Auguſt; judging that the Dutch could not be far off. But the latter not coming to St. Helens till the 12th, and being obliged to anchor there one Tide, both to get Intelligence of the Engliſh Fleet, and to take in freſh Water, this Delay prov'd a fatal Diſappointment to the intended Deſcent. For when the whole Fleet came near the Chops of the Channel, they were forc'd back into Torbay by a ſtrong Weſterly Wind, which continuing ſeveral Weeks, the Ships of the Firſt and Second Rate were laid up, and the Deſign of Landing in France laid aſide. The Marquis de Guiſcard, who, while the Fleet was wind-bound, had ſome Diſputes with the Engliſh Generals, wherein he betray'd, both his inſupportable Arrogance, and his Ignorance of Military Affairs, as well as his want of Intelligence in France, was thereupon ſuddenly recall'd: And, on the 1ſt of October, the Fleet, with the Land-Forces, ſail'd from Torbay for Liſbon; where, notwithſtanding the extream bad Weather, Part of them arriv'd the 18th of the ſame Month. The Court of Portugal, not having thought fit to comply with the Conditions upon which the Earl Rivers was order'd to ſtay in that Kingdom, the Confederate Fleet, with the Land-Forces, ſail'd the 18th of January N. S. from Liſbon, and on the 8th of the next Month arriv'd at Alicant. A few Days after, the Engliſh Admiral ſail'd back for Liſbon; and as for the Earl Rivers, whether his Commiſſion determin'd in Spain, or whether he was unwilling, either to ſerve under the Earl of Galway, or to ſhare with him the Command of an Army ſo ill provided as he found the Confederate Forces in Spain to be; his Lordſhip embark'd again for England, accompany'd by the Earl of Eſſex, Lieutenant-General, and Brigadier Gorges.

The Fleet and Land-Forces arrive at Alicant, Feb. 8. 1707. N. S.

We may here take notice, that this Year the Queen went Twice (viz. June the 27th, and December the 31ſt) in a Triumphant Cavalcade, to the Cathedral-Church of St. Paul, to return GOD Almighty publick Thanks and Acknowledgments for the great Succeſſes of her Arms, and thoſe of her Allies.

The King of Sweden's marching into the Electorate of Saxony, giving juſt Ground of Jealouſy to the Allies; Dr. Robinſon, and the Heer Haerſolet, Envoys from her Britannick Majeſty and the States-General, in Poland, were order'd to attend that Monarch, and obſerve his Motions: But before their Departure from Dantzick, they ſent him the following Letter:

SIR,

"HER Sacred Majeſty of Great Britain, and their High and Mightineſſes the "States-General of the United Provinces, have frequently declar'd to your Ma- "jeſty their Sentiments and good Wiſhes for preſerving the Tranquillity of the Empire, "particularly that Part thereof which lies next to Poland; and your Majeſty's An- "ſwers to their Repreſentations, were ſuch as gave them a Proſpect of your Maje- "ſty's Compliance with their Requeſt, and of your having ſuch Views for the "Good of the Common Cauſe, as to join your Forces to thoſe of the Allies, who "fight for the Tranquillity of Europe; or, at leaſt, to do nothing which may inter- "rupt any further Opportunities of their acting with Glory and Succeſs againſt the "Common Enemy, till an Equitable and Laſting Peace ſhall be concluded, on ſuch "Terms as ſhall diſable France from violating it hereafter with Impunity, if "the Courſe of that great good Fortune, which has hitherto attended the Arms "of the Allies, in bridling the Diſturber of Mankind, be not diverted: Since, "next to God's Glory, they wiſh for nothing more, than that every one may be "preſerv'd in the Poſſeſſion of his own Right. As they think it neceſſary for them- "ſelves, ſo they believe it cannot prejudice Sueden; ſince it is too evident, that "France aims at nothing leſs, than to diſturb all the Princes and States equally; "ſo that if they be not all ſecur'd, they muſt all be Slaves. Several Rumors "have been ſpread abroad, which tho' they are not credited in England and Holland, "yet being ſomewhat perplexing, we have ſent to pray your Majeſty not to diſturb

J. V. HAERSOLET.

To this Letter, the King of Sweden return'd Anſwer ; " That he had no Deſign, " by this Invaſion of Saxony, to undertake any Thing to the Prejudice of his " Friends and Allies ; but being provok'd by an unjuſt War, to do what the Law " of Nations allows, he ought long ſince to have removed the Seat of War to that " Electorate, where it had its Source, and had been ſupported many Years ; but " that he forbore doing it at the Interceſſion of the Allies, and would not make uſe " of his Right, as long as he had any Proſpect of curbing an obſtinate Enemy : " But ſince his Affairs would not ſuffer him to be amuſed any longer, and that " he could not permit the Enemy to repair his Strength, (ſo often broke to no Pur- " poſe) there was a Neceſſity of attacking the Fountain from whence ſo many E- " vils had ſprung ; hoping that the Allies would have no Cauſe to complain, if by " this Expedition their Succeſſes ſhould be interrupted ; ſince it was very apparent, " that Saxony had done ſo much Miſchief, and would do more, if not prevented." This Anſwer being unſatisfactory, and the Suſpicion of the Allies ſtill increaſing, upon the King of Sweden's raiſing great Numbers of Men throughout the Empire, and his admitting to his Audience the French King's and the Duke of Bavaria's Miniſters ; the Engliſh and Dutch Envoys were directed to deſire his Swediſh Majeſty, to declare his true Intentions : But that reſerv'd Prince ſtill put them off with dubious Anſwers, and refus'd to open himſelf to any but the Duke of Marlborough.

The Duke of Marlborough arrives at the Hague, Nov. 9. N. S.

His Grace having embark'd at Antwerp, the 7th of November N. S. on Board one of the Yachts belonging to the Admiralty of the Maeze, arriv'd the 8th at Rotterdam, and the next Morning at the Hague ; attended by Count Zinzendorf, and Mr. Stepney. The latter, being recall'd from Vienna, where he bore with Applauſe the Character of her Majeſty's Envoy Extraordinary, and Plenipotentiary, came to the Hague, to ſucceed Mr. Alexander Stanhope in the ſame Poſt, which he was no longer able to diſcharge to his own Satisfaction, by reaſon of his advanc'd Age, and infirm Health ; and therefore had earneſtly preſs'd his being recall'd. The Duke of Marlborough having receiv'd the Compliments of the States, Foreign Miniſters, and other Perſons of Diſtinction, on his glorious Campaign, his Grace had ſeveral Conferences with the Deputies of the States, wherein, among other Things, it was agreed, That the Steps France had made towards a Peace, ſhould be communicated to the Miniſters of the Allies, in order to remove all Suſpicions of clandeſtine Negotiations, and encourage the ſeveral Members of the Grand-Alliance, to redouble their Efforts againſt the next Campaign. Accordingly, the States having deſired the Miniſters of the Allies reſiding at the Hague, to be preſent the 21ſt of November, at an extraordinary Congreſs, their Deputies for Foreign Affairs made a Notification to them, that gave them great Satisfaction. They own'd, " That France " had formerly, by ſome private Perſons, made general Intimations of their Wil- " lingneſs to treat of Peace, and that, laſt Winter, the Marquis d' Alegre had pre- " ſented to the States a formal Memorial on the ſame Subject, the Subſtance of " which was read to the Congreſs : That they had given no Ear to thoſe Advances, " nor communicated them to the Allies, becauſe they did not judge them worth " imparting to them : But, that in October paſt, the Elector of Bavaria had writ- " ten a Letter * to the Duke of Marlborough, and another to the Field-Deputies of " the States : Which Two Letters, and the Anſwers that had been return'd to them, " were alſo communicated to the Congreſs.

Mr. Stepney ſucceeds Mr. Stanhope, as Envoy Extr. and Plenipotentiary.

A Congreſs of the Miniſters of the Allies at the Hague, wherein the Steps made by France towards a Peace are communicated, Nov. 21. N. S.

* Dated Oct. 21. N. S.

The Elector, in the Name of the Moſt Chriſtian King, had propoſed the holding of Conferences in ſome Place between the Two Camps, or between Mons and Bruſſels, to treat of a Peace : To which the Duke of Marlborough anſwer'd †, That having communicated to the Queen, his Miſtreſs, what his Electoral Highneſs had done him the Honour to write to him, ſhe had commanded him to anſwer his Electoral Highneſs, That as ſhe had receiv'd with Pleaſure, this Notice of the King's Inclination to agree to the making of a ſolid and laſting Peace with all the Allies, being the ſole End that oblig'd her Majeſty to continue this War till now ; ſo ſhe would be very glad to conclude it in Concert with all her Allies, on ſuch Conditions as might ſecure them from all Apprehenſions of being forc'd to take up Arms again, after a ſhort Interval, as had ſo lately happen'd. That her Majeſty was alſo willing he ſhould declare, That ſhe was ready to enter jointly with all the High Allies, into juſt and neceſſary Meaſures for attaining to ſuch a Peace : Her Majeſty being reſolv'd not to enter upon any Negotiation, without the Participation of her ſaid Allies : But that the way of Conferences that was propos'd, without more particular Declarations on the Part of his Moſt Chriſtian Majeſty, did not ſeem to her to be proper for obtaining a truly ſolid and laſting Peace. That the States-General were of the ſame Opinion: Wherefore his Electoral Highneſs would rightly judge, that other more ſolid Means muſt be thought on, to attain ſo great an End, to which her Majeſty would contribute with all the Sincerity that could be wiſh'd, having nothing ſo much at Heart, as the Relief of her Subjects, and the Tranquility of Europe. The Letters between the Elector and the States Field-Deputies, were much to the ſame Effect; and, after the Reading of all theſe Pieces, the Deputies of the States declar'd to the Congreſs, "That their High-"Mightineſſes were reſolv'd not to enter into any Negotiation of Peace, but jointly with their High Allies; and faithfully to communicate to them the Pro-"poſals that might be made to them, expecting that the ſaid High Allies would do "no leſs on their Part." The Duke of Marlborough having ſettled ſeveral other important Affairs with the States, particularly the continuing the Heſſian Troops in Italy, according to the Duke of Savoy's Deſire, his Grace ſail'd from the Maeſe the 26th of November, N. S. landed at Margate the next Day, and on the 29th arriv'd in London.

The Duke of Marlborough arrives in London, Nov. 18. O. S.

While all Things look'd ſerene and ſmiling Abroad, lowring Clouds hover'd over Scotland, where the Treaty of Union met with almoſt univerſal Oppoſition: But before we enter into the Detail of that Affair, let us conſider the Temper and Diſpoſition of that Nation, at this Juncture. According to a Writer, ‖ whoſe Veracity may be depended upon in this Particular, the Intereſt of the diſtreſſed Royal Family increas'd to ſuch a Degree, that Four Parts of Five of the Nobility and Gentry, and above half of the Commons over the whole Kingdom, did, on all Occaſions, expreſs their Inclination and Readineſs to ſerve that Cauſe. Accounts of this were from Time to Time tranſmitted to the Court of France, who being much ſtreighten'd by the Succeſſes of the Confederates, ſeem'd more ſincere and hearty than formerly, in promoting the Intereſt of the Pretender to the Crown of Great-Britain. Hereupon Colonel Hookes was ſent to Edinburgh in Auguſt, 1705, with Letters from the French King, and the Pretender, to the Duke of Hamilton, and the Earls of Errol, Mariſchal and Hume, exhorting them to concert Meaſures for the Reſtoration of the exiled Royal Family; promiſing to aſſiſt the Scotch Nation in ſo good a Deſign, impowering Hookes to receive Propoſals, and deſiring them to ſend over to France, one fully inſtructed to treat for that Purpoſe. This Hookes was one of the Duke of Monmouth's Chaplains, when he invaded England: But whether he was taken Priſoner, and pardon'd, or made his Eſcape, 'tis certain, that having afterwards turn'd Roman Catholick, and enter'd into the French Service, he had, by this Time, raiſed himſelf there to the Command of a Regiment of Foot, and gain'd ſuch Credit at the Court of France, as to be pitch'd upon to manage their Correſpondence with Scotland. In Converſation he appear'd to be a Man of tolerable good Senſe, and quick Parts, but being withal extreamly vain and haughty, and not very circumſpect, the Cavaliers, and Country-Party, declined admitting him into their private Meetings, to propoſe, as he deſign'd, their owning the Pretender's Intereſt, and moving his Reſtoration in Parliament. They were the more ſhy of confiding in him, becauſe, in all his Propoſals, he ſeem'd more intent upon raiſing a Combuſtion in the Kingdom, and ſo give a Diverſion to the Enemies of France, than upon what really and ſolidly tended to advance the Pretender's Affairs. However, the Cavaliers, to whom he deliver'd his Letters and Meſſage, told him, in general Terms, "That they were willing to do every Thing that could, in Rea-"ſon, be expected from them; and would, as they were deſired, in a ſhort Time, "ſend one over to confer with King James, (for ſo they ſtiled the Pretender) and "the King of France." With this Anſwer Hookes return'd to France: And the Cavaliers having reſolv'd to ſend one over to ſee what Aſſiſtance they could depend upon from thence, unanimouſly made Choice of Captain Henry Stratton, who embark'd for France the very next Day after Mr. Lockhart return'd to Edinburgh, having waited for him, to get a full Account of what paſs'd at London, in Relation to the intended Union. Beſides what concern'd that Treaty, Mr. Lockhart was employ'd to ſift the Tories in England, and endeavour to know what they would do, in caſe the Pretender came over, and the Scots declared for him; and having, accordingly, found Means to underſtand the Sentiments of the Duke of Leeds, the Lord Granville, and ſeveral others, he inform'd Captain Stratton, that the Engliſh Tories were much more cautious than the Scotch Cavaliers; the former being all of Opinion, That no Attempt ought to be made during Queen Anne's Life. Captain Stratton was kindly receiv'd in France, but could bring nothing to Concluſion; the Battels of Ramellies and Turin having ſo diſconcerted the French King's Meaſures, that he was not in a Condition to ſpare either Men or Money, for the Service of the Pretender. However, the latter told Stratton, he long'd extreamly to be amongſt his Scotch Friends; and and oblig'd him to give him in Writing, a Character of every Member of the Scotch Parliament, as they ſtood affected to him. After this, Stratton was diſmiſs'd with fair Promiſes from the French King, of doing all in his Power in a more favourable Conjuncture; and with Letters from King James to the Duke of Hamilton, the Earls of Errol and Mariſchal, and the Viſcount Stormount. This laſt had Two Letters incloſed in his, one to the Duke of Athol, the other to the Marquis of Montroſe, the firſt of which was deliver'd, and kindly receiv'd; but the Marquis having left the Cavaliers, it was thought to no Purpoſe to make any Attempt upon him, and dangerous to truſt him with Secrets, which he might diſcover to the Miniſters of State; and ſo the Pretender's Letter to him was not deliver'd.

The Earl of Hume's Death and Character. Lockhart's Memoirs, p. 214.

Upon the moſt encouraging Promiſes from France, the Cavaliers reſolv'd to ſtand firm, and to exert their utmoſt Efforts, in the enſuing Seſſion of Parliament, to oppoſe the Ratification of the Treaty of Union. But about this Time they ſuſtain'd a great Loſs, by the Death of Charles Earl of Hume: For though he did not expreſs himſelf with any tolerable Share of Eloquence, yet he was Maſter of a ſound Judgment, and clear Conception, and had a particular Talent of procuring Intelligence of the oppoſite Party's moſt ſecret Deſigns, ſo as generally he inform'd his Friends of them, and thereby gave them an Opportunity to thwart them. This was chiefly owing to his being almoſt equally eſteem'd by People of all Parties, on Account of his unbyaſs'd Integrity, both in publick and private Matters; ſo that the want of his Aſſiſtance, was an unſpeakable Diſadvantage to thoſe that oppoſed the Union. He had given evident Proofs, that no Temptation could move him from proſecuting, and adhering, with the utmoſt Vigor, to what he profeſs'd to be his Principle and Opinion; and was ſo zealous for the Intereſt of the Exiled Royal Family, that he ſuffer'd much upon that Account. All theſe Qualifications made him to be more rely'd upon, than any other of his Party; and ſo well was his Reputation, that his Authority kept others in Awe, and obliged them, at leaſt, to ſuſpend their private Grudges, and act in concert for the promoting of their common Cauſe.

The Parliament of Scotland meets, Oct. 3.

Before the Parliament met in Scotland, the Miniſtry there gave ſuch a fair Repreſentation of the Treaty of Union, that it took generally with the People; but no ſooner did the Articles appear in Print, but they were as univerſally diſliked. The Squadrone ſhew'd themſelves, at firſt, as averſe to that Project, as any of the reſt; but no ſooner was the Marquis of Montroſe made Preſident of the Council, in the Room of the Marquis of Annandale, and a Letter came down from the Dutcheſs of Marlborough to the Earl of Roxburgh, aſſuring them both of the Queen's Favour, if they would concur with her Majeſty's Meaſures, than they ſtruck in with the Court, and promoted the Union with all imaginable Zeal. The Preſbyterian Miniſters being every where apprehenſive that the Kirk Government was in Danger, loudly bellow'd againſt the wicked Union in their Pulpits, and ſent Addreſſes againſt it from ſeveral Preſbyteries, and the Commiſſion of the Aſſembly: But as ſoon as an Act was paſs'd, for the Security of the Kirk, their Zeal cool'd, and many of them even recommended, what not long before they had anathematized: Though, with little or no Effect, for their Auditories ſtood firm, and the Clergy loſt much of their Reputation, by ſhewing ſo much Selfiſhneſs on this critical Occaſion. On the other Hand, the Envy and Differences between the Dukes of Hamilton and Athol, did not a little weaken the Oppoſition which the Court Party met with; but nothing more contributed to the Succeſs of the Union, than the Seaſon of the Year; for had not the Parliament ſat in the Winter, and the Weather proved very rainy and tempeſtuous, it would have been almoſt impoſſible to keep the Country People from coming in Shoals to Edinburgh, from all Parts of the Kingdom, and tearing in Pieces all that promoted the Union.

On the 3d of October, the Parliament being met, the Duke of Queenſberry, her Majeſty's High Commiſſioner, went thither, attended by moſt of the Nobility, Barons, and other Members, and his Commiſſion having been read, and recorded, as uſual, the Queen's Letter to the Parliament was alſo read, as follows:

" laſt Seſſion of our Parliament there; and we hope the Terms will be acceptable " to you.

" The Union has been long deſir'd by both Nations, and we ſhall eſteem it as " the greateſt Glory of our Reign, to have it now perfected, being fully perſuaded " that it muſt prove the greateſt Happineſs of our People.

" An entire and perfect Union, will be the ſolid Foundation of laſting Peace; " it will ſecure your Religion, Liberty and Property, remove the Animoſities " among your ſelves, and the Jealouſies and Differences betwixt our Two King- " doms: It muſt increaſe your Strength, Riches, and Trade; and by this Union, " the whole Iſland being joined in Affection, and free from all Appprehenſion of " different Intereſts, will be enabled to reſiſt all its Enemies, ſupport the Proteſtant " Intereſt every where, and maintain the Liberties of Europe.

" We do, upon this Occaſion, renew the Aſſurances we have formerly given you, " of our Reſolution to maintain the Government of the Church, as by Law eſta- " bliſh'd in Scotland; and the Acts of both Parliaments, upon which this Treaty " proceeded, having reſerv'd their reſpective Governments of the Church in each " Kingdom, the Commiſſioners have left that Matter entire; and you have now " an Opportunity for doing what may be neceſſary for the Security of your pre- " ſent Church-Government after the Union, within the Limits of Scotland.

" The Support of our Government, and your own Safety, does require, that you " do make neceſſary Proviſion for maintaining the Forces, Ships and Gariſons, un- " til the Parliament of Great Britain ſhall provide for theſe Ends in the United " Kingdom.

" We have made Choice of our Right Truſty, and Right entirely Beloved Couſin " and Counſellor, James Duke of Queenſberry, to be our Commiſſioner, and repreſent " our Royal Perſon, being well ſatisfied with his Fitneſs for that Truſt, from the " Experience we have of his Capacity, Zeal and Fidelity to our Service, and the " good of his Country; which, as it has determin'd us in the Choice, we doubt not, " but will make him acceptable to you.

" We have fully inſtructed him, in all Things we think may fall under your " Conſideration, and ſeem to be neceſſary at preſent: Therefore we deſire that you " may give entire Truſt and Credit to him.

My LORDS and GENTLEMEN,

" It cannot but be an Encouragement to you, to finiſh the Union at this Time, " that God Almighty has bleſſed our Arms, and thoſe of our Allies, with ſo great " Succeſs, which gave us the nearer Proſpect of a happy Peace, and with it you " will have the full Poſſeſſion of all the Advantages of this Union; and you have " no Reaſon to doubt, but the Parliament of England will do what is neceſſary on " their Part, after the Readineſs they have ſhewn to remove what might obſtruct " the entering on the Treaty. We moſt earneſtly recommend to you Calmneſs and " Unanimity in this great and weighty Affair, That the Union may be brought to " a happy Concluſion, being the only effectual way to ſecure your preſent and fu- " ture Happineſs, and to diſappoint the Deſigns of our and your Enemies, who " will, doubtleſs, on this Occaſion, uſe their utmoſt Endeavours to prevent or de- " lay this Union, which muſt ſo much contribute to our Glory, and the Happineſs " of our People; and ſo we bid you heartily Farewel. Given at our Court at " Windſor-Caſtle, the 31ſt Day of July, 1706, and of our Reign the Fifth Year.

By her MAJESTY'S Command,

MAR.

After the Reading of this Letter, the Duke of Queenſberry ſpoke in theſe Words:

My LORDS and GENTLEMEN,

The Duke of Queensberry's Speech.

" HER Majeſty, by her Gracious Letter, has acquainted you, That the Trea- " ty of Union between the Kingdoms of Scotland and England, (purſuant to " an Act made in your laſt Seſſion) has been happily agreed on, which is now in " my Lord Regiſter's Hands, ready to be laid before you.

" The Lords Commiſſioners for this Kingdom, have been diligent and zealous in " concerting juſt and reaſonable Terms; and, it muſt be acknowledg'd, we met " with a very fair and friendly Diſpoſition in the Lords Commiſſioners on the other " Part.

A. D. 1706.

" The Treaty has, with all Humility, been preſented to the Queen, and was " moſt graciouſly receiv'd; and though no Reign was ever ſo truly Great, for wiſe " and ſteady Councils, and ſo many important Succeſſes, as that of her Majeſty; " yet you ſee, ſhe is pleas'd to eſteem the perfecting of this Union, as the greateſt " Glory of her Reign, being the moſt ſolid Foundation of a laſting Security to " the Proteſtant Religion, and the Liberties of Europe, and of Peace and Happineſs " to her People.

" Theſe Reaſons, I doubt not, will make the Treaty acceptable to you: And I " perſuade my ſelf, that you will proceed with ſuch Calmneſs and Impartiality, as " the Weight of the Subject requires, and as becomes ſo great an Aſſembly.

" The Lords Commiſſioners for both Kingdoms were limited in the Matter of " Church Government: For the Security of Preſbyterian Government in this Church, " you have the Laws already made for its Eſtabliſhment, the Queen's repeated Aſ- " ſurances to preſerve it, and I am impower'd to conſent to what may be further " neceſſary after the Union.

" Her Majeſty has been pleas'd to recommend to you, to make Proviſion for the " Forces, Ships and Gariſons, which is very neceſſary, the Subſidies granted at " your laſt Meeting, being run out; ſo, I doubt not, you will ſpeedily renew " them.

My LORDS and GENTLEMEN,

" I am not inſenſible of the Difficulties that attend the weighty Character it has " pleas'd her Majeſty to honour me with; but with your favourable Aſſiſtance, " (upon which I very much rely) I hope, by my Zeal and Fidelity for her Ma- " jeſty's Service, and the Good of my Country, which are inſeparable, to diſcharge " my Duty on this extraordinary Occaſion.

The Treaty of Union order'd to be printed.

The Duke of Queenſberry's Speech was enforc'd by another from the Earl of Seafield, Lord High-Chancellor; and theſe Preliminaries being over, the Treaty of Union was read, and order'd to be printed, together with the Proceedings of the Lords Commiſſioners of both Kingdoms, in Relation to that Matter; and then the Parliament was adjourn'd to that Day Seven-night.

A powerful Party in Scotland againſt the Union.

Before we proceed, we muſt obſerve, that her Majeſty's Miniſters were not unſenſible of the Difficulties they had to encounter in the Affair of the Union; againſt which the Duke of Hamilton and Athol, the Marquis of Annandale, the Earls of Errol, Mariſchal, and Buchan, the Lord Belhaven, Andrew Fletcher of Salton, and ſome others, had form'd a powerful Party: And their Oppoſition was like to be the ſtronger, by reaſon (as was hinted before) they had prepoſſeſs'd with Fears and Jealouſies the Minds of many among the Preſbyterian Clergy; to whoſe Opinions the Generality of Laicks, in Scotland, pay almoſt as ſubmiſſive a Deference, as the Roman Bigots do to their Prieſts in Popiſh Countries. Among other Indications of the Temper of the Scotch Miniſters, at this critical Juncture, it was taken notice, that, ſome Days before the Meeting of the Parliament, one of the Duke of Hamilton's Chaplains propoſed, in the General Aſſembly of the Clergy; " That before an " Affair of ſo great Importance, as the Union was, came to be debated before the " Eſtates of the Kingdom, they ought to enter into an Aſſociation, for the Preſer- " vation of the Preſbyterian Diſcipline, and Church-Government; which was viſi- " bly in Danger, if the Treaty concluded by the Commiſſioners of both Kingdoms " was ratify'd by the reſpective Parliaments." Another Miniſter moved, " That " a Day of Faſting and Humiliation ſhould be appointed, to ſeek the Lord for " Counſel in this arduous Affair, and Time of Danger." But the ſoberer Part of the Aſſembly, wiſely conſidering, that the Drift of thoſe Two Motions was only to create Fears and Diſtractions amongſt the People, the ſame were rejected by the Majority of Voices.

Proceedings about the Union.

On the 10th of October, the Parliament met again; and, after ſome Debate, Sir Alexander Bruce being admitted as Earl of Kincardin, Mr. Fletcher of Salton acquainted the Houſe, " That he was inform'd, that the Magiſtrates of Edinburgh had " ſummon'd all the Printers to appear before them, and told them, that they would " lay a Penalty of Five Hundred Marks upon ſuch as ſhould publiſh any Thing in " Print, till it was ſent by the ſaid Magiſtrates; which, he ſaid, ſeveral Gentle- " men complain'd of, as the Beginning of an Inquiſition, and an Invaſion upon the " Liberty of the Subject." He was ſeconded by Duke Hamilton: But the Lord Chancellor proteſting that he knew nothing of the Matter; adding, that if there was any ſuch Thing, the ſame ſhould be redreſs'd; the Buſineſs went no further; and the Parliament adjourn'd to the 12th: When Mr. Stuart mov'd, " That a Day " of Faſting and Prayer be ſet apart, for ſeeking the Direction of the Almighty, in " the Affair of the Union;" and was ſeconded by the Party, who endeavour'd to ſpin out Time. They were anſwer'd, " That the Buſineſs of the Union was brought " ſo near a Period, that they ought to uſe no Delays, but rather all imaginable " Diſpatch, to conclude the ſame; and that inſtead of a Faſt, they had Reaſon " to appoint a Day of Publick Thankſgiving, for the fair Opportunity the Scotch Na- " tion had of ſecuring their Religion and Liberties, and improving their For- " tunes and Eſtates, by an entire Union with England." The Motion for a Faſt being dropt, it was propoſed, That the Articles of Union be again read; as alſo the Minutes of the Proceedings of the Commiſſioners; which, after ſome Reaſonings, was agreed to; and order'd, that all Records relating to former Treaties betwixt the Two Kingdoms, be laid on the Table. The Articles of Union being accordingly read again, it was agreed, That the Parliament ſhould proceed to the Conſideration of the ſaid Articles the next Sitting; which was put off till the 15th of the ſame Month: When it was moved by the Court-Party, that the Parliament ſhould now proceed to the Conſideration of the Articles of Union: But the oppoſite Faction propoſed, that the Members of Parliament might be allow'd Eight Days longer, to conſider more deliberately the Articles and Minutes; inſiſting, That this Parliament could not alter the Conſtitution of the Government, without particular Inſtructions from thoſe they repreſented. After ſome Debates, it was carry'd, to proceed immediately, by a Majority of One Hundred and Sixteen Voices, againſt Fifty two; and ſo the Firſt Article of Union, the Minutes of the Proceedings of the Commiſſioners for the Treaty, and her Majeſty's Commiſſion for the Treaty, on Behalf of the Kingdom of Scotland, were all read; and, after ſome Reaſoning thereon, the further Conſideration thereof was delay'd till their next Sitting.

A. D. 1706.

Upon Occaſion of the Vote, proceed, being carry'd, the Duke of Hamilton made ſome Reflections on the Earl of Roxburgh, (who was at the Head of the Squadrone, or flying Party, that went over to the Court Side) ſaying, " That Lord was for- " merly againſt an Union with England; and, he wonder'd, he ſhould now alter " his Opinion." The Earl of Roxburgh reply'd, " That formerly, he thought the " Engliſh were againſt the Intereſt of Scotland, but now he was convinc'd of the " contrary; particularly, by their late Proceedings in relation to the Union; ſo that " none could blame him, for having a good Opinion of the Engliſh." And then he enlarg'd upon the " great Advantage, Reaſonableneſs, and even Neceſſity of " the UNION, in the preſent Juncture." The Lord Roxburgh ſhew'd the ſame Zeal, and made his pregnant Parts ſhine, throughout the whole Seſſion of this Parliament; which contributed very much to the happy Concluſion of it.

The Earl of Roxburgh zealous for the Union.

On the 17th of October, the Parliament proceeded to the further Conſideration of the Articles of Union; and the Second Article, and the Minutes of the Treaty relating thereto, were read: As was alſo the Engliſh Act of Parliament, made in the firſt Year of King William and Queen Mary, declaring the Rights and Liberties of the Subject, and for ſettling the Succeſſion; which were diſcours'd upon. The 4th, 5th, 6th, 7th, and 8th Articles, and the Minutes of the Treaty, were afterwards read, and debated; as were alſo, Two * Days after, the 9th, 10th, 11th, 12th, 13th, 14th, and 15th Articles: Which laſt, relating to the Calculation of the Equivalent, and occaſioning a Debate, the ſame was adjourn'd to the next Sitting; † when it was agreed to appoint a Committee to examine the ſaid Calculation, and make their Report to the Parliament. Then the 16th, 17th, and 18th Articles of the Union were read; and ſeveral Members ſpoke to the Equivalent, and Trade in general, and to that of the African Company in particular. Upon the latter, there were Two Motions made; one, that the Parliament ſhould inſiſt upon a Compenſation of all the Loſſes the Darien Company had ſuſtain'd, ſince thoſe Loſſes were occaſion'd by the undue intermeddling of England, as appear'd by former Votes of the Parliament of Scotland. The other was, That ſeeing the Equivalent to be given to the Proprietors of the African Company, was not to be paid by England, but out of the Scotch Cuſtoms and Exciſe; that therefore the Property of that Company ought to belong to the Kingdom of Scotland, as a National Company; and not to be abandon'd, until the Nation ſaw a proper Occaſion, and had an adequate Price of it. Both which Motions, and others of the like Nature, were laid upon the Table, to be conſider'd when the Articles, to which they related, came to be debated.

Motions about the African Company.

The Party, who oppoſed the Union, rightly foreſeeing that they ſhould not be able to carry their Point by Dint of Reaſon and Argument, reſolv'd to have recourſe to violent Methods, and, by Tumults and Riots, to endeavour to deter the well-affected. In order to that, beſides their virulent Speeches, a Multitude of malicious and ſcandalous Libels againſt the Union were printed, and induſtriouſly diſpers'd, which made many well-meaning People averſe to it; and, by degrees, work'd work'd up to a Height the natural Inclinations of the Mobile, to Mutiny, Sedition, and Riot. They had, for ſome Time, levell'd their Malice at Sir Patrick Johnſtoun, a very honeſt, upright Gentleman, late Provoſt of Edinburgh, and one of their Repreſentatives in Parliament, for having ſhewn more than ordinary Zeal in the Concluſion of the Treaty of Union; in which Tranſaction, he was one of the Commiſſioners on the Part of Scotland: And on the 23d of October, being gather'd in great Numbers, they rudely inſulted his Houſe, and offer'd to break his Gates; but were timely prevented by the Magiſtrates, who ſent to Priſon ſome of the moſt active Rioters. This occaſion'd a great Commotion in the City; upon which the Privy-Council was call'd, and the Foot-Guards were order'd, about Eleven at Night, to take Poſt in Three Places of the City; where they were to continue, till the Parliament took the Matter into Conſideration. In the mean Time, a Proclamation was * iſſued out againſt Tumults; and to put a Stop to this malignant Humour yet more effectually, the Lord Chancellor † acquainted the Parliament with the Proceedings of the Privy-Council. Thereupon a Motion was made, That the Privy-Council ſhould have the Thanks of the Houſe, for their Care of the Safety and Quiet of the Parliament, and to recommend to the Lord High-Commiſſioner, and Privy-Council, to continue their Care therein: Which Motion being read, it was mov'd, that the Proclamation of the Privy-Council ſhould be read. This being done accordingly; the Earl of Errol inſiſted, and proteſted, "That "the bringing of the Foot-Guards, and their keeping of Guard within the Par- "liament Cloſe and Town, might be without Prejudice to his Right, as High- "Conſtable, who had the only Right of keeping the Parliament Houſe without "Doors; as the Earl Marſhal within Doors, and the Town of Edinburgh's Rights "by Virtue of their Charters:" Which Proteſtation being read, was adher'd to by the Earl Marſhal, and ſeveral other Members. After ſome Debate upon the Motion, a Vote being ſtated, approve, or not, it was objected, that it conſiſted of Two diſtinct Articles, the one approving what was done by the Privy-Council, and the other, recommending to them to continue their Care; whereupon the Vote was ſtated, approve the Motion ſeparately or jointly, and it was carried jointly; after which the Vote was ſtated, approve or not, and it was carried approve, reſerving the Town of Edinburgh's Rights, by Virtue of their Charters. Although no Perſon of Faſhion appear'd among the Rioters, yet it was no difficult Matter to gueſs from what Corner that boiſterous Wind blew; ſince, at the ſame Time, that they inſulted the Lord High Commiſſioner, and other Well-wiſhers to the Union; they very impolitickly affected to attend the Duke of Hamilton with loud Acclamations, as they paſs'd the Streets, to and from the Parliament-Houſe.

† Oct. 25.

On the 28th of October, the Parliament proceeded to the Conſideration of the Articles of Union, and the 18th being again read, and debated; the 19th, 20th, and 21ſt, were alſo read, with the Minutes relating to the ſame, and the further Conſideration of the Three laſt delay'd till the ‖ next Day; when they were ſeverally examin'd. The Lord Commiſſioner having, the ſame Day, recommended the obſerving a Day of Humiliation and Prayer on the 31ſt, the Duke of Athol propos'd to the Houſe, That Mr. George Meldrum, and Mr. Hamilton, ſhould preach in the Parliament Houſe: But this was warmly oppos'd by the Majority of the Houſe, who alledg'd, That it was the Commiſſioner's Privilege to appoint who ſhould preach, and where he pleas'd to hear Sermons; whereupon it was reſolv'd, That the Commiſſioner ſhould do as he thought fit. The next Buſineſs that fell under the Parliament's Conſideration, was the XXIId and XXIIId Articles of the Treaty concerning the Repreſentation of Scotland in the Britiſh Parliament: In relation to which, Mr. Fletcher of Salton ſaid, That the Commiſſioners on the Part of Scotland, in the managing of that Matter, were guilty of a Breach of the Truſt repos'd in them by their Conſtituents. The Earl of Mar took Notice of that Expreſſion, as a Reflection both on the Commiſſioners, and the Houſe; and was of Opinion, that the Words would bear, that they were Betrayers of their Country. Mr. Fletcher ſaid, he could not well deny, but the Words would bear that Meaning; and if he was guilty of any indiſcreet Expreſſion, he would beg the Favour of the Houſe. This Explanation did but excite the Paſſion of a Hundred more againſt him, who propos'd the bringing him to the Bar. The Lord Belhaven, indeed, would have extenuated his Crime, but his good Office ſerving only for an Aggravation, Mr. Fletcher ſtood up, and ſaid, That if his Expreſſion had any Thing offenſive in it, he begg'd the Houſe's Favour. Then the Conſideration of the Article of Repreſentation being further inſiſted on, the Duke of Hamilton ſaid, he wonder'd very much, "That thoſe noble Perſons "who had been Treators, did not obtain a further Repreſentation for Scotland, and "more Honour for the Peers, ſince the Scotch Nation was as independent as the "Engliſh; and the Scotch Peers as legally created. To this it was anſwer'd, that "there

For which he begs Pardon.

" there were inſuperable Difficulties in that Affair, and that they could obtain no " better Terms. The Duke of Hamilton urg'd, That he thought the Scotch, being " on the ſame Continent, the Inconveniencies the Engliſh were expoſed to from " them, furniſhed the Treators with abundance of Arguments". This occaſion'd a profound Silence in the Houſe for ſome Time; and no body offering to make any Reply to this odious Argument, it was thought fit to delay the Buſineſs to the next Day. Beſides the ſtirring up the turbulent Humours of the Edinburgh Mob, the Diſaffected thought of another Method to diſturb and diſtract the Proceedings of the Parliament, which was the procuring, with malicious and eager Induſtry, Addreſſes, Petitions and Repreſentations againſt the Union, from all the Corners of the Kingdom. The firſt that came upon the Stage, was that of the obſcure Town, of Lauder, which, on the ſame Day that Mr. Fletcher of Salton, ſo ſeverely reflected on the Scotch Commiſſioners, was delivered to all the Members, as they entred the Parliament Houſe. The ſame Day †, the Barons, Freeholders, and others, within the Sheriffdom of Dumfrees, ſent Inſtructions to their Repreſentatives, importing, in Subſtance, " That a Matter of ſo high and great Importance as an Union, in the " Terms agreed on, not being in View at the Time of their Election, nothing could " be done by them, unleſs they had a ſpecial Authority for that Purpoſe, from " their Conſtituents: And as the ſaid Barons and Freeholders had declared the " ſaid Articles, prejudicial to their Intereſts, ſo they required their Repreſentatives " expreſly to give their Vote againſt the ſame.

† Oct. 29.

On the 30th of October, the XXIId, XXIIId, XXIVth, and XXVth Articles of Union, and the Minutes relating thereto, were read, and ſeverally debated. The Act adjourning the Seſſion of the Courts till the 1ſt of December next, was then read, and a Firſt Reading order'd to be mark'd thereon; after which there was a long Debate about the Precedency of Peers, and many Speeches being made thereupon, the further Debate adjourn'd. The Scotch being, by the XVIIIth Article, to have the ſame publick Laws, it was urg'd, " That the ſame was inconſiſtent with the " Claim of Right, by which 'tis High-Treaſon to alter or innovate:" To which it was anſwer'd, " That the Claim of Right was not inconſiſtent with an incorporating " Union, and that the ſame States that made the Claim of Right, named alſo Com- " miſſioners to treat of an incorporating Union." But to this it was reply'd, " That " the Engliſh Act, being without Limitation, it would have been unreaſonable to " limit the Scotch; which was the Reaſon that the Scotch Commiſſioners were im- " power'd to treat of an incorporating Union; but that this did not imply, that they " were to treat of nothing elſe; and that it was the rather granted, becauſe the " Members of Parliament were told by ſeveral great Men, that not One in Ten " was for an Incorporating Union." In the mean Time, thoſe of the Mob, who were taken up for the late Tumult, were committed to the Cuſtody of the Earl of Errol, Lord High Conſtable, in order to be tried by his Lordſhip, according to the Power veſted in him, to puniſh thoſe who break the Peace in the City, in Time of Parliament: But at the ſame Time, the Guards were ſtill kept in Edinburgh; and in the Parliament Cloſe, which the diſaffected Party made a Subject of Clamour, as if the Proceedings of the Parliament were not Free, but ſway'd by military Force. On the laſt Day of October, a publick Faſt was devoutly kept in the City of Edinburgh, to implore the Bleſſing and Direction of the Lord, in the preſent arduous Affair of the Union; and the Lord High Commiſſioner, attended with a great Train of Noblemen, aſſiſted at Divine Service, both in the Forenoon and Afternoon.

Publick Faſt obſerv'd, Oct. 31.

The Parliament having gone through with the Firſt Reading of the Articles *, the Court Party moved, on the 1ſt Day of November, that they ſhould now proceed to the farther and more particular Conſideration of the ſame, in order either to approve or diſallow them; and to begin with the Firſt Article. But the oppoſite Party moved alſo, that the farther Conſideration of the Articles of Union, ſhould be delay'd for ſome conſiderable Time, that the Sentiments of the Parliament of England about the ſame, might be known; and that the Members of Parliament might conſult thoſe whom they repreſented. After ſome Debate on theſe Motions, ſeveral Petitions and Addreſſes were preſented, viz. one in the Name of the Barons, Freeholders, and others, within the Shire of Midlothian; another from the Barons and Freeholders, within the Shire of Linlithgow, and Three in the Name of the Barons and Freeholders of Perthſhire, all againſt allowing of an Incorporating Union with England, which were read and diſcours'd on. After this, the Debate for Delay on Account of conſulting thoſe whom the Members repreſented, and knowing the Sentiments of the Nation, and the Proceedings of the Parliament of England, was let fall; and it was agreed, that the Firſt Article ſhould be read; but that it ſhould be allow'd, next Sitting of the Parliament, to debate, whether the Firſt Article ſhould be concluded, by approving thereof, or not; or, if the Parliament might not, before concluding thereof, begin with, or conclude any other of the Articles; and accordingly the First Article was read. After which the Act adjourning the Seſſion, or Term, 'till the 1ſt of December, was touch'd with the Scepter by her Majeſty's High Commiſſioner, in the uſual Manner. The next * Day, being Saturday, the Parliament read an Addreſs from the Shire of Angus, againſt the Union, which gave Occaſion to ſome of the Country-Party, to ſay, "That the Union was a Matter of "ſo great and general Concern, that it was not to be gone into with Precipitation; "and that there were many more Addreſſes coming, by which they would ſee the "Inclinations of the Country, and of their Conſtituents. After this, ſeveral other "Propoſals were offer'd, as Preliminaries, before they ſhould enter upon the Trea-"ty, one of which, more extravagant than all the reſt, was, that the Kingdom of "Scotland ſhould, for ever, be the Place of the Prince's Education and Reſidence." Then there was another Debate, Whether they ſhould proceed immediately to the Conſideration of the Firſt Article of the Treaty, or the Security of the Church? In which much Time was ſpent. It was urg'd, "That according to the laudable Cuſtom of the "Kingdom of Scotland, as appear'd by their ancient Acts of Parliament, the "Church had always the Preference to every Thing elſe." But a Lord, when he found that the Firſt Article of the Treaty was like to have the Preference, alluded, with Reſpect to ſome who were of the oppoſite Side, to Julius Cæſar's Saying in the Senate, Et vos etiam mei Filij! And are you alſo againſt me, my Sons! There had been Endeavours likewiſe uſed in the Commiſſion of the General Aſſembly, to poſſeſs them with Apprehenſions of the Danger of the Church, from Twenty Six Biſhops being in the Parliament of Great Britain, where the Preſbyterian Kirk could have none to repreſent her; from the Engliſh Sacramental Teſt, and from the Oath of Abjuration, by which they muſt approve that Part of the Limitations, which oblig'd the Sovereign to be of the Church of England; notwithſtanding all which, it was Criminal, by the Law of England, to ſay the Prince and Parliament had no Power to alter the Succeſſion. Hereupon they would have carried Things in the Commiſſion againſt an Incorporating Union, but were prevented by the Ruling Elders; and in order to make the Church eaſy, there were ſome who promiſed, that when the Article for an Incorporating Union paſs'd, they ſhould have a Clauſe to make the Union void, in Caſe the Parliament of Great Britain ſhould, in Time to come, attempt to alter the preſent Government of the Church of Scotland. When the Vote was preſs'd for giving the Preference to the Firſt Article of the Union, ſeveral Members urged again the Unreaſonableneſs of agreeing to an Union, till they had gone thro' the Treaty, and found that the Terms thereof were for the Intereſt of Scotland: For if they ſhould, in the firſt Place, agree to the ſubverting the Monarchy, and ſinking the Parliament, which was the Purport of the Firſt Article of the Treaty of Union; who could tell, but the Royal Aſſent might be given thereto, and the Parliament adjourn'd, and ſo the Nation be united upon no Terms, or, at leaſt, upon ſuch as England ſhould afterwards pleaſe to grant? Which was compar'd to a young Maiden's yielding upon a Promiſe of Marriage, which was ſeldom perform'd. This Argument carrying a great deal of Weight, and the Houſe appearing generally inclin'd to take the Terms of the Union previouſly into Conſideration; the Lord Regiſter found an Expedient to extricate the Courtiers, by propoſing a Reſolve, "That the Houſe, in the firſt place, proceed to take the Firſt Ar-"ticle of the Treaty into Conſideration; with this Proviſo, That if all the other "Articles of Union were not adjuſted by the Parliament, then the agreeing to, and "approving of the Firſt Article, ſhould be of no Effect. And that immediately "after the ſaid Firſt Article, the Parliament ſhould proceed to an Act for Security "of the Doctrine, Diſcipline, Worſhip and Government of the Church, as now by Law "eſtabliſh'd." In Oppoſition to this, it was propoſed, That the State of the Vote ſhould be ſimply, Enter on the Article, or firſt ſecure the Church? But the Queſtion being put thereupon; the Lord Regiſter's was carry'd by a Majority of Thirty eight Voices, and then approved by a greater Number. After this, the Lord Belhaven made a long Speech, wherein he very pathetically lamented the miſerable and deſpicable Condition into which Scotland was going to fall by the Union. In the next † Sitting, after the reading of ſeveral Addreſſes, the Firſt Article of the Union was again read, as was alſo the forementioned Reſolve, preſented by the Lord Regiſter, relating thereto; but after ſome Debate, the Marquis of Annandale preſented a Reſolve againſt an Incorporating Union; and many of the Country-Party urged, That ſuch an Union was altogether inconſiſtent with the Honour of the Scotch Nation, and deſtructive of its Intereſt and Concerns, both Civil and Military. Some went yet further, affirming, That this Scheme would infallibly be a Handle to any aſpiring Prince, to attempt the Overthrow of the Liberties of all Britain:

The Lord Belhaven makes a long Speech againſt the Union.

tain: For if the Parliament of Scotland could alter, or rather ſubvert its Conſtitution, it might be made a Precedent for the Parliament of Great Britain to do the ſame: And that the Repreſentatives of Scotland, being reduced to a poor, miſerable Condition, would entirely depend upon thoſe who had the Purſe; and having ſhewn ſo little Concern for the Support of their own Conſtitution, 'twas not to be expected they would much regard that of any other. The Duke of Hamilton outdid himſelf on this Occaſion. "What, ſaid he, ſhall we, in Half an Hour, yield what "our Forefathers maintain'd, with their Lives and Fortunes, for many Ages? Are "here none of the Deſcendants of thoſe worthy Patriots, who defended the Liberty "of their Country againſt all Invaders; who aſſiſted the Great King Robert Bruce, "to reſtore the Conſtitution, and revenge the Falſhood of England, and Uſurpation "of Baliol? Where are the Douglaſſes and Campbels? Where are the Peers; where "are the Barons, once the Bulwark of the Nation? Shall we yield up the Sovereignty "and Independency of the Nation, when we are commanded by thoſe we repreſent, "to preſerve the ſame, and aſſur'd of their Aſſiſtance to ſupport us?" Thus, and with a great deal more to the ſame Purpoſe, he endeavour'd to rouſe up the priſtine Courage of the Scotch Parliament, and drew Tears from many of his Auditors Eyes; nay, from ſome who were reſolv'd, and actually did vote for the Article: But the Courtiers who depended on the Majority they knew they had in the Houſe, call'd for a Vote, which was thus ſtated, Approve of the Firſt Article of Union, or not. Before the Queſtion was put upon it, the Duke of Athol gave in a Proteſt againſt an Incorporating Union, as contrary to the Honour, Intereſt, Fundamental Laws and Conſtitution of the Kingdom of Scotland, the Birth-Right of the Peers, the Rights and Privileges of the Earons and Boroughs, and to the Claim of Right, Property, and Liberty of the Subjects: Which Proteſt being read, his Grace took Inſtruments thereon, and the ſame was adher'd to by the Duke of Hamilton, Marquis of Annandale, Earl of Errol, Earl Mariſchal, Earl of Wigtown, Earl of Strathmore, Earl of Selkirk, Earl Kincardin, Viſcount of Stormount, Viſcount of Kilſyth, the Lord Semple, the Lord Oliphant, the Lord Balmerinoch, the Lord Blantyre, the Lord Bargany, the Lord Belhaven, the Lord Colvil, the Lord Duffus, and the Lord Kinnaird; George Lockhart of Carnwath, Sir James Foulis of Collington, Andrew Fletcher of Saltoun, Sir Robert Sinclair of Longformacus, Sir Patrick Home of Rentoun, John Sinclair, Younger, of Stevenſon, John Sharp of Hoddom, Mr. Alexander Ferguſon of Iſle, John Briſban of Biſhoptoun, Mr. William Cochran of Kilmaronock, Sir Humpcolquhoun of Luſs, J. Grahame of Killearn, James Grahame Bucklivye, Thomas Sharp of Houſtoun, Sir Patrick Murray of Auchtertyre, John Murray of Strowan, James More of Stoniewood, David Beaton of Balfour, Mr. Thomas Hope of Rankeilor, Mr. Patrick Lyon of Auchterhouſe, Mr. James Carnagie of Phinhaven, David Graham, Younger, of Fintry, James Ogilvie, Younger, of Boyn, Mr. George Mackenzie of Inchoulter, Alexander Robertſon, Walter Stewart, Alexander Watſon, Alexander Edgar, John Black, James Oſwald, Robert Johnſtoun, Alexander Duff, Francis Molliſon, Walter Scott, George Smith, Robert Scot, Robert Kellie, John Hutchinſon, Mr. William Sutherland, Archibald Shiells, Mr. John Lyon, George Spence, Mr. William Johnſtoun, Mr. John Caruthers, George Home, John Payne, and Mr. Robert Frazer. Then the Vote was put, Approve of the ſaid Firſt Article of the Union, in the Term of the Motion, (before-mention'd) yea or not, and it was carried Approve, by a Majority of Thirty Four Voices. Then it was moved, that the Liſt of all the Members of Parliament, as they voted Pro and Con, be printed, which was agreed to: After which an Overture for an Act for Security of the true Proteſtant Religion, and Government of the Church, as by Law eſtabliſh'd, within the Kingdom of Scotland, was read, and order'd to be printed.

The Duke of Athol's Proteſt againſt an incorporating Union, adher'd to by many Members.

The Firſt Article of the Treaty of Union approv'd.

Beſides a multitude of Addreſſes from moſt of the Shires, Stewartries, Boroughs, Towns and Pariſhes of the Kingdom, which were a pregnant Indication of the Nation's Averſion to the Union in general, there were ſome others more particularly remarkable, ſuch as one from the Commiſſioners of the Royal Boroughs, in Relation to Trade; another from the Commiſſion of the General Aſſembly, in relation to the Church: and another from the Council General of the Company trading to the Eaſt and Weſt-Indies, in relation to their Concerns. But the Parliament ſhew'd no Regard to theſe Addreſſes; and the Earl of Marchmont even oppoſed * their being read, alledging they were ſeditious: But Sir James Fowlis of Collington, took the Liberty to ſay, That if they refuſed to receive thoſe Addreſſes from the Members who were entruſted with them, he did not doubt but thoſe that ſubſcribed them, would come and deliver them with their own Hands, and hear them read. On the other Hand, the Inſolence of the Mob grew to that Height, that notwithſtanding the Impriſonment of ſome of the Rioters, the Lord High Commiſſioner was conſtantly reviled, and ſometimes he, and his Guards and Attendants, pelted with Stones, as he paſs'd through the Streets;

Streets; and a Letter was put into the Lord Preſident's Coach, charging him, at his Peril, to proceed no further in the Union.

Supply granted. * Nov. 9.

On the 8th of November, the Parliament agreed to grant a Supply of Eight Months Ceſs, amounting to the Sum of Five Hundred and Seventy ſix Thouſand Pound, Fifteen Shillings, and Four Pence, Scotch: And, the next * Day, an Act for that Purpoſe was touch'd with the Scepter, or paſs'd in the uſual manner. Then the Act of Security of the true Proteſtant Religion, and Government of the Church, was reſumed; and upon reading the firſt Clauſe, it was mov'd, That there ſhould be a particular Enumeration of all the Acts in Favour of the Kirk; which, after ſome Reaſoning upon it, was carry'd in the Negative. Then the Second Clauſe of the ſaid Act was read, and agreed to; and upon reading the Third Clauſe, it was mov'd, That an additional Clauſe be added, for ſecuring the Continuance of the Univerſities and Colleges of St. Andrew's, Glaſgow, Aberdeen, and Edinburgh; which was alſo agreed to. On the 12th of November, ſeveral Addreſſes againſt the Union were given in, and read: Which done, the Parliament proceeded to the further Conſideration of the Act for Security of the Kirk; and the Fourth Clauſe was again read. Hereupon it was moved, That a Clauſe ſhould be added in theſe Terms; And that they ſhall be capable of any Office, Civil or Military, and to receive any Grant or Gift; and to have Command, or Place of Truſt, from and under the Sovereign, within any Part of Great Britain: Which, after ſome Debate, was rejected; and the Clauſe, as it ſtood, agreed to. Then the Third and the Fourth Clauſes being amended, were likewiſe agreed to: Whereupon the Act was again read, as alſo the Repreſentation of the Commiſſion of the General Aſſembly, and a Vote ſtated, Approve of the Act, or not? Before the Vote was put, the Lord Belhaven gave in a Proteſtation, importing, "That this Act was no valid Security to the Church, in "caſe of any Incorporating Union; and that the Church could have no real and "ſolid Security by any manner of Union, by which the Claim of Right was un-"hing'd, the Scotch Parliament incorporated, and the diſtinct Sovereignty and In-"dependency of Scotland entirely aboliſh'd:" Which being read, he took Inſtruments thereupon.

The Lord Belhaven's Proteſt.

Debate about exempting Scotchmen from the Sacramental Teſt.

It is to be obſerv'd, that when the Clauſe was offer'd by the Lord Belhaven, for exempting Scotchmen from the Sacramental Teſt, in all the Dominions of Great Britain; thoſe who were againſt the Clauſe, ſaid, It was a Thing out of their Power, and not reaſonable to ſuppoſe, that England would ever grant it. To this it was reply'd, "That the Deſign of an Union was Equality; but this was the greateſt In-"equality imaginable: For the Engliſh were free to poſſeſs Places in Scotland, with-"out any ſuch Impoſition; but the Scots were excluded from Places in England, "without taking the ſaid Teſt: And that tho' the Engliſh thought the Teſt a good "Security for their Church, it was not reaſonable that the Scots, being a Part "of the ſame United Kingdom, and oblig'd to maintain the Preſbyterian Govern-"ment in Scotland, ſhould therefore be excluded from the Prince's Favour in any "Part of the United Kingdom." However, the Clauſe was thrown out by Thirty nine Voices; and then the other Clauſes being amended, the Act for the † Security of the Church paſs'd by a Majority of Seventy four Votes. However, the Dukes of Hamilton and Athol, the Marquis of Annandale, the Earls of Errol, Mariſchal, Wigtoun, and others, adher'd to the Lord Belhaven's Proteſtation, That the Act was not ſufficient Security to the Church; the Six Points contain'd in the Repreſentation of the Commiſſion of the Church being left unprovided for.

† Nov. 12. The Act for the Security of the Church approved.

‖ Nov. 14.

Two ‖ Days after, the Second Article of Union was again read; and a Motion made, That, before any Vote upon the ſaid Article be agreed, it be inſerted in the Minutes, as a Preliminary, That the agreeing to the Second Article of the Treaty, in relation to the Succeſſion to the Crown of Great Britain, ſhould not be binding, or have any Effect, unleſs Terms and Conditions of an Union of the Two Kingdoms be finally adjuſted and concluded, and an Act paſs'd thereupon in this Parliament; and that the ſaid Terms and Conditions be alſo agreed to, and ratify'd by an Act of Parliament of England. A Reſolve was alſo given in, That the Houſe would proceed to the Conſideration of the Articles of the Treaty, which relate to Trade and Taxes. After ſome Debate thereupon, the Vote was ſtated, Proceed to the Conſideration of the Second Article of Union, in the Terms of the Motions; or proceed to the Conſideration of the Fourth, and other Articles of the Treaty, which relate to Trade and Taxes? And it was carry'd, proceed to the Second, by a Majority of One Hundred and Ten Voices, againſt Eighty four. The next ∴ Day, the Parliament receiv'd, and read, a Repreſentation of the Commiſſion of the General Aſſembly; ſetting forth the Increaſe of Popery and Prophaneneſs, and craving the ſame might be reſtrain'd, and the Succeſſion to the Crown eſtabliſh'd in the Proteſtant Line; which was referr'd to the Committee for Calculation of the Equivalent. Then ſeveral Addreſſes againſt an Incorporating Union were read;

read; after which the Second Article of the Treaty was alſo read, and the contrary Party moved, That the Parliament ſhould proceed to ſettle the Succeſſion upon Regulations and Limitations in the Terms of the Reſolve mention'd in the Minutes of the 4th of November, and not in the Terms of the Second Article of Union. This was warmly oppoſed by the Courtiers, who urged, That the Parliament of Great Britain would be more competent Judges of what was neceſſary for the good of the united Kingdoms, than that Houſe: To which it was anſwer'd, "That any "Limitations made by the Parliament, were alterable by a ſubſequent Parliament; "but if, as was by ſome alledg'd, the Articles of Union were to be punctually obſerv'd in all future Ages, and nothing to be alter'd in them, without demoliſhing "the whole Structure; then it follow'd, That it was the general Intereſt of all "Britain to have ſuch Limitations, as were neceſſary to be put upon the Succeſſors "to the Crown, inſerted in the Articles of Union; particularly in what related to "Scotland, whoſe Repreſentatives could but act precariouſly in the Parliament of "Great Britain." In the Height of this Debate, it was moved, "To addreſs her "Majeſty to lay before her the Condition of the Nation; and the Averſion in many Perſons to an Incorporating Union with England, and to acquaint her Majeſty "with the Willingneſs of the Houſe to ſettle the Succeſſion in the Proteſtant Line "upon Limitations, and in order thereto, that a ſhort Receſs might be granted." This, of all Propoſals, was moſt diſagreeable to the Courtiers, who had endeavour'd to conceal the true State and Inclinations of the Scotch Nation from their Friends in England, leſt while they were ingag'd in a War Abroad, the Fears of raiſing a Civil one at Home, might divert them from proſecuting the Union; which Project had ſo exaſperated the Nation againſt them, that their Safety entirely depended upon its Succeſs: Hereupon they all oppoſed this Motion, and without allowing the Members to give their Thoughts and Arguments upon it, eagerly demanded a Vote upon the Second Article, which at laſt was ſtated. But before Voting, the Earl Mariſchal gave in a Proteſt for himſelf, and all thoſe who ſhould adhere to his Proteſtation, importing, That no Perſon could be deſign'd a Succeſſor to the Crown of that Realm, after the Deceaſe of her Majeſty, and failing Iſſue of her Body, who was Succeſſor to the Crown of England, unleſs that in the preſent Seſſion of Parliament, or any other Seſſion of this, or any enſuing Parliament, during her Majeſty's Reign, there were ſuch Conditions of Government ſettled and enacted, as might ſecure the Honour and Sovereignty of that Crown and Kingdom, the Frequency and Power of Parliament; the Religion, Liberty, and Trade of the Nation, from Engliſh, or any Foreign Influence; which being read, he took Inſtruments thereon, and Forty Six Members having adhered to it, it was agreed that a Liſt of the Members ſhould be printed, as they voted, Approve, or not; and that they who adher'd to the Proteſt, ſhould likewiſe be mark'd. Then the Vote was put, approve, or not? And it was carried approve, by Fifty Nine Votes.

Debates about the Second Article of Union.

The Earl Mariſchal's Proteſt.

The Second Article approved.

Three Days * after, the Third Article, by which it was agreed, that both Kingdoms ſhould be repreſented by one and the ſame Parliament, falling under Conſideration, the Country Party endeavour'd to ſhew the Diſhonour and Prejudice that would redound to the Scotch Nation from this ſingle Article. Urging, "That there-"by they did, in Effect, ſink their own Conſtitution, when the Engliſh would not "allow the leaſt Alteration in theirs: That the Members of Scotland, in the Britiſh "Parliament, would bear ſo ſmall a Proportion to the Engliſh, that it could not be "expected that the former ſhould ever be able to carry any Thing, that ſhould be "for the Intereſt of Scotland, againſt ſo great a Majority, who, though divided "among themſelves, about different Parties, would yet unite againſt the Scotch, to "whom they all bore a natural Antipathy. That in all Nations there are Fundamentals which admit of no Alteration by any Power whatſoever: That the Rights "and Privileges of Parliament being one of theſe Fundamentals among the Scotch, "no Parliament, or any other Power, could ever legally prohibit the meeting of "Parliaments, or deprive any of the Three Eſtates of its Right of ſitting or voting "in Parliament, or give up the Rights and Privileges of Parliament; but that by "this Treaty, the Parliament of Scotland was entirely abrogated; its Rights and "Privileges given up; and thoſe of the Parliament of England ſubſtituted in their "Place. That if the Parliament of Scotland could alter their Fundamentals, the "Britiſh Parliament might do the ſame; and if ſo, what Security had the Scotch "for any Thing ſtipulated in the Treaty of Union, with reſpect either to the "Repreſentation of Scotland in that Parliament, or any other Privileges and Immunities granted to Scotland? That though the Legiſlative Power in Parliament "were regulated and determin'd by Majority of Voices, yet the giving up the "Conſtitution, and the Rights and Privileges of the Nation, was not ſubject to "Suffrage, being founded on Dominion and Property; and therefore could not be

" legally done without the Conſent of every Perſon, who had a Right to elect, and " be repreſented in Parliament. That by this Treaty, not only the Conſtitution of " Parliament in general was wholly alter'd, or rather given up, but the Barons, " and Burrows, were aggrieved in their particular Rights and Privileges: For, ſup- " poſing the XXIId Article, (which limits the Number of Scotch Peers, Barons, " and Burrows) ſhould be rejected, yet, nevertheleſs, the Barons and Burrows were " ſtill deprived of their judicial Authority, to which they had an undoubted Right; " and of which the Parliament could not deprive their Conſtituents, without their " own Conſent. That though the Barons, for their own Conveniency, conſented " to be repreſented by a certain Number in Parliament, yet they had as good a " Right to ſit, and vote, and adviſe their Sovereign, as the Peers themſelves " whenever they pleaſed to reaſſume their Power, of which the IIId and XXIId " Articles deprived them." And, in the laſt Place, it was repreſented, " That the " Scotch Members being obliged to reſide ſo long in London, to attend the Britiſh " Parliament, that alone were ſufficient to drain Scotland of all their Money in " Specie." Little or nothing being offer'd by the Courtiers againſt theſe Arguments, the oppoſite Party moved, That the agreeing to the Third Article, in Relation to the Parliament of Great Britain, ſhould not be Binding, nor have any Effect, unleſs Terms and Conditions of an Union of the Two Kingdoms, and particularly the Conſtitution of the ſaid Parliament, were finally adjuſted and concluded, and an Act paſs'd thereupon in the Parliament; and that the ſaid Terms and Conditions be alſo agreed to, and ratify'd by an Act of the Parliament of England; the Conſtitution of the Parliament of Great Britain being left entire, until the Parliament came upon the XXIId Article. It was mov'd alſo, to proceed to the Conſideration of the Fourth, and other Articles of Union, before the Third; but after ſome Reaſoning thereupon, it was carried to proceed to the Conſideration of the Third Article. After a long Debate thereupon, a Vote was ſtated, Approve of the Third Article, in the Terms of the Motion relating thereto, or not? But before Voting, the Marquis of Annandale gave in a Proteſt, and deſired that the Narrative of the 4th of that Month of November, might be prefix'd thereto; being both together as follows, viz. " Whereas it evidently appears, " ſince the printing, publiſhing and conſidering the Articles of Treaty now before " this Houſe, That this Nation ſeems generally averſe to this Incorporating Union, " in the Terms now before us, as ſubverſive of the Sovereignty, Fundamental Conſtitu- " tion, and Claim of Right of this Kingdom, and as threatning Ruin to this Church, as " by Law eſtabliſh'd: And ſince it is plain, that if an Union was agreed to in theſe " Terms, by the Parliament, and accepted of by the Parliament of England, it " would in no ſort, anſwer the peaceable and friendly Ends propoſed by an Union, " but would, on the contrary, create ſuch diſmal Diſtractions and Animoſities " amongſt our ſelves, and ſuch Jealouſies and Miſtakes betwixt us, and our Neigh- " bours, as would involve theſe Nations into fatal Breaches and Confuſions: There- " fore I do proteſt for my ſelf, and in the Name of thoſe who ſhall adhere to this " my Proteſtation, That an Incorporating Union of the Crown and Kingdom of Scot- " land, with the Crown and Kingdom of England, and that both Nations be repre- " ſented by one and the ſame Parliament, as contained in the Articles of the Trea- " ty of Union, are contrary to the Honour, Intereſt, Fundamental Laws and Con- " ſtitution of this Kingdom, is a giving up the Sovereignty, the Birth-Right of the Peers, " the Rights and Privileges of the Barons and Burrows, and is contrary to the Claim of " Right, Property, and Liberty of the Subjects, and the Third Act of her Majeſty's Par- " liament, 1703; by which it is declared High-Treaſon in any of the Subjects of " this Kingdom, to quarrel, or endeavour by Writing, malicious and adviſed Speaking, or " open Act or Deed, to alter or innovate the Claim of Right, or any Article thereof: As " alſo, that the Subjects of this Kingdom, by ſurrendring the Sovereignty and Parliaments, " are deprived of all Security, both with reſpect to ſuch Rights as are by the intended " Treaty ſtipulated and agreed, and in reſpect of ſuch other Rights, both Eccleſiaſtical and " Civil, as are, by the ſame Treaty, pretended to be reſerv'd to them: And therefore I " do proteſt, that this ſhall not prejudice the Being of future Scotch Parliaments, " and Conventions, within the Kingdom of Scotland, at no Time coming." After reading this Proteſt, his Lordſhip took Inſtruments thereupon; and then the Vote was put, Approve of the Third Article in the Terms of the Motion, or not? And it was carried approve, by a Majority of Thirty One Votes, that of the Lord Chancellor included; but Fifty Two Members adhered to the Marquis of Annandale's Proteſt.

The Marquis of Annandale's Proteſt.

The Third Article carried.

It was late that Day, before the Parliament roſe, and the Mob of Edinburgh, which, either through the Negligence or Connivance of ſome Perſons in Authority, continued to gather in great Numbers, with barbarous Inſolence inſulted the Lord High Commiſſioner, as he was returning Home. For although the Horſe Guards, and and ſome of the Foot Grenadiers, were round his Grace's Coach, yet the raſcally Crew were ſo audacious, as to throw Stones from ſeveral Corners, ſome of which fell into the very Coach; and they preſs'd ſo hard upon it, that the Coachman was forc'd to drive full Speed down the Street; and one of his Grace's Pages falling behind, did narrowly eſcape with his Life, having receiv'd ſeveral Blows. The next * Day, the Lord Chancellor acquainted the Parliament with the Inſult that had been offer'd to the Lord High Commiſſioner; whereupon the Houſe referr'd to the Committee appointed to examine the Equivalent, to make Inquiry into that Matter, to ſeize and impriſon any Perſons they ſhould ſuſpect, and to report their Information, and their Opinion, what Meaſures might be proper for preventing the like for the future. The Parliament likewiſe commanded the Lord High Conſtable, to proſecute the Perſons impriſoned, on Account of a former Tumult, and order'd the Magiſtrates of Edinburgh to aſſiſt therein. The ſame Day, an Addreſs from the City of St. Andrews againſt an Union, being read, it was mov'd, That the Parliament ſhould proceed to the Fourth Article of Union; but the Duke of Athol propoſed, That before they proceeded to the ſaid Article, a Clauſe be added to the Third Article, in theſe Terms: And that the ſaid Parliament of Great Britain ſhall meet, and ſit, once in Three Years at leaſt, in that Part of Great Britain, now call'd Scotland; and after ſome Debate, the Conſideration thereof was delay'd 'till the Parliament came to the XXIId Article. Then the Fourth Article of Union was read, and the Scotch being thereby admitted to an equal Communication of Trade with the Engliſh, it was thought that Article would meet with no manner of Oppoſition: But the Duke of Hamilton made a Motion, That all the Regulations and Reſtrictions of the Engliſh Trade, the Regulations of their Companies, &c. ſhould be laid before the Houſe; and Mr. Fletcher of Saltoun, in a ſet Speech, endeavour'd to prove this Paradox, viz. That the being let into the Trade of England, would be a Diſadvantage to Scotland. After ſome Debate about that Matter, the further Conſideration of it was put off 'till the next † Sitting; when the Fourth Article of Union being again read, it was mov'd, to take the ſeveral Branches of Trade into Conſideration; that it might thereby appear, how far the Communication of Trade ſhould be advantageous. After a Debate, it was reſolv'd to approve of the Fourth Article, reſerving the Conſideration of ſeveral Branches of Trade, till the Parliament came to the ſubſequent, by near Four Voices to One. Then the Fifth Article of Union being read, a Propoſal was given in for explaining and inlarging the ſame; importing, "That all Ships or Veſſels "belonging to her Majeſty's Subjects of Scotland, at the Time of Ratifying the "Treaty of the Union, tho' Foreign-built, ſhould be deem'd as Ships built in "Great Britain; the Owners, within Twelve Months after the Union, making "Oath, that the ſame did belong to them, or to ſome other Subject or Subjects "of Scotland." Which being read, it was mov'd, That Six Months more Time ſhould be added to the Time allow'd by the Propoſal, for purchaſing Ships or Veſſels; and after ſome Reaſoning thereupon, the further Conſideration thereof was delay'd till the next Sitting.

Debate about the 4th Article of Union.

† Nov. 21.

The 4th Article of Union approved.

It is remarkable, that the ſaid Propoſal was given in with the Approbation of her Majeſty's Miniſters; who, by that political Step, and their ready Concurrence with ſome other Clauſes for Explaining and Enlarging other Articles of the Treaty, remov'd the Prejudices of many againſt the Union. Among the reſt, the Lord High-Commiſſioner behav'd himſelf with that Mildneſs, Prudence and Steadineſs, that the moſt partial were forc'd to own, they never had a better, or abler Man, at the Head of that Government.

On the 23d, after the reading ſeveral Addreſſes againſt an Incorporating Union, the Fifth Article of the Treaty was alſo read, with the Propoſal inſerted in the Minutes of the former Sitting, and this Amendment; inſtead of, After the Union, After the Firſt of May next. After ſome Reaſoning thereon, a Second Propoſal was given in by the Lord Belhaven, importing, "That all Ships or Veſſels belonging to "the Subjects of Scotland, at the Time of Ratifying the Treaty in the Parliament "of both Kingdoms, be eſteem'd as built in England:" And, after ſome Debate, the firſt Paragraph of the Fifth Article, with the firſt Amendment, was approved. Then the reſt of the ſaid Article being read, an additional Clauſe was given in by the Duke of Hamilton, importing, "That for the Space of Seven Years after the "Union, no Seaman aboard any Scots Ship ſhould, either at Home or Abroad, be "preſs'd to ſerve in any of her Majeſty's Ships; and in caſe there be a Levy of "Seamen in the United Kingdom, that that Part thereof, now call'd Scotland, "ſhould only bear ſuch a Proportion, as their Taxes were in Proportion with Eng"land; but without Prejudice to Officers, or Maſters of Ships, to engage as ma"ny Voluntier-Seamen as they could agree with, within that Part of the Uni"ted Kingdom: And this Article to be unalterable by any ſubſequent Britiſh Parliament:"

Clauſe offer'd by the Duke of Hamilton, rejected.

The whole 5th Article approved.

" liament :" Which, after ſome Reaſoning thereupon, was rejected by Fifty four Voices ; and then the Remainder of the Fifth Article was approved.

The Sixth Article conſider'd.

On the 26th of November, after the Reading of ſeveral Addreſſes againſt an Union, in the Terms of the Treaty; and ſome other private Affairs, the Sixth Article of Union being read, it was mov'd, That there ſhould be a Scheme laid before the Parliament, of all the Branches of Trade, as to Export and Import ; and after ſome Debate, a Propoſal was given in, importing, That the Article ſhould be agreed to, excepting ſo far as ſhould be rectified by the Parliament, upon the Conſideration of the ſubſequent Articles. Another Propoſal was alſo given in, viz. ' And ſeeing by " the Laws of England, there are Rewards granted upon Export of certain Kind of " Grains, wherein Oats is not ſpecified ; that after the Union, when Oats ſhall be " at Fifteen Shillings per Quarter, or under, there ſhall be paid Two Shillings and " Sixpence for every Quarter of Oatmeal exported in the Terms of the Law, " whereby Rewards are granted for Export of the Grains : And in reſpect there " is a Duty upon Oats imported into England, but no Duty upon the Meal, the " importing of which is a Prejudice and Diſcouragement to Tillage ; therefore, " that from and after the Union, the Quarter of Oatmeal be deem'd equal to Three " Quarters of Oats, and pay Duty accordingly, when imported to Scotland from " any Place whatever beyond the Sea :" Which being read and debated, the further Conſideration of it was delay'd till the next Sitting ; and order'd, that the Obſervations made by the Council of Trade, be then laid before the Houſe. During the Debate on the Sixth Article, the Duke of Hamilton, Marquis of Annandale, and others of their Party, urged, " That it was hard to enter upon ſuch a Gene- " ral, until they underſtood the ſeveral Branches of their Trade, and how they " agreed with the Impoſitions of England ; and that in the Treaty of 1602, they " were allow'd to be under their own Regulations, and to have a Book of Rates " for themſelves ; and therefore they ought to have the ſame at this Time." The

* Nov. 27. next * Day, the Sixth Article of the Union, as amended, being again read, together with the Propoſal about Oats and Oatmeal, and this Addition, viz. And that the Beer of Scotland have the like Rewards and Drawbacks as Barley ; it was moved, That the like Premium, or Draw-back, on Exportation of Oatmeal, be allow'd as on the Exportation of Rye in England : And, after Debate, it was agreed, That the ſaid Sixth Article, with the Propoſals for Amendments, be referr'd to a Committee. Then a Clauſe was offer'd, importing, " That Scotland, for ——— Years " after the Union, be free from the Prohibitions againſt Exporting Wool, Skins with " Wool, and Woollen Yarn, which, by the Oaths of the Seller and Buyer, ſhall be " made appear to be the proper Growth and Product of Scotland, and ſpun with- " in the ſame ; which ſhall no ways be comprehended under any of the Laws " already made in England, or to be made during the Space aforeſaid." As alſo this Clauſe ; viz. " Excepting the Duties on Export and Import, on particular Com- " modities ; from which the Subjects of either Kingdom are ſpecially liberated and " exempted by their private Rights, and which, after the Union, are to remain " entire." And this Clauſe, viz. " That after the Union, all Sorts of Scotch Lin- " nen, or any kind of Cloth made of Flax or Hemp, be exported out of the united " Kingdom, free of all Cuſtoms, or other Impoſitions whatſoever. As alſo another " Clauſe, viz. That before the Union, the Scotch might have ſuch a Drawback ad- " juſted, as might enable them to export Beef, Pork, and Butter, to the Weſt-Indies, " and other Foreign Parts. As likewiſe this Clauſe, That after the Union, all Duties " or Bounty-Tolls, or other Exactions on Black-Cattle, or other Product of Scot- " land, when carried into England, or Product of England, when carried into Scot- " land, payable either to publick or private Perſons, be, in all Time coming, void " and null." And laſtly, another Clauſe, in theſe Terms, " That after the Union, " Scotland, ſhould have Liberty, for ever, to manufacture Plaiders, Fingrams, Gal- " way-Whites, Serges, Stockings, and all Sorts of Linnen, as they had been uſed to " do, conform to the Regulations of their own Laws, and to export the ſame to " England, or Dominions and Plantations thereto belonging, or to any other Place " beyond Seas, free of any Duty whatſoever. But in Caſe any of the Subjects of " Scotland ſhould export any other Sort of Woollen Manufacture, they were to be " liable to the Regulations and Taxes of England impoſed before the Union, or to " be impoſed afterwards by the Parliament of Great Britain." All theſe Clauſes, together with the Sixth Article and Propoſal, were referr'd to the Committee appointed for the Calculation of the Equivalent, to which Committee it was agreed to add Two Members of each State.

On the 28th, after the Three Eſtates had reported their reſpective Elections of the ſaid additional Members, the Seventh Article was again read, and after ſome Reaſoning, a Propoſal for Explanation and Addition was given in, importing, " That Another Clauſe was likewiſe offer'd, viz. that the " Two Penny Ale and Beer of Scotland, ſhould be only charged with the ſame " Exciſe, as the preſent ſmall Beer of England; and after ſome Debate, the Vote " was ſtated, Approve of the Seventh Article, as to the Exciſe of Ale and Beer, " with the firſt or laſt Explanation? Account of the Tumults and Inſurrections at Glaſgow, Kircudbright, Dumfries, &c.

By this Time, the common People were ſo enraged, that they threatned to come up, in a Body, to Edinburgh, to diſſolve the Parliament. The Firſt that made any formal Appearance, were the Inhabitants of Glaſgow, where the Provoſt and Town-Council oppoſing the ſubſcribing of an Addreſs againſt the Union, great Numbers betook themſelves to Arms; drove the Magiſtrates out of the City; inſulted every Body whom they ſuſpected to favour the Union; hung in Effigy one of the Commiſſioners in the Treaty, with the Articles about his Neck; and rambled up and down for Two or Three Days together, committing divers Enormities and Diſorders: But a ſtrong Detachment of Dragoons being ſent thither, ſurprized Two of the Ringleaders, Findley, a Malſter, and one Montgomery, brought them Priſoners to Edinburgh Caſtle, and ſo the Glaſgow Mob dwindled into nothing. About the ſame Time, the Shire of Dumfries, Kircudbright, Lanerk, Galloway, Air, and Clyeſdale, were all ready to riſe, and about Two or Three Thouſand of the Commoners came in Arms to Dumfries, where they publickly burnt * the Articles of Union, and affix'd on the Market-Croſs a Declaration, entituled, An Account of the burning of the Articles of the Union at Dumfries, wherein they, at large, gave their Reaſons for proteſting againſt it. But none ſhew'd more Zeal on this Occaſion, than the Weſtern Shires, where a vaſt Number of People, and chiefly the Cameronians, were willing to venture their All to oppoſe the Union; for which Purpoſe they had ſeveral Meetings, divided themſelves into Regiments, choſe their Officers; provided themſelves with Horſes, Arms and Ammunition; mentioned the Reſtoration of the King, as the only Means to ſave their Country; were ſo far reconciled to the Northern Parts, and Epiſcopal Party, (whom they formerly hated, on account of their different Principles in Religion) that they were inclined to concert Meaſures with them, and had appointed Correſpondents in all Places throughout the Kingdom, to ſtrengthen and encourage their Party, and to feel the Pulſe of thoſe Members of Parliament who were againſt the Union. There was one Cunningham of Eekatt, who had been very forward in promoting the late Revolution; but, upon the Peace of Reſwick, the Regiment whereof he was Major, being broke, he went to Darien, and after the Ruin of that Enterprize, returning to Scotland, he lived privately, and meanly, at his Country-Houſe. He had made frequent Applications for an Employment, but though new Levies were made, upon the War breaking out again, he could never obtain to be provided for in the Army, which he aſcribed to his having been employ'd by the Darien Company; and at which he was not a little diſguſted. As he waited for an Opportunity to ſhew his Reſentment, he was ſoon known to the Weſtern Agents, and, being of the Preſbyterian Principles, entirely truſted by them. Having concerted Meaſures with Mr. Briſbane of Biſhoptown, Mr. Cochrane of Kilmoronock, and Mr. Lockhart of Carnwath, Three ſtaunch Cavaliers, who aſſured him, that the Duke of Hamilton approved his Deſign of bringing up the Cameronians to diſſolve the Parliament, and that the Duke of Athol readily undertook to cauſe his Highlanders to ſecure the Paſs of Stirling, to open a Communication with the Northern Parts, Major Cunningham took a Progreſs through the Weſtern Shires, and, by his dextrous Management, brought Things to ſuch a Conſiſtency, that Seven or Eight Thouſand Men, well armed, were ready to rendezvous at the Town of Hamilton, in order to march forwards to Edinburgh, under his Command. But a Day or Two before they were to meet, the Duke of Hamilton, without acquainting any of thoſe who had concerted this Deſign, ſent privately Expreſſes through the whole Country, ſtrictly requiring them to put it off 'till another Time; ſo that not above Five Hundred, more forward than the reſt, came to the Place appointed; which entirely broke Major Cunningham's Meaſures. What induced the Duke of Hamilton to act as he did, on this Occaſion, the Scotch Memorialiſt, who was privy to the Deſign, leaves † undetermin'd; acquainting us, " That " ſome ſwore he had made his Terms with the Court; others ſaying, that he was " afraid

"afraid to venture, by Reaſon of his Eſtate in England; and that the only Thing "that was alledged in his Behalf, was, that he thought the Nation was not in a "Condition to carry on ſuch an Enterprize at that Time, becauſe the Engliſh had "ſent their Troops to the Borders, and more Forces might ſoon be waſted over from "Holland, and ſo the Scotch Nation be undone.

Be that as it will, the Government having been inform'd of the ill Deſigns of
* Nov. 29. the Malecontents, the Lord Chancellor acquainted * the Parliament, "That the "Secret Council, at their laſt Meeting, had under Conſideration ſeveral Accounts "of irregular and tumultuary Meetings, by ſome People of the common and mean- "eſt Degree, in Arms, and of Abuſes committed by them at Glaſgow, Kirkudbright, "Dumfries, and ſeveral Places of Lanerkſhire; and that there were Papers dropp'd "inviting People to take up Arms, and to provide Ammunition and Proviſions, in "order to their marching to diſturb the Parliament; all which he was directed by "the Secret Council to lay before the Parliament, that proper Methods might be "reſolv'd upon, for preventing the evil Conſequences of ſuch Practices:" And then his Lordſhip preſented a Letter from the Magiſtrates of Dumfries, to her Majeſty's Advocate, giving an Account of the Abuſes and Tumultuary Meetings in that Place. After the reading of that Letter, and of the Declaration, incloſed therein, a Draught of a Proclamation to be emitted by the Parliament, againſt all tumultuary Meetings, and Convocation of the Leidges, was preſented, and read: And, after ſome Debate thereupon, it being objected, that it did not appear that there was a particular Information of any tumultuary Meetings, or irregular Convocations, either in the Shire of Lanerk, or at Glaſgow, her Majeſty's High Commiſſioner notify'd to the Parliament, that he had Information, not only from Glaſgow and Dumfries, but alſo from ſeveral Places in Lanerkſhire, of tumultuary and irregular Meetings of Men in Arms, and of their publiſhing their Deſigns of marching to diſturb the Parliament. Hereupon, not only the Proclamation was approved, (Three only diſſenting) but the Draught of an Act, Suſpending the Effect of the Clauſe in the Act of Security, for Arming and Exerciſing the Penſible Men, paſs'd in the Second Seſſion of this Parliament, and that during this Seſſion of Parliament only, was alſo read, and a firſt Reading order'd to be mark'd thereon. The next Day †, the ſaid Act was again read, approv'd, touch'd with the Scepter, and order'd forthwith to be printed and publiſh'd, together with the Proclamation againſt Tumults. The ſame Day, after the reading of Two Addreſſes againſt an Union, the Seventh Article was again read, debated, and that Part of it not approved before, paſs'd by more than Two Thirds of the Houſe. The printed Account of the burning of the Articles of Union at Dumfres, before-mention'd, being again read, was referr'd to the Committee, appointed for examining the Sixth Article of Union, to make Enquiry after the Printer and Publiſher of that ſcandalous Paper, which was order'd to be burnt by the Hands of the Common Hangman. But while the Parliament was thus taking vigorous Meaſures to ſuppreſs tumultuous Aſſemblies, the Edinburgh Mob had the Inſolence to come, in great Numbers, to the Parliament-Cloſe, demanding, with loud Outcries, That the Treaty of Union be rejected. Hereupon the Duke of Argyle, with great Reſolution, went out of the Houſe, in order to appeaſe the riotous Multitude, whom he aſk'd, Whether they knew who he was? They anſwer'd, they knew him no more as the Duke of Argyle, but only as Earl of Greenwich, and as ſuch, entirely in the Intereſt of England: But that Illuſtrious Peer, having, with repeated Intreaties, perſuaded them to give him the Hearing, his Grace ſpoke to them with ſuch Calmneſs, and Strength of Reaſon, as allay'd the Fury of the boldeſt, and work'd ſo powerfully upon the reſt, that ſome of them cry'd out, Long live the Duke of Argyle, and Proſperity to the Union. However, the Court being apprehenſive that her Majeſty's Miniſters, and the well-affected, might be expoſed to further Inſults, ſome Regiments of Horſe and Dragoons, were order'd to march towards the North of England, to be in a Readineſs to enter Scotland, in Caſe of any Riſing in that Kingdom: Which, by the ſteddy Conduct and Vigilance of the Lord High Commiſſioner, and the other Miniſters, was happily prevented. Beſides the Precautions uſed to preſerve the publick Tranquility, and ſhelter the Well-affected Members from the Inſults of the Malecontents without, it muſt be own'd, that other Methods were employ'd, to remove the Obſtacles which the Union was like to meet with in the Houſe. In order to that, the Miniſters thought it abſolutely neceſſary to pay part of the Arrears of the Salaries and Penſions due to ſeveral Perſons; and the Scotch Funds being all anticipated, they prevail'd with the Queen to lend her Scotch Treaſury the Sum of Twenty Thouſand Pounds Sterling, which the Earl of Glaſgow diſtributed to the beſt Advantage; and for which he, ſome Years after, accounted with the Commiſſioners of publick Accounts. Some, indeed, have endeavour'd to juſtify the Miniſters of State, alledging, that the paying of juſt Debts

Debts cannot be conſtrued Bribery: But whoever * will impartially conſider the Time when this pretended Payment of Arrears was made; the Place from whence the Money came; the clandeſtine manner of obtaining and diſpoſing of it; that all the Perſons on whom it was beſtow'd, (the Duke of Athol only excepted) voted for, and promoted the Union; and, laſtly, that ſeveral of thoſe Perſons (a) had no Claim to that Diſtribution: Whoever, I ſay, will reflect on theſe Things, will undoubtedly conclude, that the Money was mainly deſigned to gain Votes in the Houſe. The Fears of Diſturbances from the giddy Multitude, being, in a great Meaſure, removed, the Parliament made a quick Diſpatch of the remaining Articles of the Treaty. On the 31ſt of October, the Eighth had been referr'd to a Committee; and, on the 3d of December, the Ninth, Tenth, Eleventh, Twelfth, and Thirteenth Articles, were ſeverally read, debated, and approved; as was Three † Days after, the Fourteenth Article, with an Amendment, importing, That during the preſent War, Scotland ſhould be exempted from the Malt-Tax. The next ‖ Day, the Committee appointed to examine the Calculation of the Equivalent, having made their Report, That the Computation was juſt, exactly and well founded, in the Terms expreſs'd in the Fifteenth Article, the firſt Part of the ſaid Article was, after ſome Debate, approv'd; notwithſtanding the Lord Belhaven's Proteſtation, againſt the Scots being concern'd in the Payment of Engliſh Debts. On the 10th of December, the Sixth Article of the Treaty was again read, as was alſo Part of the Report of the Committee, to whom the ſame was referr'd; which was approv'd by a great Majority. The Four ſubſequent Days, (viz. December the 11th, 12th, 14th, and 16th) the remaining Parts of the Committee's Report, concerning Premiums and Drawbacks on Scotch Commodities, and other Commercial Matters, being examin'd and debated; the Sixth Article was approv'd, with ſeveral Additions and Explanations.

The Preſbyterian Miniſters, being apprehenſive that their Kirk-Government was in Danger, had, in moſt Places, preach'd againſt the wicked Union; but no ſooner did the Parliament paſs an Act for the Security of the Kirk, than their Zeal was cool'd; and the ſoberer, and, indeed, greater Part of the Scotch Clergy, began to conſider, that the violent Methods which, by the Inſtigation of ſome of their Brethren, had been uſed to thwart the Union, would, at laſt, redound to the Reproach of their Church. Hereupon, the Commiſſion of the General Aſſembly thought fit to ſend a Circular Letter ∴ to the ſeveral Preſbyteries of the Kingdom; wherein, to "ex- "oner their Conſciences, they recommended to all their Brethren, to diſcounte- "nance and diſcourage all Irregularities and Tumults, tending to diſturb the Govern- "ment." To this Letter, the Preſbytery of Hamilton, which was the moſt buſy againſt an Incorporating Union, return'd an Anſwer; importing, "That there had been many "Reports ſpread abroad of Tumults and Diſorders; which, as to the Bounds of "their Preſbytery, were groſly falſe; and they had Reaſon to believe them ſo like- "wiſe, as to the reſt of the Shire. That they had heard alſo of calumnious Sto- "ries, induſtriouſly diſſeminated, concerning ſome of their Number, with reſpect "to thoſe pretended Diſorders; which were not only contrary to Truth, but to "common Senſe. But that, as to the Diſpoſition of the People, the plain Truth "was, that they were generally averſe from the Union, as what they fear'd might "prove an irremediable Evil. That they had heard, with much Satisfaction, of "the Zeal which the Reverend Commiſſion had ſhewn in their Addreſs, for the Inte- "reſts of the Church; and that they were of Opinion, that they ought ſtill to re- "monſtrate againſt the Concluding of any Union with England, upon the Foot of "the Treaty, till the General Aſſembly of the National Church were call'd, and al- "low'd to conſider of Solid and Eſſential Securities for the Church.

tion of both which, took up the Parliament's Time in the Sittings of the 17th, 18th, 19th, 20th, 22d, 23d, 24th and 26th of December; upon which laſt Day, the ſaid Eighth Article, with the ſeveral Clauſes and Explanations added to it, was approved by a Majority of Fifty three Voices. The ſame Day, the Second, Third, Fourth and Sixth Clauſes of the Fifteenth Article of Union, were read, and approved; but the Fifth Clauſe was order'd to be ſtruck out, as being determin'd by the Eighth Article.

Deſign to invite the Barons, &c. to attend the Commiſſioner, in order to preſs him to lay aſide the Union.

The Project of Diſſolving the Parliament, carry'd on by Major Cunningham, having miſcarried; the Country-Party bethought themſelves of another Expedient to thwart the Union, which was, (according to a Precedent in the Minority of James the Fifth) to invite as many of the Barons, Freeholders and Heretors, as could poſſibly be got, to Edinburgh, that they might in a Body attend the Lord High-Commiſſioner, and (by a Prolocutor) intreat his Grace, either to lay aſide the intended Union, or, at leaſt, to grant a Receſs, until they had inform'd the Queen of the preſent Temper and Diſpoſition of the Nation, and obtain'd an Order for calling a New Parliament, to provide againſt the Calamities that were like to enſue: And, whether his Grace granted, or refuſed this Demand, they reſolv'd that a National Addreſs, to that Purpoſe, ſhould be ſign'd, and forthwith ſent up to the Queen. This Counſel came firſt from the Duke of Athol, and Mr. Fletcher of Salton; and being reliſh'd and recommended by the Duke of Hamilton, was generally approv'd by the Cavaliers, who acquainted their Friends in the Country with the Deſign, and deſir'd them to come privately to Edinburgh, againſt a certain prefix'd Day. In the mean Time, Mr. Henry Maul, Brother to the Earl of Panmure, was pitch'd upon for the Prolocutor; and the Form of an Addreſs to the Queen concerted and agreed to, by all who were in the Secret; wherein they made it their moſt humble Supplication to her Majeſty, that ſhe would be graciouſly pleas'd to diſcountenance this Treaty, and call both a New Parliament, and a General Aſſembly of the Church of that Kingdom. Againſt the Day appointed, above Five Hundred Gentlemen were actually come to Edinburgh, and many more were upon the Road: But, the very next Day, the Duke of Hamilton acquainted thoſe in Concert with him, That unleſs they added a Clauſe to the Addreſs, intimating their Readineſs to ſettle the Succeſſion in the Houſe of Hanover, he would, by no means, be concern'd in it; urging, that, without ſuch a Clauſe, the Engliſh Tories, who ('twas expected) would oppoſe the Union in the Engliſh Parliament, could have no Foundation to go upon. This Objection was no ſmall Surprize to the Cavaliers, who generally look'd upon it as intended to break the Deſign; ſince the Duke of Hamilton could not be ignorant, that the far greater Part of the Gentlemen who were come up to Edinburgh, would never conſent to ſuch a Clauſe. Two or Three Days being ſpent in endeavouring to make up this Difference, the Country-Gentlemen grew weary of ſpending their Time and Money to no Purpoſe, ſo that many of them return'd home; and the Government having been inform'd of the Deſign, reſolv'd to put an effectual Stop to it.

Dec. 27. Complaints of Letters diſpers'd to invite the Subſcribers to Addreſſes to aſſemble at Edinburgh.

In order to that, on the 27th of December, the Lord Chancellor acquainted the Houſe, "That tho' the ſeveral Addreſſes, brought in and preſented to the Parliament againſt an Incorporating Union, had been taken into Conſideration, yet "there was Information, that Letters were ſent thro' ſeveral Corners of the King"dom, deſiring the Subſcribers of thoſe Addreſſes to come in, and aſſemble at E"dinburgh, upon Pretence of waiting the Effect of the ſaid Addreſſes, and of know"ing what Return the Parliament would give them; all which, he was directed "by her Majeſty's High-Commiſſioner to lay before the Parliament, that proper "Meaſures might be reſolv'd upon, for preventing any evil Conſequences from ſuch "Practices." After ſome Debate thereon, a Proclamation was brought in and read,

A Proclamation againſt ſeditious Meetings.

againſt all ſuch Meetings, and Gatherings of the Subjects, as unwarrantable, and contrary to Law: And after further Diſcourſe, as to the Grounds of the Informations, the Lord High-Commiſſioner notify'd to the Parliament, "That he had Information "from ſeveral Parts of the Kingdom, of the great Pains and Methods which had been "uſed to procure Subſcriptions to Addreſſes, and to invite to Edinburgh the Sub"ſcribers, againſt a Set Day, to back thoſe Addreſſes." After Debate upon the Draught of the Proclamation, the Vote was ſtated, Approve of the ſame, or not? But before Voting, George Lockhart, of Carnwath, gave in a Proteſtation, importing, "That this Proclamation, now offer'd to be emitted, diſcharging Barons "and Freeholders, and Heretors within the Kingdom, to come to Edinburgh in "Time of Sitting of Parliament, ſhould no ways prejudice the Rights and Privi"ledges of the Barons and Freeholders of the Kingdom, competent to them by "the Laws of the Nation:" Which being read, he took Inſtruments thereupon; and moſt of thoſe that voted in the Negative, adher'd to this Proteſtation. Then the the Proclamation was approved by a Majority of One Hundred and Twelve Voices, againſt Sixty two; and the ſame being forthwith publiſh'd, had the deſir'd Effect. A. D. 1706.

On the 30th of December, the Parliament read the Seventh and laſt Clauſe of the Fifteenth Article, about the Application of the Equivalent, and the Repreſentation of the African Company, ſetting forth, "That the Sum propos'd to be paid to them "out of the Equivalent, was not adequate to the great Loſſes and Damages they had "already ſuſtain'd, and to the taking away ſo many valuable Priviledges as they "now enjoy'd; the Benefit of which muſt, of Courſe, accrue chiefly to the Eng- "liſh Eaſt-India Company:" But, after ſome Debate, the Fifteenth Article, as alter'd and amended, was approv'd, by a Majority of Sixty Votes. The next Day, the Sixteenth Article, with an Amendment, and the Seventeenth, without any, were unanimouſly approv'd: And then the Eighteenth Article being read, it was mov'd, that the following Clauſe be added to it; viz. "And that in making "any ſuch Laws, eſpecial Regard be had to Overtures, to be preſented to that "Parliament by the Lords of the Seſſions of Scotland." After ſome Debate, another Overture was offer'd, for adding this Clauſe; viz. "That all Scotchmen be ex- "empted from the Engliſh Sacramental Teſt, not only in Scotland, but in all Places "of the United Kingdom, and Dominions thereunto belonging; and that they "may be declar'd capable of Offices throughout the whole, without being oblig'd "to take the ſaid Teſt." But it was repreſented, "That it was not now entire, to "add the ſaid Clauſe about the Teſt, by reaſon of the Vote of Parliament of the "12th of November laſt, againſt adding the like Clauſe." After further Debate, it was agreed, that the ſame ſhould be put to the Vote; and that the Liſt of the Members Votes be printed and recorded. Hereupon the Vote was put, Whether it was entire to add the Clauſe, or not? And it was carry'd in the Negative, by Thirty four. Then the Vote was put, Approve of the Eighteenth Article, or not? And it was carry'd approve, by Fifty.

On the 2d of January, the Parliament paſs'd an Act for adjourning the Seſſion, or Term, one Month longer, and then proceeded on the Nineteenth Article; to the firſt Clauſe of which they agreed, with a Stipulation; That the Lords of the Seſſion ſhould, for the future, be taken from among the Advocates and Writers to the Signet; (which was carry'd by Thirteen Votes only); and none to be deem'd capable, that had not practiſed the Law at leaſt Five Years for the former. The next * Day, a Motion was made for an additional Clauſe, in relation to the Qualification of Writers; viz. "That no Writer to the Signet be capable to be admitted Lord of the Seſſion, un- "leſs he undergo a private and publick Trial in the Civil Law, before the Faculty "of Advocates, and be found by them qualified for the aboveſaid Office, Two "Years before he ſhall be named to be a Lord of the Seſſion." After ſome Debate, it was moved, "That the Qualifications for capacitating Perſons to be "named ordinary Lords of Seſſion, ſhould be alterable by the Parliament of "Great Britain;" which was carry'd by Sixty Voices: As was alſo the Clauſe about the Qualification of Writers. The other Clauſes of the Nineteenth Article being read, and debated, the whole (as amended) was approved. The 4th of January was beſtow'd upon private Affairs: On the 6th, the Twentieth Article, with the Addition of the Word Superiorities; and the Twenty firſt, without any Amendment, were approved.

Before the Houſe came to the XXIId Article, which ſettles the Number of Scotland's Repreſentatives in the Britiſh Parliament, the Duke of Hamilton, having aſſembled the leading Men of the Party, who had long oppoſed the Union, pathetically exhorted them, "Not to look back upon what might have been done amiſs by "any amongſt them, but to go on forwards, and now, at laſt, to unite their Efforts "to ſave the Nation, which ſtood on the very brink of Ruin." After all that were preſent, had declared their chearful Concurrence, let the Conſequences be what they would, his Grace propoſed, "That the Marquis of Annandale ſhould renew his "Motion for ſettling the Succeſſion of the Crown on the Houſe of Hanover; and, "as it was not to be doubted but the ſame would be rejected, That then a Prote- "ſtation ſhould be enter'd and adhered to by all that were againſt the Union, who, "immediately after, ſhould, in a Body, ſeparate from the other Members, and "leave the Houſe, never to return again. And that, in the next Place, the Natio- "nal Addreſſes, concerted when the Barons were to have attended the High Com- "miſſioner, ſhould be forthwith ſigned by as many Hands as poſſible, and diſ- "patch'd to the Queen: Urging, that of all Meaſures, this was the moſt likely to "prevail with the Engliſh to let the Union drop:" And then his Grace offer'd the Draught of the intended Proteſtation, which had been put into his Hands by the Marquis of Annandale, but was thought to have been drawn up by Sir James Stuart, the Queen's Advocate. The Perſons preſent, moſt of whom were profeſs'd Jacobites, having deſired a Day or Two to take the Propoſal into Conſideration, before they came to a final Reſolution, the Duke of Hamilton was, in the mean Time, at no ſmall Pains to convince them of the Reaſonableneſs of this Counſel. The greateſt Difficulty with ſome, was the mentioning their Concurrence to ſettle the Succeſſion on the Houſe of Hanover, which they ſaid was a kind of Obligation upon them, to have Recourſe to that Family, to protect them in oppoſing the Union; whereas their Deſign was to reſtore the Pretender to the Throne, which they thought the preſent Ferment among the People would much advance. To this the Duke of Hamilton return'd, "That this could draw no Olbigation upon them, to adhere to the In-" tereſt of the Houſe of Hanover, ſince they did not proteſt againſt the Motion's " being rejected; and even ſuppoſing it were otherwiſe, it was not the firſt Time " they had made greater Stretches, with a Deſign that Good might come of it, and " he hoped this would be the laſt: For, added he, this bold Proteſtation, back'd by the Separation, will not only confound the Engliſh, but likewiſe encourage our Countrymen, and engage them to ſupport us: And, for my Part, I am of Opinion, that if the Engliſh do not deſiſt from proſecuting the Union, we muſt have Recourſe to Arms, and call over the King; nor do I doubt but the Nation will concur with us to ſave themſelves from utter Ruin. By theſe Arguments and Conſiderations, all were brought over, and, at the next Meeting, declared their Approbation, promiſing to adhere to the Proteſtation, which, 'twas taken for granted, the Duke of Hamilton would preſent; only the Duke of Athol could, by no Reaſons, be prevail'd upon to adhere to the Proteſtation, by Reaſon of the Clauſe relating to the Houſe of Hanover, but he engaged to join with the reſt in leaving the Houſe, and concerting further Meaſures. All Things being thus adjuſted, and the next Day appointed for the Execution, great Numbers of Gentlemen, and eminent Citizens, flock'd that Morning about the Parliament-Houſe, to expect the Iſſue, and, in caſe of Need, aſſiſt the ſeparating Members: But all their Hopes were ſoon daſh'd, for the Duke of Hamilton pretending to be ſeized with a violent Toothach, refuſed to go to the Houſe. Some of his Friends having boldly expoſtulated with him about his fluctuating and ambiguous Conduct, which bore ſo near a Reſemblance to that of his Grandfather, in the Reign of King Charles the Firſt, he was, at laſt, prevail'd with to go to the Parliament-Houſe; but, notwithſtanding all the preſſing Inſtances his Friends made to engage him to preſent the intended Proteſtation, he ſtill refuſed to do it; and only promiſed to be the firſt Adherer. So much Time was ſpent in this private Conteſt among the Cavaliers, that the Opportunity was loſt, and, in a few Days, great Numbers of thoſe who had ſtrenuouſly ſtood againſt the Union, left the Houſe in Deſpair. So that when the XXIId Article came to be read *, and debated, it met with little or no Oppoſition. Only before approving the Firſt Paragraph, Mr George Lockhart of Carnwath, enter'd a Proteſt, with Relation to the Privileges of the Barons; as the Duke of Athol did another, relating to the ſeveral Branches of that Article; the Earl of Buchan, a Third, with Relation to the Rights of the Peers; Sir Walter Stuart of Pardovan, a Fourth in behalf of the Peers, Barons, and Burrows; the Earl of Errol a Fifth, with Relation to his Hereditary Office of High Conſtable; and the Earl of Mariſchal, a Sixth in Relation to his Hereditary Office of Earl Marſhal of Scotland. The Earl of Marchmont bitterly inveigh'd and proteſted againſt thoſe Proteſtations, as preſumptuous, illegal, unwarrantable, and ſeditious; after which, the Firſt Paragraph of the XXIId Article was approved, by a Majority of Forty Voices; and then the Second Paragragh, relating to the calling the Repreſentatives of Scotland to the Parliament of Great Britain, was alſo approved with ſome Amendments. The Earl of Stair, who had all along ſtickled for the Union, and who, though much indiſpos'd, was come that Day to the Parliament-Houſe, was taken ſo ill that very Night, that he died in few Hours, being generally lamented by all the Well-affected to the Revolution, and Proteſtant Succeſſion, for both which he ſhew'd a diſtinguiſh'd Zeal, on all Occaſions. He was ſucceeded in Honour and Eſtate by his Son, the Lord John Dalrimple.

Death of the Earl of Stair, Jan. 7.

On the 8th of January, it was in Parliament mov'd, That the Proteſts given in the former Sitting, by the Duke of Athol, Earl of Buchan, George Lockhart of Carnwath, and Walter Stuart, ſhould neither be inſerted in the Minutes, nor printed; and the Earl of Marchmont gave in a Proteſtation againſt thoſe Four Proteſts, took Inſtruments thereupon; and the Lord Chancellor, the Marquis of Montroſs, Preſident of the Council, the Duke of Argyle, the Marquiſſes of Tweedale and Lothian, and moſt of the well-affected to the Union, adher'd thereto. The next Day †, the Lord Balmerino, gave in a Proteſtation againſt that of the Earl of Marchmont, to which the Duke of Hamilton, and his Party adher'd; and after ſome Debate, it was agreed, that none of the ſaid Proteſts be inſerted at length, in the Minutes, or printed, but but that they be all recorded in the Books of Parliament. Then the Third Paragraph of the XXIId Article, being approved, the remaining Part of the ſaid Article was read, and after ſome Reaſoning, and reading of the Oaths to which it relates, an Overture was given in, for an additional Clauſe, for explaining the Word Limitation, mention'd in the Oath appointed to be taken by Stat. 13. Will. III. Cap. 6. as alſo an Overture for exempting Perſons in any Office or Employment in Scotland, from taking the Oath of Abjuration, mention'd in the ſaid Article. A Third Overture was alſo given in for a Clauſe, importing, That ſo long as the Act appointing the Sacramental Teſt ſhall continue in Force in England, all Perſons in publick Truſt, within the Limits of Scotland, ſhall ſwear, and ſign a Formula thereto ſubjoin'd, in Manner, and under the Penalty therein mention'd. After Reading the ſaid Three Overtures, and reaſoning thereon, a Vote was ſtated, Approve of the Twenty Second Article of Union as explained, or not? But before voting it was agreed, that notwithſtanding the ſaid Vote, and that the Article ſhould thereby be approved, it ſhould nevertheleſs be entire, and free afterwards, to proceed on the ſaid Overtures next Sitting, and to the Parliament to give their Sentiments thereon: And it being thereupon moved, to adjourn the Vote for approving the Article 'till next Sitting, a previous Vote was ſtated, Proceed, or Delay, and it was carried Proceed: Then the Vote being put, approve the Twenty Serond Article, as explained, or not, it was carried approve.

The Remainder of the XXIId Article approved.

On the 10th of January, the Overture for exempting Perſons in any Office or Employment in Scotland, from taking the Oath of Abjuration, mention'd in the Twenty Second Article of the Union, being read, and dropp'd, the Overture for an Additional Clauſe to the ſaid Twenty Second Article, for explaining the Word Limitation, mention'd in the Oath appointed to be taken by 13. W. III. Cap. 6. was again read, viz. Like as it is declared, that by the Word Limitation, in the Oath mention'd in the above Article, is only underſtood, Entail of the Succeſſion, and not the Conditions of Government upon the Succeſſor; and that all Perſons of Scotland, who may be liable to take the ſaid Oath, ſwear it in that Senſe only; but after ſome Debate, the Vote being put, for adding the ſaid Clauſe, it was carried in the Negative. Then the Third Overture for a Clauſe to be added to the ſaid Twenty Second Article, mention'd in the Minutes of the laſt Sitting, was again read in theſe Terms: And further, it is agreed, that ſo long as that Part of the Second Act, Anno 25. Ch. 20. appointing a Sacramental Teſt, ſhall ſtand, and continue in Force in England, all Perſons in publick Truſt, Civil or Military, within the Limits of Scotland, ſhall ſwear and ſign the Formula under-written, within Six Months after the Commencement of the Union: And all who ſhall be admitted to any publick Truſt thereafter, ſhall, before the exerciſing their ſaid Office of Truſt, Swear and Subſcribe the ſame, to be adminiſtred by the Lords of Privy-Council, or any one of them, under the like Penalties and Diſabilities, as are provided by the foreſaid Act, made in the Parliament of England. Here follows the Formula. I A. B. do ſincerely and ſolemnly declare, in the Preſence of God, That I own the Preſbyterian Government of the Church, as by Law eſtabliſh'd in Scotland, to be a lawful Government of the Church; and that I ſhall never, directly nor indirectly, endeavour the Subverſion thereof, nor any Alteration in the Worſhip, Diſcipline or Government of the ſaid Church, as by Law eſtabliſh'd; ſo help me God: But after ſome Debate, the ſaid Clauſe was rejected, by a Majority of Thirty Five Voices. Then the Twenty Third Article of Union was read; and the Debate adjourn'd 'till next Sitting, when * an Overture was given in, for adding a Clauſe thereto, in theſe Terms; With this expreſs Proviſion, That none of the Peers of Scotland, ſhall have Perſonal Protection within Scotland, for any Debt owing before the Commencement of the Union. As alſo another Overture, for adding a Clauſe, importing, That all the Peers of that Part of Great Britain, call'd Scotland, qualified according to Law, ſhould, after the Union, have Right to ſit covered in the Houſe of Peers of Great Britain, notwithſtanding that the Right to give Vote therein, belong only to the Sixteen Peers, who were to be ſummoned in the manner appointed by the preceding Article. After Reaſoning upon the ſaid Two Overtures, and upon Two ſeparate Motions, the Firſt in Relation to allowing all the Peers of Scotland, to ſit upon the Tryal of the Peers of Britain; and the other, in Relation to their Precedency according to their Patents: The Vote was ſtated in theſe Terms, Approve the Twenty Third Article of Union, or alter, reſerving entire the Conſideration of the above Two Overtures, and whether the ſame ſhall be added to the Article, and it was carried approve. Then the firſt Overture for the Clauſe in Relation to Perſonal Protection, and the Second Clauſe, in Relation to all the Peers of Scotland, ſitting covered in the Houſe of Peers of Great Britain, were debated, and both ſeverally rejected.

* Jan. 13.

The next † Day, the Twenty fourth Article was read; whereupon a Memorial was given for Lyon King at Arms, in relation to his Precedency; which being read, and debated, it was at laſt agreed, that his Rank ſhould be left to her Majeſty.

† Jan. 14.

A. D. 1705.

There was another Clauſe offer'd to be added to the Twenty fourth Article; viz. "And that the Crown, Scepter, and Sword of State, Records of Parliament, and "all other Records, Rolls and Regiſters whatſoever, both publick and private, ge- "neral and particular, and Warrants thereof, continue to be kept, as they are, in "that Part of the United Kingdom, now call'd Scotland; and that they ſhall ſo "remain in all Times coming, notwithſtanding the Union." Which being read, the ſame was agreed to be added, and was accordingly ſubjoin'd, and the Article (as amended) read over, and approved: As was alſo the Twenty fifth Article, without any Oppoſition.

The XXIVth and XXVth Articles approved.

On the 15th of January, the Draught of an Act, ratifying and approving the Treaty of Union of the Two Kingdoms of Scotland and England, was given in, and offer'd to be read: Whereupon it was mov'd, That the Parliament ſhould firſt proceed to the Conſtitution of the Manner of Electing the Repreſentatives for Scotland to the Parliament of Great Britain; and either now determine that Matter, or appoint a Day for that End. After Debate, the Vote was ſtated, "Proceed to the Ratifi- "cation of the Treaty of Union, and Act for Security of the Proteſtant Religion, "and Preſbyterian Church Government, or to the Conſtitution of the manner of "electing the Repreſentatives for Scotland:" But before Voting, it was agreed, that in Caſe it ſhould be carried to proceed to the Ratification, the Parliament would, immediately after paſſing the Act of Ratification, proceed to the Conſtitution of the manner of electing the Repreſentatives for Scotland. Then the Vote being put, it was carried to proceed to the Ratification: After which, the Draught of the Act, Ratifying, approving, and, at length, narrating the Articles of Union, as enlarged, explained and amended, and the Act of Security of the Proteſtant Religion, and Preſbyterian Church Government, was read; and after ſome Diſcourſe, a Firſt Reading mark'd thereon. The next Day *, the ſaid Act was read a Second Teme, and then the Act for Security of the Proteſtant Religion, and Preſbyterian Church Government, inſerted in, and ratify'd by that Act, was touch'd with the Royal Scepter by the Lord High Commiſſioner. Immediately after this, there was laid before the Houſe, a Repreſentation and Petition of the Church of Scotland, importing, That being inform'd that the Parliament were paſſing an Act of Ratification of the Articles of the Treaty of Union, declaring, That the Parliament of England might provide for the Secutity of the Church of England, as they ſhould think expedient, to take Place with the ſaid Kingdom of England, and not derogating from the Security provided for the Church of Scotland: Which Clauſe ſeem'd to them, not only to be like a Blank, put in the Hands of the Parliament of England, to exact what they ſhould think fit, for ſecuring the Hierarchy and Ceremonies of their Church; but alſo a Conſent that it be an Article and Fundamental of the Union: They therefore beſought the High Commiſſioner, and the Eſtates of Parliament, That there be no ſuch Stipulation, or Conſent, for the Eſtabliſhment of that Hierarchy, and Ceremonies, as they would not involve themſelves, and the Scotch Nation, in Guilt, and as they conſulted the Peace and Quiet of that Nation, both in Church and State. An Act for the Security of the Preſbyterian Church Government in Scotland, having already been paſs'd, this Repreſentation was, by all ſober Men, look'd upon as frivolous and impertinent: And therefore, after the Duke of Argyle had given in a Proteſtation for his Privilege of the Firſt Vote in Parliament, which was oppoſed by a Counter-Proteſt from the Duke of Hamilton, the Act for ratifying and approving the Treaty of Union, &c. was approved by a Majority of One Hundred and Ten Voices, and touch'd with the Royal Scepter.

* Jan. 16. Act for Security of the Presbyterian Church Government, paſs'd.

The Act of Ratification paſs'd Jan. 16.

The next Buſineſs the Parliament went upon, was the preparing An Act for ſettling the Manner of electing the Sixteen Peers, and Forty Five Commoners, to repreſent Scotland in the Parliament of Great Britain, which was debated in the Sittings of the 20th, 21ſt, 24th, 27th, 28th, 29th, and 31ſt of January. The 22d the Queſtion was put, whether the Sixteen Peers, who were to be Repreſentatives for Scotland, in the Parliament of Great Britain, ſhould be ſent by Rotation, or Election? And it was carried by Election: And then upon the Queſtion, Whether the Election ſhould be by Balloting, or by open Election? It was carried for the latter. The 24th it was debated, what Proportions the Shires and Boroughs ſhould have, of the Forty Five Members that were to ſit in the Houſe of Commons of Great Britain: And it was agreed, that Thirty ſhould be the Number for the Shires, and Fifteen the Number for the Boroughs. The 29th it was reſolv'd, that the Burgh of Edinburgh, by it ſelf, ſhould have one Repreſentative; and then a Scheme, dividing the Burghs into Fifteen Diſtricts, one of which was to have one Repreſentative, was given in, read, and approved.

On the 31ſt of January, the Parliament proceeded to conſider the Motion for allowing the Commiſſioners for the Treaty of Union their Expences; and thereupon a Reſolve was brought in, for allowing each Nobleman Twelve Thouſand Scotch, and each each other Commiſſioner Six Thouſand Pounds; their Secretary, Four Thouſand Eight Hundred Pounds; and to each of the Three Accomptants, Two Thouſand Four Hundred Pounds Scotch, out of the Equivalent, pari Paſſu with Publick Debts, after the African Company: Which, after ſome Debate, was approved. Then it was moved, and agreed, That the Commiſſioners for the Treaty in 1702, ſhould likewiſe be allow'd their Expences; viz. each Nobleman, Five Hundred Pounds; each Baron, Three Hundred Pounds; and each Borough, Two Hundred Pounds Sterling: Which Sums were declar'd to be a Publick Debt, and referr'd to the Committee to ſtate the ſame as ſuch. After this it was mov'd, That no Repreſentative to the Parliament of Great Britain, either for Shire or Borough, ſhould have any Allowance for their Charges in attending the ſame: But the ſame being adjourn'd to the next * Sitting, it was then reſolv'd, That nothing in relation to the Expences of the Repreſentatives of Shires and Boroughs, ſhould be inſerted in the Act for Settling the Manner of Electing the Sixteen Peers, and Forty five Commoners. Then it was mov'd, "That at all Meetings of the Peers, for Electing their Repreſentatives, ſuch Peers "as were abſent, be allow'd to vote by Proxy; the ſaid Proxies being Peers, "and they and their Conſtituents being qualify'd, by taking the Oaths requir'd "by Law: And that the ſaid abſent Peers might either Vote by their Proxies, or by "ſending up a Liſt ſubſcrib'd by them:" And after Reaſoning thereon, the Vote was put, Allow Proxies in the aforeſaid Terms, yea, or no? And it was carry'd, Allow. Afterwards it was agreed, That the Meeting of the Peers for the ſaid Elections, ſhould be at any Place her Majeſty ſhould appoint within the Kingdom of Scotland; As alſo, That in caſe of the Deceaſe, or Promotion, of any of the Forty five Commoners, to be choſen by this Seſſion of Parliament to the Parliament of Great Britain, the Diſtrict for which he was a Member, upon a Writ directed to them for that Effect, ſhould chuſe another in his Place: And agreed likewiſe, That in caſe of the Deceaſe of any of the Sixteen Peers, the Peers ſhould meet and elect another in the Room of the deceas'd, upon a Writ directed to them for that Purpoſe. Then it was mov'd, That ſuch Peers of Scotland, who were alſo Peers of England, who, after the Union, ſhould be created Peers of Great Britain, have no Vote in the Election of the Sixteen Peers from Scotland to the Parliament of Great Britain: And after ſome Debate, it was agreed, That nothing in relation to the ſaid Motion, ſhould be inſerted in the ſaid Act. It was alſo agreed, That when the Commiſſioners for Burrows, who ſhould meet for Electing their Repreſentatives, ſhould happen to be equal, the Preſident of the Meeting ſhould have the caſting Vote; and that the Commiſſioner for the eldeſt Burrow ſhould preſide at the firſt Meeting, and the Commiſſioners for the other Burrows by Turns, as the Burrows were then call'd in the Rolls of Parliament. The next † Day, the Draught of an Act for ſettling the Manner of Elections was read, and a firſt Reading allow'd to be mark'd thereon; and being read a Second Time on the 5th of February, it was approv'd and confirm'd by the Touch of the Royal Scepter, in the uſual manner. The ſame Day, a Proclamation concerning the Coin was brought in from the Committee, read, voted, and approved. The 10th and 12th of February were ſpent in private Buſineſs, and the next Day, the Houſe proceeded to elect the Repreſentatives for Scotland, in the firſt Parliament of Great Britain; and the Three Eſtates having retired to their uſual Places, they return'd, and reported their reſpective Elections, as follows:

Acts paſs'd, March 25.

The Remainder of the Seſſion was ſpent in ſeveral important Affairs, both private and publick, particularly in examining the Accounts of the African and Indian Company, and providing for the due Application of the Equivalent. On the 25th of March, the High-Commiſſioner went to the Parliament-Houſe in great Solemnity, being attended by the whole Troop of Life-Guards, and all the Nobility and Gentry in their Coaches; and touch'd with the Scepter the following Acts: Viz. 1. An Act in Favour of the Incorporations of Edinburgh, for a Maiden Hoſpital. 2. Act in Favour of the Town of Dundee. 3. Another in Favour of the Town of Aberdeen. 4. Act in Favour of the Duke of Hamilton, and the Town of Burrowſtouneſs. 5. Act in Favour of the Burgh of Kirkaldie. 6. Act renouncing the Reverſion of Kirk-Lands. 7. Act in Favour of the Burgh of Kinghorn. 8. Act for clearing the Paſſage through the Mary-Wind, in the Burgh of Sterlin. 9. Act in Favour of the Earl of Linlithgow, and Kalendar. 10. Act in Favour of the Lady Littlegil, and her Son. 11. Act of Naturalization of John Henry Huguetan. 12. Act for Naturalizing ſeveral Foreigners. 13. Act for preſerving the Game. 14. Act in Favour of the Earl of Buchan. 15. Act of Diſſolution of the Mines and Minerals, belonging to the Duke of Queenſberry. 16. Act for Burying in Wool. 17. Act in Favour of the Maiden Hoſpital, founded by the Company of Merchants, and Mary Ereſkine. 18. Act concerning the Payment of the Sums out of the Equivalent to the African Company; and, 19. An Act concerning the Publick Debts. Then the Act Salvo Jure cujuſlibet was read, approv'd, and touch'd with the Scepter: Which done, the High-Commiſſioner made the following Speech to the Parliament:

My LORDS and GENTLEMEN,

The Duke of Queensberry's Speech.

THE Publick Buſineſs of this Seſſion being now over, it's full Time to put an End to it. I am perſwaded, that We and our Poſterity will reap the Benefit of the UNION of the TWO KINGDOMS; and I doubt not, but as this Parliament has had the Honour to conclude it, you will, in your ſeveral Stations, recommend to the People of this Nation, a grateful Senſe of her Majeſty's Goodneſs, and great Care for the Welfare of her Subjects, in bringing this Important Affair to Perfection; and that you will promote an univerſal Deſire in this Kingdom, to become one in Heart and Affections, as we are inſeparably join'd in Intereſt with our Neighbour Nation.

My LORDS and GENTLEMEN,

I have a very deep Senſe of the Aſſiſtance and Reſpect I have met with from you, in this Seſſion of Parliament; and I ſhall omit no Occaſion of ſhewing, to the utmoſt of my Power, the grateful Remembrance I have of it.

The Parliament adjourn'd.

The Parliament being adjourn'd to the 22d of April next, his Grace return'd to the Queen's Palace, in the ſame Solemnity as he went to the Houſe, and gave a ſplendid Entertainment to the Nobility and Gentry. The Day before, the Draught of a Letter from the Parliament to her Majeſty, was brought in, voted and approved; proved; and the Duke of Queenſberry having thus happily concluded this Seſſion, and ſurmounted all the Difficulties he met in his Way, his Grace ſet out, a few Days after, for London, where he arrived the 16th of April, being met ſeveral Miles out of Town, by many Noblemen and Gentlemen in their Coaches, to the Number of above Forty; and by near Four Hundred Perſons on Horſeback. The next Morning his Grace waited upon the Queen at Kenſington, where he found that gracious Reception, which his great Services had deſerv'd. We may here obſerve, That the numerous Addreſſes preſented to the Scotch Parliament, made no ſmall Noiſe in England; being maliciouſly urg'd by the Diſaffected, as an Argument that the Scotch were generally averſe to an Union, and induſtriouſly improved to create the like Averſion in the Minds of the Engliſh Nation; but yet it is remarkable, That of Thirty Four Shires of Scotland, only Thirteen addreſſed; and of all theſe, the better and more ſubſtantial Part of the Gentlemen, refus'd to join with the reſt; that of Sixty Six Burrows, only Seventeen ſent up Addreſſes, and moſt of theſe not abſolutely againſt the Union, but only for Rectification of the Articles: That of Sixty Eight Preſbyteries, Three only, viz. Thoſe of Hamilton, Lanerk, and Dumblain; and of Nine Hundred Thirty Eight Kirks, and Pariſhes, only Sixty addreſs'd againſt an Union, by the viſible Influence of the great Men that thwarted it in the Senate-Houſe. It muſt, at the ſame Time, be acknowledg'd, that, whether the Advantages that were like to accrue to the Engliſh Nation from the Union, were more real and apparent, or their Deference to the Wiſdom of the Government greater, that Affair met not with ſo warm an Oppoſition in London, as it had found in Edinburgh.

A. D. 1706.

The Duke of Queensberry returns to London.

It was the general Opinion, and perhaps the firſt Reſolution of the Court, that the Parliament of England ſhould not ſit, 'till that of Scotland had finiſh'd the Affair of the Union; but the ſame drawing into Length, and her Majeſty's Occaſions not admitting of Delays, the Parliament of England, which, on the 21ſt of November, had been further prorogued to the 3d of December, met that Day at Weſtminſter; and the Queen being come to the Houſe of Peers, with the uſual Solemnity, and the Commons ſent for up, her Majeſty ſpoke to both Houſes in this Manner:

The Parliament of England meets, Dec. 3.

My LORDS and GENTLEMEN,

The Queen's Speech to both Houſes.

" I Hope we are all met together at this Time, with Hearts truly thankful to Al-
" mighty GOD, for the glorious Succeſſes with which he has bleſs'd our " Arms, and thoſe of our Allies, through the whole Courſe of this Year; and with " ſerious and ſteddy Reſolutions, to proſecute the Advantages we have gain'd, 'till
" we reap the deſired Fruit of them, in an honourable and durable Peace.

" The Goodneſs of GOD has brought this happy Proſpect ſo much nearer to us,
" that, if we be not wanting to our ſelves, we may, upon good Grounds, hope to " ſee ſuch a Balance of Power eſtabliſh'd in Europe, that it ſhall no longer be at " the Pleaſure of one Prince, to diſturb the Repoſe, and endanger the Liberties of " this Part of the World.

" A juſt Conſideration of the preſent Poſture of Affairs, of the Circumſtances of " our Enemies, and the good Diſpoſition of our Allies, muſt needs excite an un-
" common Zeal, and animate us to exert our utmoſt Endeavours, at this critical " Conjuncture.

Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons,

" As I am fully perſuaded you are all of this Mind, ſo I muſt earneſtly deſire
" you to grant me Supplies ſufficient for carrying on the War next Year, in ſo effe" ctual a Manner, that we may be able to improve every where, the Advantages " of this ſucceſsful Campaign; and I aſſure you, I ſhall make it my Buſineſs to " ſee all you give, apply'd to thoſe Ends with the greateſt Care and Manage" ment.

My LORDS and GENTLEMEN,

" In Purſuance of the Powers veſted in me by Act of Parliament, both in " England and Scotland, I appointed Commiſſioners to treat of an Union between the " Two Kingdoms; and, though this be a Work of ſuch a Nature, as could not " but be attended with great Difficulties, yet ſuch has been the Application of the " Commiſſioners, that they have concluded a Treaty, which is, at this Time, be-

" Your Meeting at this Time being later than uſual, I cannot conclude without " earneſtly recommending to you, to give as much Diſpatch to the Publick Affairs, " as the Nature of them will admit; it being of the greateſt Conſequence, that both " our Friends and our Enemies ſhould be fully convinc'd of your Firmneſs, and the " Vigor of your Proceedings.

This excellent Speech was receiv'd with uncommon Applauſe, both within and without Doors; and Two Days * after, the Two Houſes, each in a Body, attended the Queen with their congratulatory Addreſſes. The Lords, in particular, took Notice of the univerſal Joy and Satisfaction, upon the publick Declaration which her Majeſty, in Concert with the States-General, made to the Miniſters of the other Confederate Princes, that no Negociations of Peace ſhould be entred into, but in Conjunction with all the Members of the Grand Alliance: Which generous Method, would prevent the indirect and dangerous Practices of the Common Enemy; put a ſtop to clandeſtine and corrupt Tranſactions, and muſt not only remove all preſent Jealouſies from the Allies, but create in them a laſting Confidence and Reliance on her Majeſty's Honour and Juſtice. This was intended to keep the Queen ſteddy to the Meaſures that had been ſuggeſted to her by the Duke of Marlborough, and the Lord Treaſurer; upon a well-grounded Surmiſe, that Mr. Secretary Harley, who, by this Time, had ſcrew'd himſelf very deep into her Majeſty's Confidence, endeavour'd to infuſe pacifick Counſels; which were more agreeable to the Queen's Temper, and more conſiſtent with his own ambitious Deſigns. The Commons, on their Part, paſs'd alſo a Compliment on the Miniſtry, in telling the Queen, That the Experience they had had of the prudent Adminiſtration, and the great Care and Management in the Application of the publick Aids, encouraged them to aſſure her, that they would chearfully give ſuch ſpeedy and effectual Supplies, as, by the continuance of GOD's Bleſſing upon her Arms, might eſtabliſh the Balance of Power in Europe, by a ſafe, honourable, and laſting Peace. To both theſe Addreſſes, the Queen return'd very gracious Anſwers: And the Duke of Marlborough being the ſame Day come to the Houſe of Peers, the Lord Keeper, by Direction from their Lordſhips, made the following Speech to his Grace:

* Dec. 5. Congratulatory Addreſſes preſented.

My Lord Duke of Marlborough,

The Lord Keeper's Speech to the Duke of Marlborough, Dec. 5.

" I Am commanded by this Houſe, to give your Grace their Acknowledgment " and Thanks, for the eminent Services you have done ſince the laſt Seſſion " of Parliament, to her Majeſty, and your Country, together with their Confede- " rates, in this juſt and neceſſary War. Though your former Succeſſes againſt the " Power of France, while it remain'd unbroken, gave moſt reaſonable Expectation, " that you would not fail to improve them; yet what your Grace hath perform'd " this laſt Campaign, has far exceeded all Hopes, even of ſuch as were moſt affe- " ctionate, and partial to their Country's Intereſt, and your Glory. The Advan- " tages you have gain'd againſt the Enemy, are of ſuch a Nature, ſo conſpi- " cuous in themſelves, ſo undoubtedly owing to your Courage and Conduct, ſo " ſenſibly and univerſally beneficial in their Conſequences to the whole Confede- " racy, that to attempt to adorn them with the colouring of Words, would be vain, " and inexcuſable, and therefore I decline it; the rather, becauſe I ſhould certainly " offend that great Modeſty, which alone can, and does add Luſtre to your Actions, " and which, in your Grace's Example, has ſucceſsfully withſtood as great Tryals, " as that Virtue has met with in any Inſtance whatſoever: And I beg Leave to " ſay, that if any Thing could move your Grace to reflect with much Satisfaction " on your own Merit, it would be this, that ſo Auguſt an Aſſembly does, with one " Voice, praiſe and thank you: An Honour which a Judgment, ſo ſure, as that of " your Grace's, to think rightly of every Thing, cannot but prefer to the Oſtenta- " tion of a publick Triumph.

His Grace's Anſwer.

His Grace's Anſwer to this Speech was; I eſteem this as a very particular Honour, which your Lordſhips are pleased to do me; no body in the World can be more ſenſible of it than I am, nor more deſirous to deſerve the Continuance of your Favour, and good Opinion.

And to the Thanks of the Commons, † Dec. 4.

The Day before †, a Committee appointed by the Commons, having attended the Duke with the Thanks of that Houſe, for his eminent Services to her Majeſty, and this Kingdom, in the laſt Campaign: His Grace told them, That if any Thing could add to his Satisfaction, in the Services he had endeavour'd to do to the Queen, and his Country, it would be the particular Notice which the Houſe of Commons was pleaſed to take of them, ſo much to his Advantage. Not many Days after, the Lords waited ‖ on the the Queen with an Addreſs, importing, " That having conſider'd the many great " Actions which the Duke of Marlborough had perform'd in her Majeſty's Service, " (ſuch Actions, as the wiſeſt, and greateſt of People, had rewarded with Statues " and Triumphs) they were extreamly deſirous to expreſs the juſt Senſe they had " of his Merit, in a peculiar and diſtinguiſhing Manner, and in order to perpetuate " the Memory thereof, to ſettle and continue his Titles and Honours, with his " Right of Precedence in his Poſterity, by Act of Parliament: But having a juſt " Regard for the Prerogative of the Crown, they thought it their Duty, in the " Firſt Place, to have Recourſe to her Majeſty for her Royal Allowance, before " any Order given for bringing in a Bill of ſuch a Nature; and to deſire her " Majeſty to let the Houſe know in what Manner it would be moſt acceptable to " her, that theſe Titles and Honours ſhould be limited." Her Majeſty's Anſwer to this Addreſs, was as follows:

A. D. 1706.

Addreſs of the Lords, in Favour of the Duke of Marlborough.

ANNE R.

" NOthing can be more acceptable to me than your Addreſs. I am entirely ſa- " tiſfied with the Services of the Duke of Marlborough, and therefore can- " not but be pleaſed you have ſo juſt a Senſe of them.

" I muſt not omit to take Notice, that the reſpectful manner of your Proceeding, " in deſiring my Allowance for bringing in the Bill, and my Direction for the Li- " mitation of the Honours, does give me great Satisfaction.

" My Intention is, That after the Determination of the Eſtate, which the Duke " of Marlborough now has in his Titles and Honours, the ſame ſhould be limited to " his eldeſt Daughter, and the Heirs Male of her Body, and then to all his other " Daughters, ſucceſſively, according to their Priority of Birth, and the Heirs Male " of their reſpective Bodies, and afterwards in ſuch Manner, as may effectually an- " ſwer my Deſign, and yours, in perpetuating the Memory of his Merit, by conti- " nuing, as far as may be done, his Titles and Name to all his Poſterity.

" I think it would be proper, That the Honour and Manor of Woodſtock, and the " Houſe of Bleinheim, ſhould always go along with the Titles, and therefore I re- " commend that Matter to your Conſideration.

The Queen's Anſwer.

Then the Duke of Marlborough, on this Occaſion, ſpoke to the Lords in theſe Words:

My LORDS,

" I Cannot find Words ſufficient to expreſs the Senſe I have of the great and di- " ſtinguiſhing Honour which the Houſe has been pleaſed to do me, in their " Reſolution, and their Application to her Majeſty. The Thoughts of it will be " a continual Satisfaction to me, and the higheſt Encouragement; and the thankful " Memory of it, muſt laſt as long as any Poſterity of mine.

" I beg Leave to ſay a Word to the Houſe, in Relation to that Part of her Ma- " jeſty's moſt Gracious Anſwer, which concerns the Eſtate of Woodſtock, and the " Houſe of Bleinheim: I did make my humble Requeſt to the Queen, that thoſe " might go along with the Titles; and I make the like Requeſt to your Lordſhips, " That after the Dutcheſs of Marlborough's Death, (upon whom they are ſettled in " Jointure) that Eſtate, and Houſe, may be limited to go always along with the " Honours.

The Duke of Marlborough's Speech on that Occaſion.

The Lords readily comply'd with the Queen's and the Duke's Deſires, and the Bill, which their Lordſhips brought in for that Purpoſe, had a quick Paſſage through both Houſes, who ſeem'd now to vye with each other in their Obſequiouſneſs to the ſucceſsful General. We may here take Notice, That the Proſperities of the Queen's Arms Abroad had ſtill this good Effect at Home, that the unhappy Differences which for many Years had divided the Convocation of the Clergy of the Province of Canterbury, were, if not entirely reconciled, at leaſt huſh'd and ſuſpended on this Occaſion; both Houſes having concurr'd in a congratulatory Addreſs, which on the 7th of December was preſented to the Queen. On the other Hand, the Commons proceeded on the Supply, with all imaginable Chearfulneſs and Diſpatch; and having voted * the neceſſary Sums for the Fleet and Army, granted † an Aid of Four Shillings in the Pound, upon all Lands, and continued the Duties on Malt; for which Purpoſe, Two different Bills were brought in, perfected in few Days, and paſs'd on the 21ſt of December. Upon preſenting thoſe Acts, the Speaker of the Commons made a Speech to her Majeſty, importing, " That as the glorious Victory

Both Houſes adjourn.

Her Majeſty, at the Requeſt of the City of London, having order'd, That the Standards and Colours taken at the Battel of Ramellies, and which were lately brought from the Netherlands, ſhould be put up in Guild-Hall, as Trophies of that Victory; a Detachment of the Horſe Guards, and Horſe Grenadiers, and a Battalion of the Foot Guards, were drawn up upon the Parade in St. James's Park, on the 19th of December, and having receiv'd the ſaid Colours and Standards, which had been laid up at Whitehall, they proceeded in the following Manner: Firſt, The Troop of Horſe Grenadiers, then the Detachment of the Three Troops of the Horſe Guards, Twenty Six of the Gentlemen in the Center, carrying each a Standard taken from the Enemy. The Battalion of Foot Guards cloſed the March, Sixty Three of the Pikemen, carrrying each one of the Enemy's Colours, inſtead of their Pikes. In this Manner they march'd through the Park, and St. James's Mews, where her Majeſty was pleaſed to ſee them paſs by, from the Lady Fitzharding's Lodgings, the Guns in the Park being fir'd at the ſame Time; and ſo they proceeded down the Pall-Mall, the Strand, &c. to Guild-Hall. The Duke of Marlborough having been invited by the Lord-Mayor, and Court of Aldermen, to dine with them in the City, his Grace went thither the ſame Day, about Noon, accompanied by the Lord High-Treaſurer, and the Dukes of Somerſet and Ormond, in one of her Majeſty's Coaches, and was follow'd by a Train of other Coaches, in which were ſeveral of the Nobility, the Foreign Miniſters, and other Perſons of Quality, with the Generals, and other chief Officers of the Army. They were receiv'd at Temple-Bar by the City Marſhal, and were conducted to Vintner's-Hall, where a ſplendid Entertainment was provided for them; and they were attended, both going and coming, with great Acclamations from the People.

Towards the middle of December, the Queen was pleas'd to create Henry Earl of Kent, Lord Chamberlain of her Houſhold, Viſcount Goderich, in the County of Hereford, Earl of Harrold, in the County of Bedford, and Marquis of Kent. Not many Days after, her Majeſty was alſo pleaſed to create Robert Earl of Lindſey, Lord Great Chamberlain of England, Marquis of Lindſey, in the County of Lincoln; Evelin Earl of Kingſton, Marquis of Dorcheſter, in the County of Dorſet; Thomas Lord Wharton, Viſcount Winchindon, in the County of Bucks, and Earl of Wharton, in the County of Weſtmoreland; John Lord Poulet, of Hinton St. George, in the County of Somerſet, and Earl Poulet; Sidney Lord Godolphin, Lord High-Treaſurer of England, Viſcount Rialton, and Earl of Godolphin, in the County of Cornwall; Hugh Lord Cholmondely, Viſcount Malpas, and Earl of Cholmondely, in the County of Cheſter; Henry Lord Walden, Son and Heir Apparent of Henry Earl of Suffolk, Baron of Cheſterford, in the County of Eſſex, and Earl of Bindon, in the County of Dorſet; the Lord Keeper, a Peer of this Kingdom, by the Name and Title of William Lord Cowper, Baron of Wingham, in the County of Kent; and Sir Thomas Pelham, Baronet, likewiſe Peer, by the Name and Title of Lord Pelham, Baron of Laughton, in the County of Suſſex. The Queen having, by Proclamation, appointed a general Thankſgiving to be obſerv'd, on the laſt Day of December, for the wonderful Succeſſes of her Majeſty's Arms, and thoſe of her Allies, the laſt Campaign, her Majeſty went to the Cathedral Church of St. Paul's, attended by both Houſes of Parliament, the Great Officers of State, the Judges, and other publick Officers, with the ſame Solemnity, and Ceremonies, as were uſed before, after the Victory gain'd at Ramellies: So that her Majeſty gave her Subjects the joyful Spectacle of Two Triumphs in One Year. The Biſhop of Saliſbury preach'd a Sermon before her Majeſty, wherein, to curry Favour with the Men in Power, he pathetically enforc'd the Neceſſity of carrying on the War againſt France with all poſſible Vigor. The ſame Day, both Houſes of Parliament adjourn'd themſelves to the 7th of January next.

The Commons, being then met again, order'd the Thanks of their Houſe to the Biſhop of Sarum, for the Excellent Sermon by him preach'd before her Majeſty, and both Houſes of Parliament, on the laſt Thankſgiving-Day : And having taken into their Conſideration the Eminent Services of John Duke of Marlborough, whereby the Glory of her Majeſty's Government, the Honour and Safety of the Kingdom, and the Intereſt of the Common Cauſe had been ſo highly advanced, they agreed upon an Addreſs to the Queen ; wherein they humbly deſir'd, That as her Majeſty was, at her Expence, graciouſly pleaſed to erect the Houſe of Bleinheim, as a Monument of his glorious Actions ; and the Houſe of Peers, by her Majeſty's Permiſſion, had given Riſe to a Law for continuing his Honours to his Poſterity ; the moſt obedient Commons might be permitted to expreſs their Senſe of ſo diſtinguiſhing a Merit, and their ready Diſpoſition to enable her Majeſty to make ſome Proviſion for the more honourable Support of his Dignity in his Poſterity, in ſuch manner as ſhould be moſt agreeable to her Majeſty : Concluding, That thus the Gratitude of the whole Kingdom would remain upon Record to After-Ages, and encourage others to follow his great Example. This Addreſs being, the next Day, preſented to the Queen by the whole Houſe ; her Majeſty was pleas'd to tell the Commons, She was very glad they had ſo juſt a Senſe of the repeated Services of the Duke of Marlborough ; and would conſider of their Addreſs, and return an Anſwer very ſpeedily. Accordingly, on the 9th of January, Mr. Secretary Harley deliver'd to the Houſe a Meſſage, ſign'd by her Majeſty, importing, That her Majeſty, in Conſideration of the Great and Eminent Services perform'd by the Lord Marlborough, in the firſt Year of her Reign, as well by his prudent Negotiations as her Plenipotentiary at the Hague, as by his Valour and good Conduct in the Command of the Confederate Armies abroad, thought fit to grant to him, and the Heirs Male of his Body, the Title of a Duke of this Realm ; and, as a further Mark of her Favour and Satisfaction with his Services, and for the better Support of his Dignity, her Majeſty granted to the ſaid Duke, and the Heirs Male of his Body during his Life, a Penſion of Five Thouſand Pounds per Annum, out of the Revenue of the Poſt-Office : And an Act having paſs'd this Seſſion, for ſetling the Honours and Dignities of the Duke of Marlborough upon his Poſterity, and annexing the Honour and Manor of Woodſtock, and Houſe of Bleinheim, to go along with the ſaid Honours ; it would be very agreeable to her Majeſty, if the Penſion of Five Thouſand Pounds per Annum were continued and limited by Act of Parliament to his Poſterity, for the more honourable Support of their Dignities, in like manner as his Honours, and the Honour and Manor of Woodſtock, and Houſe of Bleinheim, were already limited and ſettled. The Commons very readily comply'd with this Meſſage ; and having order'd a Bill to be brought in for that Purpoſe, chearfully voted * ſome other Branches of the Supply.

The Commons order Thanks to the Biſhop of Sarum.

Hitherto every Thing had gone ſmooth and eaſy in both Houſes of Parliament : But on Friday, the 10th of January, the Earl of Nottingham acquainted the Houſe of Peers, That he had ſomething of great Conſequence to lay before them ; and therefore deſir'd, that they would name a Day to receive it, in a full Houſe. The Lords having appointed the Tueſday following, and order'd their Members in and about London to attend ; the Earl of Nottingham, in a ſet Speech, repreſented to them, " That the Union of the Two Kingdoms of England and Scotland, was a " Matter of the higheſt Importance, and a Work of ſo much Difficulty, that all " the Attempts that had been made towards it, in the laſt Century, had proved in- " effectual : That the Parliament of Scotland having thought fit to ſecure the Preſ- " byterian Church-Government in that Kingdom, it became the Wiſdom of the " Parliament of England, to provide betimes againſt the Dangers, with which " the Church by Law eſtabliſh'd was threaten'd, in caſe the Union was accom- " pliſh'd : And therefore he moved, That an Addreſs be preſented to the Queen, " humbly to deſire her Majeſty, that the Proceedings, both of the Commiſſioners " for the Treaty of Union, and of the Parliament of Scotland, relating to that Mat- " ter, be laid before them." He was ſeconded by the Earl of Rocheſter ; who declar'd, He was for an Union, and had been ſo for Twenty Years paſt ; but that he had a few Doubts in the Matter, and therefore was for entring upon the Debate of that important Affair as ſoon as poſſible. The Duke of Buckingham ſpoke to the ſame Purpoſe ; adding, " That the Union of both Kingdoms had been upon the Anvil ſince " the Acceſſion of King James I. to the Engliſh Throne ; and, as it could not be ex- " pected that ſo weighty a Matter, which took up ſo much Time and Labour be- " fore, ſhould now be compleated in a few Days, therefore he was for taking it " forthwith into Conſideration." The Earl of Godolphin, Lord High-Treaſurer, anſwer'd, That this Affair was not yet ripe for them to debate ; and that they need not doubt, but that her Majeſty would communicate to the Parliament of England, all the Proceedings relating to the Union, as ſoon as that of Scotland ſhould have gone through with it. The Lords Wharton, Somers, and Halifax, ſpoke on the ſame ſide ; and urg'd,

My LORDS and GENTLEMEN,

The Queen's Speech to both Houſes.

HAving acquainted you at the Opening of this Seſſion, that the Treaty for an UNION between England and Scotland, which had been concluded here by the Commiſſioners appointed for that Purpoſe, in Purſuance of the Powers given by the Parliaments of both Kingdoms, was then under Conſideration of the Parliament of Scotland; I can now, with great Satisfaction, inform you, that the ſaid Treaty has been ratify'd by Act of Parliament in Scotland, with ſome Additions and Alterations.

I have directed the Treaty, agreed to by the Commiſſioners of both Kingdoms, and alſo the Act of Ratification from Scotland, to be laid before you; and I hope it will meet with your Concurrence and Approbation.

Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons,

It being agreed by this Treaty, that Scotland is to have an Equivalent, for what that Kingdom is obliged to contribute towards paying the Debts of England; I muſt recommend to you, that in caſe you agree to the Treaty, you would take care to provide for the Payment of the Equivalent to Scotland accordingly.

My LORDS and GENTLEMEN,

You have now an Opportunity before you, of putting the laſt Hand to a Happy UNION of the Two Kingdoms; which, I hope, will be a laſting Bleſſing to the whole Iſland, a great Addition to its Wealth and Power, and a firm Security to the Proteſtant Religion.

The Advantages which will accrue to us all, from an UNION, are ſo apparent, that I will add no more, but that I ſhall look upon it as a particular Happineſs, if this great Work, which has been ſo often attempted without Succeſs, can be brought to Perfection in my Reign.

The Commons return the Queen Thanks for her Speech.

The Commons being return'd to their Houſe; the Lord Coningſby, by the Queen's Command, preſented to the Houſe the Articles of UNION, agreed upon by the Commiſſioners, the Act of Parliament in Scotland for the Ratification of them, and a Copy of the Minute-Book of the Proceedings of the ſaid Commiſſioners; which were order'd to be printed. Then a Motion being made by the Tory Party, and the Queſtion put, That an Addreſs be preſented to her Majeſty, that ſhe would be pleaſed to give Orders, that the Minutes of the Proceedings of the former Commiſſioners, appointed in the firſt Year of her Reign to treat of an Union, be laid before the Houſe; it paſs'd in the Negative. It was afterwards reſolved, "That an Addreſs "be preſented to her Majeſty, returning her Majeſty the humble Thanks of the "Houſe, for her moſt gracious Speech, that Day, to both Houſes of Parliament, "and for communicating to this Houſe the Articles of UNION, and the Act of "Parliament in Scotland for Ratification thereof." Which Addreſs being preſented accor-

accordingly, by Mr. Chancellor of the Exchequer; her Majeſty anſwer'd, She was well pleas'd, that what ſhe had done was ſo much to the Satisfaction of that Houſe. The Treaty of Union, and Proceedings relating to the ſame, having been alſo communicated to the Houſe of Peers, their Lordſhips, upon the Archbiſhop of Canterbury's Motion, order'd a Bill to be brought in, for the Security of the Church of England; which being read a ſecond Time on the 3d of February, (the Queen and Prince being preſent) a Queſtion was put, Whether it ſhould be an Inſtruction, by the Leave of the Houſe, to inſert in the Bill the Act made 25. Car. II. intitled, An Act for the preventing Dangers which may happen from Popiſh Recuſants: Which was reſolv'd in the Negative, by a Majority of Sixty three Voices, againſt Thirty three. After which, their Lordſhips went thro' the Bill.

Act for the Security of the Church of England.

The * next Day, the Commons, in a Committee of the whole Houſe, conſider'd of the Articles of Union, and Act of Ratification of the Parliament of Scotland; and Mr. Compton being choſen Chairman, Mr. Charles Cæſar open'd the Debate, and rais'd (tho' in modeſt Terms) ſome Objections againſt the Union. He was ſeconded by Sir John Packington, who made a Speech, importing, in Subſtance, "That the "Buſineſs of the Union, that was now before them, being of the higheſt Impor- "tance, requir'd therefore the moſt deliberate Conſideration: That with relation "thereto, People without Doors had been, for a long Time, tongue-ty'd by a ſpecial "Order of Council; which not reaching them within thoſe Walls, he would very "freely impart his Thoughts about it. That, for his own Part, he was abſolutely "againſt this Incorporating Union; which, he ſaid, was like Marrying a Woman "againſt her Conſent: An UNION, that was carry'd on by Corruption and Bribery "within Doors, by Force and Violence without!——— Many Members taking Offence at this bold Expreſſion, which highly reflected both on her Majeſty's Miniſters, and the Scotch Commiſſioners and Parliament; Sir John Packington ſaid, He was told, that in Scotland they ſaid, the Union was carry'd by Bribery and Force: Adding, "That the Promoters thereof, in thus baſely giving up their Independent Conſtitution, "had actually betray'd the Truſt repos'd in them; and therefore he would leave it "to the Judgment of the Houſe, to conſider, whether or no, Men of ſuch Princi- "ples were fit to be admitted to ſit amongſt them? That among the many In- "conveniencies, and irreconcilable Contradictions this Union was liable to, he "would only take notice of this material one; viz. That her Majeſty, by the "Coronation-Oath, was obliged to maintain the Church of England, as by Law eſta- "bliſhed; and bound likewiſe, by the ſame Oath, to defend the Preſbyterian Kirk of "Scotland, in one and the ſame Kingdom: Now, ſaid he, after this Union is in "Force, who ſhall adminiſter this Oath to her Majeſty? 'Tis not the Buſineſs of "the Scotch; who are uncapable of it, and no Well-wiſhers to the Church of Eng- "land: 'Tis then only the Part of the Biſhops to do it: And can it be ſuppos'd "thoſe Reverend Prelates will, or can, act a Thing ſo contrary to their own Or- "der and Inſtitution, as thus to promote the Eſtabliſhment of the Preſbyterian "Church-Government in the United Kingdom? He urg'd, That the Church of "England being eſtabliſh'd Jure divino, and the Scots pretending that their Kirk "was alſo of Jure divino, he could not tell how Two Nations, that claſh'd in ſo eſ- "ſential a Point, could unite: And therefore, he thought it proper to conſult the "Convocation about this critical Point." Colonel Henry Mordaunt, in Oppoſition to Sir John Packington, ſaid, "That he knew of no other Jure divino, but GOD "Almighty's Permiſſion: In which Senſe it might be ſaid, that the Church of Eng- "land, and the Kirk of Scotland, were both Jure divino; becauſe GOD Almighty "had permitted, that the firſt ſhould prevail in England, the other in Scotland: "And that the Member who ſpoke laſt, might, if he thought fit, conſult the Con- "vocation, for his own particular Inſtruction; but that it would be derogatory to "the Rights of the Commons of England, to adviſe on this Occaſion with an in- "ferior Aſſembly, who have no Share in the Legiſlature." Little was ſaid in An- ſwer to this Speech; only ſome Members mov'd, "That the Firſt Article of the "Treaty, which implies a peremptory Agreement to an Incorporating Union, be "poſtponed; and that the Houſe ſhould proceed to the Conſideration of the Terms "of that intended Union, contain'd in the other Articles." This Notion being re- jected by a great Majority, ſeveral Members of the High-Church Party went out of the Houſe: Whereupon, the Firſt, Second, Third, and Fourth Articles of the Treaty were read, and approved, without Oppoſition; and on the 8th of February, the Commons, in a Committee of the whole Houſe, went through, and approv'd the remaining Articles.

Two † Days after, the Commons, in a Committee of the whole Houſe, went upon the engroſſed Bill from the Lords, intituled, An Act for the ſecuring the Church of England, as by Law eſtabliſh'd: And a Motion being made, and the Queſtion propoſed, That it be an Inſtruction to the Committee, " That they might receive an " Amendment for the particular naming the Act of the Thirteenth Year of King " Charles the Second, for the well governing and regulating Corporations, as to ſo much " as was not repealed; and alſo the Act of the Twenty Fifth of the ſaid King, For preventing Dangers which may happen from Popiſh Recuſants:" An Amendment was propoſed to be made, by adding to the Queſtion theſe Words, (Although effectually and ſufficiently provided for in the Bill.) The Queſtion being put, That thoſe Words be added to the Queſtion, it was reſolv'd in the Affirmative: And then the main Queſtion being put, was carried in the Negative. The next Day ‖ the ſaid Bill was read the Third Time, paſs'd without any Amendments, and ſent back to the Lords: After which the Commons receiv'd the Report of their Grand Committee, with their Reſolutions, containing their Approbation of the Articles of Union, as amended and ratify'd ∴ by the Parliament of Scotland, to which the Houſe agreed, without any Amendment, and order'd a Bill to be brought in, to ratify the ſame.

* February. Acts paſs'd.

On the 13th of the ſame Month, * the Queen came to the Houſe of Peers, and, among other Bills, gave the Royal Aſſent to the Act for ſecuring the Church of England, as by Law eſtabliſh'd. Two Days after, there was a great Debate in that Houſe, about the Treaty of Union, the Queen being preſent, as a private Perſon. The Lords having reſolv'd themſelves into a Committee of the whole Houſe, and the Biſhop of Sarum being call'd upon by the Earl of Sunderland, to take the Chair, the Debate on the Firſt Article, was open'd by the Earl of Rocheſter, who acquainted the Houſe, he had many Things to object to ſeveral of thoſe Arti- " cles, which, he ſaid, was all one to him, whether their Lordſhips would pleaſe " to receive them now, or when thoſe Arcicles came more properly under their " Conſideration." The Earl of Angleſey moved, That the Firſt Article might be poſtpon'd, it being impoſſible for him to give his Vote to it, before he knew, and was thoroughly ſatisfied, wherein this Union was to conſiſt. Several others were of that Opinion, among whom, the Biſhop of Bath and Wells ſpoke much to the ſame Effect. The Earl of Nottingham excepted againſt the Name of Great Britain, alledging, 'twas ſuch an Innovation in the Monarchy, as totally ſubverted all the Laws of England, and therefore moved, That the Judges Opinions might be aſk'd about it; and he was ſeconded by ſeveral other Members. Hereupon the Judges being ſeverally aſk'd their Opinions in that Reſpect, unanimouſly declared, They could not conceive that it any ways altered or impaired the Conſtitution of this Realm, whoſe Laws, in their Opinion, muſt remain entirely the ſame, as well after as before the Union, except ſuch as were altogether inconſiſtent with, and directly contrary thereto. The Lord Haverſham, who, of late Years, had made himſelf famous, by his ſet Speeches on ſeveral critical Occaſions, could not be ſilent on this, and therefore ſpoke as follows:

Great Debate in the Lords Houſe, about the Treaty of Union, Feb. 15.

My LORDS,

The Lord Haverſham's Speech.

" WHAT my noble Lord has mention'd to your Lordſhips, occaſions my " ſtanding up; I find my ſelf under the ſame Difficulties; I have ſeveral " Things to ſay to this Matter of the Union, to your Lordſhips, and 'tis very indif- " ferent to me, when I offer them. I have a Right of ſpeaking my Thoughts, and en- " tring my Proteſt too, to any Thing I diſlike; and I ſhall certainly find ſome Time to do " ſo, before this Matter can paſs into a Law. I am in your Lordſhips Judgment, whether you will allow me to ſpeak what I have to ſay now.

" My Lords, With what Diſpoſition I come hither, I hope may be evidenc'd by " the Motion I made your Lordſhips laſt Year, for repealing certain Clauſes that were grie- " vous to Scotland: I would do any Thing that were for the Benefit and Good of " both Nations.

" Theſe Articles come to your Lordſhips with the greateſt Countenance of Au- " thority, that I think it's poſſible any Thing can come; your Commiſſioners " have agreed to them; the Scotch Parliament has, with ſome few Amendments, " ratify'd them; and the Queen her ſelf from the Throne, approves of them; and " yet

A. D. 1706.

" yet you muſt give me Leave to ſay, That Authority, though it be the ſtrongeſt Mo-
" tive to incline the Will, is the weakeſt Argument in all the World, to convince the Un-
" derſtanding. 'Tis the Argument the Church of Rome makes Uſe of for their ſu" perſtitious Worſhip, where there are Ten Ave-Maries, to One Pater-Noſter; juſt as " unreaſonable, as if Ten Times the Application and Addreſſes were made to a SHE-
" FAVOURITE, as to the Perſon of the Sovereign, which is a kind of State Ido- " latry.

" I would not, My Lords, be underſtood, as if I were againſt a UNION. A Fœ-
" deral Union, a Union of Intereſt, a Union in Succeſſion, is what I ſhall always be for.
" Nay, were it, Whether a People inhabiting the ſame Iſland, ſpeaking the ſame
" Language, and having the ſame Religion, ſhould be under one and the ſame
" Form of Policy and Government, I cannot ſee how any Man could be againſt it:
" But this is a Matter of a quite different Nature; it is, Whether Two Nations, in" dependent in their Sovereignties, that have their diſtinct Laws and Intereſts; and,
" what I cannot forget, their different Forms of Worſhip, Church-Government, and
" Order, ſhall be united into one Kingdom?

" A Union made up, in my Opinion, of ſo many miſmatch'd Pieces, of ſuch jar-
" ring, incongruous Ingredients, that ſhould it ever take Effect, I fear it would carry
" the neceſſary Conſequence of a ſtanding Power and Force, to keep us from falling
" aſunder, and breaking in Pieces every Moment: For as my Lord Bacon well ob-
" ſerves, (whom I take to have been a very great Man, though ſometimes the " Courtier got the better of the Philoſopher.) A Unity, ſays he, that is piec'd up by a
" direct Admiſſion of Contraries, in the Fundamental Points of it, is like the Toes of " Nebuchadnezzar's Image, which were made of Iron and Clay; they may cleave toge" ther, but can never incorporate.

" Another Reaſon, why I am againſt an Incorporating Union, is, for the ſake of " the good old Engliſh Conſtitution, juſtly allow'd to be the moſt equal and beſt poiz'd
" Government in all the World: The peculiar Excellency of which, lies in that well-
" proportion'd Diſtribution of Powers, whereby the Greatneſs of the Monarch, and the " Safety of the People, are at once provided for. And it is a Maxim in all Policy, That
" the ſureſt way to preſerve any Government, is by a ſtrict Adherence to its Principles:
" So that whilſt this Balance of Powers is kept equal, the Conſtitution is ſafe; but " who can anſwer what Alteration ſo great a Weight, as Sixty One Scotch Members,
" and thoſe too return'd by a Scotch Privy-Council, when thrown into the Balance, may " make?

" Beſides, My Lords, I muſt own I am apprehenſive of the Precedent, and know
" not how far it may be carried hereafter, or what Alteration future Parliaments
" may think fit to make. It is evident, by the Twenty Second Article, that above
" a Hundred Scotch Peers, and as many Commoners, are excluded from Sitting and Voting
" in the Britiſh Parliament; who, perhaps, as little thought of being ſo a Year or " Two ago, as any of your Lordſhips do now; for they had as much Right by Inheri-
" tance of ſitting there, as any one Lord in this Houſe, has of ſitting here; and " that Right too, as well and as ſtrongly fenc'd and ſecur'd to them, by the Funda" mental Laws of their Kingdom, by Claim of Right, and Act of Parliament, " which made it Treaſon to make any Alteration in the Conſtitution of that Kingdom: And
" yet, have they not loſt their Privilege? And what one Security has any Peer of England,
" by the Laws of this Land, to his Right and Privilege of Peerage, that thoſe Lords had
" not? My Lords the Biſhops, have, once already, been voted out of this Houſe,
" by the Temporal Lords, and who knows what Queſtion may come hereafter?
" I will venture my Life in Defence of the Church of England, and yet, at the " ſame Time, own my ſelf an Occaſional Conformiſt. But if my Lords the Biſhops
" will weaken their own Cauſe ſo far, as to give up the Two great Points of Epiſcopal
" Ordination and Confirmation; if they will approve and ratify the Act for ſecuring
" the Preſbyterian Church Government in Scotland, as the true Proteſtant Religion, and " Purity of Worſhip, they give up that which has been contended for between them " and the Preſbyterians, this Thirty Years; and which I will undertake to prove to " my Lords the Biſhops, has been defended by the greateſt and learnedeſt Men in the " Church of England. I hope, when 'tis proper, my Lords will pleaſe to give ſome
" Light to one who deſires Inſtruction, that I may not ignorantly do any Thing to " their Prejudice in this Matter.

" There is another Reaſon why I am againſt this Union, becauſe I cannot think " it an entire Union. The exempted Articles, I mean the Twentieth Article, where-
" by Heritable Offices and Superiorities are reſerv'd; and alſo the One and Twentieth;
" both which Oliver, by Act of State, was ſo wiſe as to aboliſh: Eſpecially their Act for

" Attractives of approaching Tempeſts and Thunder. I the rather take Notice of theſe, " becauſe, though the Articles of Union are ratify'd by the Scotch Parliament, yet the " Bulk and Body of that Nation ſeem to be againſt them. Have not the Murmurs of the " People there, been ſo loud, as to fill the whole Nation? And ſo bold too, as to " reach even to the Doors of the Parliament? Has not the Parliament it ſelf thought " fit to ſuſpend their beloved Clauſe in their Act of Security, for arming their Peo- " ple, during their Seſſion? Nay, has not the Government, by Advice of Parlia- " ment, ſet out a Proclamation, which I have here in my Hand, pardoning all " Slaughter, Bloodſhed, Maiming, &c. that is committed upon any who are found in any " Tumults there, and diſcharging all Proſecution for the future? I do not mention this, " to find Fault with any Thing that is done in Scotland, but only to ſhew to your " Lordſhips, that when ſuch an unuſual Proclamation as this, is ſet out by the Advice " of Parliament, and cannot ſtay the Forms of a Law, when we know, that upon extra- " ordinary Occaſion, if it be but to grace a Compliment, a Bill may be read Three " Times in one Day: Sure, my Lords, it ſhews a very great Ferment, that requires ſo " very ſpeedy an Application. After all, Has not what we deſire, I mean their being upon " the ſame Foot of Succeſſion with us, been offer'd without this Union? In ſhort, my " Lords, I think an Incorporating Union one of the moſt dangerous Experiments to " both Nations, in which, if we happen to be miſtaken, however we may think of " curing Things hereafter, the Error is irretrievable.

" My Lords, This is the laſt Time that, I believe, I ſhall ever trouble your " Lordſhips, in an Engliſh Parliament, give me Leave, therefore, to ſay but one " Word.

" In King Charles the Firſt's Time, the Cavaliers were the Perſons that ventured " their Lives, and loſt their Eſtates to ſerve him: And in King Charles the Second's " Time, they were forgot, and left ſtarving. At the Reſtoration, the Preſbyterians " were as zealous for that, as any Men whatever; and, none were more perſecuted " all his Reign. Towards the latter End of that Reign, the Biſhops threw out the " Bill of Excluſion, and King James put them into the Tower. At the Revolution, " the Londonderry-Men, &c. were the Perſons that made the firſt, and nobleſt Stop, " to King James in Ireland; and I my ſelf have fed ſome of them at my own " Table, when they were ſtarving, with the greateſt Commendations and Promiſes " in their Pockets; which I have ſeen, under King William's own Hand. In the " laſt Reign, every body knows who they were that made their moſt conſtant Court at " St. James's, and we ſee what Favour they are in at preſent.

" Now there is a great deal of Zeal for this Union, and I wiſh, from my Soul, that " the Advantages may attend it, of Tranquillity and Security, Power, Peace and Plenty, " as is intended by it; but yet it is poſſible Men may be miſtaken. I won't ſay they " will ever repent it; but I will take Leave to ſay, what I have formerly ſaid in " this Place, That what has been, may be.

The Six Firſt Articles read and approved.

The Debate being over, the Queſtion was put, whether the Conſideration of the Firſt Article of the Treaty of Union, ſhould be poſtpon'd 'till all the other Articles had been examin'd: But the Negative carried it, by a Majority of Seventy Two Voices, againſt Twenty Two; and ſo the Firſt Six Articles were read, and approv'd, and the Conſideration of the reſt adjourn'd to the Wedneſday following. Accordingly, on the 19th of February, the Lords reſumed the Conſideration of the Treaty of Union, and the Lord North and Grey obſerv'd, with Relation to the Ninth Article, " The ſmall and unequal Proportion Scotland was to pay to the Land-Tax, " urging, that Wales, as poor a Country, every whit, as that, and of a much leſſer " Extent, paid to the full as much again, and yet ſent not much more than half " the Number of Repreſentatives in Parliament, which were granted to Scotland; " and for that Reaſon, his Lordſhip ſaid, he could not agree to this Article." He was anſwer'd by my Lord Halifax, " That the Number of Repreſentatives was no " Rule to go by; ſince there was the County of Cornwall, in England, that paid not " near ſo much towards the Land-Tax, as that of Glouceſter, and yet ſent almoſt " Five times as many Members to Parliament, as the latter did. That it was very " true the Quota of Scotland was very ſmall and unequal, in Compariſon to what " was paid in England; but that the Engliſh Commiſſioners could not induce the " Scotch ones to agree to any more, upon Account of ſeveral Impoſſibilities on their " Side: That we could not expect to reap the like Advantages of every Article of " the Treaty, and that if they had the better of us in ſome few, we were infi- " nitely recompenſed by the many Advantages which did accrue to us from the " whole." Here, again, the Houſe divided on this Article, there being Seventy Contents, againſt Twenty Three not Contents; and ſo having run over the Four following ones, the Conſideration of the reſt was further adjourn'd to Friday, February the 21ſt, when (the Queen being preſent) the Debate chiefly run on the Fifteenth Article.

The Earl of Nottingham obſerv'd, it conſiſted of Two Parts, viz. a certain Grant of Money, and the Application thereof; in Reference to which he ſaid, "That it "was highly unreaſonable that the Scotch, who were by the Treaty let into all the "Branches of our Trade, and paid ſo little towards the Support of the Government, "and of a moſt expenſive and bloody War, ſhould moreover have an Equivalent of "Three Hundred Ninety Eight Thouſand Eighty Five Pounds given them, for "coming into this Treaty. His Lordſhip inſiſted much upon that Argument, and "took Notice, as to the Diſpoſal of this Equivalent, That Part of it which was to "be given to the Darien Company, was ſo order'd, as that it might be ſwallow'd "up by a few Perſons, without any particular Regard to the indemnifying every "private Sufferer in that unhappy Enterprize." The Lord Halifax anſwer'd, "That this Equivalent could not be look'd upon as a Gift, but as an actual Purchaſe "of the Scotch Revenue and Cuſtoms, which, by this Union, were to be apply'd to the "Payment of the Debts of England; and that they were no more Gainers by it, "than the Engliſh were here by the Sale of Annuities at Fifteen or Sixteen Years "Purchaſe: That as to the Diſpoſal of the Money, it being their own, it was but "reaſonable they ſhould have the Liberty of applying the ſame, as they thought "moſt convenient, the Engliſh Commiſſioners being no ways concern'd therein; "whoſe Care, nevertheleſs, and great Prudence, had been ſuch, that they made "Proviſion it ſhould not be diſpos'd of but by certain Commiſſioners, who ſhould "be accountable for the ſame, to the Parliament of Great Britain." Then their Lordſhips proceeded as far as the 19th Article, and ſo adjourn'd to Monday, February the 24th, when (the Queen being likewiſe preſent) the Lord Thanet, on the Twentieth Article, acquainted their Lordſhips, "That himſelf having an Heretable "Office here in England, by being perpetual Sheriff of the County of Weſtmorland, "he would be glad, with their Lordſhips Leave, to have the Opinion of the Judges "about the Preſervation of that his Right, there being no Proviſion made in this "Article, for Heretable Offices in England:" The Lord Great Chamberlain ſeconded him in that Motion, ſaying, "He had the Honour likewiſe, of having ſuch an "Heretable Office, about the Preſervation whereof, he had the very ſame Doubts "and Scruples with the Noble Peer that ſpoke laſt; whereupon it was agreed, "that the Judges ſhould deliver their Opinion about it, which they accordingly did, from the Puiſny Judge, to the Lord Chief-Juſtice, whoſe Anſwers were near the ſame with what they had declar'd to the Houſe to be their Opinion with Reſpect to the Firſt Article.

The XVth, XVIth, XVIIth, XVIIIth, and XIXth Articles approv'd.

The Lord Thanet's Speech.

The Earl of Rocheſter, after reading the Twenty Second Article, declar'd, "He "look'd upon it as incongruous, contradictory to, and inconſiſtent with it ſelf. That there "were Sixteen Peers to be return'd to the Houſe of Lords, in the Parliament of "Great Britain, who were Peers, and no Peers: That being all Peers by Right of "Inheritance, they were nevertheleſs made here Elective, which he took to be di- "veſting them of their Peerage; becauſe, not being ſure of being always elected "to every Parliament of Great Britain, they conſequently muſt loſe, when left out, "the Benefit of ſitting in Parliament, which was ever deemed an inſeparable Right "of the Peerage: That the reſt of the Nobility of Scotland, to the Number of "above a Hundred, were thereby manifeſtly injured; and that, for his Part, he "wonder'd very much, how the Scotch came to accept of ſuch unreaſonable Con- "ditions, or how their Lordſhips could entertain the Thoughts of permitting ſuch "Peers by Election, to ſit among them." The Lords Nottingham, North and Grey, and Guernſey, very much enforc'd this Topick, adding, "That as one might "very well ſuppoſe, that thoſe Scotch Peers would be ſuch as were addicted to the "Kirk, it might prove of dangerous Conſequence to the Church of England." The Earl of Wharton reply'd, "That though they were all never ſo much of the Kirk "Party, yet there was no Reaſon to fear, but they would alſo be very well diſ- "poſed for the Church of England, and ſtand up in its Defence on all Occaſions; "ſince there were even ſome ſitting amongſt their Lordſhips, who would venture "their Lives for the Church of England, and yet openly declared themſelves to be, "at the ſame Time, Occaſional Conformiſts." The Lord Haverſham, rightly judging he was hinted at by that noble Peer, ſtood up to inform the Houſe, what he underſtood by an Occaſional Conformiſt; in which Explanation he appear'd ſomewhat gravell'd: For after having made a long Encomium on the Epiſcopal Order, which he took to be the beſt, and moſt conformable to Primitive Chriſtianity, he gave no leſs Commendations to all the Proteſtant Churches Abroad, and to the Kirk of Scotland itſelf, in particular; which, he ſaid, was a true Proteſtant Church. The Biſhop of Bath and Wells declared, "That for his Part, he was altogether againſt this Union,

" though he could wiſh with all his Heart, it had been compleated an Hundred " Years ago; becauſe all the Ferment and Diſcord which now were likely to enſue " upon it, would, by this Time, have had their Courſe: That he could no better " compare it, than to the mixing together ſtrong Liquors, of a contrary Nature, in " one and the ſame Veſſel, which would go nigh being burſt aſunder by their furi- " ous Fermentation; that their Bench was always reckon'd the Dead Weight of the " Houſe; but that the Sixteen Scotch Peers being admitted to ſit therein, would more " effectually be ſo, eſpecially in any future Debates, relating to the Church, to- " wards which they could no ways be ſuppoſed to be well-affected; and therefore " he was humbly of Opinion, that ſome Proviſion might be made for debarring " them of their Votes in any Church Matter that ſhould hereafter come in Agita- " tion." The Lords Halifax, Somers, and others, made very pertinent Anſwers to thoſe Objections; after which, the Twenty Second Article was approved, by a Majority of Seventy One Votes, againſt Twenty Two; And then the remaining Articles were likewiſe approved. Upon the Reading of the laſt, the Earl of Abingdon moved, that the Judges Opinion might be aſk'd, what Laws would be repeal'd by this Union, and what would remain in Force, but that Motion was rejected. Then the Earl of Nottingham ſtood up, and begg'd their Lordſhip's Pardon,

The XXIId, and remaining Articles, approved.

The Earl of Nottingham's Speech.

" for having troubled them almoſt to every Article, excuſing himſelf, however, by " urging, they were ſuch material Objections occurring to him, as, in Conſcience, " he thought himſelf obliged to lay before the Houſe: That as Sir John Maynard " made this Compliment to the late King, at the Revolution, That having buried, " upon Account of his great Age, all his Contemporaries in Weſtminſter-Hall, he was " afraid, if his Majeſty had not come, in that very Juncture of Time, he might have likewiſe " out-liv'd the very Laws themſelves; ſo, if this Union did paſs, as he had no Reaſon " to doubt but it would moſt certainly paſs, he might, with as much Reaſon, and " as juſtly affirm, he had outliv'd all the Laws, and the very Conſtitution of England; " concluding with a Prayer to GOD, to avert the dire Effects which might proba- " bly enſue from ſuch an Incorporating Union. Three Days after, * the Biſhop of Sa- rum reported to the Lords Houſe, the Reſolutions of their grand Committee, approving the Treaty of Union, which were agreed to by a great Majority; but ſeveral Peers made and enter'd their Proteſts, ſome againſt all, others againſt ſome of the Articles.

* Feb. 27. The Treaty of Union being approved by the Lords, ſeveral Peers enter their Proteſts. See the Appendix.

On the 22d of February, upon Mr. William Bromley's Motion, the Commons order'd, " That it be an Inſtruction to the Committee of the whole Houſe, to whom " the Bill for an Union between the Two Kingdoms of England and Scotland was " committed, that they might receive a Clauſe, that the Two Univerſities of this " Kingdom might continue for ever, as they now were by Law eſtabliſh'd." But a Motion being made, and the Queſtion put, " That it be another Inſtruction to the " ſaid Committee, that they might receive a Clauſe to make the like Proviſion, " that the Subjects of this Kingdom ſhould be for ever free of any Oath, Teſt, or " Subſcription, within this Kingdom, contrary to, or inconſiſtent with the true " Proteſtant Religion, Government, Worſhip and Diſcipline of the Church of " England, as now by Law eſtabliſh'd, as was already provided for the Subjects of " Scotland, with reſpect to their Preſbyterian Government; it paſs'd in the Nega- " tive." The ſame Day Sir Roger Moſtyn moved, That a Clauſe ſhould be inſerted in the ſaid Bill, in Favour of the Convocation of the Clergy, as Part of the Conſtitution; both which Aſſertion and Motion were exploded. But the Parliament of Scotland having inſerted in the Articles of the Union, ſeveral Clauſes for Drawbacks and Allowances, upon divers Commodities of the Growth of that Kingdom, which might have put the Engliſh Traders upon an unequal Foot with the Scotch, the Commons of England took that Matter into their Conſideration; and, in a Committee of the whole Houſe, came to ſeveral Reſolutions, for allowing Drawbacks on Engliſh Salt, White-Herrings, Beef, or Pork, Oatmeal, and Grain, call'd Bear, alias Big, exported from England and Wales: Which Reſolutions were, on the 27th of February, reported to the Houſe, agreed to, and a Bill order'd to be brought in thereupon. The next Day †, the Commons read the Third Time, the Bill for an Union between the Two Kingdoms of England and Scotland, which was paſs'd by a Majority of Two Hundred Seventy Four Voices, againſt a Hundred and Sixty, who were for rejecting it. This Bill was, on the 1ſt of March, carried by Mr. Spencer Compton, to the Houſe of Lords, who gave it a quick Diſpatch; but upon the Third Reading of it, the Lord North and Grey offer'd a Rider to be added to it, importing, That nothing in this Ratification contain'd, ſhould be conſtrued to extend to an Approbation or Acknowledgment of the Truth of the Preſbyterian Way of Worſhip, or allowing the Religion of the Church of Scotland, to be what it was ſtiled, the true Proteſtant Religion. After a Debate, the Queſtion was put, whether the ſaid Rider ſhould be read a Second Time, it was carry'd in the Negative, by Fifty five Voices, againſt Twenty nine: Upon which, ſeveral Lords enter'd their Diſſent. Then the Queſtion being put, Whether this Bill ſhould paſs? it was reſolv'd in the Affirmative by a great Majority; Nineteen Peers only entering their ſeveral Proteſts againſt it. A. D. 1706.

We may here obſerve, that the Duke of Marlborough, taking notice of the good Humour the Parliament was in, thought this a proper Occaſion to get the Confirmation of a very conſiderable Grant, which he had lately obtain'd from the indulgent Queen; viz. of the Royal Mewes, near Charing-Croſs; where a Square was deſign'd to be built, that was to bear his Grace's Name: But, on the 6th of March, a Motion being made in the Houſe of Commons, and the Queſtion put, That Leave be given to bring in a Bill, for the better enabling her Majeſty to diſpoſe of the Buildings and Ground call'd the Mewes, for the building Stables for her Majeſty in a more convenient Place: Some Members explain'd to the Houſe the ſecret Meaning of that Motion; and having repreſented, that the Duke of Marlborough was already ſufficiently rewarded, the Queſtion paſs'd in the Negative. The ſame * Day, the Queen came to the Houſe of Lords, with the uſual Solemnity, and the Commons attending, her Majeſty gave the Royal Aſſent to the Act for an UNION of the TWO KINGDOMS of England and Scotland, and to ſome other Acts; which done, ſhe ſpoke to both Houſes, to this Effect: The Duke of Marlborough fruſtrated of the Grant of the Meuſe. * March 6. Acts paſs'd.

My LORDS and GENTLEMEN,

" IT is with the greateſt Satisfaction, that I have given my Aſſent to a Bill " for Uniting England and Scotland into One Kingdom. The Queen's Speech to both Houſes, March 6.

" I conſider this UNION, as a Matter of the greateſt Importance to the Wealth, " Strength, and Safety of the whole Iſland; and, at the ſame Time, as a Work of " ſo much Difficulty and Nicety in its own Nature, that, till now, all Attempts " which have been made towards it, in the Courſe of above a Hundred Years, have " prov'd ineffectual; and therefore, I make no doubt, but it will be remember'd and " ſpoke of hereafter, to the Honour of thoſe who have been inſtrumental in bring- " ing it to ſuch a happy Concluſion.

" I deſire, and expect from all my Subjects of both Nations, that from hence- " forth they act with all poſſible Reſpect and Kindneſs to one another; that ſo " it may appear to all the World, they have Hearts diſpoſed to become One " People.

" This will be a great Pleaſure to Me; and will make us all quickly ſenſible of " the good Effect of this UNION.

" And I cannot but look upon it as a peculiar Happineſs, that, in my Reign, ſo " full a Proviſion is made for the Peace and Quiet of my People, and for the Se- " curity of our Religion, by ſo firm an Eſtabliſhment of the Proteſtant Succeſſion " throughout Great Britain.

Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons,

" I take this Occaſion to remind you, of making effectual Proviſion for the Pay- " ment of the Equivalent to Scotland, within the Time appointed by this Act; " and I am perſwaded, you will ſhew as much Readineſs in this Particular, as " you have done in all the Parts of this GREAT WORK.

My LORDS and GENTLEMEN,

" The Seaſon of the Year being now pretty far advanc'd, I hope you will conti- " nue the ſame Zeal which has appear'd throughout this Seſſion, in diſpatching " what yet remains unfiniſh'd of the Publick Buſineſs before you.

Five * Days after, both Houſes attended the Queen with an Addreſs, returning her Majeſty their moſt humble Thanks, for her gracious Approbation of the Share they had in bringing the Treaty of UNION to a happy Concluſion: A Work, that ſeem'd deſign'd by Providence to add new Luſtre to the Glories of her Majeſty's Reign. The Commons, in particular, having voted a † Supply for the Payment of the Equivalent to Scotland, came to ſeveral ‖ Reſolutions on Ways and Means, which were, with wonderful Diſpatch, digeſted into Acts; and the ſame being paſs'd both Houſes, receiv'd, with ſeveral other Bills, the Royal Aſſent on the 24th and 27th of March. * March 11. † March 10; 12. ‖ March 15, 19. Acts paſs'd.

By the Fourth Article of the Treaty of Union, it was agreed, That all the Subjects of the United Kingdom of Great Britain, ſhould, after the Union, have full Freedom and Intercourſe of Trade and Navigation; and by the Sixth, That all Parts of the United Kingdom, after the Union, ſhould have the ſame Allowances, Encouragements and Drawbacks, and be under the ſame Prohibitions, Reſtrictions, and Regulations of Trade. Hereby it was generally underſtood, That all Commodities and Goods, that ſhould happen to be in Scotland before the Firſt of May 1707, (which Day the Union was to commence) might be imported into England without paying any further Duties: Upon which Preſumption, ſeveral Engliſh, Scotch, and Foreign Merchants, imported great Quantities of Wine and Brandy into Scotland. Some other Traders, of more ſtretch'd Conſciences, allur'd by the almoſt irreſiſtible Proſpect of Gain, were guilty of a more unwarrantable Practice; viz. the Exporting Tobacco, Cocoa-Nuts, Pepper, and other Goods, in order to obtain the Drawbacks allow'd by the Acts of Parliament; and afterwards import the ſame Commodities into Scotland, from whence (after the Firſt Day of May) they might be imported into England, Cuſtom free. Theſe fraudulent Practices having been laid before the Houſe of Commons, both by the Court, and the honeſt Dealers, who were like to be Sufferers thereby; a Bill was brought in, to prevent and obviate Frauds relating to the Cuſtoms, by Exporting Tobacco, Plantation and Eaſt-India Goods, in order to obtain a Drawback, and afterwards to reland them in England, without Payment of Duty; and for better ſecuring the Duties on Goods brought from the Weſt-Indies: Which, on the 5th of April, was order'd to be engroſs'd.

Great Quantities of Wine, Brandy, and other Goods imported into Scotland.

Bill brought in to prevent it.

* April 7. Vote againſt fraudulent Traders.

The next * Sitting, the Houſe took into Conſideration the Report from the Committee, to whom it was referr'd to enquire into Frauds committed, in relation to Drawbacks of Cuſtoms; whereupon it was reſolved, "That an Addreſs be "preſented to her Majeſty, that ſhe would be pleas'd to give Directions to her "Attorney-General, to proſecute ſuch Perſons according to Law, as had been con-"cern'd in the ſaid Frauds and Abuſes." The ſame Day, the foremention'd Bill was read the Third Time, and (with an Amendment) paſs'd, and ſent up to the Lords for their Concurrence: But this laſt additional Clauſe being ſo unluckily contriv'd, as to be like to give Diſguſt to the Scots, (which would have been an ominous Beginning of the Union) the Earl of Rocheſter very wiſely propos'd, that the Queen ſhould be deſir'd to prorogue the Parliament; and ſo putting an End to this Seſſion, and to all the Affairs depending therein, another Bill, to the ſame Effect, but without ſuch a ſtumbling Clauſe, might be ſet on foot, and paſs'd in another Seſſion. Accordingly, on the 8th of April, the Queen came to the Houſe of Peers, with the uſual Solemnity, and gave her Royal Aſſent to ſeveral publick and private Acts: And then the Lord Keeper prorogued the Parliament, till Monday the 14th of the ſame Month.

Acts paſs'd, April 8. The Parliament prorogued. Meets again, April 14.

The Parliament being, on that Day, met again, her Majeſty came to the Houſe of Lords, and the Commons attending, ſhe made a ſhort Speech to both Houſes; importing, That ſhe was willing to give them an Opportunity of coming together again, to conſider if any Thing could properly be done to prevent the Inconveniencies that might happen to Trade, by too great an Interval between the Riſing of the Parliament and the Firſt of May; and that ſhe need not add, that whatever was to be done of that kind, would require to be diſpatch'd in a little Time. The Commons being return'd to their Houſe, receiv'd, and read a Petition of the Merchants concern'd in the Importation of Wines and Brandy from Spain, Portugal, and Italy, and of other Goods from Holland, &c. complaining, "That great Quantities of French Wines, Bran-"dies, Silks, Prunes, Roſin, &c. of the Growth and Product of France; Whale-"bone, Linnen, Drugs, Coffee, Spices, &c. from Holland and from France; direct-"ly were brought, and more intended to be imported into the Kingdom of Scot-"land, in order to be brought thence, and imported into England, after the Firſt "Day of May, to avoid the Engliſh Duties; to the great Detriment and Loſs of "ſome, and the utter Ruin of others, who had imported, and were importing into "England the like Commodities from Spain, Portugal, Italy and Holland, paying the "high Duties upon them; which Commodities had been chiefly purchaſed abroad "with the Woollen-Manufactures, Corn, and other Products of England; and pray-"ing that the Houſe would prevent the Importation of the ſaid Goods, which "would be a great Damage not only to the Petitioners, but to her Majeſty's "Cuſtoms; or otherwiſe ſo to provide for the Petitioners Relief, as the Houſe "ſhould think fit." Hereupon, the † next Day, the Commons, in a Committee of the whole Houſe, reſolv'd, Firſt, "That the Importation of Goods and Merchan-"dizes, of the Growth and Produce of France, and other foreign Parts, into Scot-"land, in order to be brought from thence into England after the Firſt of May, and "with Intention to avoid the Payment of the Engliſh Duties, would be to the Da-"mage and Ruin of fair Traders, to the Prejudice of the Manufactures of England, "a great Loſs to her Majeſty's Revenue of the Cuſtoms, and a very great Detri-"ment to the Publick. Secondly, That the Exporting of Goods and Merchandizes "from England into Scotland, that are entitled to a Drawback, with Intention to "bring

" bring the ſame back again into England after the Firſt of May, was a moſt " notorious Fraud, to the Damage and Ruin of fair Traders, to the great Loſs of " her Majeſty's Revenues of the Cuſtoms, and a very great Detriment to the " Publick." Theſe Reſolutions being immediately reported, and agreed to, a Bill was order'd to be brought in upon the ſame; which was accordingly done; and, after the ſecond Reading, the ſaid Bill was || order'd to be engroſs'd. The next Day, April the 19th, the Bill was paſs'd, and ſent up to the Lords for their Concurrence: But it being apprehended, that this Law would give Offence to the Scots; and the moſt eminent Lawyers, who were conſulted about it, not agreeing in their Opinions; the Court thought fit to let it fall: The rather, becauſe the Firſt Day of May was near at hand; and that the Practices of the fraudulent Traders had, in great meaſure, been prevented, by the Terror of this intended Law, and of the Vote of the 7th of that Month, before-mention'd. Hereupon, the Queen came to the Houſe of Peers, the 24th of April, and the Commons attending, her Majeſty made the following Speech to both Houſes:

A. D. 1707.

|| April 18.

My LORDS and GENTLEMEN,

I Return you my hearty Thanks for the great Zeal and Affection which you have ſhewn for my Service, and the Publick Good, in the ſeveral Affairs which have been before you; eſpecially in that of the UNION with Scotland, which, I doubt not, will prove a laſting Bleſſing to this Iſland.

The Queen's Speech to both Houſes, April 24.

Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons,

I am to thank you, in particular, for the great Diſpatch you have made in providing the largeſt and moſt effectual Supplies, that have ever been given to the Crown for the current Service, in any one Seſſion of Parliament. I am very much concern'd, that the Publick Occaſions require the raiſing of ſuch great Sums from my People: I will take care they ſhall be apply'd to the Uſes for which they are given; and I hope, by God's Bleſſing, we may obtain Advantages from them, anſwerable to ſo great an Expence.

My LORDS and GENTLEMEN,

It is proper for me, before we part, to communicate to you, that I think it expedient, that the Lords of Parliament of England, and Commons of the preſent Parliament of England, ſhould be the Members of the reſpective Houſes of the Firſt Parliament of Great Britain, for and on the Part of England; and therefore I intend, within the Time limited, to publiſh a Proclamation for that Purpoſe, purſuant to the Power given me by the Acts of Parliament of both Kingdoms, ratifying the Treaty of UNION. And after we have ſo fully compleated this Great Work, I aſſure my ſelf, that when you return to your ſeveral Countries, you will omit no Opportunity of making my Subjects ſenſible of the Security, and the other great and laſting Benefits, they may reaſonably expect from this Happy UNION.

This will conduce very much to make it prove ſo, and be a good Preparation to the Succeſs of our next Meeting; when, I hope, we ſhall all join our ſincere and hearty Endeavours to promote the Welfare and Proſperity of Great Britain.

After this, the Lord Keeper of the Great Seal, by her Majeſty's Command, prorogued the Parliament until Wedneſday the 30th Day of April 1707.

The Parliament prorogued.

Before we leave this laſt Seſſion of the laſt Parliament of England, we muſt take notice, that Repreſentation having been made to the Houſe of Commons, of great Numbers of Pirates that had ſettled in the Iſland of Madagaſcar, from whence they very much annoy'd the Eaſt-India Trade; and the Marquis of Caermarthen offering, with a ſmall Squadron, to go and ſuppreſs them; the Houſe appointed a Committee, to take that Matter into Conſideration. Hereupon the Committee came to theſe Two Reſolutions; viz. Firſt, " That a great Number of Pirates had ſettled " themſelves in the Iſland of Madagaſcar, from whence they had committed ma- " ny great Piracies, Robberies and Depredations, very ruinous to Trade, and " whereby the Lives of many of her Majeſty's good Subjects had been deſtroy'd. Secondly, " That an humble Addreſs be preſented to her Majeſty, That ſhe would " be graciouſly pleas'd to take into her Royal Conſideration, how the ſaid Pirates " might be ſuppreſs'd, and their further Piracies, Robberies and Depredations, effe- " ctually prevented." Which Reſolutions were, on the 8th of April, agreed to by the Houſe. The ſame Day it was reſolved, " That an Addreſs be preſented to " her Majeſty, that ſhe would be pleas'd to uſe her Royal Endeavours, to recover " and preſerve the ancient Poſſeſſions, Trade, and Fiſhery in Newfoundland.

Several Perſons, either prompted by their own ill Humour, or, which is more probable, acted and countenanc'd by ſome Great Men out of Place, having of late, in their publick Writings, ſtretch'd too far the Liberty of Engliſhmen, and preſum'd too much on the Mildneſs of her Majeſty's Government; the Miniſtry thought fit to give a ſeaſonable Check to their licentious Pens. The firſt that was proſecuted this Year, was Mr. William Pittis; who being convicted of writing, printing and publiſhing, a ſcandalous and ſeditious Libel, reflecting upon her Majeſty and the Government, intituled, The Caſe of the Church of England's Memorial fairly ſtated: Or, A Modeſt Enquiry into the Grounds of thoſe Prejudices that have been entertain'd againſt it; was, upon the 25th of April, fined for the ſame by the Court of Queen's-Bench, One Hundred Marks, and to ſtand in the Pillory the next Day at Charing-Croſs, for the Space of One Hour, with a Paper on his Head, denoting his Offence; and alſo to ſtand in the Pillory the 29th of the ſame Month, near the Royal Exchange, in Cornhill, in like manner. This Sentence was executed accordingly; and before he was diſcharg'd out of Priſon, he was to find Security for his good Behaviour for Two Years. George Sawbridge, convicted of publiſhing the ſaid Libel, was, the ſame Day, fined Two Hundred Pounds, and committeed to the Queen's-Bench Priſon till he paid the ſame; and alſo to be brought by the Marſhal of the ſaid Priſon, to all the Courts at Weſtminſter, upon the 26th of April, (the Courts ſitting) with a Paper upon his Head, denoting his Offence; which was done accordingly: And before he was diſcharg'd out of Priſon, he was likewiſe to find Security for his good Behaviour for the Space of Two Years.

Licentious Writers check'd.

Mr. Pittis ſentenc'd, April 25, 1706.

And pillory'd, April 26, & 29.

Mr. Sawbridge fined.

On the 30th of April, the Caſe of Dr. James Drake, indicted for writing a Pamphlet, call'd Mercurius Politicus, was argued at the Queen's-Bench Bar: But it appearing, that in the Libel ſet forth in the Information, the Word nor was inſerted, and in the Libel given in Evidence, the Word not: Upon arguing of that Error, the Court inclin'd for the Party accuſed; whereupon the Trial was adjourn'd. The ſame Day, Dr. Joſeph Browne was try'd at Guild-Hall, before the Lord Chief-Juſtice Holt, for handing to the Preſs a Paper of Verſes, call'd, The Country-Parſon's Advice to the Lord Keeper; wherein, in a groſs, ironical way, the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, the Dukes of Southampton, Richmond, Somerſet, Bolton, and Devonſhire, the Earls of Montague, Pembroke, Eſſex, and Orford, the Lords Somers, Mohun, Haverſham, Wharton, and Halifax, and the Biſhop of Sarum, were ſcurrilouſly reflected upon. The Charge being plainly prov'd by the Printer, and by Mr. Lewis, Secretary to Mr. Secretary Harley; the Jury brought the Priſoner in Guilty: And ſome Time after, Dr. Browne receiv'd Sentence to ſtand in the Pillory; which was executed upon him.

Dr. Drake's Caſe argued and adjourn'd, April 30.

Dr. Browne found guilty, ditto.

He ſtands in the Pillory.

On the 6th of May, being the laſt Day of the Term, Judge Powel, in the Court of Queen's-Bench, pronounc'd Sentence againſt Mr. William Stephens, Rector of Sutton in Surrey, for writing a ſeditious Pamphlet, call'd, A Letter to the Author of the Memorial of the Church of England; which contain'd moſt ſcandalous Reflections on the Duke of Marlborough's Conduct laſt Campaign, and againſt Mr. Secretary Harley. The Judge told the Priſoner, "That his Offence was the greater, in that "it was the Duty of his Calling to teach others the poſitive Precept of the Goſpel, "about the Reverence we owe to Sovereigns, and thoſe that are in Authority under "them; but that his Crime was ſtill the more heinous, in abuſing the Duke of "Marlborough, a Peer who had done ſuch glorious Actions for his Country, and ſo "well deſerv'd of the Common Cauſe:" Adding, with reſpect to the Secretary, "That the traducing the Queen's Miniſters, was a downright Abuſe upon her "Majeſty her ſelf." Mr. Stephens would have ſpoken ſomething by way of Submiſſion, but the Judge pronounc'd the Judgment of the Court againſt him; which was, "That he ſhould be fined a Hundred Marks, and ſtand Twice in the Pillory, "with a Paper fix'd to his Hat, denoting his Offence; the firſt Time, the Thurſ-"day following, at Charing-Croſs; and the next Day, before the Royal Exchange: "And that he ſhould find Sureties for his good Behaviour for a Twelvemonth." However, it being repreſented and conſider'd, that the inflicting ſuch an ignominious Puniſhment on a Perſon in Holy Orders, might give Offence to the whole Order; the Execution of this Sentence was firſt ſuſpended, and, at laſt, the Pillory remitted; tho' with this mortifying Circumſtance, that Mr. Stephens was brought to a Publick-Houſe at Charing-Croſs, from whence he ſaw the fatal Scaffold, and Multitudes of People gathering together, to be the Spectators of his Diſgrace.

Mr. Stephens receives Sentence to ſtand in the Pillory.

The Pillory remitted.

On the 6th of November, 1706, the Court of Queen's-Bench gave Judgment for Dr. Drake, in the Caſe relating to his Writing Mercurius Politicus: But Dr. Browne being convicted of Writing and Publiſhing another ſcandalous and ſeditious Libel, Intituled, "A Letter to the Right Honourable Mr. Secretary Harley, occaſion'd by his "late Dr. Drake acquitted. Sentence againſt Dr. Browne and Mr. Ward.

"late Commitment to Newgate: Together with his Interpretation of that Paper, call'd, "The Country Parſon's Advice to my Lord Keeper, laid to his Charge; reflecting upon the Great Officers of State, and ſeveral of the Nobility of this Kingdom; was, on Thurſday, the 14th of November, fined for the ſame by the Court of Queen's-Bench, Forty Marks, and order'd to ſtand in the Pillory Two Days after at Charing-Croſs, for the Space of One Hour, with a Paper on his Head, denoting his Offence, which he did accordingly: And he was alſo to ſtand in the Pillory on Monday, the 18th of that Month, near the Royal-Exchange, in Cornhill, and to give Security for his good Behaviour for One Year. Edward Ward being convicted of writing, printing and publiſhing ſeveral ſcandalous and ſeditious Libels, one, in Particular, Intituled, (Hudibras Redivivus: Or, A Burleſque Poem on the Times:) highly reflecting upon her Majeſty, and the Government; was likewiſe on Thurſday, the 14th of November, 1706, fined Forty Marks, and ordered to ſtand Twice in the Pillory, with a Paper on his Head, denoting his Offence; and to give Security for his good Behaviour, for one Year. Some were of Opinion that theſe, and other Proſecutions of the like Nature, were chiefly promoted by Mr. Secretary Harley, not only that he might thereby appear to be entirely devoted to the General and Treaſurer, but with a deeper Deſign of rendring them obnoxious, by thoſe unpopular Indications of Severity.

They ſtand in the Pillory.

A. D. 1707.

On the 27th of March, 1707, the Queen in Council, order'd a Proclamation to be publiſh'd, appointing the 1ſt of May next, to be obſerv'd as a Day of publick and general Thankſgiving, for the happy Concluſion of the Treaty of UNION; upon which Event her Majeſty receiv'd congratulatory Addreſſes from the Univerſity of Cambridge, and moſt of the Cities, Towns and Corporations of England. But it wat obſerv'd, that the Univerſity of Oxford was ſilent on this Occaſion, as well as the Scots, which made the Addreſſers of Brackley in Northamptonſhire ſuggeſt, That after the little Notice that had hitherto been taken of the Union, by thoſe who enjoy'd the greateſt Share of it, at leaſt an Equivalent of the Advantage, they had ſome Thoughts of not diſturbing her Majeſty at this Time, in her great Concernments for the Liberties of all Europe, had they not been afraid, leſt the Malice of the World ſhould have unjuſtly tack'd them to ſome of her Majeſty's miſtaken Subjects, who, by their Silence, in not addreſſing, had ſufficiently declared their Diſlike of what her Majeſty had own'd her greateſt Pleaſure and Satisfaction.

Congratulatory Addreſſes on the Union.

About this Time, the Miniſters of the French Churches in London and Weſtminſter, and the principal Perſons among the French Refugees, having, by private Direction of the Biſhop of Saliſbury, and of ſome Perſons in Power, aſſembled * in the French Chapel in the Savoy, agreed upon an Addreſs and Petition to the Queen, wherein, in the Firſt Place, "They congratulated the wonderful Succeſſes with which it had "pleaſed GOD to bleſs her Majeſty's Government, both at Home and Abroad; in- "ſomuch that the very beginning of her Majeſty's Adminiſtration, exceeded the "long Reign of the great Queen Elizabeth." After this they humbly repreſented, "That the Proteſtant Churches of France, though ever ſtruggling under Oppreſſion, "held formerly a conſiderable Rank; and that her Majeſty's Predeceſſors had al- "ways ſuch a tender Regard for them, as to protect and ſupport them to the utmoſt "of their Power: That the famous Edict of Nantes, in Favour of the Proteſtants "of France, was, in great Meaſure, owing to the great Intereſt Queen Elizabeth "had with with King Henry the Fourth of France; that King James the Firſt, her "Majeſty's great Grandfather, did often interpoſe, by his Ambaſſadors, in Behalf "of the French reformed Churches. And that King Charles the Firſt, her Majeſty's "Grandfather, intervened as Mediator, in the Treaty which Lewis the Thirteenth "made with the Rochellers, (who held the principal Rank among the Proteſtants of "France) and afterwards upon the French King's Infraction of that Treaty, begun "a War with France upon that Account. Moreover they ſet forth, that they found "and accounted themſelves ſo happy in living under her Majeſty's gentle Govern- "ment, and among a Nation, where they had been ſo kindly entertain'd, when "driven from their Native Country by the Violence of Perſecution, that if they "had nothing but their own private Intereſt in View, they would ſit quiet and "eaſy, and be contented to ſhare the Felicity of her Mrjeſty's natural-born Sub- "jects: But that the juſt Concern they ought to have for their Brethren, Relations "and Friends, who ſtill groan'd in France, under the Preſſure of Perſecution, "oblig'd them to lay hold on this Occaſion, moſt humbly to beſeech her Sacred "Majeſty, that when her Thoughts ſhould be employ'd in ſettling the great Con- "cerns of Europe, in a Treaty of Peace, her Majeſty would graciouſly vouchſafe "to take into her Royal Care, the Intereſt of the poor diſtreſſed Churches of France, "which having been ruin'd by the ſuperſtitious Vanity of the Enemy, ſo it would "add

This Addreſs having been preſented * to the Queen, by ſome of the moſt eminent Perſons among the French Refugees, her Majeſty was pleas'd to tell them, She always had a great Compaſſion for the unhappy Circumſtances of the perſecuted Proteſtants of France; that ſhe would communicate her Thoughts upon this Matter to her Allies; and ſhe hoped ſuch Meaſures might be taken, as might effectually anſwer the Intent of their Petition.

Changes in publick Offices.

About the middle of April, ſome Changes were made in ſeveral publick Offices: The Earl of Stamford, the Lord Herbert of Cherbury, Robert Monkton, and John Pulteney, Eſquires, were made Commiſſioners of Trade and Plantations, in the Room of the Lord Viſcount Weymouth, who had before reſigned that Poſt, and of William Blaithwaite, John Pollexfen, and Matthew Prior, Eſquires, who were laid aſide, as too ſtrongly byaſs'd to the High-Church Party. At the ſame Time, by the Intereſt of Mr. Secretary Harley, Sir Simon Harcourt, Knight, was conſtituted Attorney-General, in the Room of Sir Edward Northey; Sir James Montagne ſucceeded Sir Simon Harcourt, in the Place of Sollicitor-General; and the Honourable Spencer Compton, Eſq; who had exerted his Zeal and Abilities, in bringing the Treaty of Union to a happy Concluſion, was made Treaſurer and Receiver-General to Prince George of Denmark, and Pay-Maſter to her Majeſty's Penſioners, in the Room of Mr. Nicholas.

Audience of Leave of the Morocco Ambaſſador, April 28.

† April 29.

On the 28th of the ſame Month, Ahmed Ben Ahmed Cardenaſh, Ambaſſador Extraordinary from the Emperor of Fez and Morocco, had a private Audience of Leave of the Queen; and the next Day † a Proclamation was iſſued out, declaring, " The Lords and Commons of the preſent Parliament of " England, which ſtood prorogued to the 30th of April, to be the Members of the " reſpective Houſes of the Firſt Parliament of Great Britain, for, and on the Part " of England.

The Thankſgiving for the Union obſerv'd.

The Firſt of May being appointed for the general Thankſgiving for the UNION, which commenced that very Day, the Queen went in great State and Solemnity to the Cathedral Church of St. Paul, attended by a magnificent and numerous Appearance of the Nobility and Gentry of both Nations; and the People gave, on that Occaſion, great Demonſtrations of Joy. Three Days after ‖, the Queen in Council declared William Lord Cowper, formerly Lord Keeper of the Great Seal of England, Lord High Chancellor of Great Britain: About the ſame Time, the Brigadiers-General How, Mordaunt, Brudenell, Farrington, and Shrimpton, were advanced to the Poſt of Major-Generals of her Majeſty's Armies: And the Queen was pleaſed to conſtitute ∴ Colonel Sherrington Davenport, Thomas Pulteney, William Villiers, George Kellum, Thomas Crowther, and Bartholomew Ogleby, to be Brigadiers-General of her Majeſty's Forces. William Douglas, Alexander Wedderburn, John Montgomery, John Witham, and David Roſs, Eſquires, were, the ſame  Day, appointed Commiſſioners for the Exciſe in Scotland: And her Majeſty was pleaſed to confer a Prebend of Windſor, on the Reverend Mr. Goddard, Chaplain of the Honourable Houſe of Commons. The Day before, Andrew de Matueof, Privy-Counſellor, Governor of the Principality of Jaroſlavia, and Ambaſſador Extraordinary from the Emperor of Muſcovy, had a private Audience of the Queen, in which his Excellency deliver'd to her Majeſty a long Letter from the Czar, containing a Detail of the Services he had done King Auguſtus, from his firſt Election to the Crown of Poland; " And Complaints of the ill Treatment of the Ruſſian Troops " ſent to his Aſſiſtance; of the impriſoning of Count Patkul, his Miniſter, and " General; of King Auguſtus's Non-Performance of the Treaty made with the " Czar; and of his concluding a diſhonourable Peace with the King of Sweden, " without his Czariſh Majeſty's Privity, purſuant to which, he had deliver'd up " Count Patkul, on Pretence of his being a Swediſh Deſerter, contrary to the Laws " of Nations, and even Cuſtom of Barbarians: Deſiring, in the Concluſion, that " her Britannick Majeſty would uſe her good Offices, to procure the Liberty of the " ſaid Patkul, or, at leaſt, that he might be uſed as his Czariſh Majeſty's Miniſter, " and not as a Subject of the King of Sweden; as alſo to obtain the Enlargement " of the other Ruſſian General Officers, and other Subjects of Muſcovy, detain'd at " Stockholm. As for the remaining Part of the Ruſſian Auxiliaries, now upon the " Rhine, the Czar put them under her Britannick Majeſty's Protection, and deſired " that they might either enter her Majeſty's Service, or that of her Allies; or, at " leaſt, he entreated her Majeſty's good Offices, that they might have Leave to return Home with Safety." In Compliance with the Czar's Deſire, the Queen uſed her good Offices in Favour of Count Patkul, but her Interceſſion proved ineffectual, and that unfortunate Gentleman was afterwards barbarouſly put to Death.

The Republick of Venice having, according to Cuſtom, appointed the Chevaliers Erizzo and Piſani, their Ambaſſadors Extraordinary, to compliment the Queen on her

Three Days after ‖, they had a private Audience of her Majeſty, and then return'd Homewards; Signior Corraro, the Venetian Ambaſſador in Ordinary, continuing here to take Care of the Concerns of that Republick. On the 5th of June was publiſh'd her Majeſty's Proclamation, declaring her Majeſty's Pleaſure for holding the Firſt Parliament of Great Britain at Weſtminſter, on the Twenty Third of October next. The ſame Day ∴, the Duke of Queenſberry was ſworn of the Privy-Council; and on the 6th of the ſame Month, the following Perſons were appointed Commiſſioners under the Seal of Great Britain, for manging the Equivalent due to Scotland, according to the Treaty of Union: Viz. Sir Andrew Hume, William Dalrymple of Glenmure, Eſq; Sir Robert Sinclair of Stevenſon, Sir Thomas Burnet of Leys, Sir John Erſkine of Alva, Sir James Campbel of Aberurhill, Sir John Swinton of Swinton, Sir James Smollet of Bowhill; Sir Patrick Johnſtoun, late Provoſt of Edinburgh; Sir Francis Grant, Advocate; George Baily of Jerviſwood, John Halden of Glenargies, John Bruce of Kinroſs, William Seaton of Pitmeden, Junior, John Clark of Pennycook, Junior; Alexander Abercromby of Glaſſock; Murgo Graham of Gorthy, John Pringle of Hanyng, John Graham of Dougalſton, ——— Douglas of Kellhead, Daniel Campbel of Arntenmet, Eſquires; Sir John Cope, Knight; Jacob Reynardſon, John Bridges, and James Houblon, Eſquires. On the 23d of June, at a Council held at Windſor, her Majeſty was pleas'd to make a new Appointment (on Occaſion of the Union) of the Lord Chancellor, and Lord High-Treaſurer: Their Lordſhips, for ſome Time, left their Places of Poſt at the Council-Table, and ſat only according to their Rank of Peerage, 'till her Majeſty was pleas'd, after the reading a publick Inſtrument, to reinveſt them with the Titles of Lord Chancellor, and Lord High-Treaſurer of Great Britain, and new Patents paſs'd the Seal for that Purpoſe. A Week  after, the Queen and Prince, who went to Windſor the 12th, came from thence to Kenſington; and on the 1ſt of July, his Royal Highneſs took the Oath in the High Court of Chancery, as Lord High-Admiral of Great Britain, Ireland, and the Plantations; and the ſame Evening her Majeſty, and the Prince, return'd to Windſor. His Royal Highneſs, by a new Commiſſion, appointed Sir David Mitchel, Knight, George Churchill, Eſq; the Honourable Robert Walpole, Eſq; and Sir Stafford Fairborne, to be of his Council in the Affairs of the Admiralty.

The Earl of Pembroke, Lord Preſident of the Council, having been †† appointed Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, his Excellency ſet out for that Kingdom about the middle of June, and on the 24th, arrived at Dublin, where he was attended, and complimented by the Officers of State, Nobility and Gentry, in the uſual Manner. On the 7th of the next Month, the Parliament of Ireland being met, his Excellency made a Speech to both Houſes, wherein he told them, "That the Queen, "through the whole Courſe of her Glorious Reign, had not only ſhewn her great "Care for the Preſervation of the Liberties of Europe, but had been always intent "on whatſoever might contribute to the Good of all her Subjects; and, to the ut"moſt of her Power, had endeavour'd to unite them in Love and Affection: And "now, in particular, to manifeſt her tender Concern for them of her Kingdom of "Ireland, ſhe had again call'd them together, to conſider of ſuch Laws as might be "thought neceſſary for the further Proſperity of that her Realm; and to provide "for the Security of it, againſt Foreign and Domeſtick Enemies. Affairs abroad in the Year 1707.

After the prodigious Succeſſes that had attended the Confederate Arms at Schellenberg, Bleinheim, Ramellies, and Turin, it was the general Opinion, that the French King could not, in ſeveral Years, have retriev'd ſo many, and ſuch great Misfortunes; but would be obliged, at any Rate, to purchaſe Peace, which his Subjects begg'd of him, not in ſoft Murmurs, but in ſolemn Speeches, and even Orations from the Pulpit. Theſe Indications of the great Streights to which the French Nation was reduc'd, ſwell'd the Hopes of the Confederates: But, France having made this Winter greater Efforts to repair her Loſſes, than the Allies to improve their Victories, the Year 1707 proved almoſt the entire Reverſe of the preceding. This Viciſſitude appear'd moſt ſenſible in Spain, where the miſſing of the faireſt Opportunity that could offer to ſecure the whole Kingdom, after King Philip's precipitate Retreat from Madrid, was attended with very fatal Conſequences.

In a General Council of War held by King Charles at Valencia, in December, 1706, about the Operations of the enſuing Campaign, it was agreed, That all the Confederate Forces in that Kingdom, as likewiſe thoſe that were expected with the Earl Rivers, ſhould act in one Body, and enter Caſtile, by the way of Arragon, where the Paſſage of the Tagus was moſt practicable: And that for the Preſervation of the Kingdom of Valencia, the Army ſhould take the Field early, and endeavour to deſtroy the Enemies Magazines, on that Frontier; as likewiſe to take ſome Fortreſſes for their Security, when the Army ſhould march away; and, if poſſible, to fall on ſome Body of the Enemy's Troops, before their whole Force was aſſembled. This Reſolution was not generally approv'd: For the Earl of Peterborow, whether, as ſome would inſinuate, out of a Pique for being removed from the Command of the Army, or merely out of publick Spirit, and Zeal for the Common Cauſe, in a Council of War held at Valencia, the 4th of February, 1707, N. S. gave, in Writing, his Opinion, againſt an Offenſive War in Spain; urging, " That the Confederate Troops in Italy, under the Command of " the Duke of Savoy, and Prince Eugene, could only give the Mortal Blow, by en- " tring France: That the Difficulties of ſubſiſting Armies in Caſtile, were ſuffi- " ciently apparent by the laſt Campaign: That the Dangers were evident of put- " ting the whole upon the Riſque of paſſing to Madrid, before an Army ſuperior in " Cavalry: And that, above all Things, the Defence of Catalonia, Arragon, and " Valencia, was neceſſary." King Charles, with his German and Spaniſh Generals and Miniſters, and Count Noyelles, concurr'd with the Earl of Peterborow; but they were over-ruled by Brigadier Stanhope, the Queen's Miniſter, who declared, in her Name, That her poſitive Orders were, That they ſhould ſeek the Enemy, march to Madrid, and not divide the Forces upon any Occaſion whatſoever. Soon after this, the Earl of Peterborow went, a Second Time, to Italy, and Turin, and preſs'd more earneſtly, and explain'd more at large, the Advice he had given in the Council of War, in a Letter ‖ to the Portugueze Ambaſſador; which ſhews how well his Lordſhip judg'd of the Poſture of Affairs, at that Juncture. But before his Scheme could reach Spain, the Confederate Generals had enter'd upon the Purſuit of other Meaſures, either through the Neceſſity of their preſent Circumſtances, or in Diſcharge of repeated Orders to engage the Enemy, before the Duke of Berwick had been join'd by the French Succours.

We have already taken notice, that about the Beginning of February, Sir Cloudeſly Shovel and the Earl Rivers arriv'd at Alicant with the Land-Forces; which having, for above Six Months, been expos'd to all the Inconveniencies that uſually attend long Voyages, did hardly make up Seven Thouſand Men, fit for the Service; and the Engliſh, ſoon after their Landing, were reduc'd to about Four Thouſand Five Hundred. In order to ſtrengthen the Army, the Earl of Galway ſent for the Lord Tyrawley's Regiment, and the Two Battalions of Marines, that were in Catalonia; but the Viceroy of that Principality would not ſuffer them to march from their Quarters, or part with any Troops out of the Province, without the King's Order;

Campaign in Spain.

In a General Council of War held by King Charles at Valencia, in December, 1706, about the Operations of the enſuing Campaign, it was agreed, That all the Confederate Forces in that Kingdom, as likewiſe thoſe that were expected with the Earl Rivers, ſhould act in one Body, and enter Caſtile, by the way of Arragon, where the Paſſage of the Tagus was moſt practicable: And that for the Preſervation of the Kingdom of Valencia, the Army ſhould take the Field early, and endeavour to deſtroy the Enemies Magazines, on that Frontier; as likewiſe to take ſome Fortreſſes for their Security, when the Army ſhould march away; and, if poſſible, to fall on ſome Body of the Enemy's Troops, before their whole Force was aſſembled. This Reſolution was not generally approv'd: For the Earl of Peterborow, whether, as ſome would inſinuate, out of a Pique for being removed from the Command of the Army, or merely out of publick Spirit, and Zeal for the Common Cauſe, in a Council of War held at Valencia, the 4th of February, 1707, N. S. gave, in Writing, his Opinion, againſt an Offenſive War in Spain; urging, "That the Confederate Troops in Italy, under the Command of "the Duke of Savoy, and Prince Eugene, could only give the Mortal Blow, by en- "tring France: That the Difficulties of ſubſiſting Armies in Caſtile, were ſuffi- "ciently apparent by the laſt Campaign: That the Dangers were evident of put- "ting the whole upon the Riſque of paſſing to Madrid, before an Army ſuperior in "Cavalry: And that, above all Things, the Defence of Catalonia, Arragon, and "Valencia, was neceſſary." King Charles, with his German and Spaniſh Generals and Miniſters, and Count Noyelles, concurr'd with the Earl of Peterborow; but they were over-ruled by Brigadier Stanhope, the Queen's Miniſter, who declared, in her Name, That her poſitive Orders were, That they ſhould ſeek the Enemy, march to Madrid, and not divide the Forces upon any Occaſion whatſoever. Soon after this, the Earl of Peterborow went, a Second Time, to Italy, and Turin, and preſs'd more earneſtly, and explain'd more at large, the Advice he had given in the Council of War, in a Letter ‖ to the Portugueze Ambaſſador; which ſhews how well his Lordſhip judg'd of the Poſture of Affairs, at that Juncture. But before his Scheme could reach Spain, the Confederate Generals had enter'd upon the Purſuit of other Meaſures, either through the Neceſſity of their preſent Circumſtances, or in Diſcharge of repeated Orders to engage the Enemy, before the Duke of Berwick had been join'd by the French Succours.

‖ Dated April 21. N. S.

We have already taken notice, that about the Beginning of February, Sir Cloudeſly Shovel and the Earl Rivers arriv'd at Alicant with the Land-Forces; which having, for above Six Months, been expos'd to all the Inconveniencies that uſually attend long Voyages, did hardly make up Seven Thouſand Men, fit for the Service; and the Engliſh, ſoon after their Landing, were reduc'd to about Four Thouſand Five Hundred. In order to ſtrengthen the Army, the Earl of Galway ſent for the Lord Tyrawley's Regiment, and the Two Battalions of Marines, that were in Catalonia; but the Viceroy of that Principality would not ſuffer them to march from their Quarters, or part with any Troops out of the Province, without the King's Order;

Order; which was often ſollicited to no Purpoſe. Moreover, towards the End of February, the King was perſwaded by his German Counſellors, (with whom Count Noyelles concurr'd in all Things, meerly to thwart the other Generals) to declare his Intention of going into Catalonia: And accordingly, a few Days after, his Majeſty proceeded on his Journey thither; taking with him the Regiment of Dragoons of Winterſeldt, conſiſting of Four Squadrons, and Count Falais's Regiment of Dutch Foot. However, at parting, he aſſur'd the Britiſh, Dutch, and Portugueze Generals, that whenever it ſhould be thought proper to march to Madrid, he would be ready to join them with the Troops from Catalonia; which, with the Horſe and Foot his Majeſty took along with him, made up Twenty nine Squadrons, and Twelve Battalions.

All the Confederate Forces that remain'd in Valencia, amounted only to Forty two Battalions of Foot, and Fifty three Squadrons of Horſe, Engliſh, Dutch, and Portugueze, making about Four Thouſand Five Hundred Horſe, and Eleven Thouſand Foot, effective. With theſe Forces, the Marquis das Minas and the Earl of Galway took the Field, on the 6th of April N. S. deſtroy'd the Enemy's Magazines at Caudette, Tecla, and Montagre, (at which laſt Place, the Duke of Popoli was like to be ſurprized, and taken) and forc'd ſeveral Bodies of the Enemy's Troops to retire further into Caſtile: But inſtead of marching forwards, by the Head of the Tagus, into Arragon, to avoid the Enemy's ſuperior Horſe in the Plains, they unadviſedly march'd back, and laid Siege to the Caſtle of Villena, an inconſiderable Place, where Monſieur de Groſteſt, Captain of the Regiment of Blaiſois, with no more than a Hundred and fifty Soldiers, and ſome Country-Militia, made ſo reſolute a Defence, that before the Allies had made a practicable Breach, the Spaniſh Army was form'd at Almanza, conſiſting of Seventy ſix Squadrons, Horſe and Dragoons, and Fifty four Battalions of Foot, under the Command of the Duke of Berwick. The Accounts the Confederate Generals receiv'd of the Enemy's Strength, were various and uncertain; but all Informations agreed, that their Deſign was either to attempt the Relief of Villena, or to cut off the Communication of the Allies with Valencia, from whence they receiv'd all their Proviſions. On the other hand, the Earl of Galway and the Marquis das Minas conſider'd, that the Duke of Orleans was on his way to join the Enemy's Army, with Seven or Eight Thouſand of the French Forces: That, on the contrary, the Confederate Army diminiſh'd daily by Sickneſs, eſpecially the Troops lately arriv'd from England; That they had no Proſpect of being reinforc'd by the Troops in Catalonia, King Charles (ſince his Departure) having declar'd his Intention to march with thoſe Forces to the Frontiers of Rouſſillon; and deſir'd the Earl of Galway to remain on the Defenſive, and to divide the Army on the Frontiers of Valencia and Arragon, for the Security of thoſe Provinces: And that they could not purſue this laſt Counſel, without abandoning the Kingdom of Valencia to the Fury and Reſentment of an incens'd Army; their Magazines, on thoſe Frontiers, being almoſt exhauſted. Upon all theſe Conſiderations, at a Council of War, held the 24th of April N. S. it was unanimouſly agreed, to march and attack the Enemy: And tho', that very Night, Two French Officers came over to the Confederates, and inform'd the Earl of Galway, that moſt of the French Succours had actually join'd the Spaniards, yet his Lordſhip perſiſted in the Reſolution to fight. Accordingly, the * next Morning, early, the Confederate Army march'd in Four Columns towards Almanza; and upon the Appearance of their Vanguard, the Enemy immediately ſtruck their Tents, call'd in their Forragers, and form'd themſelves in Order of Battel, having the Town of Almanza in the Rear of their Second Line, a little to the Right of the Center. The Allies enter'd the Plain about Noon; and their Army having been drawn up in Battalia, continued their March till within a Mile of the Enemy; where the Lines halted, to eaſe and refreſh the Soldiers; who having march'd, upon a Stretch, ſince Break of Day, were very much fatigu'd, and out of Breath. The Earl of Galway having cloſely view'd the Enemy's Army, and being, by his own Eyes, convinc'd of their ſuperior Strength, began to wiſh he had not ventur'd ſo far; but there being hardly a Poſſibility of retreating, without expoſing his Rear, he reſolv'd to make Neceſſity a Virtue; and, in order to ſupply his Want of Cavalry, his Lordſhip interlin'd a Brigade of Foot with each Wing of Horſe. On the other hand, the Duke of Berwick having drawn from his Left ſome Squadrons, to reinforce his Right Wing; Sir Charles O-Hara, (lately created Lord Tyrawley) who commanded the Confederates Left Wing, order'd the Portugueze Horſe of the Left of the Rear Line, commanded by the Conde d' Atalaya, to double into the firſt Line, to make an equal Front with the Enemy. Theſe Diſpoſitions being made, about Three in the Afternoon, the Earl of Galway march'd, at the Head of the Engliſh Dragoons, to begin the Battel with the Enemy's Right Wing of Horſe; the the Portugueze, who were poſted on the Right, being order'd to take the Charge, as it ſhould come to them gradually, from the Left; but not before the Engliſh and Dutch were actually engag'd. The Spaniards having plac'd ſome Guns on an Eminence, from whence they fir'd upon the Engliſh, Colonel Dormer was detach'd, with ſome Dragoons, to attack that Battery; but, upon his Approach, the Enemy withdrew their Cannon with Precipitation. As ſoon as the Engliſh Dragoons were come up within a Hundred Paces of the Enemy's Horſe, they likewiſe advanc'd out of their Line, to meet the Charge; and the Engagement was very obſtinate, and bloody on both ſides. The Spaniards, by the Weight of their ſtronger Squadrons, forc'd the Engliſh to retreat about Fifty Paces: But Colonel Southwell's and Wade's Regiments of Foot, who were on the Left of that Brigade, which was interlin'd with the Horſe of the firſt Line, coming up, gave their Fire upon the Enemy's Flank and Rear; and the Confederate Cavalry, at the ſame Time, renewing their Charge in the Front, drove the Enemy, in Diſorder, thro' their own Lines, with great Slaughter. By this Time, the Engliſh and Dutch Foot, under the Command of Lieutenant-General Erle, and Baron Freiſheim, were ſharply engag'd in the Center, and broke thro' the Enemy's Firſt and Second Lines, bearing down all before them as far as the Walls of Almanza. But this Succeſs did not laſt long; for the Enemy's Squadrons of the Second Line fell in upon the Flank of the Confederate Infantry, and drove them back with great Loſs: Whereupon Colonel Hill's and the Lord Mark Kerr's Regiments, which had been interlin'd with the Horſe of the Second Line, march'd up, and attack'd ſome Spaniſh Regiments, to favour their Retreat. The Enemy, at the ſame Time, obſerving, that the Portugueze Cavalry on the Right of the Allies, did not advance with their Left Wing, detach'd ſome Squadrons to attack them; which they did with ſo much Vigor and Succeſs, that the whole Right Wing of the Portugueze Horſe being broke with the firſt Charge, made off with Precipitation, and abandon'd their Infantry; who being ſurrounded, moſt of them were either kill'd, or taken Priſoners. And 'tis remarkable, that Two Portugueze Battalions, poſted at ſome Diſtance, when their Cavalry were retiring, ſuppoſing it had been the Enemy coming down upon them, gave them a Volley, and kill'd and wounded ſeveral of their own Men. In the mean Time, the Battel continued on the Confederate Left Wing; the Spaniards ſtill charging with freſh Squadrons, without Succeſs: For the Engliſh and Portugueze Horſe, favour'd by the Fire of the Engliſh Battalions, broke the Enemy, driving into a Crowd Fifteen or Sixteen of their Squadrons, who retir'd to a riſing Ground in the Rear of their Line, but could not be brought to charge again. Hereupon the Enemy ſent for Nine Battalions, moſt of them French, commanded by the Chevalier d' Hasfeld; who drew them up before their Front-Line of Horſe, in Oppoſition to the Engliſh Brigade of Foot, which conſiſted of Colonel Southwell's, Blood's, Wade's, and Montjoy's Regiments; and was reinforc'd by Lieutenant-General Stewart's Regiment, from the Second Line. At the ſame Time, the Enemy brought up ſeveral freſh Squadrons, to make another Charge upon the Confederate Left Wing of Horſe, who had ſuffer'd very much, and loſt moſt of the Officers that commanded Squadrons; Brigadier Carpenter being the only one that remain'd unhurt: For the Conde d' Atalaya, who commanded the Portugueze Horſe on the Left, was carry'd off wounded. In this Condition, the Confederate Horſe were no longer able to ſuſtain the Charge of the Spaniards; and, at the ſame Time, the Nine French Battalions briſkly attacking the Engliſh Brigade of Foot, in Front and Flank, entirely broke them. The Two French Regiments that fell in upon their Flank, being too far advanc'd, the Lord Tyrawley order'd Colonel Roper, who commanded Major-General Harvey's Horſe, to attack them; which was done with ſo much Vigor, that they broke thro' them, and made them beg for Quarter: But the Spaniſh Cavalry coming up to their Aſſiſtance, the Enemy now had nothing to do, but to ſurround the Confederate Foot, which were broken on the Plain, and to whom, for ſome Time, they gave no Quarter. In this State of Deſpair, Major-General Shrimpton, Brigadier Macartney, Colonel Briton, Colonel Hill, and ſeveral other Officers, who had engag'd in the Center, took up a bold Reſolution; and having aſſembled the Stragglers of the Engliſh Regiments into a Body, join'd ſome of the Dutch and Portugueze, who had been rally'd by Count de Dhona and Don Juan Emanuel, and form'd a Body of near Four Thouſand Men; with whom, tho' purſued by the Enemy's Horſe, they retreated to the Hills of Caudette, Two Leagues from the Field of Battel.

The Earl of Galway, during the whole Action, ſhew'd more Bravery than Conduct, being ſo cloſely engaged with the Enemy's Horſe, that he receiv'd Two Cuts in the Face, near the Right Eye, which, for ſome Time, made him uncapable of acting; but having got his Wounds bound up, he return'd to the Fight, and ex-pos'd himſelf among the thickeſt of the Enemy; 'till being overpower'd, and like to be ſurrounded, he was forc'd, by thoſe about him, to provide for his own Safety, with a ſmall Party of Carpenter's and Guiſcard's Dragoons. Brigadier Killigrew being wounded in the firſt Onſet, ſtill kept the Field, and was kill'd in a Second Charge; Lieutenant-Colonel Roper, of Major-General Harvey's; Lieutenant-Colonel Lawrence, of Brigadier Carpenter's; Lieutenant-Colonel Dormer, of the Lord Eſſex's; and Lieutenant-Colonel Green, of the Lord Peterborow's, were kill'd at the Head of their reſpective Squadrons, after having behav'd themſelves with ſignal Courage and Intrepidity; and Colonel Pierce, and Mr. O-Hara, Son to the Lord Tyrawley, were wounded. Of the Foot, Lieutenant Auſtin, of the Guards; Lieutenant-Colonel Mac-Neal, of Southwell's; Lieutenant-Colonel Woollet, and Lieutenant-Colonel Withers, of Blood's; Lieutenant-Colonel Ramſey, of Macartney's; Colonel Areſkine, and Lieutenant-Colonel Areſkine, of Mark Kerr's, were among the ſlain: And the Lord Mark Kerr was wounded in the Arm, and Colonel Clayton in the Body. The Dutch Infantry perform'd Wonders; but, amongſt them, the Regiments of Weldren and Cavalier ſuffer'd moſt. Colonel Cavalier himſelf gave repeated Proofs of that Bravery, by which he had before made his Name ſo famous in the Cevennes; and having receiv'd ſeveral Wounds, and lain ſome Time among the ſlain, made his Eſcape by the Favour of a Horſe an Engliſh Officer gave him. Mr. Prat, his Lieutenant-Colonel, with Five Captains, Six Lieutenants, and Five Enſigns, were left dead upon the Spot, and moſt of the other Officers wounded, or taken Priſoners.

The Enemy's Loſs, during the Action, was near equal to that of the Confederates: For, the Portugueze Cavalry (under the Conduct of the Marquis das Minas) having betimes conſulted their own Safety, and the Earl of Galway retreated with the broken Remains of the Engliſh and Dutch Horſe and Dragoons; the Spaniards would have had little Reaſon to boaſt of their Victory, had the Infantry, that retir'd to the Hills of Caudette, march'd off in the Night, as they might ſecurely have done. But Count Dhona, and Major-General Shrimpton, upon a falſe Report that the Enemy were ſurrounding them, ſent Major Alexander of Briton's, and Major Petit of Torſay's Regiment, to the Enemy's Camp, with a Propoſal to ſurrender Priſoners at Diſcretion; which the Duke of Berwick readily accepted. Don Emanuel, Brother to Count d' Atalaya, and a Major of Horſe, would have no Share in ſo diſhonourable a Capitulation; and, to ſhew how eaſily it might have been avoided, retir'd with a few Portugueze Horſe; as did alſo a Serjeant of Viſouſe's Regiment, with about Eighty Men. The Earl of Galway, having left Gariſons in Alcira, Xativa, Denia, and Alicant, march'd with the Portugueze Cavalry to the other ſide of the Ebro, near Tortoſa, in order to join the reſt of K. Charles's Forces, and defend the Principality of Catalonia; whoſe Preſervation was, indeed, chiefly owing to his Lordſhip's unweary'd Vigilance and Activity.

The Duke of Orleans reduces ſeveral Places. * May 8.

The Duke of Orleans, who arriv'd at Almanza the Day after the Battel, having taken upon him the Command of the French and Spaniſh Army, came, on the 2d of May N. S. before Requena; the Gariſon of which Place, conſiſting of Two Battalions of Valentians, ſurrender'd, the next Day, Priſoners of War. Five * Days after, the City of Valencia, by a ſolemn Deputation to the Duke of Orleans, reſign'd themſelves to K. Philip's Clemency, and implor'd his Royal Highneſs's Interceſſion: But notwithſtanding this Submiſſion, Don Antonio del Valle, a Major-General, who was ſent to Valencia with Twelve Battalions, and Six Squadrons of Horſe, committed great Exactions in that City, diſarm'd the Inhabitants, and caus'd a Citadel to be built, to keep them the more in awe. After the Reduction of Valencia, the Duke of Orleans dividing his Forces into Two Bodies, the one (which he deſign'd to command himſelf) march'd towards Saragoſſa; and the other, under the Command of the Duke of Berwick, purſued the Allies towards Tortoſa; tho' by very eaſy Marches, for want of Proviſions, and other Neceſſaries. His Royal Highneſs was no ſooner † May 25. N.S. arrived † with his Army, within a League of Saragoſſa, than the Conde de la Puebla abandon'd the Place, and, with the Horſe and Foot under his Command, retir'd over the Ebro, towards Monçon and Lerida; whereupon the Inhabitants of Saragoſſa made their Submiſſion for the whole Kingdom of Arragon, and were treated in the ſame manner with thoſe of Valencia.

The Duke of Berwick was not ſo ſucceſsful in his Progreſs: For, having attempted to paſs the Bridge of Tortoſa, which the Earl of Galway had caus'd to be fortify'd, and left ſome Forces to defend it; the French and Spaniards were ‖ May 23. N.S. Twice ‖ repuls'd, with conſiderable Loſs. This was, however, ſufficiently made up by the Reduction of Xativa, which Town the Chevalier d' Hasfeld took by Storm, the 25th of May N. S.; and, not many Days after, the Caſtle ſurrender'd, upon honourable Terms, to Count Mahoni; who having attack'd the Town of Alcyra, a Place a Place of ſmall Defence, ſoon obliged Colonel Stewart, the Governor in it, to beat a Parley. All the Articles he demanded, were readily granted, but, contrary to the Capitulation, his Gariſon was detain'd ſeveral Months; and the Court of Madrid thinking now all Things ſecure, and acting upon the deſpotick Maxims of France, gave dreadful Examples of Severity, by cauſing Xativa to be burnt to the Ground, and by ſuppreſſing the ancient Privileges of the Kingdoms of Valencia and Arragon. Not long after the Reduction of Alcyra, the Chevalier d' Hasfeld laid Siege to Denia, a Town which had but bare Walls, without any other Fortification, than ſome Intrenchments and Coupures caſt up behind them, by the Direction of Inginier Chardeloup. The Gariſon, at firſt, conſiſted only of Seventy Engliſh Soldiers, commanded by Major Percival, of the Marquis de Montandre's Regiment, and the like Number of Spaniards and Portugueze, with ſome Militia of the neighbouring Country; but being ſeaſonably reinforc'd by the Governor of Alicant, with ſufficient Quantities of Ammunition, and other Warlike Stores, they made ſo reſolute and obſtinate a Defence, that they repulſed the Beſiegers in Two Storms, and forc'd them to give over their Enterprize, with the Loſs of above a Thouſand of their Men, after they had lain Three Weeks before the Place. Captain Moody, Commander of the Lancaſter, who, with Four Men of War, was going to join the Grand Confederate Fleet, contributed not a little to preſerve that Town: For being off of it, and hearing the Report of Guns, he ſent his Boat aſhore, to know the Meaning? Anſwer being return'd, that there were Three Thouſand Men before the Place, and that the Gariſon could not hold out above that Night, he immediately went in, landed Guns, and provided that City with about Four Hundred Men, and raiſed Batteries againſt the Enemy, who, in Two Days after, rais'd the Siege.

Denia bravely defended by Major Percival, and the Siege raiſed about the middle of July.

The Duke of Orleans having, ſome Time before, been join'd by the Forces under the Duke of Berwick, attempted to paſs the Cinca, but did not find it practicable in Sight of the Allies, poſted on the other Side. Hereupon he divided his Forces into Three Bodies, to oblige the Confederates to do the like, and ſent one of them to attack Mequinenza, a Place ſituated on the Angle formed by the Cinca and the Segra, where they both fall into the Ebro. The Town having no other Defence than a bare Wall, the Allies quitted the ſame, as ſoon as they ſaw a Breach made, and retired into the Caſtle, which they were ſoon after oblig'd to ſurrender. Another Body of the Enemy had the good Luck to paſs the Cinca at Fraga, which the Confederates abandon'd; whereupon the Duke of Orleans caus'd the reſt of his Army to paſs * that River, with Intention to attack the Confederates poſted under the Cannon of Lerida; but finding the Attempt too hazardous, he gave it over; and the Earl of Galway having provided for the Security of that Place, retired towards Barcelona. The Duke of Orleans having paſs'd the Segra, without any Oppoſition, every Body expected that he would have beſieged either Tortoſa, or Lerida; but wanting a Train of Artillery, and other Neceſſaries for ſuch an Enterprize, the Heats being exceſſive, and his Troops fatigued, he march'd up along the Segra, poſſeſs'd Balaguer, an open Place, which the Allies had abandon'd, and put his Army into Quarters of Refreſhment. Some Time after, his Royal Highneſs laid † Siege to Lerida, which, after a memorable Reſiſtance, ſurrendred ‖ upon honourable Terms. The Duke of Orleans highly complimented the Prince of Darmſtadt, the Governor, on his brave Defence, and preſented him with Two Pieces of Cannon, and a Mortar; but his Royal Highneſs caus'd Major-General Wills to be ſeiz'd, as a Reprizal for ſome ill Treatment pretended to have been offer'd to Brigadier Don Joſeph de Chaves, though, at the ſame Time, that Britiſh General had Leave to march off upon his Parole. The Earl of Galway, who was advanc'd to las Borgas, held ſeveral Councils of War, wherein it was debated, whether they ſhould attempt the Relief of Lerida; but the Confederate Troops not being half ſo numerous as the French, and the Portugueze Cavalry not to be depended upon, that Motion was unanimouſly rejected, and ſo that General, who had the Mortification to be an Eye-Witneſs of the Loſs of that important Key of Catalonia, on the Side of Arragon, was oblig'd to ſend his Forces into Winter Quarters.

In the mean Time, Mr. Stanhope, who, beſides his Poſt of Brigadier of the Engliſh Forces in Spain, had alſo the Character of her Majeſty's Envoy Extraordinary, and Plenipotentiary, with a great deal of Dexterity, improved the Opportunity of King Charles's broken Affairs, to draw him into a Treaty of Commerce, which would have been of infinite Advantage to the Engliſh Nation, had that Prince remain'd quiet Poſſeſſor of the Spaniſh Throne. To bring this about, Brigadier Stanhope ingratiated himſelf with the Counteſs of Orapeza, a Lady of great Wit, whoſe Huſband was one of the Chief Grandees of Spain, but who having abandon'd all his high Places, and great Eſtate, to follow King Charles's Fortune, was reduc'd to extream Indigence; and therefore was the more more liable to be managed by his Lady, for whom Mr. Stanhope had obtain'd a conſiderable Preſent from the Queen. This Nobleman, who had the greateſt Weight in King Charles's Spaniſh Council, being gain'd, and appointed one of his Catholick Majeſty's Plenipotentiaries, together with the Prince of Lichtenſtein, and Count de Cardona, Admiral of Arragon, a Treaty was concluded and ſigned by them, and Mr. Stanhope, at Barcelona, on the 10th Day of July, containing, in Subſtance, the following Articles: I. That there ſhould be an univerſal and ſincere Peace, between the Queen of Great Britain, and the King of Spain, their Heirs, Succeſſors, and the Subjects of both Nations. II. That all the Treaties of Peace, Friendſhip, Confederacy, free Commerce and Navigation between both Crowns, ſhould be held to be as firmly renew'd and eſtabliſh'd, by Virtue of this preſent Treaty, as if they were inſerted therein Verbatim; provided they were not contradictory to one another, nor any way leſſen the Force of theſe preſent Articles. And that the Royal Cedulas, or Patents, which contain divers Privileges granted by Philip the Fourth, confirm'd by the Treaty of May $\frac{15}{25}$, 1667; and all other Grants formerly made by any King of Spain, ſhould have the ſame Force and Effect with this preſent Treaty. III. That all the Subjects on both Sides, who had been made Priſoners by either, whether in America, or any where elſe, ſhould be reſtored, and ſet at Liberty, as ſpeedily as poſſible, without Charge or Ranſom. IV. That all Merchandize and Goods, which the Subjects of Great Britain import into Spain, for which any Cuſtoms under the Name of Conſumption, or other Tolls uſed to be demanded, ſhould not be obliged to pay the ſaid Tolls, 'till Six Months after the Unloading, or Sale and Delivery of the ſaid Goods. V. That the Subjects of Great Britain might bring and import into the Dominions of Spain, all Sorts of Goods, Wares, Manufactures and Fruits, the Produce of the Dominions of Morocco; nor ſhould any greater Toll be demanded for the ſame, than uſual. VI. That Books of Rate, commonly call'd Fueros, containing an exact Account of the Cuſtoms agreed on by the Commiſſioners from the Queen of Great Britain, and the King of Spain, ſhould be adjuſted and eſtabliſh'd, within Twelve Months after the ſigning of this Treaty, and be publiſh'd through all the Spaniſh Dominions: Nor ſhould the Britiſh Subjects be obliged to pay any greater Duties, than what is therein ſet down; and for all other Goods not mention'd in theſe Tables, the Rate of Seven per Cent. ſhould be demanded upon the Credit of the Inſtrument, declaring the Charge and Prices of the Merchandize and Goods, which ſhould be exhibited by the Merchant, or Factor, confirm'd by Witneſſes on Oath. VII. That all Goods taken as Prize, by Ships of War, ſet out either by the Queeen, or private Subjects of Great Britain, ſhould, without any Difference, be eſteem'd as Merchandize, and Goods of the Produce of the Britiſh Iſlands. VIII. That the Queen of Great Britain, and the King of Spain, ſhould confirm and ratify theſe Articles within Ten Weeks.

To this Treaty was annex'd a ſecret, and moſt material Article, importing, That the Queen of Great Britain, and King of Spain being deſirous to knit the Ties of the Friendſhip and Alliance now concluded, in ſuch a Manner, as that the mutual Advantages of it, might redound ſo viſibly to the Benefit of the Subjects of both Crowns, that their common Intereſts might cement an eternal and indiſſoluble Union between them; and conſidering that the moſt effectual and proper Means to this End, would be to form a Company of Commerce to the Indies, whereby theſe vaſt and rich Provinces of the Dominions of his Catholick Majeſty, would enable the Monarchies of Great Britain and Spain, to make ſuch Diſpoſitions of Force, as ſhould, by curbing their Enemies, ſecure to their Subjects an univerſal and laſting Tranquility: It was therefore agreed, That ſuch a Company of Commerce ſhould be form'd, conſiſting of Subjects of Great Britain and Spain, in the Dominions of the Crown of Spain, in the Indies: But becauſe it was not poſſible, at preſent, to enter into the Particulars of ſuch a Settlement, becauſe the Duke of Anjou was, at this Time, poſſeſs'd of thoſe Provinces of Spain, which are the principal Seats of Trade, 'twas reſerv'd to ſettle the Form of the ſaid Company of Commerce to the Indies, 'till his Catholick Majeſty ſhould be poſſeſs'd of the Court of Madrid. But in Caſe unforeſeen Accidents ſhould hinder the Settlement of ſuch a Company, his Catholick Majeſty obliged himſelf, and promiſed for himſelf, and all the Kings, his Succeſſors, that he would grant to the Subjects of Great Britain, the ſame Privileges, and the ſame Liberty of a free Trade to the Indies, which his Majeſty's own Spaniſh Subjects ſhould enjoy; a previous Security being given, for the Payment of the Royal Duties. That his Catholick Majeſty likewiſe obliged himſelf, that from the Day that the general Peace ſhould be ſettled, and conſequently that he ſhould be in Poſſeſſion of the Spaniſh Indies, to the Day that the ſaid Company of Commerce ſhould be wholly ſettled, he would give Licenſe and Permiſſion, that the Subjects of Great Britain might ſend every Year, to all the Ports, and other Places of the Indies, under the Dominion of the Crown of Spain, with Ten Ships, of Five Hundred Tuns each, or more, or fewer Ships, provided their whole Burden did not exceed, in all, Five Thouſand Tuns; in which Ships, they ſhould be at Liberty to tranſport, ſell, and traffick for all the Merchandizes, and Commodities, which the Spaniſh Subjects were permitted mitted to Tranſport and Traffick for; provided that they pay all the Royal Duties, and that the ſaid Ten Ships ſhould be regiſtred in the Port of Cadiz, or in ſuch other Port of Spain, as his Catholick Majeſty ſhould appoint, ſetting out from ſuch Port to ſail to the Indies, and giving an Obligation, that from the Indies, they ſhould return to the ſame Port in Spain, without touching before at any other Port of Spain, Great Britain, or France, except in caſe of being forced to do ſo by Storm. That his Catholick Majeſty would likewiſe permit, that the ſaid Ten Ships of Trade, be accompanied by ſuch a Number of Britiſh Ships of War, as ſhould be neceſſary for their greater Protection and Security, provided that on Board the ſaid Ships of War, there might not be loaded any kind of Merchandize: His Catholick Majeſty declaring likewiſe, that he would not cauſe to be paid, or demand any Indults, or any other kind of Donative, on Account of the Trade of the ſaid Ten Ships, contenting himſelf barely with the punctual Satisfaction of the Royal Duties. And the Queen of Great Britain offer'd and promiſed on her Part, that the ſaid Ships of War ſhould, both in going to, and in returning from the Indies, take under their Convoy ſuch Ships belonging to his Catholick Majeſty, as ſhould be willing to make Uſe of that Opportunity; and likewiſe bring ſuch Plate, or other Effects, which ſhould be deliver'd to them, belonging to his Catholick Majeſty, returning the ſame to the Perſons to whom they ſhould be conſigned. That it being evident to all Men, that the Forces with which the Crown of France had diſturb'd Europe, had been furniſh'd and ſupply'd by the great Treaſures it had drawn from the Spaniſh Dominions in the Indies, by the fraudulent Introduction of their Commodities, and their Trade in thoſe Countries, it was therefore agreed, That from this Time forward, for ever, all Frenchmen, being Subjects of France, ſhould be entirely excluded, as well out of the ſaid Company of Commerce, as out of all other kind of Trade, within the Dominions of his Catholick Majeſty in the Indies: The Queen of Great Britain, and the King of Spain, obliging themſelves never to conſent, by any Treaty, publick or private, to any Matter which ſhould be repugnant to this Excluſion of the Subjects of France. After the ſigning of this Treaty, King Charles was made ſenſible, that the Conceſſions granted therein to the Engliſh Nation, were too large, and ſuch as would not eaſily go down with his own Subjects, in Caſe he ſhould ever be quietly poſſeſs'd of the Spaniſh Throne; and therefore 'twas not without Reluctance, and merely in Compliance with the Neceſſity of his Affairs, that he confirm'd and ratify'd the Articles above-mention'd, Six Months * after they had been concluded and ſigned. On the other Hand, it is obſervable, that a Felucca, which carried a Copy of this Treaty to Italy, to be from thence forwarded to Vienna, having fallen into the Hands of the French, that Court made a publick Uſe of the ſaid Treaty, by cauſing the ſame to be privately communicated to the Dutch, in order to ſtir up their Jealouſy of the Engliſh, who thereby engroſſed all the Trade to the Weſt-Indies. However, Brigadier Stanhope receiv'd in the Council of the Queen of Great Britain, the Applauſe he had merited by this important Tranſaction; and, in the next Promotion of General Officers, was advanc'd to the Poſt of a Major-General; and, about the ſame Time, appointed her Majeſty's Envoy Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary to King Charles the Third, and Commander in Chief of the Britiſh Forces in Spain.

Ratify'd Jan. 9. 1708.

Brigadier Stanhope made Major-General; and appointed Envoy Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary, and Commander in Chief in Spain.

The Allies in Spain had fondly expected, that the Portugueze would have favour'd them by a Diverſion, but were miſerably diſappointed: For on the contrary, the Duke of Oſſuna, on one Side, and the Marquis de Bay on the other, enter'd the Territories of Portugal. The Firſt, in his March to join the other, made himſelf Maſter of Serpa, where the Portugueze had Nine Hundred Men, who ſurrendred Priſoners of War, and laid Siege to Moura, which, for want of Proviſions, ſurrendred in a few Days, upon honourable Terms. At the ſame Time, the Marquis de Bay poſſeſs'd himſelf of the Bridge of Olivenza, and, with the Aſſiſtance of the Duke of Oſſuna, threaten'd to beſiege that important Place; but the Portugueze, who began to move on their Frontiers, being ſeaſonably reinforc'd, and ſpirited by the Arrival of Four Engliſh Battalions, the Marquis de Bay thought fit to lay aſide that Enterprize, and retired to Badajox, after having deſtroy'd Part of the Bridge of Olivenza. Hereupon the Marquis de Fronteira march'd, with a ſeeming Deſign to retake Serpa and Moura, but not having Forces and Neceſſaries equal to that Undertaking, he was oblig'd to ſend his Men into Quarters of Refreſhment. In the Autumn Campaign, the Marquis de Bay took the Town of Ciudad-Rodrigo by Storm; ſoon after which, both Spaniards, and Portugueze, retired into their reſpective Winter-Quarters.

And Ciudad Rodrigo by the M. de Bay.

The Affairs of the Confederates had not a better Aſpect in Germany: The Empire, whoſe united and well-managed Strength, might, alone, cope with the Power of France, did once more fall into thoſe Misfortunes, occaſion'd by the uſual Backwardneſs and Negligence of ſome of its Members; and the Remonſtrances and Complaints that had been made to the Emperor, and the Diet at Ratiſbon, on the Part of

of Great Britain and Holland, whilſt Prince Lewis was yet alive, were as ineffectual, when the Margrave of Bareith took upon him the Command of the Army on the Upper Rhine. The German Forces were ſo inconſiderable in their Numbers, and ſo ill-provided, as not to be able to ſtand a ſudden Irruption of the Enemy. The active Mareſchal de Villars, having, with great Diligence and Secrecy, aſſembled his Army early, paſs'd the Rhine, ſurpriz'd and forc'd the Lines of Biehl and Stolhoffen, oblig'd the few Germans, that faintly oppos'd him, to retire towards Nordlingen; and exacted large Contributions from the Dutchy of Wirtemberg, the Country of Swabia, (as far as Memingen, and Ulm) great Part of Franconia, the Palatinate of the Rhine, the Bergſtraet, and other Countries: And, indeed, it ſeem'd but juſt, that People who had all along been ſo regardleſs of their own Security, ſhould feel the dire Effects of an Invaſion. The Contributions of the Dutchy of Wirtemberg, were regulated the 8th of June, N. S. at Two Millions Two Hundred Thouſand Livres, payable in Three Months; thoſe of the little Imperial City of Etlingen, at One Hundred Thouſand Livres; and Six Hundred Thouſand Livres were demanded of the Country of Baden. The Mareſchal de Villars had certainly greater Deſigns in View; no leſs than the reſtoring the Elector of Bavaria to his Dominions; but having been obliged to make great Detachments for Provence: And on the other Hand, the Army of the Empire having been ſeaſonably reinforc'd by ſome Saxons, in the Britiſh and Dutch Pay, and that brave and experienc'd Prince, the Elector of Hanover, prevail'd with to accept the Command of it, and to augment it with ſome of his own Forces; the Face of Affairs began to change on that Side, towards the End of the Campaign, Count Mercy having defeated * a conſiderable Body of French Troops, commanded by the Marquis de Vivans.

Mareſchal de Villars forces the Lines of the Germans: And exacts great Contributions.

The Elector of Hanover takes upon him the Command of the Imperial Army.

The Duke of Marlborough, who hitherto had made ſo ſhining a Figure by his Military Atchievements, merited, this Year, the publick Attention, chiefly by his important Negotiations. Upon his Arrival † at the Hague, his Grace had a Conference with the Deputies of the States-General, wherein, among other Particulars, he told them, "That the Troubles of Saxony occaſioning a great Diſtraction in the "Empire, which brought infinite Prejudice to the Common Cauſe, the Queen, his "Miſtreſs, had thought fit to ſend him thither, to pay a Compliment to the King "of Sweden, and endeavour to engage him to remove the juſt Jealouſies his long "Stay in the Heart of Germany, gave to ſome of the High Allies: For which Pur-"poſe, he had the neceſſary Powers from her Britannick Majeſty, and deſir'd to "have the ſame from the States." The Penſionary having (on the 20th of April, N. S.) acquainted the States of Holland and Weſt-Frieſland, with the Neceſſity of the Duke of Marlborough's Journey, they readily concurr'd in thoſe Meaſures, and his Grace ſet out the ſame Evening for Leipſick, by the way of Hanover. Monſieur d' Auverquerque, Velt-Mareſchal of the States Forces, having had ſeveral Conferences with the Duke of Marlborough, ſet out the Day before for Bruſſels, in order to aſſemble the Confederate Troops, in their reſpective Cantonments, and obſerve the French, who began to be in Motion about Namur.

The Duke of Marlborough's Negotiations.

His Journey to Alt-Ranſtadt.

The Duke of Marlborough took his Leave of the Court of Hanover, the 24th of April, N. S. in the Evening, ſet out from thence at Four the next Morning; and lay that Night at Halberſtad. The 26th, his Grace continued his Journey to Hall, where he was met by Mr. Robinſon, Envoy Extraordinary from her Britannick Majeſty, Count Zinzendorf, the Imperial Envoy, and Monſieur Cranenberg, the Dutch Miniſter: After Dinner, his Grace receiv'd the Compliments of the Magiſtrates, and of the Univerſity; and then proceeded to Alt-Ranſtadt, the King of Sweden's Head-Quarters, accompanied by Mr. Robinſon, and Monſieur Cranenberg. He went directly to Count Piper's Quarters, and, in a Conference with that prime Miniſter, made gliſter in his Eyes a Preſent of a Hundred Thouſand Guineas, which, according to his ſecret Inſtructions, from Mr. Secretary Boyle, his Grace was not wanting to inſinuate, weigh'd more than as many French Louis-d'Ors. The Swediſh Miniſter catch'd at the Bait; and this Golden Shower ſmooth'd the way to his Grace's favourable Reception, and ſucceſsful Negotiation. The next ‖ Morning, his Grace was complimented upon his Arrival, by the Miniſters, and General Officers, and about Ten a Clock, had his firſt Audience of the King, to whom he preſented a Letter from the Queen of Great Britain, and made him the following Compliment in French:

‖ April 27. N. S.

SIR,

His Grace's Compliment to the King of Sweden.

I Preſent to your MAJESTY a Letter, not from the Chancery, but from the Heart of the QUEEN, my Miſtreſs, and written with her own Hand. Had not her Sex prevented it, ſhe would have croſs'd the Sea, to ſee a Prince, admired by the whole Univerſe.

I am,

A. D. 1707.

I am, in this Particular, more happy than the QUEEN; and I wiſh I could ſerve ſome Campaigns under ſo Great a General as Your MAJESTY, that I might learn what I yet want to know in the Art of War.

The King of Sweden, who ſpoke with the Duke by an Interpreter, return'd his Grace's Compliment in very obliging and gracious Expreſſions; and, in a Conference which laſted near Two Hours, aſſur'd his Grace, that he would never do any Thing to the Prejudice, either of the Common Cauſe in general, or of the Proteſtant Religion in particular. After Dining with his Majeſty, the Duke had a ſecond Audience; at which were preſent, Count Piper, and Monſieur Hermelin, the Two Chief Swediſh Miniſters, and Mr. Robinſon; and then his Grace ſpent the whole Evening in Viſits to Count Piper, and the other Miniſters and General Officers. The ſame Afternoon, Count Wackerbach, Lieutenant-General of King Auguſtus's Forces, waited upon the Duke of Marlborough, with a Compliment from his Maſter, intimating, that he would be that Night at Leipſick, where he ſhould be glad to ſee his Grace. According to this Invitation, the Duke went from Alt-Ranſtad to Leipſick, to wait on K. Auguſtus; with whom he had a private Conference of about Half an Hour; and then return'd to Count Piper's Quarters, where he din'd. In the Evening, his Grace ſupp'd with Velt-Mareſchal Rheinſchild; and on the 29th, was viſited by Count Piper, Velt-Mareſchal Rheinſchild, Velt-Mareſchal Ogilvy, and ſeveral General Officers and Perſons of Quality; and after having din'd with Baron Gortz, had his Audience of Leave of the King of Sweden. Before it was ended, K. Staniſlaus came in, and was complimented by his Grace; who ſoon after took his Leave, went to Leipſick, and thence (without making any Stay) proceeded on his Journey to Berlin, very well ſatisfied with his Reception and Negotiation at the Court of Sweden. On the 30th, he arriv'd at Charlottenburgh; the King of Pruſſia having ſent Monſieur Grumkow, to deſire his Grace would paſs that Way. His Grace ſupp'd that Night with the King; and on Sunday, May the 1ſt, went to Divine Service with his Pruſſian Majeſty; who had given particular Orders to Monſieur L'Enfant, to preach in French on that Occaſion. On the 2d, his Grace ſet out from Charlottenburgh, towards Hanover, where he arriv'd on the 3d; and the Day following, after a private Conference, he din'd with his Electoral Highneſs. In the Afternoon, he departed for the Hague, where he arriv'd the 8th of May N. S. having receiv'd the higheſt Marks of Eſteem and Diſtinction in the ſeveral Courts through which he paſs'd, ſince his firſt Departure from thence. The next Day, his Grace was in Conference with the Deputies of the States-General; to whom he communicated the Aſſurances he had receiv'd from the King of Sweden, which entirely diſſipated the Jealouſies ſome of the Allies had entertain'd of his Swediſh Majeſty's Deſigns, and which were induſtriouſly fomented by the Emiſſaries of France; who, on the other hand, left no Stone unturn'd, to engage the young Northern Hero in an open Rupture with the Emperor.

Thence to Hanover.

And returns to the Hague, May 8. N. S.

The French endeavour to engage the K. of Sweden in a Rupture with the Emperor.

Nor did the K. of Sweden want plauſible Pretences to fall out with the Imperial Court; for, about this Time, an unlucky Quarrel fell out, between the Baron Strahlenheim, Envoy of Sweden, and Count Zobor, an Hungarian Lord, Son-in-Law of Prince Adam of Lichtenſtein. Being both at Dinner at Count de la Tour's, and ſpeaking of the Affairs of Europe; Count Zobor ſaid, That Three Rogues occaſion'd a great deal of Miſchief in the World. Tho' he nam'd but Prince Ragotſki for one, and K. Staniſlaus for another, yet he us'd ſuch Expreſſions, as plainly ſhew'd he meant the King of Sweden for the Third; whereupon the Swediſh Envoy thought himſelf obliged to give him a Box o' the Ear. The Company prevented the further Conſequences of that Quarrel; and Count Zobor was firſt confin'd by Order of the Emperor, and ſhortly after ſent Priſoner to the Caſtle of Gratz, in Stiria; the Commiſſaries appointed to enquire into that Affair, having reported that he was guilty of Diſreſpect towards the King of Sweden. The Swediſh Envoy having inform'd his Maſter of what had paſs'd, his Swediſh Majeſty ſent him Orders to declare that his Maſter approv'd his Conduct; and that he was order'd to forbear appearing at Court, till he had receiv'd a juſt Satisfaction, both on that Account, and for the Affront offer'd to ſome Officers of his Troops, who were liſting Men at Breſlau, and were inſulted by the People. The Imperial Miniſters were willing, at this tickliſh Juncture, to give the King of Sweden all reaſonable Satisfaction: But as to the Affair of Count Zobor, they thought, that the Swediſh Envoy having given a Blow to a Perſon of that Quality, and the Emperor having ſince confin'd him cloſe Priſoner; the Swedes ought not to inſiſt upon further Satisfaction.

Quarrel between Baron Strahlenheim and Count Zobor.

But this was not the moſt material Point that made the Imperial Court uneaſy: For, about this Time, the Swedes ſtarted ſome Pretenſions of a nicer Nature; and, in a * Declaration (or Memorial) which Count Piper communicated to Count Zinzendorf,

* Dated March 30. N. S.

The Muſcovite Troops make their Eſcape thro' Bohemia and Moravia into Poland.

zendorf, his Swediſh Majeſty inſiſted on the delivering up of the Muſcovite Troops, who, eſcaping the Year before out of Saxony, were entertain'd in the Imperial Army on the Upper Rhine. Theſe Troops having Notice of what paſs'd in relation to them, diſbanded themſelves, and, in Parties of about Twenty Men, march'd off thro' Bohemia and Moravia, to Poland: At which the King of Sweden was ſo exaſperated, that he renew'd to Count Zinzendorf, (the Imperial Miniſter at his Court) his poſitive Demand of the Surrender of thoſe Troops; adding, That he expected further Satisfaction, both for the Affront offer'd to Count Strahlenheim, and for the Recruits, which, having been raiſed for him in Sileſia, were taken from his Officers at Breſlau. The Expreſs by which Count Zinzendorf communicated theſe Demands to the Imperial Court, arriv'd at Vienna the 12th of May; and the ſame Day, Baron Strahlenheim receiv'd Orders from the King his Maſter, to repair to him, without taking Leave of that Court. At the Requeſt of the latter, he ſtay'd till the 16th, to carry with him the Emperor's Anſwer to his Swediſh Majeſty's Demands; but that Anſwer not being then ready, he ſet out for Saxony. The 18th, that Anſwer was ſent; importing, "That the Emperor had not the Muſcovites in his "Power, to deliver up: That Count Zobor ſhould be proſecuted as a Criminal by "the Fiſcal, in Courſe of Law: And that as for what was done in Sileſia, with re"ſpect to the Levies for his Swediſh Majeſty, ſufficient Satisfaction ſhould be made, "after due Examination into the Matter of Fact." Nor was this all the Tenderneſs and Caution the Imperial Court uſed, to give the King of Sweden no colourable Pretence to quarrel with them: For, when they heard that the Muſcovite Troops were taking their Flight through Bohemia and Moravia, to Poland, Count Eck was order'd to detach ſome Horſe from the River Mark, to purſue and ſeize them, in order to deliver them up to the Swedes: And thoſe detach'd Horſe not being able to overtake them, the Imperial Court afterwards ſolemnly declar'd, That the Muſcovites made their Eſcape from the Rhine, without their Connivance or Participation. However, this Declaration was contradicted by the Swediſh Envoy; who, in his way from Vienna to Saxony, meeting ſome of the ſaid Troops, and pretending to be General Wakerbaert, in King Auguſtus's Service, they frankly own'd to him, that their Eſcape was concerted with the Imperial Court; which the King of Sweden was more inclin'd to believe, than the Aſſurances given to the contrary: And thereupon, peremptorily inſiſted upon full Satisfaction, as to the Three Points already mention'd, before he left Saxony. The Emperor being reſolv'd, by all poſſible Means, to prevent a Rupture with the Swedes, who might, quickly over-run his Hereditary Countries; and having appointed Count Wratiſlaw to go to the King of Sweden, to adjuſt all Differences; that Lord writ to Count Piper, on the Subject-Matter of his Journey, to know whether he ſhould be well received? But the Swediſh Miniſter intimated in his Anſwer, That if he came empower'd to give a real Satisfaction to his Maſter, he ſhould be welcome; but that if he came to diſcuſs his Swediſh Majeſty's Pretenſions, he might ſpare himſelf the Trouble of that Journey. Hereupon the Imperial Court ſent Orders to Count Zinzendorf, to preſs Count Piper to declare, what Satisfaction his Maſter inſiſted upon, ſince he refus'd to allow his Miniſter to diſcuſs the ſame; and to aſſure him, that his Imperial Majeſty was ready to refer the controverted Points to the Arbitration of the Queen of Great Britain. Her Majeſty wrote to the ſame Monarch, to exhort him to forbear all Hoſtilities; but his Anſwer was, That ſeeing the Emperor did not give him the Satisfaction he expected, he ſhould be oblig'd to take it; ſince his delaying to do himſelf Juſtice, had encouraged People to offer him new Affronts: Which laſt Expreſſion related to the Eſcape of the Muſcovites. The Imperial Court not only comply'd with the King of Sweden's Demands, as to the delivering up both Count Zobor, and the Imperial Officers, who hinder'd the raiſing of the Swediſh Levies in Sileſia, as Preliminaries to the Admiſſion of Count Wratiſlaw as Envoy from the Emperor; but declar'd, moreover, That the City of Breſlau ſhould pay Four Thouſand Crowns to the Widow of a Swediſh Corporal, who was kill'd in that City, in a Scuffle occaſion'd by the Seizure of thoſe Levies. But this forc'd Compliance did not fully ſatisfy the King of Sweden; who, upon Count Wratiſlaw's Arrival at Alt-Ranſtad, refus'd to admit him to his Audience. That Miniſter was thereupon contented to confer with Count Piper, and the Sieur Hermelin, about the Eſcape of the Muſcovites; which the Imperial Court fondly thought was now the only important Point to be adjuſted: But the Proteſtants of Sileſia, the Exerciſe of whoſe Religion had been ſuppreſs'd by the invading Zeal of Popery, having made ſecret Application to the King of Sweden, that Monarch generouſly reſolv'd to reſtore them to their Rights and Privileges: And having ſent Four Regiments of Horſe into that Country, to protect them proviſionally, multiply'd his Demands into the following: "1ſt, That the

The K. of Sweden's new Demands of the Emperor.

"Emperor

" Emperor ſhould give it under his Hand, that he knew nothing of the March of " the Twelve Hundred Muſcovites, who eſcap'd through the Hereditary Countries. " 2dly, That he ſhould forthwith decide the Affair of the Election of Lubeck, in " Favour of the Adminiſtrator of Holſtein ; and confirm the Agreement between " that Houſe and the Chapter, for the Two next Generations. 3dly, That the " Country of Hadeln be ſequeſtred into the Hands of his Swediſh Majeſty, till the " Right of all the Pretenders to it be decided. 4thly, That the Proteſtant Religion " in Sileſia be reſtor'd, according to the Treaty of Weſtphalia. 5thly, That his Im- " perial Majeſty ſhould renounce all Pretenſions to the Quota, which the King " of Sweden had not furniſh'd during this preſent War ; and ſhould draw no Con- " ſequence from the Crown of Sweden's not having done Homage for the Domi- " nions they have in the Empire, ſince the Year 1664. And, 6thly, That the " whole Swediſh Army, in their Return thro' Sileſia into Poland, ſhould be main- " tain'd at the Emperor's Charge." Theſe new Demands occaſion'd ſeveral Confe- rences between Count Wratiſlaw and Count Piper ; and the firſt being convinc'd of the Neceſſity of preventing a Rupture, (which would have prov'd fatal to the Com- mon Cauſe) paſs'd over ſeveral Formalities, and granted ſome Points, which, at any other Time, would have been rejected by the Court of Vienna. The Miniſters of Great Britain and Holland did not a little contribute towards the Succeſs of that Negotiation, by their offering the Guaranty of her Britannick Majeſty, and of the States-General, for the Treaty that ſhould be agreed upon, ſub Spe rati, as they ex- preſs'd it ; that is, in Hope that what they offer'd, ſhould be approv'd. The Confirmation of the Treaty between the Chapter of Lubeck, and the Ducal Houſe of Gothorp, in the Year 1647, and the Reſtoration of the Exerciſe of the Proteſtant Religion in Sileſia, were the Two Articles that were of hardeſt Digeſtion with the Imperialiſts, and therefore met with the greateſt Difficulty. The Swedes inſiſted, that they ſhould be allow'd to keep ſome Troops in Sileſia, till the Churches of the Proteſtants were rebuilt ; which the Imperial Court would not agree to : And, on the other hand, they refus'd to approve and ratify the Treaty about the Biſhoprick of Lubeck, till that Affair was duly examin'd : But the Guaranty of the Queen of Great Britain, and the States-General, remov'd all Obſtacles ; and, on the firſt Day of September N. S. all Matters were agreed upon.

The Treaty concluded, Sept. 1. N. S.

The next Day, the King of Sweden decamp'd very early from his Quarters at Alt-Ranſtad ; and Count Wratiſlaw having waited upon his Majeſty, the Treaty was ſign'd at Wolkwitz that very Day ; and the Imperial Miniſter ſet out the 3d for Vienna, to have the Agreement ratify'd.

The K. of Sweden leaves Saxony, and marches into Poland.

King Auguſtus being indiſpos'd, and, conſequently, unable to take his Leave of the King of Sweden, the latter went to Dreſden the 6th of September, attended only by Five or Six Gentlemen, and made a Viſit to King Auguſtus ; with whom he had a long Conference. His Swediſh Majeſty took afterwards his Leave of the Electoreſs Dowager, and Electoral Prince ; and being return'd to his Army, conti- nued his March for Sileſia ; where, on the 12th of that Month, the Imperial Ratifi- cations of the Convention, ſign'd by Count Wratiſlaw, were deliver'd to him. That Prince was ſo well pleas'd with the Diſpatch us'd at the Imperial Court in this Af- fair, that he reſolv'd to quit Sileſia immediately, and march into Poland ; ſo that all his Forces were on the other ſide of the Oder before the 25th of September. How- ever, his Swediſh Majeſty left the Baron de Strahlenheim in Sileſia, to ſee the Execution of the Treaty ; and before his Departure from Leibnitz, he had the Satisfaction to ſee ſeveral Churches reſtor'd to the Proteſtants, which was no ſmall Mortification to the Jeſuits, and Popiſh Prieſts. It is obſervable, that the Biſhop of Breſlau, fearing the Reſentment of the Pope, took a Pretence to abſent himſelf from that City, to avoid ſigning the Orders given for reſtoring the Proteſtants to their former Rights ; but the King of Sweden being juſtly diſpleas'd with the Diſingenuity of that Prelate, ſignify'd, that he expected that he ſhould ſign and approve thoſe Orders ; which Formality he thought neceſſary, becauſe the Biſhop of Breſlau is the Chief Perſon in the Regency of Sileſia, next to the Emperor ; and therefore his re- fuſing to ſubſcribe the ſaid Orders, might afterwards have been drawn into ill Con- ſequence againſt the Proteſtants. As for Count Zobor, whom the King of Sweden had ſent Priſoner to Stetin, his Swediſh Majeſty ſet him at Liberty, with great Marks of Generoſity.

The Campaign in Flanders inconſiderable.

To return to the Duke of Marlborough ; his Grace arriv'd at Bruſſels the 13th of May N. S. and having immediately held a Council of War with Monſieur d' Auver- querque, and the Field-Deputies of the States, Orders were ſent to the Confederate Troops to march to their Rendezvouz at Anderleck, near Bruſſels ; from whence they mov'd, a few * Days after, to Bellengen and Lembeck. Upon Intelligence that the Elector of Bavaria, and the Duke of Vendoſme, who commanded the French Army, were come out of their Lines, the Allies march'd to * Soignies, with a Design to fight them in the Plain of *Fleru*s : But being further inform'd, that the Enemy were much superior in Number, and had drain'd all their Garisons, with Design to plunder the wealthy, open Cities of Brabant, in case the Allies should undertake any Siege ; the Confederate Generals march'd back from Soignies towards Brussels, and, on the 1st of June, posted themselves at Meldert. At the same Time, the French advanc'd to Gemblours ; and so both Armies continued above Two Months in their respective Camps. At last, upon Advice that the French had sent a strong Detachment from their Army towards Provence, the Duke of Marlborough and Monsieur d' Auverquerque march'd from † Meldert to Genap, with Design to attack the Enemy at Gemblours ; but upon Intelligence of the Motions of the Confederates, the French march'd to Senef, and from thence to Chievres ; in which precipitate March, they lost Abundance of their Men. From Genap, the Allies mov'd to Nivelle, and from hence to Soignies : But the great Rains, which continued for some Days, having render'd the Roads almost unpassable, obliged the Duke of Marlborough to give over the Pursuit of the Enemy ; who retir'd to Pont-à-Tresin, under the Cannon of Lisle ; whereupon the Allies advanc'd to Helchin, near the Scheld, subsisting all this while upon the French Territories.

The Duke of Marlborough finding it impossible to bring the cautious Duke de Vendosme to an Engagement, his Grace left the Camp at Helchin, the 4th of October N. S. and upon his Arrival at the Hague, communicated to the Deputies of the States-General the Orders he had received from the Queen, his Mistress, to repair to Frankfort, and confer with the Electors of Mentz and Hanover, about the Operations of the next Campaign. The next * Morning, his Grace had another Conference with those Deputies, and in the Evening set out for the Army, to give the necessary Orders for their marching into Winter-Quarters. Immediately after † his Arrival, the Troops design'd for the Garisons of Menin, Courtray, and Oudenard, went into those Places ; and, the next ‖ Day, the Army came to Peteghem, with Intent to pass the Scheld at Gauvre ; but the Rains continuing with such Violence, as to render the passing there impracticable for the Horse, the Foot encamp'd the 12th of October N. S. with the Right at Steyne, and the Left at Aspre, and pass'd the River the 13th at Gauvre ; his Grace advancing with the Horse and Dragoons to Zwinhaerde. The same Day, the Foot continued their March thro' Ghent to Westrem ; and the next Day, the whole Army came to Asche, where they continued till they heard that the French Army was ∴ separated ; upon which, the Confederate Troops went into their respective Winter-Quarters.

The Duke of Marlborough goes for Germany.

The Duke of Marlborough set out for Germany the 15th of October, N. S. in the Morning, lay that Night at Liere, the next at Grave, the 17th at Wesel, and the 18th at Dusseldorp : An Alarm of several of the Enemy's Parties being come over the Rhine, (which was confirm'd at Grave) having made his Grace alter his intended Rout, and pass thro' this last City. The 19th, his Grace was met by the Elector Palatine at Bruck, about a League from his Castle of Bansberg ; where his Electoral Highness gave his Grace a splendid Dinner, under a very magnificent Persian Tent ; after which, the Duke continued his Journey about Twenty Miles farther, to Waert, being conducted thither by the Palatine Guards. On the 20th, his Grace lay at Limbourg on the Laune, and the 21st reach'd Frankfort ; where the Electors of Mentz and Hanover being come already, they had several Conferences together : But nothing could be concluded till the * Arrival of Count Wratislaw, the Imperial Plenipotentiary ; nor even then neither, because the latter declared, that he was not fully instructed. Hereupon the Conferences broke off ; and, on the 29th of the same Month, the Elector of Mentz returned homewards, the Elector of Hanover went to the Imperial Army, and the Duke of Marlborough set out for the Hague, where he arrived the 3d of November ; and having concluded several important Affairs with the States-General, embarked a few Days after for England, and came to St. James's the 7th of that Month, O. S. During his Stay at the Hague, his Grace communicated to the States-General what had pass'd at Frankfort ; and their Deputies having had several Conferences with the Imperial Ministers, their High Mightinesses resolved to use all possible Means to engage the Empire to make greater Efforts for the future, than they had done hitherto.

Campaign in Italy and Provence.

The Confederate Armies were, this Year, most active, and raised the greatest Hopes and Expectations on the Side of Italy, where France, as was related before, instead of retrieving her Defeat before Turin, lost all the Territories and Places she possess'd in Lombardy, in the Name of King Philip. 'Tis true, the French might have kept Footing there some Time longer, but they prudently chose to preserve their Troops, for which they had Occasion in Spain, and elsewhere, and which it was impossible for them either to subsist or succour, rather than run the Hazard of losing loſing the ſame, by an ill-timed and unprofitable Reſiſtance. Nor had the Allies leſs Reaſon than the French, to be well pleas'd with the Treaty of Milan, by which they recover'd ſeveral Places, that would have kept them a long while in Play; and their Hands being at Liberty on that Side, they had now an Opportunity, which never offer'd before, of making the Enemy's Country feel the immediate Calamities of the War. Hereupon the Queen of Great Britain, the States-General, and the Duke of Savoy, form'd the great Project of invading Provence, in order either to take or deſtroy Tooulon, and Marſeilles; which fatal Blow to the Maritime Power of France, would have been of infinite Advantage to Great Britain, and Holland, by ſecuring and enlarging their Trade, and to the whole Confederacy, by depriving the Enemy of Means to carry on their profitable Commerce to the Weſt-Indies, which alone enabled them to proſecute the War. But the Court of Vienna, upon Views of private Advantage, laid the Deſign of reducing the Kingdom of Naples, which, as it tended to divide the Confederate Army in Italy, claſh'd with the other Enterprize, and therefore was warmly oppos'd by Great Britain and Holland; the Earl of Mancheſter, who happen'd then to be in Italy, having, in the Queen's Name, proteſted againſt it. Theſe Repreſentations having prov'd ineffectual, and the Court of Vienna inſiſting, that the Forces of the Allies were ſufficient to carry on both thoſe Enterprizes at once: Count Thaun, with a ſtrong Body of Imperialiſts, march'd into the Kingdom of Naples; and being ſeconded by the Affections of the People, whom Cardinal Grimani had before-hand prepared to ſhake off the French Yoke, made an entire Conqueſt of that Country; Firſt, by the Surrender of the Capital City, Capua and Piſcara, and at laſt, by the ſtorming of the important Fortreſs of Gaeta.

The Imperialiſts make themſelves Maſters of the Kingdom of Naples.

The other Expedition, though as well concerted, and as little either foreſeen, or provided againſt by the Enemy, met not with equal Succeſs. The Duke of Savoy, and Prince Eugene, by their Marches, and Counter-Marches, as if they intended to bend their Victorious Arms againſt Dauphiné, or Savoy, conceal'd their true Deſign againſt Provence; and then on a ſudden, aſſembling all their Forces, paſs'd the Col de Tende, and by the Aſſiſtance of the Confederate Fleet, under the Command of Admiral Shovel, forc'd the Intrenchments on the Var, and went over that River the 11th of July, N. S. They march'd towards Thoulon, with all the Speed, which the want of Magazines, the Heats of that Southern Climate, the Nature of the Ground, and other Difficulties in an Enemy's Country, would allow; but, to their Surprize, upon their Arrival at la Valette, the 26th, they found that the French had recover'd their firſt Miſtake, by their unparallel'd Diligence and Activity; and had not only repair'd the Fortifications of the Place, but poſted Forty Battalions, either in the Town, or the adjacent Hills, of difficult Acceſs, and defended, beſides, by ſtrong Intrenchments. Upon a View of the Enemy, the Confederate Generals debated, Whether they ſhould attack them, before they received other Reinforcements? Prince Eugene, was for the Affirmative; but all the reſt judging that the Enemy were already too numerous, and too ſtrongly intrench'd to be aſſaulted, without infinite Hazard, it was thought more adviſeable to drive them from ſome of their advanc'd Poſts, and erect Batteries there, in order to make their Camp, that cover'd the Town, too hot for them. Accordingly, the Hill of St. Catherine was atttack'd, and carried the 30th of July: But the Batteries of the Allies did not anſwer Expectation; and the Enemy retook that Poſt the 15th of Auguſt, notwithſtanding the vigorous Reſiſtance of the brave Prince of Saxe-Gotha, who was kill'd in that hot Engagement. By this Time the Enemy having receiv'd further Reinforcements of Horſe and Foot, the Confederate Generals found themſelves obliged to content themſelves with bombarding Thoulon; and in order to do it effectually, they attack'd Fort St. Margaret, Fort St. Lewis, and the Great Tower, that hindred the Fleet from approaching the Harbour. Fort St Margaret ſurrendred the 15th of Auguſt, at Diſcretion; the ſame Night the Allies began to bombard the Place and Harbour on the Land-ſide; and Fort St. Louis having been abandon'd the 18th, the Bomb-Veſſels advanc'd as far as poſſible the 21ſt, and bombarded the Town and Shipping, 'till the next Night, with ſo good Succeſs, that a great many Houſes were conſum'd; ſeveral Magazines blown up, and Eight Men of War, either burnt, or made unfit for Service; viz. Le Triumphant of Eighty Two Guns; Le Sceptre, Ninety; Le Vainqueur, Eighty Six; Le Neptune, Seventy Six; L' Invincible, Seventy; Le Serieux, Sixty; Le Laurier, Sixty; and Le Sage, Fifty Four. The Duke of Savoy having caus'd all the Artillery, and the Sick and Wounded to be Ship'd off, left the Camp at La Valette, in the Night, between the 21ſt and 22d, retiring in very good Order, the ſame Way he came, without being in the leaſt inſulted by the Enemy. After his Return into Piedmont, his Royal Highneſs concluded the Campaign on that Side, with the Recovery of his important tant Place of Suza, which the French had left unprovided, whereby he ſhut up that Inlet into his own Dominions to the French; and open'd himſelf a free Entrance, either into Dauphiné, or Savoy. Thus ended the Expedition into Provence, which ſtruck a greater Terror throughout all France, than had been known there, during the whole long Reign of their Monarch, and which had not fail'd of Succeſs, had either the Duke of Savoy been able to reach Toulon, before the French Reinforcements arrived there, or had his Royal Highneſs had a ſufficient Number of Forces to attack the Enemy, immediately upon his Arrival. However, beſides the great Damage the French ſuſtain'd in their Shipping, the burning of near one half of the Houſes in Toulon, and the Devaſtations committed in Provence, that Enterprize brought this farther Advantage to the Allies, that it gave a great Diverſion to the Enemy's Forces, whereby their Army in Germany was weakned; the Duke of Orleans's Progreſs, after the Battel of Almanza, ſomewhat ſlackned in Spain; the ſuccouring of Naples prevented; and the Conquefts of the Allies in Italy ſecur'd. Wherefore the Confederates would have had little Reaſon to think their Expences and Labours ill beſtow'd, if Admiral Shovel, who had a principal Share in that Expedition, and who diſcharged his Truſt with ſo much Bravery and Reſolution, had not periſh'd in his Return from thence, with Three of his beſt Ships: Which fatal Accident determin'd the Loſs to be greater on the Side of Great Britain.

On Michaelmas-Day, Sir Cloudeſly Shovel ſail'd from Gibraltar, with Fifteen Men of War, of the Line of Battel, Five of a leſſer Rank, and one Yatch, viz. the Aſſociation, Admiral; the Royal-Anne, Sir George Byng Commander; St. George, Lord Durſley; Somerſet, Captain John Price; Torbay, Sir John Norris: Eagle, Captain Hancock; Monmouth, Captain Baker; Swiftſure, Captain Hubbart; Orford, Captain Cornwall; Rye, Captain Vernon; Lenox, Sir William Jumper; La Valeur, Captain Johnſon; Cruizer, Captain Shales; the Firebrand, Captain Piercy; the Vulcan, Captain Hockman, the Phenix, Captain Sanſom, the Grafton, Captain Holden; the Weaſel, Captain Gulman; and the Iſabella Yatch, Captain Riddel. Sir Cloudeſly made an Obſervation the 21ſt of October, and having, the next Day, Soundings in Ninety Fathom, he brought to, and lay by from Twelve, 'till about Six in the Afternoon, the Weather being very hazy; but then the Wind coming up freſh at South South-Weſt, the Admiral made the Signal for ſailing. The Fleet ſteer'd Eaſt by North, ſuppoſing they had the Channel open; and the Officers and Seamen, being ſo near Home, and, as they thought, ſafe, made merry with plentiful Bowls of Punch, when ſome of the Ships were upon the Rocks, to the Weſtward of Scilly, before they were aware, about Eight of the Clock at Night, and made a Signal of Diſtreſs. The Aſſociation, in which Sir Cloudeſly Shovel was, ſtruck upon the Rocks call'd, the Biſhop, and his Clerks, and was loſt, with all the Men in it, as were alſo the Eagle and Rumney. The Firebrand was likewiſe daſh'd on the Rocks, and foundered, but the Captain, and Four and Twenty of his Men, ſaved themſelves in the Boat. Captain Sanſom, who commanded the Phenix, being driven on the Rocks with the Iſland, ſaved all his Men, but was forced to run his Ship aſhore. The Royal Anne was ſaved by great Preſence of Mind, both in Sir George Byng, and his Officers and Men, who, in a Minute's Time, ſet her Top-ſails, one of the Rocks not being a Ship's Length to Leeward of her, and the other, on which Sir Cloudeſly Shovel was loſt, as near as in a Breach of the Sea. Nor had the Lord Durſley, Commander of the St. George, a leſs miraculous Eſcape; for his Ship was daſh'd on the ſame Ridge of Rocks with the Aſſociation, and the ſame Wave which he ſaw beat out all Sir Cloudeſly's Lights, ſet his own Ship a-float. Sir Cloudeſly Shovel's Body being, the next Day after this Misfortune, taken up by ſome Country Fellows, was ſtripp'd and buried in the Sand: But on Enquiry made by the Boats of the Saliſbury and Antelope, it was diſcover'd where he was hid, from whence being taken out, and, on board the Saliſbury, brought * into Plymouth, he was afterwards carried to London, and decently interr'd in Weſtminſter-Abbey, where a magnificent Tomb, with his Effigies in White Marble, was erected, in Honour to his Memory, This was the End of one of the greateſt Sea-Commanders of our Age, or indeed, that this Iſland ever produced: Of undaunted Courage and Reſolution, of wonderful Preſence of Mind in the hotteſt Engagements, and of conſummate Skill and Experience: But more than all this, a juſt, frank, generous, honeſt, good Man. He was the Artificer of his own Fortune, and by his Perſonal Merit alone, from the loweſt, rais'd himſelf to almoſt the higheſt Station in the Navy of Great Britain. To enumerate all the Actions he was concern'd in, would bear and require a Volume; but not to tranſgreſs the Rules of Hiſtory, we ſhall content our ſelves with touching upon the moſt remarkable. He gave early Proofs of his Valour, on the 14th of January, 167⅔, when being Lieutenant to Sir John Narborough, Admiral of the Engliſh Fleet in the Mediterranean, he burnt in the Harbour, and under the Caſtle of Tripoly, Four Men of War, belonging to the Pirates of that Place, which forc'd them to accept ſuch Conditions of Peace, as Sir John Narborough was pleas'd to preſcribe them. He diſtinguiſh'd himſelf in the Firſt Sea-Engagement that happen'd in the late War, in Bantry-Bay, on the Firſt Day of May, 1689, for which he receiv'd the Honour of Knighthood, being then Commander of the Edgar. He was ſoon after advanc'd to the Rank of a Flag-Officer; and upon the breaking out of the War in 1702, he was ſent, with a Squadron of about Twenty Men of War, to join the grand Fleet, and bring Home the Galeons, and other rich Booty taken by the Duke of Ormond, and Sir George Rook, at Vigo. The next Year, he was appointed to command in Chief the Confederate Fleet deſign'd for the Streights, conſiſting of Thirty Five Engliſh and Fourteen Dutch Men of War; and being come into Leghorn-Road, maintain'd the Honour of the Engliſh Union-Flag, and forc'd the Governor of that City to give him a Royal Salute, which he had at firſt refus'd. In that Expedition, Sir Cloudeſly endeavour'd to ſupply the Cevennois with Money, Arms, and Ammunition; but, for want of Intelligence, the Cevennois not coming to the Sea-Shore, the Admiral expreſs'd a great Concern, that he could not relieve them; having always been a warm Stickler for Liberty, and the Proteſtant Religion. In the Month of June, 1704, he join'd the Grand Fleet, commanded by Sir George Rooke, in the Mediterranean, had his Share in the Honour of taking of Gibraltar; and by his Bravery, and admirable Conduct, in the Sea-Fight that happen'd ſoon after, oblig'd the Enemy's Van to bear away out of the Reach of his Cannon; and though but the Second then in Command, yet he got the principal Honour of that Day, and contributed moſt to the Preſervation of the Confederate Fleet. For this ſignal Piece of Service, he was, ſome Months after, appointed Rear-Admiral of England, and Admiral, and Commander in Chief of her Majeſty's Fleet, in Conjunction with the Earl of Peterborow, to whoſe unanimous Counſels, and invincible Courage, King Charles was, ſoon after, indebted for the Conqueſt of Barcelona. In the Year 1706. Sir Cloudeſly Shovell commanded the whole Confederate Fleet, which had on Board Ten Thouſand Men, under the Command of the Earl Rivers, deſigned for a Deſcent upon France, but being detain'd by ſtubborn, contrary Winds, in Torbay, 'till the 1ſt of October, the Admiral, according to his new Orders, ſail'd for Liſbon, and from thence to Alicant, where having ſet on Shore the Land-Forces, he return'd to Liſbon, to prepare for a greater Expedition in the Year 1707. Accordingly, about the latter End of June, Sir Cloudeſly Shovell, with the Confederate Fleet under his Command, caſt Anchor in the Road of Nice, where he nobly entertain'd the Duke of Savoy, Prince Eugene, and the Engliſh and Dutch Miniſters on Board his Ship, and with them concerted Meaſures for the Attack of Toulon. The Reaſons that induced the High Allies to that great Undertaking, with the unforeſeen Accidents and Difficulties, that occaſion'd its Miſcarriage, have already been laid open; but we may here obſerve, That as the Winds and Waves are ſubject to no other Authority, than of the great Director of all human Affairs; ſo, according to the Duke of Savoy's publick Teſtimony and Declaration, the Operations at Sea were carried on with all the Diligence and Succeſs, that could poſſibly be expected from the Roughneſs of the Seas, and Inclemency of the Weather; and that his Royal Highneſs gave particular Marks of his Eſteem and Gratitude to Sir Cloudeſly Shovell, who, before he left the Harbour of Toulon, had the Satisfaction to ſee Eight of the Enemy's Capital Ships burnt and deſtroy'd. Upon the whole Matter, as his eminent Services merited a publick Monument for his Aſhes, ſo his Memory ought ever to be dear to this Nation, and his Example propoſed to the Imitation of all Britiſh Seamen. About this Time, the Court receiv'd an Account of Captain Underdown, Commander of the Falkland's ſucceſsful Expedition againſt the Enemy's Fiſheries in the North of America, in which the French ſuſtain'd the following Damage, viz. Two Ships taken, one of Thirty Guns, and an Hundred Men: One Ship taken and burnt, of Twenty Guns, and Eighty Men; Two Ships burnt by the Enemy, one of Thirty Two, and another of Twenty Six Guns; Two Hundred and Twenty Eight Fiſhing-Boats burnt; Four Hundred and Seventy Boats and Shalloops, that were not employ'd in the Fiſhery this Seaſon; Twenty Three Stages, and Twenty Three Train-Fats burnt; Seventy Seven Thouſand Two Hundred and Eighty Quintals of Fiſh, and One Thouſand Five Hundred and Sixty Eight Hogſheads of Train-Oil deſtroy'd. But all this was too inconſiderable to alleviate the Loſs of Sir Cloudeſly Shovell, and of the Men and Ships that periſh'd with him.

The Marquis of Mailly, in the Name of his Lady, who ſtiled her ſelf Princeſs of Orange, and pretended to be Heireſs of the Houſe of Châlons. 3. The Prince of Baden Durlach, by virtue of an Agreement made in the Year 1490, between the Families of Hochberg-Neufchatel, and Hochberg-Baden. 4. The Prince of Conti, as univerſal Heir to the late Duke of Longueville. 5. The Chevalier de Soiſſons's Relict, who ſtiled her ſelf the Princeſs of Neufchatel, by virtue of a Deed of Gift made by the late Dutcheſs of Nemours, of that Principality, to the ſaid Chevalier, although ſhe could not be ignorant of the Decree of the Three Eſtates, (dated March the 8th, 1694,) whereby they declared the ſaid Deed of Gift void and illegal; and acknowledg'd the ſaid Dutcheſs of Nemours, merely as the only Siſter, and next Heir to the late Duke of Longueville. 6. The Prince of Carignan, as Nephew, on the Mother's ſide, to the late Dutcheſs of Nemours; but this Sovereignty being devolved to her by the Right of her Father, the Count of Matignon, and the Dutcheſs of Leſdiguieres, who ſet up for the Seventh and Eighth Candidates, objected, that being Heirs by Right of Conſanguinity; to wit, the firſt, Nephew to the Dutcheſs of Nemours, in the Third Degree, and the Dutcheſs in the Fourth; the ſaid Count pretended, that the Principality ought to be adjudg'd to him, as the next Heir, tho' of a later Deſcent; and, on the other hand, the Dutcheſs de Leſdiguieres contended, that the Lineal Succeſſion being to take Place, the Principality ought to be beſtow'd upon her, by Right of Primogeniture, as being deſcended from the Eldeſt. 9. The Count of Montbelliard: 10. The Baron of Montjoye, as Deſcendants of the Houſe of Châlons. 11. The Prince of Furſtemberg, by Titles which he could not produce. 12. The Marquis d' Allegre, in the Right of his Lady, as deſcended from the Houſe of Châlons. 13. And laſtly, the Swiſs Canton of Ury, claim'd the City and County of Neufchatel, becauſe when that State, which formerly belong'd to the Thirteen Cantons of Switzerland, was yielded by Twelve of them, the only Canton of Ury refus'd to ſubſcribe the Deed of Reſignation. Upon the News of the Dutcheſs of Nemours's Death, the Magiſtrates of Neufchatel gave immediate Notice of it to the Lords of Bern, their Allies and Comburghers; deſiring them to have Succours in a Readineſs to ſend to them, in Caſe of Neceſſity; and, at the ſame Time, the Regency of that Principality, made the like Notification to the Four Swiſs Cantons, their Allies, viz. thoſe of Bern, Lucern, Friburgh, and Solothurn. The next* Day, they made a Declaration, by which they requeſted the Governor, and the Council of State, jointly to continue in the Adminiſtration of Affairs, during the Vacancy of the Sovereignty; and Two Days after, gave out Orders for raiſing a good Number of Men for the Security of the City and Caſtle. On the other Hand, the Burgo-Maſters and Council of the Town of Valangin, and its Dependencies, which make a Third Part of the Territories of the Principality of Neufchatel, wiſely conſidering that ſome of the Competitors might uſe Bribery and Corruption to ſupport their Pretenſions, made a Decree, importing, "That for the Satisfaction of "every one, in ſo nice a Conjuncture, and to prevent the Suſpicions which might "be inſinuated into the Minds of the People, againſt thoſe that were entruſted "with the chief Management of their Affairs, as if they acted by Motives of pri"vate Intereſt, every Member of this Aſſembly ſhould be bound by a new Oath; "which was actually taken by every one, Not to receive of any of the High and Illu"ſtrious Pretenders to this Sovereignty, Gold, Silver, or any other Thing whatever, directly nor indirectly, by himſelf, or any other Perſon; nor to engage himſelf, upon any Pro"miſe that might be made to him; but to act according to the Reſolutions that ſhould be "taken for the general Good of the Country. And to the End that all Perſons might keep within the Bounds of their Duty, the ſaid Burgomaſters, with the Council, exhorted every one to take Care, that the High and Illuſtrious Competitors, and their Rights, might not be talked of but in a decent Manner, ſhewing that profound Reſpect that was due to them. Not many Days after, the Prince of Conty, and ſome other of the French Competitors, repaired to Neufchatel, and others ſent their Miniſters and Agents thither, to proſecute their reſpective Claims.

A Letter of the Marquis de Torcy, Secretary of State in France, wherein he threatned the French King's Reſentment towards the Inhabitants of Neufchatel, if they admitted a Stranger in Competition with his Subjects, having been induſtriouſly ſpread among the People, and other Artifices uſed, to induce them to make Choice of a Frenchman; Count Metternich, the King of Pruſſia's Ambaſſador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary, acquainted the Magiſtracy; that the King, his Maſter, would be ſupported by the whole Confederacy, in the Juſtice of his Pretenſions. Accordingly Mr. Stanyan, the Queen of Great Britain's Envoy Extraordinary to the Proteſtant Cantons, in a Memorial to the Magiſtrates of Bern, recommended his Pruſſian Majeſty's Right, and, on the 22d of July, N. S. repaired to Neufchatel. Having, the next Day, notified his Arrival to the Governor and Council of State, and to the Council of the City, each of them, by a ſeparate Deputation, made their Compliments to his Excellency, expreſſing themſelves with the higheſt Veneration and Zeal for her Majeſty's Perſon and Intereſt: And the Clergy ſoon after ſent Repreſentatives on the ſame Occaſion. The ſame Day, Mr. Manning, the Envoy's Secretary, deliver'd Two Letters from her Britannick Majeſty, the Firſt of which, directed to the Governor and Counſellors of State of the Sovereignty of Neufchatel and Valangin, imported, "That the ſtrict Union between the King of Pruſſia, and her Majeſty, and the Friendſhip he ever maintain'd with the Kings her "Predeceſſors, inclined her to take a full Share in all his Concerns. That therefore "having been inform'd of the Death of the Dutcheſs of Nemours, her Majeſty "thought there was an indiſpenſable Obligation incumbent upon her, to write to "them, in Favour of his Pruſſian Majeſty, that by Virtue of his Right to the City "and County of Neufchatel, both by Hereditary Title, and by the Ceſſion of the "late King of Great Britain, William the Third, her Brother, they would acknow-"ledge and admit him for their lawful Sovereign. That ſhe hoped they would do "it the more readily, not only becauſe that Prince was united with them, by the "ſacred Bond of the reform'd Religion, which both he and they equally profeſs'd: "But alſo becauſe he had hitherto ſhewn the ſame Care and Affection for their "Intereſts, which he ever expreſs'd for the Good and Advantage of his own "good Subjects. Wherefore her Majeſty did not doubt, that being mindful of her "Country's Welfare, and endow'd with ſo much Prudence as they were, they would "carefully avoid chuſing for their Prince a Perſon, who being a Subject, and en-"tirely devoted to the Government of France, ought, for that Reaſon, to be as "ſuſpected to them, as he would be to her Majeſty, and to all her other Allies: "Which perſuaded her, at the ſame Time, that, without any Delay, they would "grant his Pruſſian Majeſty's juſt Demand; and as the ſame would give her Maje-"ſty a ſingular Satisfaction, ſo, on her Part, ſhe ſhould ever be diſpos'd to ſhew "them the Effects of her Friendſhip." The Queen's Letter to the Miniſtraux and Counſellors of Neufchatel, was much to the ſame Purpoſe; and Mr. Manning preſented, at the ſame Time, to the Council of State, a Memorial in Behalf of the King of Pruſſia. Not long after, Mr. Rumckell, Envoy from the States-General, arrived at Neufchatel, with Inſtructions to join with Mr. Stanyan, in all proper Meaſures to aſſiſt Count Metternich; and a Letter from the King of Sweden, to the Canton of Bern, in Favour of the King of Pruſſia, having added no ſmall Weight to the Interpoſition of Great Britain and Holland, the Inveſtiture of Neufchatel was, at * laſt, ſolemnly granted to his Pruſſian Majeſty. The French King, bearing with great Impatience, the Loſs of that Principality, ſhew'd his Reſentment, by cauſing his Parliament of Beſançon, to prohibit all Commerce between the County of Burgundy, and the Counties of Neufchatel and Valangin; and afterwards order'd a conſiderable Number of his Forces to move towards the Frontiers of that Principality, as if he intended to invade it. Hereupon Count Metternich, in his Maſter's Name, demanded the immediate Aſſiſtance of the Canton of Bern; and on the other hand, the French Ambaſſador, and his Emiſſaries in Swiſſerland, left no Stone unturn'd, to deter thoſe of Bern from granting that Demand: But their Intrigues and Artifices were ſo effectually baffled by the Britiſh and Dutch Envoys, that on the 29th of December, N. S. the Sovereign Council of Bern came to an unanimous Reſolution, to defend the Principality of Neufchatel with all their Forces: Purſuant to this Reſolve, they ſent, a few Days after, Four Thouſand Five Hundred of their Men, into the Frontiers of Neufchatel; whereupon the French thought it adviſeable to lie quiet under their Diſappointment.

Mr. Stepney, her Majeſty's Envoy Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary to the States-General, and in the Low-Countries, being † dead, about this Time, Major-General Cadogan, the Duke of Marlborough's Favourite, was advanc'd to that important Miniſterial Station Abroad: And we here take Notice, that the main Secret of Affairs at Home, was now lodg'd with his Grace's Son-in-Law, the Earl of Sunderland, who, about a Year ‖ before, was made Principal Secretary of State, in the Room of Sir Charles Hedges.

Accordingly, the Commons being return'd to their Houſe, unanimouſly made choice of the Right Honourable John Smith, Eſq; Speaker of the laſt Parliament of England, for their Speaker; and then adjourn'd to the Thurſday following. The Houſe of Lords adjourn'd alſo to the ſame Day; after Thirteen Peers, of that Part of Great Britain called Scotland, had been admitted to their Places, by Virtue of their reſpective Writs; each being introduced by Two Peers, of the ſame Rank, of that Part of Great Britain called England.

On the 30th of the ſame Month, the Queen came again to the Houſe of Peers, with the uſual State; and the Commons being ſent for up, preſented to her Majeſty their Speaker; whoſe Election her Majeſty was pleaſed to approve. And then the Lord High-Chancellor, by her Majeſty's Command, acquainted both Houſes with her Majeſty's Pleaſure, That they ſhould adjourn to that Day Sevennight; which

* Nov. 6. they did accordingly: And the Queen being then * come to the Upper-Houſe, and the Commons attending, her Majeſty made the following Speech to both Houſes:

My LORDS and GENTLEMEN,

The Queen's Speech to both Houſes. "IT is with all humble Thankfulneſs to Almighty GOD, and with entire Satisfaction to my ſelf, that I meet you here in this Firſt Parliament of "Great Britain; not doubting but you come with Hearts prepared, as mine is, to "make this UNION ſo proſperous, as may anſwer the well-grounded Hopes of all "my good Subjects, and the reaſonable Apprehenſions of our Enemies.

"To this End, nothing is ſo immediately material, as to convince, as ſoon as "poſſible, both our Friends and our Enemies, that the Uniting of our Intereſts, has "not only improved our Abilities, but our Reſolutions alſo, to proſecute this juſt "and neceſſary War, till we obtain a ſafe and honourable Peace for our ſelves, "and for our Allies.

"In ſo great and extenſive a War as this is, many Things may be uſefully under-"taken, which are not fit to be communicated before-hand: The Attempt upon "Toulon was of this Nature; and tho' it had not wholly its deſired Effect, has, ne-"vertheleſs, been attended with many great Advantages to the Common Cauſe in "this Year, and has made our Way eaſier, I hope, to greater in the next.

"As the French have gain'd Ground upon us in Spain, ſo they have been "wholly driven out of Italy; by which it is become more eaſy for all the Al-"lies to join their Aſſiſtance next Year, for enabling the King of Spain to reco-"ver his Affairs in that Kingdom, and to reduce the whole Spaniſh Monarchy to "his Obedience.

"The Weakneſs and ill Poſture of Affairs upon the Rhine, in the Beginning of "the Year, has given an Opportunity to the French to make themſelves ſtronger in "all other Parts: But this Defect ſeems in a very promiſing way of being fully "remedied, againſt next Campaign, by the Conduct and Authority of the Ele-"ctor of Hanover; whoſe ſeaſonable Acceptance of that Command, has ſtrengthned "and obliged the whole Confederacy.

Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons,

"The juſt Application of the Supplies given Me by former Parliaments, the "plain Neceſſity of continuing this War, the reaſonable Proſpect of putting a good "End to it, if we be not wanting to our ſelves, and the Honour of the Firſt Par-"liament of Great Britain, are, I make no doubt, ſufficient Arguments to invite "you to provide the neceſſary Supplies, which I am obliged to deſire of you for "the enſuing Campaign in all Parts; and particularly, for the timely Support "of the King of Spain, and the making good our Treaty with Portugal; as alſo, "for ſtrengthening the Confederate Army, under the Command of the Duke of "Savoy: All which Services, I don't doubt, but you will think ſo neceſſary, that "they ought not to be neglected, even tho' they ſhould require an Augmen-"tation.

"The Sums already expended in this War, have been very great; and they are "ſufficient Proofs, how well ſatisfied my Subjects have always been with the Ends "of my Government; of which I am ſo ſenſible, as never to ask any Supplies "from them, but what are abſolutely neceſſary for the Preſervation of their Reli-"gion and Liberties: And I look upon it as my great Happineſs, that I have not "the leaſt Intereſt ſeparate from that of all my good Subjects.

A. D. 1707.

My LORDS and GENTLEMEN,

" In a Work ſo great, and new in its kind, as that of the UNION, it is impoſ-
" ſible but that ſome Doubts and Difficulties muſt have ariſen; which, however,
" I hope, are ſo far overcome, as to have defeated the Deſigns of thoſe, who would " have made uſe of that Handle to foment Diſturbances.

" There are ſeveral Matters expreſly made liable, by the Articles of UNION,
" to the Conſideration of the Parliament of Great Britain; which, together with
" ſuch others as may reaſonably produce thoſe Advantages, that, with due Care,
" muſt certainly ariſe from that Treaty, I earneſtly recommend to your ſerious Con-
" ſideration.

" On my Part, nothing ſhall be wanting to procure to my People all the Bleſ-
" ſings which can follow from this happy Circumſtance of my Reign; and to " extinguiſh, by all proper Means, the leaſt Occaſions of Jealouſy, that either the " Civil or Religious Rights of any Part of this my United Kingdom can ſuffer,
" by the Conſequences of this UNION.

" Such a Suggeſtion ſhall never, in my Time, have any Foundation, how reſt-
" leſs ſoever our Enemies may be in their Endeavours and Artifices, to diſturb our " Peace and Happineſs. Thoſe Great and Valuable Bleſſings, cannot but be al" ways ſecure to Us, if We heartily endeavour to confirm and improve our preſent
" UNION: I hope, therefore, you will ſuffer nothing to prevail with you, to diſ-
" unite among your ſelves, or abate your Zeal in oppoſing the Common E" nemy.

This Speech variouſly affected both Houſes: The Commons readily and unanimouſly * voted and preſented an Addreſs of Thanks, wherein they aſſured the Queen, That no Diſappointments ſhould diſcourage them from making their utmoſt Efforts to enable her Majeſty, in Conjunction with her Allies, to reduce the whole Spaniſh Monarchy to the Obedience of the King of Spain, &c. The Peers were neither ſo quick nor ſo ſanguine, but took ſome Time to conſider of her Majeſty's Speech; being, it ſeems, more inclin'd to cenſure, than to applaud. The Truth is, many of the Whig Lords, and moſt of the Tories, were by this Time almoſt equally diſguſted, both with the General and the Prime Miniſter; who were ſo elevated, the one with his good Fortune abroad, the other with the Succeſs of the Union at home, that they fondly thought themſelves to be above the Reach, either of Envy or Malice, and ſo took little Care of ſecuring to themſelves any Support, beſides their own Relations and Dependants, among whom all the Court-Favours were diſtributed. This could not but pique many Perſons, who, by their Birth and Merit, were intitled to Offices of Truſt, and Places of Profit, and who being now left unregarded, waited only for an Occaſion to ſhew their Reſentments. Nor was Matter of juſt Complaint wanting, at this Juncture: For, beſides the Miſmanagements of the Navy, formerly repreſented to the Queen, and ſtill left unredreſs'd; the Miſcarriages of the War in Spain laid the Miniſtry open to ungrateful Inquiries; which were, under-hand, preſs'd by the Earl of Peterborow, who, after his eminent Services there, had been laid aſide unrewarded, and was return'd home in Diſguſt.

* Nov. 10. Addreſs of the Commons.

Many Lords diſguſted with the General, and Prime Miniſter.

In this Temper the Lords met in Parliament: So that when the Queen's Speech came ‖ firſt under their Conſideration, inſtead of Voting immediately an Addreſs of Thanks, the Earl of Wharton made a ſmart Speech; wherein, among other Things, he took notice of the great Decay of Trade, and Scarcity of Money, which he had obſerv'd in travelling up and down the Country, ſo that the Farmers were not able to pay their Rents to their Landlords. He was ſeconded by the Lord Somers; who enlarg'd on the ill Condition, and Miſmanagements of the Navy, and on the great Loſſes of the Merchants at Sea, the laſt Summer. The Earl of Stamford, an indigent Lord, (at that Time made one of the Commiſſioners of Trade) finding that many other Mouths were like to open againſt the Miniſtry, endeavour'd to break the Cry, by moving the poſtponing the Conſideration of the State of the Nation till a more proper Occaſion; and, propoſing, the returning her Majeſty Thanks for her gracious Speech. This was oppoſed by the Duke of Buckingham, the Earl of Rocheſter, and the Lord Guernſey; who urged, they ought, in the firſt place, to conſider the State of the Nation; inſinuating, at the ſame Time, that Addreſſes had before been made to little Purpoſe; meaning in relation to the Navy. After ſome other Speeches, it was ordered, That the State of the Nation ſhould be taken into Conſideration the Wedneſday following, in a Committee of the whole Houſe, wherein the Queen aſſiſted incognito. The Lord Henry Herbert, of Cherbury, being choſen Chairman of the Committee, a Petition, given in by the Two Sheriffs of London, and ſubſcribed by about Two Hundred of the moſt eminent Merchants of the City, was read, complaining of the great Loſſes they had lately ſuſtain'd at Sea, for want of Convoys and Cruizers, and begging a ſpeedy Remedy. After the reading of this Petition, which was preſented to the Committee by the Earl of Wharton, his Lordſhip begun the Debate, with laying open the miſerable Condition of the Nation, and the great Decay of Trade. Several other Peers ſpoke to the ſame Effect; and, among the reſt, the Lord Haverſham took this Occaſion to vent his Spleen, in the following ſtudied Speech:

My Lord HERBERT,

The Lord Haverſham's Speech.

" I Was ſo unfortunate as not to be in the Houſe, when your Order was mov'd; " but thought it my Duty to pay Attendance upon ſo extraordinary an Occaſion. " I know it is generally look'd upon as a Mark of great Weakneſs and Imprudence, " to attempt Impoſſibilities: That Man would ſcarce be thought in his right Sen- " ſes, that ſhould endeavour to ſtop the Tide at Graveſend with his Thumb; and not " rather ſuffer it to take its Courſe, as knowing, that it will as ſurely have its Ebb, " as it has its Flux. But yet there are ſome Caſes, wherein the univerſal Practice " of Mankind ſhews the Miſtake of this Maxim: Who is there, that, ſeeing his " Parent languiſhing, and in an irrecoverable Conſumption, would not think it his " Duty to give him all the Aſſiſtance in his Power; tho' he was morally certain, " all his Endeavours would prove ineffectual, and the fatal Hour was juſt ap- " proaching? Nay, does not every Man endeavour to preſerve his own Life; " while, at the ſame Time, he knows that Death it ſelf is moſt unavoidable?

" This I take to be much the preſent Caſe of ENGLAND, (I aſk your Lord- " ſhip's Pardon, that I have not yet forgot that beloved Name) I mean Britain. " Our Condition is very low and deſperate; and yet I think my ſelf obliged to do " all I can towards helping a poor ſinking Iſland; tho' I am convinc'd, at the ſame " Time, it will prove very inſignificant.

" My Lord, The Two Things you have now under your Conſideration, your Fleet " and your Trade, have ſo near a Relation, and ſuch mutual Influence upon each " other, they cannot well be ſeparated: Your Trade is the Mother and Nurſe of " your Seamen; your Seamen are the Life of your Fleet; and your Fleet is the Se- " curity and Protection of your Trade; and both together, are the Wealth, Strength, " Security, and Glory of Britain.

" And this is ſo manifeſt, that thoſe who have writ upon theſe Subjects, whe- " ther Foreigners, or among our ſelves, have all own'd it: Which makes it aſto- " niſhing, that a Thing ſo clear and evident, and wherein our Intereſt and Safety " do ſo much conſiſt, ſhould be poſtponed to any foreign Conſideration whatſoever; where- " in we are leſs concerned: But we are ſo unhappy, as to ſtruggle with ſo many " complicated Difficulties, that what is proper for one Thing, is prejudicial to " another.

" My Lord, I muſt make the ſame Apology for my ſelf, as that Noble Lord did, " who firſt began this Debate; tho' I may ſpeak very plainly, it is with a very " honeſt Intention of Service, and a very real Senſe of our great Loſſes and Miſ- " fortunes: His Lordſhip hath ſpoke ſo very well, and ſo fully too to theſe Points, " that whatever I can ſay upon the ſame Subjects, will (after what has been ſaid by " him) come from me with a very ill Grace: Yet, give me Leave, My Lord, to " ſpeak a Word or two.

" Your Diſaſters at Sea, have been ſo many, a Man ſcarce knows where to begin: " Your Ships have been taken by your Enemies, as the Dutch take your Herrings by Shoals " upon your own Coaſts: Nay, your ROYAL NAVY it ſelf has not eſcap'd: And " theſe are pregnant Misfortunes, and big with innumerable Miſchiefs. Your Mer- " chants are beggar'd; your Commerce is broke; your Trade is gone, your Staple and " Manufacture ruin'd: The Queen has loſt her Cuſtoms, and the Parliament muſt make " good the Deficiencies: While, in the mean Time, our ALLIES have an open and flou- " riſhing Trade, and our Enemies make uſe both of our own Ships, and Seamen too, " againſt Us!

" There is yet a further Grievance: When, thro' a Thouſand Difficulties and " Dangers, the honeſt Trader has brought home ſome ſmall Effects, he is fallen " upon and oppreſs'd by vexatious and unjuſt Proſecutions: I mention this with re- " lation to the UNION; and to ſhew, that tho' I was always againſt it, yet, ſince it " is made, I am for keeping firm and exactly to it.

" My Lord, The Face of our Affairs is viſibly changed in the Space of One " Year's Time, and the Temper of the Nation too: Formerly, Men ſtifled their " Misfortunes, and were afraid of whiſpering them out, for fear of being over-

" heard,

" heard, and undone: Now, it is hard to ſtop their Mouths, or keep them within any " Bounds; the moving Objects of Sorrow we meet with every where, the Tears of the " Fatherleſs, and Cries of the Widows, have raiſed both a Compaſſion for the Diſtreſſed, " and a Reſentment and Indignatien againſt the Authors of theſe Misfortunes; and the " very Fames which of late have * flew Abroad, no Body knows from whence, and " Papers which have been cried in your Streets, are all Marks of the great Ferment " the Nation is in.

" My Lords, You are now upon the Inquiry, by what Ways and Perſons we have " been brought into this miſerable Condition; I think it very indifferent which way " you proceed; it ſeems reaſonable, that thoſe Lords who firſt moved this Order, " ſhould put it into what Method they pleaſe; but I muſt take Leave to ſay, that " begin where you will, if you do not end with the MINISTRY, we ſhall be in a " worſe Condition, in my Opinion, than we were before.

" As to the Admiralty, if the Prince's Council have committed any Fault, it is " very fit they ſhould have what they deſerve; but, I hope, no Perſuaſion will pre- " vail with the Prince himſelf, to lay down that Commiſſion: The Navy, I think, is " ſafer in his Hands, than in any other Man's Hands whatſoever, and I'll give your " Lordſhip my Reaſon for it. He has Advantages no other Perſon can pretend to: " He owes not his Commiſſion to the Favour of any Great Miniſter whatſoever, nor is " he within the Reach of their Power; he ſtands upon a much more unſhaken, and " firm Foundation; and if there be any Miſtake, it is impoſſible to be the Effect " either of the Fear, or the Anger of a Great Miniſter, or a Care to pleaſe him.

" My Lord, I take the Root of all our Misfortunes to lye in the MINISTRY, and " without a Change of MINISTRY, in my Opinion, no other Remedy will be effe- " ctual. I may, perhaps, be told by ſome Lord, that I arraign the Miniſtry: I " know that is not proper here, yet every Lord has Liberty of ſpeaking his " Thoughts freely, and taking Notice of any Thing he thinks a Grievance to the " Nation; and it is under this Notion of Complaint, and from a Senſe of our mi- " ſerable Condition, that I ſay this to your Lordſhip; and if I were not confident " I ſtand upon ſure Ground, I ſhould not venture thus far; but I have my Juſti- " fication in my Hand. And now, My Lord, it is fit I ſhould prove what I " ſay.

" Should I mention the Breach of the Firſt, Fourth, and laſt Articles of the " UNION, I am within your Order, and thoſe Lords who ſerve, at preſent, for the " North-Part of Britain, I am confident have heard of a Complaint and Addreſs of " the Royal Burroughs; and I might remember the Diſappointment we have met with in " Spain; but, I hope, thoſe Two Points will be, ſome Time or other conſidered. " I'll therefore keep my ſelf for Proof, ſtrictly to your Petition, and, I think, no- " thing is more evident, than that your Miniſtry has been the Cauſe of theſe Misfor- " tunes, and the Argument which convinces me of it, is drawn from an Addreſs of " your Lordſhips in Seventeen Hundred and Four, which I have in my Hand. I know " before whom I ſpeak, the Queen is a Prince of that conſummate Wiſdom, as not " to do any Thing without the Advice of her Miniſtry; your Lordſhips did then " moſt humbly adviſe and addreſs her Majeſty, that particular Care might be taken of " theſe Two Points; none but thoſe that have her Majeſty's Ear, could prevail to the con- " trary, and the want of following your Lordſhips Advice, has loſt the Nation near Ten " Millions ſince; and therefore it evidently follows, that your MINISTRY have been " the Occaſion of theſe Loſſes.

" In ſhort, My Lord, for I'll trouble you no farther, let our Misfortunes be ſkin- " ned over as they will, if they feſter, and throb, and are foul at bottom, they will " certainly break out with incurable Rage and Fury.

* It ſhould be flown, but the Speech printed by his Lordſhip's Direction, has it flew.

The Debate growing high, ſome Members endeavour'd to allay it, by propoſing Ways and Meons to retrieve our Loſſes at Sea; and, among the reſt, the Lord Halifax moved, That a Committee be appointed to receive Propoſals for encouraging of Trade and Privateers in the Weſt-Indies; which Motion being back'd by the Lord Treaſurer, and the Queſtion put, the ſame was carried in the Affirmative: After which, their Lordſhips appointed that Day Seven-night, to hear, in a Grand Committee, what the Merchants had to alledge, to prove the Suggeſtions of their Petition. It was obſerv'd, That as ſoon as the Debate was over, the Duke of Marlborough taking the Earl of Wharton aſide, there paſs'd ſome warm Expoſtulations between them; but the Event proved, that the Miniſtry pacify'd the diſcontented Earl, by gratifying his Ambition with a Promiſe, that he ſhould ſucceed the Earl of Pembroke, in the Government of Ireland. Endeavours were alſo uſed, to allay the Earl of Peterborow's Reſentment: But as for the Lord Haverſham, as he had little or no Intereſt, either in, or without the Houſe, he was ſtill left unregarded; and being Supply voted, Nov. 13th, 14th, 19th, 20th, 21ſt, 22d.

The Commons, in a great meaſure, made good their Aſſurances to the Queen, and chearfully voted the neceſſary Supplies for the Navy, Land-Forces, and ſome other Occaſions. But, at the ſame Time, upon a Petition of ſeveral Merchants of London, complaining of the want of Cruizers in the Channel and Soundings, they reſolv'd * to addreſs her Majeſty for an Account of all Moneys annually granted by Parliament for Sea-Service, and annually iſſued for the ſame, ſince the Commencement of the War; as alſo, "An Account of what Number of Ships were employ'd "at Sea every Month, the laſt Year, and on what Stations; together with the De- "poſitions taken at the Tryal of Sir Thomas Hardy. Not many Days † after, the Commons, in a grand Committee, took into Conſideration the State of the Navy, and Trade of the Nation, and a great many Merchants being admitted into the Houſe, to make good the Allegations in their late Petition, Mr. Heathcote, Son to Sir Gilbert Heathcote, and Mr. Dawſon, his Partner, Two Ruſſia Merchants, made long and bold Speeches againſt the Admiralty, whom they charg'd with Frauds, Malice, and Ignorance, particularly in relation to the Ruſſia Fleet. Some Members, to curry Favour with the Court, endeavour'd, ſeveral Times, to interrupt them, but Sir Richard Onſlow, the Chairman of the Committee, deſired them to go on, which they did with great Freedom, and offer'd to prove what they had advanc'd, both by Papers, and the Teſtimony of many Merchants there preſent: But this Debate was adjourn'd to the 2d of December, and then again to the 4th of that Month, when Admiral Whetſtone was order'd to attend, with the Journal of his Voyage towards Ruſſia. Upon that Day ‖, an Account of all Prizes, taken and retaken during the War, was order'd to be laid before the Houſe: But, after all, this Affair ended only in this Reſolution ∴, "That for the better ſecuring the Trade of "this Kingdom, over and above the Ships of War for the Line of Battel, and the "Convoys to remote Parts, a ſufficient Number of Ships, (which was afterwards "ſettled to Four,) be appointed to cruize in proper Stations:" And a Bill was order'd to be brought in for that Purpoſe. Some Days before , upon a Petition of ſeveral Merchants of Scotland, complaining, "That Goods and Merchandizes, "(particularly French Wines) brought by them into England, ſince the Firſt of "May laſt, had been ſeiz'd, and that the Petitioners were under a Proſecution in "the Exchequer, for the Value thereof, and praying Relief touching the ſame: The Commons reſolv'd to addreſs the Queen, that ſhe would order her Attorney-General to enter a Noli proſequi, to diſcharge the ſeveral Informations relating to the Goods imported, Cuſtom-Free, into Scotland, before the Firſt Day of May laſt. The Queen readily comply'd with this Addreſs, both the Court, and Parliament being willing, by this Indulgence, to abate the Diſcontents of the Scotch againſt the Union, by letting them enjoy the ſhort Benefit they receiv'd from it: But, on the other Hand, the Commons order'd a Bill to be brought in, to repeal the Acts paſs'd in Scotland, for Security of that Kingdom, and about Peace and War; which had given ſo great a Jealouſy to the Engliſh Nation, that the reſcinding of them, was one of the principal Views of the Miniſtry, in the Proſecution of the Treaty of Union. This done, the Commons conſider'd thoſe Parts of the Queen's Speech, relating to the making the Union more compleat, and reſolv'd ††, Firſt, "That there be but one "Privy-Council in the Kingdom of Great Britain. 2. That the Militia of that Part "of Great Britain call'd Scotland, be regulated in the ſame Manner as the Militia of "that Part of Great Britain call'd England, is regulated. 3. That the Powers of "Juſtices of Peace for preſerving the publick Peace, be the ſame throughout the "whole United Kingdom. 4. That for the better Adminiſtration of Juſtice, and "Preſervation of the publick Peace, the Lords of Juſticiary be appointed to go "Circuits Twice in the Year. 5. That the Writs for electing Members to ſerve in "the Houſe of Commons, for that Part of Great Britain, call'd Scotland, be di- "rected to the Sheriffs of the reſpective Counties, and that the Returns be made "of ſuch Writs, in like Manner, as Returns are made of ſuch Writs in that Part "of Great Britain call'd England: And order'd a Bill to be brought in upon the "ſaid Reſolntions." Two Days after ‖‖, the Commons took into Conſideration, "the Report from the Committee, to whom the Petition of ſeveral Merchants trading to Portugal, Italy, and Spain, was referr'd: Which Reſolutions were agreed to by the Houſe, viz. Firſt, "That the Merchants had fully made out the ſeveral Al- "legations of their Petitions: Secondly, That the preſerving the Portugal Trade, was "of the utmoſt Concern to this Nation, being, at preſent, the greateſt Mart for "Vent of our Woollen Manufactures, Corn, Fiſh, and other Britiſh Commodities. Then the State, Accounts, and Liſts relating to the Forces in Spain and Portugal, having been laid before the Houſe, the Conſideration of the State of the War in thoſe Parts was put off 'till the Thurſday following, when the ſame was again adjourn'd 'till the 17th of January; and ſeveral other Papers relating to thoſe Affairs, were order'd to be laid before the Houſe.

While theſe Things were depending, the Commons took * into Conſideration, the Report of the Committee appointed to examine the Petition of Mr. John Aſgill, a Member of the Houſe, in Priſon in the Fleet for Debt; which Report was order'd to be recommitted. On the other Hand, the Houſe being inform'd of a printed Book, or Pamphlet, ſigned J. Aſgill, intituled, " An Argument, proving, That " tranſlated, 'till he had paſs'd through Death." Several Paſſages of which Treatiſe being contrary to, and reflecting upon the Chriſtian Religion, the Book was brought up to the Table, and the Title, and ſeveral Paragraphs therein, being read, it was order'd, " That it be referred to a Committee to enquire Purſuant to which Reſolution, he was immediately diſcharg'd; but Two Days † after, the Houſe proceeded to take into Conſideration the Report from the Committee, to whom it was referr'd, to examine who was the Author, Printer, and Publiſher, of the Book before-mention'd father'd upon Mr. Aſgill, who having been heard in his Place, in relation to the ſaid Report, the Commons reſolv'd, " That in the ſaid Book are contain'd many

My LORDS and GENTLEMEN,

" I Am very well pleaſed with the Occaſion of my coming hither at this Time,
" and deſirous to take this Opportunity of expreſſing to you, the Satisfaction
" I have, in ſeeing ſo good a Progreſs made in the publick Buſineſs.

The Queen's Speech to both Houſes.

Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons,

" I am extreamly ſenſible of the Readineſs and Affection with which you have " provided ſo conſiderable a Part of the Supplies.

" As I am fully perſuaded it muſt needs give the greateſt Satisfaction to all our " Allies, ſo I look upon it as a ſure Pledge of your being diſpoſed to make " good thoſe hearty Aſſurances which you gave me in the beginning of the " Seſſion.

" I told you, at the opening of this Parliament, that I did hope you would look " upon the Services relating to Spain, Portugal, and the Army under the Command " of the Duke of Savoy, to be of ſo much Importance in the Proſecution of this " War, that they might deſerve an Augmentation; which I cannot but think will " be of the greateſt Uſe to the Common Cauſe; both with regard to thoſe parti" cular Services, and to the putting our ſelves in a Condition to improve ſuch fa" vourable Opportunities as may ariſe in the enſuing Year.

My LORDS and GENTLEMEN,

" I ſhall only add, That as nothing is more eſſential to my own Quiet, and the " Happineſs of all my good Subjects, than the bringing this War to a ſafe and ho- " nourable Concluſion, ſo I muſt think my ſelf obliged to look upon all thoſe who " are willing and deſirous to ſupport me in it, for attaining that End, as the moſt " proper Objects of my Favour and Encouragement.

" I cannot conclude, without once more recommending to you, to confirm and " improve the Advantages of our happy Union; not doubting but, at the ſame " Time, you will have a due Regard to what ſhall be found neceſſary for preſerv- " ing the publick Peace throughout the whole Iſland of Great Britain.

This Speech, in which the Sowre viſibly predominated over the Sweet, was very much reſented; and the next * Day, occaſion'd a long and memorable Debate in the Houſe of Lords, in relation to the Affairs of Spain, the Queen being preſent, incognito, 'till Five of the Clock in the Afternoon. The Earl of Rocheſter ſpoke Firſt, and having commended the Earl of Peterborow's Courage and Conduct, and enumerated his Services, ſaid, " It had been a conſtant Cuſtom, that when a Perſon " of his Rank, who had been employ'd Abroad in ſo eminent a Poſt, as his Lord- " ſhip, had return'd Home, he had either Thanks given him, or was call'd to an " Account: Urging, that the ſame ought to be done, in relation to the Earl of " Peterborow." The Lord Halifax, who ſpoke next, enlarg'd likewiſe on the Earl of Peterborow's ſucceſsful Services; but dextrouſly put off the returning him Thanks, 'till the whole Tenor of his Conduct had been exaamin'd; than which, the Earl himſelf profeſs'd, he had nothing more at Heart. The Lord Haverſham was not ſilent: But having highly extolled my Lord Peterborow's Valour, Skill, and Succeſs, made a Side-Wind Reflection on the Earl of Galway, ſaying, 'Twas no wonder our Affairs in Spain went ſo ill, ſince the Management of them had been entruſted to a Foreigner. Hereupon ſeveral Members ſhew'd the Neceſſity of carrying on the War, 'till the whole Monarchy of Spain was recover'd, and King Charles ſettled on his Throne: And among the reſt, the Earl of Peterborow ſaid, They ought to give the Queen Nineteen Shillings in the Pound, rather than make Peace upon any other Terms: Adding, That if it were thought neceſſary, he was ready to return to Spain, and ſerve, even under the Earl of Galway. This naturally brought on the Conſideration of Ways and Means to retrieve the Affairs of Spain; in relation to which, the Earl of Rocheſter ſaid, That we ſeem'd to neglect the principal Buſineſs, and mind only Acceſſories: Adding, He remembred the Saying of a Great General, the old Duke of Schomberg, viz. That the attacking France in the Netherlands, was like taking a Bull by the Horns: And therefore his Lordſhip propos'd, That we ſhould ſtand on the Defenſive in Flanders, and ſend from thence Fifteen or Twenty Thouſand Men into Catalonia. He was ſeconded by the Earl of Nottingham, who complain'd of Spain being, in a manner, abandon'd: But the Duke of Marlborough endeavour'd, with ſome Warmth, to ſhew the Danger of ſuch an undigeſted Counſel, and the Neceſſity of augmenting, rather than diminiſhing our Forces in Flanders. The Two chief Reaſons his Grace urg'd were, Firſt, That moſt of the Enemy's ſtrong Places there, might be kept with one Battalion in each; whereas the great Towns of Brabant, we had conquer'd, requir'd Twenty Times that Number of Men for their Preſervation. Secondly, That if our Army in the Netherlands were weaken'd, and the French by their great Superiority, ſhould gain any conſiderable Advantage, the diſcontented Party in Holland, who were not a few, and bore with Impatience the great Charges of the War, would not fail crying aloud for Peace. Hereupon the Earl of Rocheſter ſaid, He wonder'd that noble Peer, who had been ever conſpicuous for his Calmneſs and Moderation, ſhould now be out of his natural Temper; adding, That there being an abſolute Neceſſity to ſuccour Spain, his Grace would oblige their Lordſhips, if he would let them know where they might get Troops to ſend thither; and the Obligation would be the greater, becauſe the Earl of Peterborow had, that very Day, aſſur'd them, that he had heard Prince Eugene ſay, That the German Soldiers had rather be decimated, than ſent into Spain. The Duke of Marlborough anſwer'd the Reproach of having ſhew'd ſome Warmth, by ſaying, The Thing was of too great Importance to be ſpoken of without Concernment: And as for the Queſtion propoſed by the Earl, he ſaid, That although it was improper to diſcloſe ſecret Projects in ſo great an Aſſembly, (to which, 'that Day, many Strangers had been admitted, by Reaſon of the Queen's Preſence) becauſe the Enemy would not fail being inform'd of them; yet, to gratify their Lordſhips, he might aſſure them, that Meaſures had already been concerted with the Emperor, for the forming an Army of Forty Thouſand Men, under the Command of the Duke of Savoy; and

and for ſending powerful Succours to King Charles: Adding, It was to be hop'd, that Prince Eugene might be prevail'd with to go and command in Spain, in which Caſe, the Germans would gladly follow him thither. The only Difficulty which his Grace ſaid might be objected againſt this Scheme, was the uſual Slowneſs of the Court of Vienna; to which purpoſe he took Notice, that if the Seven Thouſand German Recruits, which the Emperor had promiſed for the Army in Piedmont, had arriv'd in Time, the Enterprize againſt Toulon would, probably, have been attended with Succeſs: But that it was to be hoped, and he durſt engage his Word for it, that, for the future, his Imperial Majeſty would punctually perform his Promiſes. This put an End to the Debate; and a Committee was appointed to draw up an Addreſs to the Queen, which was preſented the ſame Day: And wherein their Lordſhips return'd her Majeſty their moſt humble Thanks for her moſt gracious Speech to her Parliament; adding, That the great Spirit and Reſolution ſhe was pleaſed to expreſs, for the vigorous carrying on the War in Spain and Portugal, and ſtrengthening the Army of the Duke of Savoy, who had deſerved ſo well of the whole Confederacy, could not fail to contribute, in the moſt effectual manner, to bring this War to a ſpeedy and happy Concluſion. That ſuch an Example ought to excite all her Allies to a noble Imitation; and their Lordſhips were ſure, her Majeſty would do her utmoſt, to oblige ſuch of them as hitherto had fail'd in their Parts, for the future, to act as thoſe who had a real Concern for reſtoring, and ſecuring Peace and Liberty to Europe. That her Majeſty's Favour, would always be the higheſt Encouragement to her Subjects; but the Zeal their Lordſhips had for the Preſervation of her Majeſty's Perſon and Government, and the Duty they ow'd to their Country, always had, and ever would oblige them to do all that lay in their Power, for ſupporting her Majeſty in this juſt War, till it were brought to a ſafe and happy Concluſion. And as they had ſhewn the greateſt Zeal for bringing the UNION to paſs, and for preventing every Thing that might diſturb it, ſo they unanimouſly promiſed her Majeſty, to do all that was poſſible for them, to make it compleat and entire.

Addreſs of the Lords to the Queen.

Her Majeſty return'd their Lordſhips many Thanks for their Addreſs, and the Aſſurances of their Zeal to ſupport her in the preſent War; adding, That nothing ſhould be wanting on her Part, either abroad or at home, to make her People ſafe and happy.

The Queen's Anſwer.

The ſame Day, their Lordſhips reſolv'd, Firſt, "That no Peace could be ſafe or honourable, for her Majeſty or her Allies, if Spain, and the Spaniſh Weſt-Indies, were "ſuffer'd to continue in the Power of the Houſe of Bourbon. Secondly, That an "humble Addreſs be preſented to the Queen, to thank her Majeſty for the Care ſhe "had taken, and the Inſtances ſhe had uſed with the Emperor, for the ſending "a conſiderable Force for the Relief of the King of Spain, under the Command "of Prince Eugene; and to deſire her Majeſty, that ſhe would continue to make "the moſt preſſing Inſtances to the Emperor, to ſend powerful Succours to Spain, "under the Command of Prince Eugene, with Expedition; and to make good "the Concert of putting Twenty Thouſand Men under the Command of the Duke "of Savoy: And that the Emperor would alſo uſe his utmoſt Power and Intereſt, for "ſtrengthening the Army on the Rhine, which was now happily put under the "Command of that wiſe and valiant Prince the * Elector of HANOVER." An Addreſs, containing theſe Reſolutions, was accordingly drawn up; concluding, They believed no Part of this could be refuſed, upon her Majeſty's earneſt Interpoſition, who had done ſuch great Things for the Houſe of Auſtria: And that this being comply'd with, they might reaſonably hope, by God's Aſſiſtance, the next would prove a happy and glorious Campaign. The Commons having, at the Lords † Deſire, concurr'd in this Addreſs; both Houſes, in a Body, preſented ‖ the ſame to Her Majeſty; who told them, She was fully of their Opinion, that no Peace could be honourable or ſafe, for them or for their Allies, till the ENTIRE MONARCHY of Spain be reſtored to the Houſe of Auſtria; and very well pleas'd to find, that the Meaſures ſhe had concerted for the Succour of the King of Spain, were ſo well approved by both Houſes of Parliament: And that ſhe ſhould continue her moſt preſſing Inſtances with the Emperor, for the haſtening of further Succours, and that they might be commanded by Prince Eugene: As alſo, upon all the other Particulars mention'd in their Addreſs: But, if any ſuch Inſtances were really made with the Emperor, it ſoon after appear'd, that they were ineffectual.

On the 20th of the ſame Month, Charles Lord Viſcount Townſhend (who was, ſome Time before, made Captain of the Yeomen of the Guard, in the Room of the Marquis of Hartington, now Duke of Devonſhire) was ſworn one of the Lords of her Majeſty's Privy-Council: And about the ſame Time, her Majeſty was pleaſed to conſtitute a new Commiſſion of Prizes; whereby John Evelyn, Eſq; Thomas Paker, Eſq; Sir Thomas Skipwith, Bar. Matthew Burton, and Charles Killigrew, Eſqs; were appointed Commiſſioners; Anthony Burnaby, Eſq; Secretary; and William Goſſelyn, Eſq; Comptroller.

On the 28th of November, Baron Spanheim, Ambaſſador Extraordinary from the King of Pruſſia, had a private Audience of the Queen; wherein he acquainted her Majeſty with the grateful Sentiments of his Maſter for the Queen's Support, in aſſerting (by her Miniſter at Bern) the Right of his Majeſty to the Sovereignty of Neufchatel. At the ſame Time, his Excellency notify'd to her Majeſty, by Order of the King his Maſter, the Birth of a young Prince, his Grandſon, ſtiled Prince of Orange, on the 23d of that Month, N. S. and preſented to her Majeſty a Letter from the King, and another from the Prince Royal of Pruſſia, Father of the young Prince; in which, they deſir'd her Majeſty would do them the Honour to be Godmother to the young Prince; which the Queen readily granted.

Baron Spanheim returns the Queen Thanks in the Name of the K. of Pruſſia, for her Majeſty's good Offices in the Buſineſs of Neufchatel; and notifies the Birth of the Prince of Orange.

Towards the latter End of the Year 1706, Three French Cevennois, vulgarly called Camiſars, came over into England, and, by their formal Cant, an ill Imitation of the true Prophetick Stile, and their feign'd Extatick Fits, ſtirr'd up at firſt the Curioſity of ſeveral of their Countrymen in Soho; and a few crazy Perſons, of both Sexes, amongſt them, were ſo far deluded, as to become their Followers; which gave juſt Offence to the Generality of the French Refugees, and occaſion'd dangerous Diſputes in private Families. On the 14th of June, 1707, Sir Jonathan Trelawney, Biſhop of Exeter, was tranſlated to the See of Wincheſter; and on the 23d, he was ſworn and inveſted Prelate of the moſt Noble Order of the Garter, at a Chapter held at the Caſtle of Windſor for that Purpoſe, the Sovereign being preſent; and of the Knights Companions, Prince George of Denmark, the Dukes of Somerſet and Northumberland, the Earls of Rocheſter and Feverſham, the Dukes of Ormond, Devonſhire and Queenſberry, and the Earl Godolphin. In the ſame Month, John Lord Biſhop of Norwich was tranſlated to the See of Ely, vacant by the Death of Dr. Patrick. Six Months after, (the 7th of January) the Queen declared Dr. Charles Trimnel, Biſhop of Norwich; Dr. Offſpring Blackall, Biſhop of Exeter; and Sir William Dawes, Biſhop of Cheſter. At the ſame Time, Dr. White Kennet was appointed Dean of Peterborough; and Dr. Potter, Regius-Profeſſor of Divinity at Oxford.

The Biſhop of Exeter tranſlated to the See of Wincheſter, and inveſted Prelate of the Garter.

On the 18th of December, Henry Earl of Bindon, Deputy to Thomas Duke of Norfolk, Earl Marſhal, and Hereditary Marſhal of England, was ſworn of the Privy-Council. Four Days after, was perform'd the Interment of Sir Cloudeſly Shovel; whoſe Body, after having lain in State for many Days, at the Queen's Expence, was convey'd from his late Dwelling-Houſe in Soho-Square, to the Abbey of Weſtminſter; where it was buried with all the Pomp and Magnificence, ſuitable to her Majeſty's high Regard to the Remains of ſo brave and faithful a Commander. There were at the Ceremony, the Queen's Trumpets, Kettle-Drums, and Houſhold-Drums, with other Muſick; the Queen's and the Prince's Watermen, in their Liveries; moſt of the Nobility's Coaches, with Six Horſes; the Flag-Officers, that were in Town; the Prince's Council; the Heralds at Arms, and the Knight Marſhal's Men.

On the laſt Day of December, Mr. William Greg, a Clerk in Mr. Secretary Harley's Office, (whoſe late Correſpondence with the Enemy had been diſcover'd by the Poſt-Maſter of Bruſſels) was taken into the Cuſtody of a Meſſenger; and having been examin'd Three times by a Committee of Council, was, on the 3d of January, committed to Newgate for High-Treaſon; as was alſo, Four * Days after, Alexander Valiere, (alias John Clerk) for the ſame Crime. The next † Day, Mr. Claude Baud, a Native of Piedmont, and Secretary to Count de Briançon, Envoy Extraordinary from the Duke of Savoy, was apprehended at the Requeſt of that Miniſter, by Warrant from the Earl of Sunderland, one of her Majeſty's Principal Secretaries of State, for traiterous Practices againſt her Majeſty and Government; but the ſame Night as the Two Meſſengers that had him in Cuſtody, were carrying him to Newgate, he made his Eſcape from them. Being, Four Days * after, follow'd by the Queen's Proclamation, wherein a Reward of Two Hundred Pounds was promis'd, for diſcovering and ſecuring him: Within Two Hours after the Publication of the ſaid Proclamation, he was betray'd by a French Taylor, in whoſe Houſe he had taken Sanctuary, and put under the Cuſtody of a Meſſenger.

Mr. Greg condemn'd, Jan. 19.

On the 19th of the ſame Month, Mr. Greg was brought from Newgate, to the Seſſions-Houſe in the Old-Baily; where an Indictment of High-Treaſon was read againſt him, importing, That he had ſent Letters to Monſieur Chamillard, one of the French King's Prime Miniſters; particularly one, dated the 28th of November laſt; and others, wherein were incloſed the Proceedings of both Houſes of Parliament, in relation to the Augmentation of our Forces; a Copy of a Letter from the Queen to the Emperor; private Buſineſs ſent to the Duke of Savoy, &c. To which Indictment Mr. Greg having pleaded Guilty, (the Lord Chief-Juſtice Holt, and moſt of the Judges, being preſent) the Recorder pronounced Sentence of Death upon him, as in Caſes of High-Treaſon. The ſame Day was publiſh'd a Proclamation, for encouraging Seamen and Landmen to enter themſelves on Board her Majeſty's Ships of War; and a Week after another, for the more effectual Recruiting her Majeſty's Land-Forces, and the Marines. At the ſame Time, his Royal Highneſs Prince George of Denmark, Lord High-Amiral, conſtituted and appointed the following Commanders of the Royal Navy: Viz. Sir John Leake, Admiral of the White, and Admiral and Commander in Chief of her Majeſty's Fleet; Sir George Byng, Admiral of the Blue; Sir John Jennings, Vice-Admiral of the Red; Sir John Norris, Vice-Admiral of the White; the Lord Durſley, Vice-Admiral of the Blue; Sir Edward Whitaker, Rear-Admiral of the Red; and John Baker, Eſq; Rear-Admiral of the White.

Let's now reſume the Proceedings in Parliament: As ſoon as the Lords ſat again, their Lordſhips went upon the Affairs of Spain, in relation to which, they took Notice of a Paragraph in a publick Weekly Paper, call'd The Poſt-Boy, from Tueſday, the 30th of December, to Thurſday, January the 1ſt, 170⅞, wherein, among other Things, it was inſinuated, That the Confederate Generals had poſitive Orders to Fight at Almanza. Hereupon Abel Boyer, the Writer of that Paper, (and of this Hiſtory) being † ſummon'd before the Houſe of Lords, and having own'd himſelf to be the Author of that Paper, ſo far as it contain'd Foreign Occurrences, the Lord Chancellor proceeded to the Reading of part of the Paragraph in Queſtion, which ran thus:

Mr. Boyer, Author of The Poſt-Boy, queſtion'd before the Houſe of Lords.

† Jan. 9.

This has moſt ſenſibly appear'd in Spain, where the fatal miſſing of the faireſt Opportunity that could offer, to ſecure the whole Kingdom, after King Philip's Retreat from Madrid, has been the primary Cauſe of the Advantages he has gain'd the laſt Campaign, and King Charles's weakening the Army in Valencia, occaſion'd the Loſs of the Battel of Almanza. The Confederate Generals, according to their poſitive Orders, (which the Neceſſity, and Poſture of Affairs on that Side, ſeem'd abundantly to juſtify) and confiding, beſides, in the Courage and Ardour of their Soldiers, reſolv'd to attack the Duke of Berwick, before he had receiv'd the French Reinforcements, headed by the Duke of Orleans. Nor would they have had Reaſon to repent that Counſel, had all the Troops that engag'd, fought with equal Valour and Intrepidity, &c.

His Anſwer.

Here his Lordſhip ſtopp'd, and aſk'd Mr. Boyer, by what Authority he had advanc'd the Expreſſion of poſitive Orders? He anſwer'd, That the Print, out of which his Lordſhip had taken the Pains to read a Paragraph, was not properly a News-Paper, but an Hiſtorical Recapitulation of all the moſt material Tranſactions of the laſt Year: That he had no other Authority for what he had ſaid in it, but common Fame, which he thought to be a ſufficient Warrant; it being impoſſible for any Writer of General Hiſtory, to be Eye-Witneſs of all the Paſſages he relates: That in this particular Buſineſs now in Queſtion, he had uſed the utmoſt Precaution; and having been told by above Forty Perſons, That the Earl of Galway had poſitive Orders to Fight, he thought it his Duty to vindicate the Reputation of that Great Man, who, upon all Occaſions, had ſo well deſerv'd of the Common Cauſe in General, and of this Nation in Particular: However, he ſhould think himſelf very unhappy, if, by Miſtake, he had given that Auguſt Aſſembly the leaſt Shadow of Offence. As ſoon as he had done ſpeaking, the Lord Haverſham moved, That he ſhould be aſk'd to name ſome of thoſe Perſons, who had told him the Confederate Generals had poſitive Orders to Fight, And who gave the Orders? To the Firſt of theſe Queſtions, which were put to Mr. Boyer, by the Lord Chancellor, he anſwer'd, That he did not then remember any Name; for when he made his Enquiries, he generally charg'd his Memory with Matters of Fact only; and as to the other, That he had heard ſeveral Officers that had been at the Battel of Almanza, and were ſince come over, ſay, That they had Orders to Fight; which was the Military Phraſe, without enquiring from whom the Orders came: Whereupon Mr. Boyer was diſcharg'd.

When

When the Commons met again, the first material Thing they went upon, was to address † the Queen for several Accounts relating to the effective Men of the Portugueze Troops Yearly, particularly of those present at the Battel of Almanza; as also of the Money remitted to Spain; of all Sea-Officers and Seamen taken Prisoners by France, and of the Method observ'd in exchanging Prisoners; of the Number of Men wanting for recruiting the Land-Forces, and the Marines; and for Copies of all Papers that were in the Admiralty, relating to the War in Spain, and the Account given by the Earl of Peterborow, of his Proceedings in that Kingdom, &c. All which were accordingly laid before the House. Not many Days after ||, the Commons, in a grand Committee, took into Consideration the most effectual Method for Recruiting the Land-Forces, and Marines; and there being near Sixteen Thousand Men wanting for that Purpose, some Courtiers proposed, That the several Parishes and Counties should be oblig'd to furnish a certain Number of Men; but the Country Party very warmly opposed that Motion, as tending to abridge the Liberty of the Subject; and most of the Court-Party being shy of pressing a Counsel, that might endanger their Elections for the next Parliament, that Overture was dropp'd, and the Committee came to a Resolution, which, with some Amendments, was agreed to by the House, the 21st of January, as follows: "That a sufficient Number of Men, necessary for the effectual Recruiting "her Majesty's Land-Forces and Marines, and for restoring the Regiments that "were broken at the Battel of Almanza, be raised out of such Persons as have no "lawful Calling or Employment, or do not follow the same; or have not any "Estate, real or personal, for their Maintenance, or any lawful Means of Livelihood, by their own Labour, or Allowance from their Parents, And a Bill was "order'd to be brought in, pursuant to that Resolution." Upon this Occasion, Sir William Courtney made a notable Speech against the unfair Methods by which several young Officers, both by Sea and Land, were advanc'd, to the Prejudice of others of longer Standing, and more Experience. Two Days * after, the Commons unanimously resolv'd to address her Majesty, "That she would be pleased to issue "her Royal Proclamation, for the better putting in Execution, an Act made in the "Fifth Year of her Reign, for the better recruiting her Majesty's Land-Forces, and the Marines; and for the greater Encouragement of the Parish-Officers to perform "their Duty enjoin'd by that Act, That for every Person they should bring be"fore the Magistrates, who should be Impress'd, they should receive the Sum of "Twenty Shillings; and that every Volunteer, for his Encouragement to come "into the Service, should receive Four Pound; and also that her Majesty would be "pleased to signify her Royal Pleasure, that the said Volunteer should have his "Discharge, after Three Years Service, if he desired it: As likewise that her Ma"jesty would grant the same Allowances and Encouragements to such Persons as "should voluntarily come into the Service, out of that Part of the united King"dom, call'd Scotland: Which Address was readily comply'd with.

Resolution about Recruiting the Land-Forces, &c.

* Jan. 23.

On the 29th of January, the Commons took into Consideration the State of the War in Spain; and the Residue of the Papers which had been laid before the House, having been read, and the Question being proposed, "That of the Twenty "Nine Thousand, Three Hundred Ninety Five English Forces, provided by Parliament, for the Service of Spain and Portugal, in the Year 1707, there was but Eight "Thousand Six Hundred and Sixty Men in Spain and Portugal, at the Time of the "Battel of Almanza: A Debate arose thereupon, which was adjourn'd to Tuesday, the 3d of February, when Mr. St. John offering to the House, an Account of the Number of Forces provided for Spain and Portugal, in 1707, the same was brought up to the Table, and read; and the Question formerly proposed and debated, was (with an Amendment) agreed to by the House, as followeth, viz. Resolved, "That it ap"pears to this House, that of the Twenty Nine Thousand, Three Hundred Ninety "Five English Forces, provided by Parliament for the Service of Spain and Portugal, "in the Year 1707, there was but Eight Thousand Six Hundred and Sixty Men, "besides Commission, and Non-Commission Officers, and Servants, in Spain and "Portugal, at the Time of the Battel of Almanza." Then a Motion being made, and the Question proposed, "That an humble Address be presented to her Majesty, "laying the said Resolutions before her Majesty, and humbly desiring, that she "would be graciously pleased to order an Account to be laid before this House, "how it came to pass that there were no more English Forces in Spain and Portugal, "at the Time of the Battel of Almanza; and also, that her Majesty would be "pleased to use her utmost Endeavours, That the War in Spain might be vigorously "and effectually prosecuted:" It was carried in the Affirmative; and resolved, that the said Address be presented to her Majesty by the whole House. Accordingly, on the 5th of February, the Speaker, with the House, attended the Queen with the said Address, to which her Majesty answer'd: That what they desired should be carefully examin'd,

Proceedings of the Lords.

The Earl of Peterborow's Conduct found blameleſs.

‖ Feb. 7.

Sir Thomas Hardy's Caſe examin'd by the Lords.

examin'd, and ſhe would ſend them an Anſwer in a ſhort Time. All this while the Lords had under Conſideration the Affairs of Spain, and the Grievances of the Merchants: And in reference to the Firſt, they beſtow'd ſeveral † Sittings on the Examination of the Earl of Peterborow's Conduct, which appearing to be altogether Blameleſs, his Lordſhip's Friends labour'd to have the Thanks of the Houſe return'd him, which, however, they could not carry, being ſtrongly oppoſed by the Court-Party. As to the Grievances of the Merchants, their Lordſhips having maturely conſider'd the Complaints againſt Captain Kerr, preſented ‖ an Addreſs to her Majeſty, who told them, ſhe would take Care to diſcourage the Abuſes and ill Practices complain'd of; and countenance with her Favour, ſuch Commanders and Officers, as ſhould diſcharge their Duty, by protecting and ſecuring the Trade of the Nation.

Their Lordſhips, about the ſame Time, ſtrictly examin'd Sir Thomas Hardy's Caſe, which was as follows: "That Sea Commander received an Order from his "Royal Highneſs, the Lord High-Admiral, dated the 2d of July, 1707, Directing "him to convoy, with ſeveral Men of War, all the outward-bound Trade, that was "ready to Sail, and ſee them ſafe, about One Hundred and Twenty Leagues beyond "the Land's-End; and then to detach with them ſome Men of War, under the "Command of Captain Kirktown; and himſelf, with the reſt of the Ships under "his Command, to cruize in ſuch Stations, as, upon adviſing with the ſeveral Cap-"tains with him, ſhould be thought the moſt proper for meeting with, and pro-"tecting the Homeward-bound Liſbon Trade. This Order further directed, That in "Caſe Sir Thomas Hardy ſhould, in his Paſſage from Spithead into the Soundings, get "Sight of the Squadron of French Ships, (which had been lately ſeen off the Liz-"zard;) he was forthwith to detach Captain Kirktown from him, on his Voyage to Lif-"bon, as before directed: And he, with the reſt of the Ships under his Command, to give "Chaſe to, and uſe his utmoſt Endeavours to come up with, and take and deſtroy the ſaid "Ships of the Enemy: But if he found that he could not come up with them, he was to "Cruize into the Soundings, as before directed.

"Sir Thomas Hardy, purſuant to this Order, ſail'd, with the Squadron under his "Command, and outward-bound Merchantmen. But being ſeveral Times forc'd "back by contrary Winds, it was, the 27th of Auguſt, 1707, before they got Ninety "Three Leagues from the Lizzard. About half an Hour paſt Two that Afternoon, "Captain Kirktown, in the Defiance, that was in the Rear of the Fleet, made "the Signal of ſeeing Six Sail, which being alſo ſeen about Three, right a-Stern "from the Maſt-head of the Kent, Sir Thomas Hardy brought to, for the Rear, that "were a great way off, and ſpread very much, to come up with the Body of the "Fleet, conſiſting. in all, of above Two Hundred Sail.

"Between Three and Four a Clock, Sir Thomas Hardy perceiving that the Six "Sail came up with him a-pace, notwithſtanding it was little Wind, and thereby "judging they might be Seekers, made the Signal for the Ships that were to con-"tinue with him, to chaſe to Windward, and alſo chas'd himſelf with them, both "to prevent theſe Six Sail from taking ſome of the heavy Sailors, and to try to "come up with them, in Caſe they were Enemies.

"About Five, the Six Sail were ſeen from the Kent's Deck, making all the Sail "they could before the Wind, after the Fleet. Soon after they ſhortned Sail, and "brought to, to ſpeak with one another: Whereupon Sir Thomas Hardy, believing "them to be the French Squadron mention'd in his Orders, made the Signal "for the Liſbon Fleet to part, whilſt he, with his own Squadron, continu'd to "chaſe, to Windward, the Enemy, who had form'd themſelves into a Line of "Battel.

"About Six, the Six Sail bore away, and ſtood to the Eaſtward from him, and "he, with his Squadron, tack'd after them, and continu'd the Chaſe 'till near Se-"ven a Clock: But he then conſidering, that it was almoſt Night; that the Six "Sail were then hall'd to, and almoſt in the Wind's Eye, ſaw no Probability of "coming up with, or keeping Sight of them, it being little Wind. And therefore "he made the Signal for the Captains with him to adviſe with them, according to "the Order before-mention'd.

"The Reſult of this Conſultation, (which was ſign'd by Fourteen Captains) was, "That Sir Thomas Hardy ſhould leave off Chaſe; and left the Enemy (ſuppoſed to be "Du Guay's Squadron, of whoſe Strength he was inform'd, by a Letter from the "Admiralty, dated the 8th of July, 1707,) ſhould paſs by him in the Night, and fall "upon the Trade, which could not be protected by the Convoys directed to be left with them: "All the Captains unanimouſly agreed, That it was for her Majeſty's Service "to bear away, and keep Company with the Liſbon Fleet, 'till they got One Hundred and "Twenty Leagues, at leaſt, from the Land's End, according to his Royal Highneſs's "Orders.

"Sir

A. D. 1707.

" Sir Thomas Hardy comply'd with their Advice, and ſaw the Fleet ſafe, as far " as he was directed: But upon the Complaint of ſome Merchants, ſurmiſing that " that Sir Thomas Hardy had not chas'd the Six Sail, a Court Martial was order'd " to examine his Conduct therein. The Court having examin'd him, and taken " the Depoſitions upon Oath of Captain Roſſey, of the Northumberland; Captain " Strickland, of the Naſſau; Captain Walton, of the Canterbury; Edmund Hook, Firſt " Lieutenant of the Kent; William Efford, Maſter of the Kent; George Hill, Maſter " of the Naſſau; John Parrot, Maſter of the Canterbury; and Stephen Self, Firſt " Mate of the Kent, gave a Sentence, importing, That Sir Thomas Hardy had com- " ply'd with his Royal Highneſs, the Lord High-Admiral's Orders, both with regard to " the chaſing the Enemy, and alſo the protecting the Trade; and accordingly the Court ac- " quitted Sir Thomas Hardy from the Charge laid againſt him.

" This Sentence was tranſmitted to his Royal Highneſs, with the Depoſitions of " the ſeveral Witneſſes, and ſome Time after, thoſe Papers were ſent for, and read " before her Majeſty in Council. But though it then appear'd that Sir Thomas " Hardy was fairly acquitted by the Court Martial, yet the Proceedings of that " Court were, on the 15th Day of November, 1707, read before his Royal High- " neſs, the Lord High Admiral, and the following Flag-Officers, Admiral Churchill, " Sir Stafford Fairborne, Sir John Leake, Sir George Byng, Sir John Norris, Sir " James Wiſhart, who all approved the Sentence of the Court Martial, and gave " their Opinions under their Hands." All this not ſatisfying ſome Gentlemen of the City, the Papers relating to Sir Thomas Hardy's Tryal, were laid before the Houſe of Commons: But when they were read before the Committee, thoſe very Gentlemen who had call'd for them, finding Sir Thomas Hardy ſo clearly juſtify'd therein, would not ſpeak to them as they had deſign'd. Afterwards, upon a Complaint to the Houſe of Lords, of a Maſter of a Canary Ship, that Sir Thomas Hardy had refus'd to convoy him from Plymouth to Portſmouth, their Lordſhips order'd Sir Thomas to attend the Houſe, which directed him to attend the Committee. The latter took Occaſion to examine likewiſe the Papers relating to his Tryal; and after they had read them on the 9th of February, 170$\frac{7}{8}$, Sir Thomas Hardy, with Two Merchants, and the Maſter of the Canary Ship, were call'd in before their Lordſhips. Sir Thomas having ſhew'd his Orders to warrant his Refuſal of Convoy, he was order'd to withdraw, and ſoon after, the Deputy-Uſher of the Black-Rod acquainted Sir Thomas, That their Lordſhips found, that he had fully juſtify'd himſelf, and done his Duty in every Reſpect; and therefore, that he was diſcharg'd from any farther Attendance upon that Committee. Four Days * before, there was a great Debate in the Grand Committee of the Houſe of Lords, occaſion'd by a Bill paſs'd by the Commons, and ſent to their Lordſhips, for rendring the Union of the Two Kingdoms more entire and compleat, whereby, in the Firſt Place, it was Enacted, " That from the " Firſt of May, 1708, there ſhould be but one Privy-Council in the Kingdom of " Great Britain." Several Peers repreſented the additional Hardſhip and Slight that was put upon that Part of the united Kingdom, call'd Scotland, by this ſudden Diſſolution of their Privy-Council, and moved that it might be continued, at leaſt, 'till the Month of October next; but their Arguments were confuted by the Lord Chancellor, the Earl of Sunderland, and the Lords Somers and Halifax; ſo that the Queſtion being put, whether their Lordſhips ſhould agree with the Commons, Fifty Peers were for the Affirmative, and Forty Five only for the Negative.

The Lords agree with the Commons about the aboliſhing the Scotch Privy-Council.

Six Days after, the Right Honourable Henry Boyle, Chancellor of the Exchequer, was made one of her Majeſty's Principal Secretaries of State, in the Room of Robert Harley, Eſq; which ſudden and unexpected Change, occaſion'd various Conjectures. It was then generally reported, that Mr. Harley's Removal was owing to his conniving at Mr. Greg's treaſonable Practices; and the Emiſſaries of the Authors of his Diſgrace, induſtriouſly endeavour'd to gain Credit to that Report: But though a Suſpicion of ſuch a Connivance might, indeed, have been infuſed into the Queen, as an Argument to prevail with her to part with Mr. Harley, yet 'tis certain that the General, and the Treaſurer, had other Reaſons to get him out of their Way. When they firſt gave him a ſhare in the Miniſtry, 'twas principally with Deſign to ſecure his Aſſiſtance and Intereſt in the Houſe of Commons, in order to retrieve the unlucky Steps that had been made, with relation to Scotland; and they fondly imagin'd, that as to other grand Affairs, either he would not intermeddle, or would blindly follow their Directions: But they found, not long after, that a Perſon of Mr. Harley's prying Genius, and ambitious Spirit, could not be contented to act an Under-Part; and that as he had been uſeful, he endeavour'd to make himſelf neceſſary. A Circumſtance proved very favourable to Mr. Harley: The Dutcheſs of Marlborough, Groom of the Stole, had, ſome Years before, preferr'd Mrs. Abigail Hill, her Kinſwoman, Siſter to Mr. Hill, one of the Queen's Pages, to be one of her her Dreſſers and Chamber-Women; and as, in Time, her Grace grew weary, on ſeveral (a) Accounts, of a cloſe Attendance, ſhe thought ſhe might ſecurely eaſe her ſelf, by leaving near her Royal Miſtreſs, a Dependant and Relation, in whom ſhe entirely confided. Mrs. Hill diſcharg'd her Duty to the Queen with wonderful Aſſiduity, Diligence, and Obſequiouſneſs; and having a tolerable Share of Wit, and good Humour, ſhe made her ſelf ſo agreeable, that as the Dutcheſs of Marlborough let ſometimes whole Months paſs, without waiting on the Queen, ſo the Queen very eaſily diſpens'd with her Abſence, On the other Hand, the growing Favourite, as 'tis uſual with Courtiers, as eaſily forgot her Benefactreſs; and whether through her own Ambition, or by the Suggeſtion of others, at laſt, reſolv'd to ſet up for her ſelf. Her principal Adviſer was Mr. Secretary Harley, who judging her a proper Inſtrument for his Deſigns, apply'd himſelf to her with all the Cunning and Addreſs he was Maſter of; ſhew'd her more Reſpect than is generally paid by a Man in his Poſt, to a Woman in her Station; and infuſed ſuch Notions into her, as taught her to ſet more Value upon her ſelf, than ſhe did before. There grew ſuch Intimacy and Confidence between them, that Mrs. Hill being ſmitten with Mr. Maſham, a comely Youth, formerly a Page to the Queen, and afterwards an Equerry, and Gentleman of the Bedchamber to Prince George, ſhe did not ſcruple to diſcloſe the Secret of her Heart to Mr. Harley, who employ'd an old, inſinuating Courtier, and an intimate Companion of Mr. Maſham, who ply'd the latter ſo warmly, with the alluring Proſpect of raiſing his Fortune, that he ſoon conquer'd his Reluctancy to marry one that had little, beſides the Queen's Favour, to recommend her. Thus Mrs. Hill had her Wiſhes; and, out of Gratitude, became entirely devoted to the Perſon who had contributed to make her happy; ſo that, by her Means, Mr. Harley had freer Acceſs to the Queen, than any other Miniſter. This Advantage he improved ſo dextrouſly, by entertaining her Majeſty with diverting Stories of the Town, that, on Pretence of Buſineſs, he was, at laſt, admitted into her pleaſurable Retirements, where he had Opportunities not only to ſtudy and humour her Inclinations, but alſo to inſinuate ſuch Hints of Perſons and Things, as were agreeable to his Deſigns. Mr. Harley's growing Favour could neither paſs unobſerv'd, nor fail giving Jealouſy to the General, and the Treaſurer; and the rather, becauſe upon the Overtures of Peace made by the Elector of Bavaria, after the Battel of Ramellies, they found the Queen ſtrongly inclin'd to enter upon a Negotiation; which not ſuiting either with their Notions of the Publick, or (as was by their Enemies ſuggeſted) their private Intereſt, they reſolv'd to remove him, whom they juſtly ſuſpected to have ſuggeſted pacifick Counſels; and who, beſides, had, on ſeveral Occaſions, been backward to ſerve them in the Houſe of Commons. Hereupon all Arts were uſed to work him out of the Queen's Eſteem, by repreſenting him as a dangerous Perſon, who neither conſulted her Honour, nor the Intereſt of Chriſtendom; and 'twas undoubtedly with an Eye upon him, that they made her ſay, in her laſt Speech to the Parliament, That ſhe muſt think her ſelf oblig'd to look upon all thoſe who were willing and deſirous to ſupport her in this War, in order to bring it to a ſafe and honourable Concluſion, as the moſt proper Objects of her Favour and Encouragement. Upon the Diſcovery of Greg's treaſonable Correſpondence, Mr. Harley's Enemies failed not inſinuating to the Queen, That a Secretary of State, like Cæſar's Wife, ought not only to be innocent, but unſuſpected: And when the General and Treaſurer found a Reluctancy in the Queen to part with Mr. Harley, unleſs he appear'd to be guilty, they abſolutely refuſed to come to Council while he was there. Hereupon the Queen yielded: But though the Seals were taken from Mr. Harley, yet, nevertheleſs, by the good Offices of his truſty Friend, Mrs. Maſham, he had ſtill, privately, free Egreſs and Regreſs to the Queen, 'till, at laſt, he defeated and triumph'd over all his Enemies, and put himſelf at the Head of a Triumvirate, who govern'd abſolutely all the remaining Part of this Reign. The other Two Perſons, who made up that Triumvirate, were Sir Simon Harcourt, and Mr. Henry St. John, who, upon Mr. Harley's Removal, reſign'd their reſpective Places; the firſt of Attorney-General, the other of Secretary at War. Sir Thomas Manſel, Baronet, did likewiſe follow Mr. Harley's Fortune, and voluntarily gave up his Place of Comptroller of the Queen's Houſhold.

Sir Simon Harcourt, Mr. St. John, and Sir Thomas Manſel reſign their Places, Feb. 12.

Her Majeſty being about this Time indiſpoſed with the Gout, a Commiſſion under the Great Seal was granted to ſeveral Lords, for paſſing the Royal Aſſent to ſuch Bills as had been agreed to by both Houſes; purſuant to which, on the 13th of (a) Some pretend that the Dutcheſs was extreamly fatigued with ſitting up late with the Queen. Others would have it, That after her Grace's Conſort was made a Prince of the Empire, ſhe look'd upon her ſelf as a Princeſs, and therefore above her Place.

February,

A. D. 1707.

February, their Lordſhips paſs'd, 1. An Act for raiſing a further Supply, by Sale of Annuities. 2. An Act for the Security of her Majeſty's Perſon and Government, and of the Succeſſion to the Crown of Great Britain in the Proteſtant Line. 3. An Act for rendring the UNION of the Two Kingdoms more entire and compleat; and ſome other publick and private Bills. Three * Days after, upon the Report from the Grand Committee, in relation to the State of the Navy, the Commons reſolv'd, "1ſt, That "the Complaint of Mr. Wood, and other Merchants, againſt Captain Kerr, in rela- "tion to the Neptune Sloop, Martha Galley, and Three other Sloops, which were "under Convoy of the Experiment Man of War, had been fully proved, and made "out. 2dly, That the Trade to the Weſt-Indies, being of great Advantage and "Benefit to Great Britain, had, by Captain William Kerr's exacting exorbitant Sums "of Money from the Merchants for Convoys, (whilſt he commanded a Squadron of "her Majeſty's Ships of War in the Weſt-Indies) been greatly obſtructed and preju- "diced. 3dly, That the requiring or demanding of Money for Convoys, is illegal, "oppreſſive to Merchants, and deſtructive to Trade. 4thly, That an Addreſs be "preſented to her Majeſty, laying before her the ſaid Reſolutions, and humbly "deſiring, that ſhe would be pleaſed not to employ the ſaid Captain Kerr in "her Majeſty's Service for the future." Which Addreſs having been preſented to the Queen, Ten Days after, her Majeſty declar'd, That ſhe would comply with it.

Acts paſs'd, Feb. 13.

* Feb. 16. Reſolutions againſt Captain Kerr.

Some † Days before, the Lord Coningſby deliver'd to the Houſe the Queen's Anſwer to their Addreſs of the 3d of that Month, for an Account how it came to paſs, that there were no more Engliſh Forces in Spain and Portugal, at the Time of the Battel of Almanza; and that ſhe would uſe her Endeavours, that the War in Spain might be vigorouſly and effectually proſecuted: Which Anſwer was ſo long-winded and intricate, that it rather expoſed, than juſtify'd them who had the Management of the Affairs of Portugal and Spain: And thereupon, the ‖ Commons order'd, That the Addreſſes of the Houſe to her Majeſty, of the 18th of December, and 12th of January laſt, about the Forces maintain'd by the Kings of Spain and Portugal, be renewed to her Majeſty. On the 23d of the ſame Month, the Lord Coningſby acquainted the Houſe, That thoſe Addreſſes having been renewed, according to their Order, her Majeſty had been pleaſed to give the Anſwer following; viz. "That in relation to that "Part of the Addreſs, which concern'd the Forces of the King of Spain; her Ma- "jeſty has order'd to be laid before the Houſe, a Liſt of the Troops provided by "the King of Spain, for the Service of the Year 1707: And in relation to the "Troops of Portugal, her Majeſty had, ever ſince the Treaty with that Crown, gi- "ven Directions to her Miniſters there, to uſe all poſſible Means, that his ſaid Ma- "jeſty ſhould furniſh the whole Number of Men agreed for by the ſaid Treaty: "And her Majeſty hoped, that thoſe Inſtances had, in a great meaſure, had their "deſired Effect." At the ſame Time, her Majeſty obſerved, "That the Me- "thods of Diſcipline there, made it impoſſible to know the Number of thoſe "Troops with the ſame Exactneſs, as is practis'd in other Parts: And conſidering "with what Chearfulneſs and Succeſs they march'd thro' Spain to Madrid, and the "Loſſes they ſuſtain'd; and being very well aſſur'd, that the King of Portugal had "lately rais'd, and was ſtill raiſing a conſiderable Number of Forces; her Ma- "jeſty had not thought it adviſeable, to make too nice an Inquiry into the State of "thoſe Troops; eſpecially, ſince ſhe was very ſenſible, how diligent the Enemy "was in making continual Applications, to break an Alliance of ſo great Impor- "tance to the Common Cauſe." At the ſame Time, the Lord Coningſby preſented to the Houſe the Liſt of the Troops provided by the King of Spain, for the Service of the Year 1707. The ſame * Day, the Queen went to the Houſe of Lords, with the uſual State; and the Commons attending, her Majeſty gave the Royal Aſſent to ſeveral publick Bills.

The next † Day, the Commons took into Conſideration her Majeſty's Anſwer to their Addreſs of the 5th of that Month, and the State of the War in Spain: And a Motion being made, and the Queſtion put, "That the Deficiency of the Engliſh Troops in Spain and Portugal, at the Time of the Battel of Almanza, had "been chiefly occaſion'd by the want of timely and effectual Recruits being ſent thi- "ther?" It paſſed in the Negative: And, on the contrary, it was reſolved, "That "an Addreſs be preſented to her Majeſty, returning her the Thanks of the Houſe, "for her taking Meaſures to reſtore the Affairs in Spain, and for providing Foreign "Troops for that Service: And that the ſaid Addreſs be preſented by the whole "Houſe." It is remarkable, That in this Day's Debate, ſeveral Members commended the Earl of Galway's Conduct, ſince the Battel of Almanza; but, at the ſame Time, reflected on him for venturing it, upon ſo great an Inequality of Forces. The Commons having ‖ attended the Queen with the before-mentioned Addreſs dreſs; her Majeſty was pleas'd to return an Anſwer, importing, That ſhe had always look'd upon the War of Spain to be of ſo great Importance to us, that ſhe could never fail of continuing her utmoſt Application to ſupport it in the moſt effectual manner: And that the Satisfaction they had expreſs'd in their Addreſs, for her Endeavours in this Matter, was extreamly acceptable to her.

The Queen's Anſwer to the Commons Addreſs, about the War in Spain.

Two * Days after, the Queen was attended with another ungrateful, long-winded Addreſs from the Lords, relating to the Miſmanagements of the Navy; to which ſhe return'd an Anſwer; "That ſhe would make the moſt uſeful Obſervations up-"on the ſeveral Particulars of it: That it was always her Opinion, that the En-"couragement of Trade and Seamen, and the good Management of the Navy, "were of the greateſt Importance to the Proſperity of this Kingdom: And there-"fore ſhe would uſe her utmoſt Endeavours, to encourage all thoſe, whoſe Duty it "was, effectually to perform thoſe Services.

* March 1. The Queen's Anſwer to the Addreſs, about the Miſmanagement of the Navy.

Amidſt the Contradiction and Oppoſition, which the Miniſters met in both Houſes, it fell out luckily for them, that the Nation was ſuddenly alarm'd with the Threats of an Invaſion. The haughty French Monarch, not being able to brook the late Attempt upon Toulon, which occaſion'd ſo great a Diſtraction and Conſternation throughout all his Dominions, reſolved to retaliate it, by carrying the War into Great Britain: Which Counſel was the more eagerly embraced and purſued, becauſe he was made to believe, that the Scots were ſo highly diſcontented on Account of the Union, as to be ripe for a Revolt, and ready to declare for the pretended Prince of Wales, on his Arrival amongſt them. Upon theſe fond Hopes, the neceſſary Preparations for that Expedition were carried on at Dunkirk, with all imaginable Diligence, and with ſuch Secrecy, that the Deſign was rather gueſs'd at, than known, till the Pretender himſelf ſet † out from St. Germains; when it was no longer a Myſtery, that he intended to make a Deſcent upon Scotland. The Day before his Departure, the French King went to St. Germains, to bid him Adieu, and wiſh him Succeſs; preſented him with a Sword enrich'd with Diamonds, of a conſiderable Value, and deſir'd him always to remember, that it was a French Sword. The Knight of St. George (for this was the Name the Pretender aſſumed in this Adventure) anſwer'd the Compliment with aſſuring his moſt Chriſtian Majeſty, "That if it was his good Fortune to get Poſſeſſion of the Throne of his Anceſtors, "he would not content himſelf with returning him Thanks by Letters and Ambaſ-"ſadors, but would ſhew his Gratitude by Deeds:" And 'twas reported, he even ſaid, "That he would come in Perſon, to acknowledge his Majeſty's Protection and "Aſſiſtance:" To which the French King reply'd, He hop'd never to ſee him again. Upon his Arrival at Dunkirk, the Pretender was furniſh'd with very fine Tents; a large Set of Gold and Silver Plate, of curious Workmanſhip; Cloaths for his future Life-Guards; Liveries for his Houſhold, and other Neceſſaries; towards the Charge whereof, and of this Armament, the Pope was ſaid to have contributed a conſiderable Sum of Money.

The Pretender's Mottos upon the Colours and Standards, were, DIEU ET MON DROIT; that is, GOD AND MY RIGHT: NIL DESPERANDUM, CHRISTO DUCE, ET AUSPICE CHRISTO; I DON'T DESPAIR, SINCE CHRIST IS MY GUIDE AND HELPER: And, CUI VENTI ET MARE OBEDIUNT, IMPERA, DOMINE, ET FAC TRANQUILLITATEM; O THOU, WHOM THE WINDS AND SEA OBEY, COMMAND, LORD, THAT IT BE CALM.

The vaſt Preparations of the French at Dunkirk, gave ſome Uneaſineſs to the States-General, who ſeem'd to be apprehenſive of an Attempt againſt the Province of Zealand; but ſuch timely Precautions were taken for the Security of that Iſland, that the French would have found it altogether impoſſible to attack it with Succeſs. Their Territories being thus ſecur'd, their High Mightineſſes concerted with the Britiſh Miniſters the neceſſary Meaſures for diſpelling the Storm, which (with more Probability) threaten'd her Britannick Majeſty's Dominions; of which they gave early Information to the Queen: As did alſo her Majeſty's vigilant Envoy Extraordinary, Major-General Cadogan, who had early Intelligence of the Deſign, from a Jew reſiding at Dunkirk.

Mr. Secretary Boyle acquaints the Commons with it, March 4.

Hereupon, on the 4th of March, Mr. Secretary Boyle acquainted the Commons, "That her Majeſty had commanded him to lay before the Houſe ſeveral Advices "received the Night before, and that Morning, of great Preparations at Dun-"kirk, for an immediate Invaſion upon England by the French, and of the pretend-"ed Prince of Wales's being come to Dunkirk for that Purpoſe." The Letters and Extracts, relating thereto, being read; it was unanimouſly reſolved, to preſent an Addreſs to her Majeſty; in which the Houſe of Lords having readily concurr'd, both Houſes preſented, the next Day, the ſaid Addreſs, as follows:

"WE

A. D. 1705.

Addreſs of both Houſes to the Queen, March 5.

" WE your Majeſty's moſt faithful and obedient Subjects, the Lords Spiritual " and Temporal, and Commons of Great Britain, in Parliament aſſem- " bled, do beg Leave to return our moſt hearty Thanks to your Majeſty, for " being graciouſly pleas'd to communicate to your Parliament, the Intelligence " you have received of an intended Invaſion of this Kingdom, by the pretended " Prince of Wales, ſupported by a French Power.

" We are ſo ſenſible of the Happineſs We enjoy under your Majeſty, and are " ſo affected with the dangerous Conſequence of ſuch an Attempt, both to your " Perſon and Government, that, with Hearts full of Concern for your Majeſty's " Safety, we beſeech your Majeſty, that you will be pleaſed to take particular Care " of your Royal Perſon: And we, on our Parts, are fully and unanimouſly reſol- " ved, to ſtand by and aſſiſt your Majeſty with our Lives and Fortunes, in " Maintenance of your undoubted Right and Title to the Crown of theſe Realms, " againſt the pretended Prince of Wales, and all other your Enemies, both at Home " and Abroad.

" The Care your Majeſty has taken for the Defence of your Dominions, and " particularly in fitting out ſo great a Fleet in ſo ſhort a Time, gives Satisfaction " and Encouragement to all your good Subjects; who are likewiſe very ſenſible of " the Zeal the States-General have ſhewn upon this Occaſion.

" As a further Inſtance of our Duty, we humbly deſire, that you will be pleaſed " to order, that the Laws againſt Papiſts and Nonjurors be put in Execution; and " that Directions be given to ſeize and ſecure ſuch Perſons, with their Horſes and " Arms, as your Majeſty ſhall have Cauſe to ſuſpect are diſaffected to your Perſon " and Government.

" And as we doubt not, but, by the Bleſſing of God upon the Continuance of " your Majeſty's Care, your Enemies will be put to Confuſion; ſo we readily em- " brace this Opportunity, to ſhew to your Majeſty and the whole World, that no " Attempts of this Kind ſhall deter Us from ſupporting your Majeſty, in a vigo- " rous Proſecution of the preſent War againſt France, till the Monarchy of Spain " be reſtor'd to the Houſe of Auſtria, and your Majeſty have the Glory to compleat " the Recovery of the Liberties of Europe.

To this Addreſs, the Queen return'd the following Anſwer:

My LORDS and GENTLEMEN,

The Queen's Anſwer.

" I Have ſuch an entire Dependance on the Providence of GOD, and ſo much " Truſt in the faithful Services of my good Subjects, that I hope this Attempt " will prove dangerous only to thoſe who undertake it.

" I am extreamly ſenſible of your Concern and Affection for Me and my Go- " vernment; and ſhall have a very particular Regard to the Advice you give Me " upon this Occaſion.

" I am alſo very well pleas'd with the Juſtice which you have done the States-Ge- " neral, in taking notice of their timely Care for our Safety, and their Readineſs " to give Us all poſſible Aſſiſtance.

" The firm Reſolution which you expreſs, upon all Occaſions, of ſupporting Me " in bringing this War to a ſafe and happy Concluſion, as it is moſt eſſentially ob- " liging to Me, ſo, I aſſure my ſelf, it will mightily diſhearten our Common E- " nemies, and give the greateſt Encouragement and Advantage to all our Allies.

The * Day before, the Commons order'd a Bill to be brought in, to empower her Majeſty to ſecure and detain ſuch Perſons, as her Majeſty ſhould ſuſpect were conſpiring againſt her Perſon or Government: And, purſuant to the Parliament's Deſire in their Addreſs, the Queen † iſſued out her Royal Proclamation, " declaring the Perſon, " who, during the Life of the late King James the Second, pretended to be Prince " of Wales, and ſince his Deceaſe, had taken upon himſelf the Title of James the " Third, King of England, James the Eighth, King of Scotland, and all his Accomplices, " Adherents and Abettors, to be Traitors and Rebels: Commanding all her good " Subjects to ſeize and apprehend them: Strictly charging all Popiſh Recuſants, to " repair to their Places of Abode, and not remove from thence above the Diſtance " of Five Miles; and alſo to depart out of the Cities of London and Weſtminſter, " and from all Places within Ten Miles Diſtance of the ſame: And command- " ing all Juſtices of the Peace, to tender the Declaration mention'd in the Sta- " tute 1 Gul. & Mar. to any Perſon ſuſpected to be a Papiſt, or diſaffected to " her Majeſty's Government; and to take the Horſes and Arms of ſuch Perſon:" Which laſt Direction was punctually perform'd.

* March 4. A Bill to ſuſpend the Habeas Corpus Act.

† March 6. Proclamation againſt the Pretender, and his Adherents.

A. D. 1708.

Upon the firſt Notice of the French Armament at Dunkirk, Major-General Cadogan repair'd to Bruſſels, and concerted with Monſieur d'Auverquerque, the March of the Britiſh Forces to be ſhipp'd off for Great Britain, and how to ſupply their Room in their ſeveral Gariſons. From Bruſſels, the Major-General went to Ghent, and having conferr'd with General Lumley, the Governor of that Place, and Commander in Chief of the Britiſh Troops, Orders were given to Ten Battalions, viz. One of the Queen's Guards, Two of Orkney's, One of Argyle's, One of Primroſe's, One of Lalo's, One of How's, One of Ingolſby's, One of North and Grey's, and One of Godfrey's, to hold themſelves in a Readineſs to march at an Hour's Warning. This done, that General and Miniſter repair'd to Oſtend, to forward the Preparations, which, by his early Directions, were making there, for the embarking of thoſe Regiments, as ſoon as there ſhould be certain Advice, that the Twelve French Battalions that were to attend the Pretender in his intended Expedition, were actually embark'd. On the other Hand, the Admiralty of Great Britain fitted out a Fleet with ſuch incredible Diligence, that (without diminiſhing the Convoy provided for the Liſbon-Fleet, which conſiſted of Twelve Britiſh, and Five Dutch Men of War, under the Command of Sir John Leake) Sir George Byng, and the Lord Durſley, ſail'd from Deal, towards the Coaſt of Dunkirk, on the 27th of February, (O. S.) in the Morning, with Twenty Three Britiſh, and Three Dutch Men of War, and one Britiſh Fireſhip. The ſame Day, about Noon, Sir George Byng came to an Anchor in Graveline Pits, and, immediately after, went into a ſmall Frigot, and ſail'd within Two Miles of Flemiſh-Road, from whence he had a Proſpect of the Ships that lay there; and, the next Day, learn'd from a Fiſherman, taken off the Shore, the Number and Strength of the Enemy's Ships: That about Ten Thouſand Men were in and about Dunkirk, ready to embark; that they expected every Day ſeveral Ships from Breſt; and that the pretended Prince of Waies was come to Graveline, in his way to Dunkirk: Where, indeed, he arrived the 9th of March, N. S. in the Morning.

Major General Cadogan provides Ten Battalions to be tranſported into Great Britain.

The Britiſh Admiralty provides a Fleet with incredible Diligence.

The French, who fondly thought, that Admiral Leake might, by this Time, have ſail'd for Liſbon, and conſequently that Great Britain was, at this Juncture, unprovided of Shipping, were ſo confident of the Meaſures they had taken, that they did not ſtick publickly to boaſt, That God alone could diſappoint their Deſigns. But ſo great was their Surprize, upon the Britiſh Fleet appearing off Mardyke, that a Stop was put to the Embarkation of their Troops, and frequent Expreſſes were diſpatch'd to Paris for new Orders. The Count de Fourbin, who commanded the Enemy's Squadron, having repreſented to the French King, that he might, indeed, get out of Dunkirk-Harbour, and, perhaps, land the Troops, but that he could not anſwer for his Majeſty's Ships: That Monarch, who was fully bent upon this Expedition, ſent him poſitive Orders to reimbark the Troops, and to put to Sea with the firſt fair Wind. In the mean Time, the Enemy gave out, that their diſembarking of the Troops at Dunkirk, was upon Account of the Pretender's being indiſpoſed with the Meaſles, attended with an Ague; but as ſoon as the French King's laſt Orders came, that Pretence vaniſh'd; the Prince was ſaid to be perfectly recover'd; and Count Fourbin having, on the 14th of March, N. S. receiv'd Advice, from Bologne, That the Britiſh Fleet, being forced from their Station by the high Winds, was ſeen off that Place, ſteering, the 13th, for the Downs, they begun, at Two in the Afternoon, to reimbark their Forces. The Wind turning fair for them, the 17th of March, N. S. they laid hold of that Opportunity, and ſail'd at Four in the Afternoon, from the Road of Dunkirk; but the Wind changing about Ten at Night, they were oblig'd to come to an Anchor in Newport-Pits, where they continued 'till the 19th, at Ten in the Evening, when the Wind chopping about, they ſet Sail again, ſteering their Courſe for Scotland. On the other Hand, the Fleet under the Command of Sir George Byng, which came back into the Downs the $\frac{2}{13}$ of March, and was ſince reinforc'd, to the Number of above Forty Men of War of the Line of Battel, beſides Frigots and Fireſhips, ſet Sail again the $\frac{6}{17}$, on a Signal given by one of the Scouts, who obſerv'd Six Ships to the Weſtward, ſuppos'd to be the Breſt Squadron. On the $\frac{9}{20}$, at Ten in the Morning, Sir George Byng, who was then between Dunkirk and Calais, receiv'd Intelligence by an Oſtend Ship, ſent out by Major-General Cadogan, of the Sailing of the Dunkirk Squadron from the Pits of Newport; upon which he call'd a Council of War, and, according to the Reſolution taken in it, ſail'd immediately, in Purſuit of the Enemy; having firſt made a Detachment of a ſtrong Squadron, under the Command of Admiral Baker, with Inſtructions to convoy the Troops that were embark'd at Oſtend, and to look after the Ships ſtill remaining in Dunkirk Road.

The French Fleet, with the Pretender on Board, ſails for Scotland.

Sir George Byng ſails after them.

On the 10th of March, the Commons reſolv'd to addreſs her Majeſty, "That "ſhe would be pleas'd to give Directions, that out of the Moneys given for this "Year's Addreſs for ſecuring the Docks at Portſmouth and Chatham.

A. D. 1708.

" Year's Service, a proper Sum might be apply'd for the better ſecuring the Docks " at Portſmouth and Chatham." The next Day they read Three Times, and paſs'd a Bill, ſent to them by the Lords, For the better Security of her Majeſty's Perſon and Government: " For the Encouragement of ſuch of her Majeſty's Subjects, in that " Part of Great Britain, call'd Scotland, who ſhould ſhew their Zeal to her Majeſty's " Government, by oppoſing ſuch Chieftains and Leaders of Clans, as ſhould take " up Arms againſt her Majeſty, by diſcharging them from any further Superiorities, " Caſualties, or Privileges, which were due to the Superiors ſo forfeiting." The bringing in of this ſeaſonable Bill, was chiefly owing to Major-General Stanhope, and Sir David Dalrymple: But the Enemy not Landing in Scotland, the Bill was dropp'd. The ſame Day, the Queen came to the Houſe of Peers, with the uſual Solemnity, and the Commons attending, her Majeſty gave the Royal Aſſent to the Act for the further Security of Majeſty's Perſon and Government; an Act to empower her Majeſty to ſecure and detain ſuſpected Perſons; and ſeveral other publick and private Bills.

Bill to diſſolve the Clans in Scotland. But the Enemy not landing in Scotland, the ſaid Bill was dropp'd.

Acts paſs'd, March 11.

As common Danger ſuſpends private Animoſities, and revives the Zeal of the Well-affected, ſo thoſe at the Helm, were not wanting to improve the preſent Alarm to their own Advantage. After the Queen had paſs'd the Bills before-mention'd, ſhe made a Speech to both Houſes, importing; That ſhe thought it neceſſary to acquaint them, that ſhe had receiv'd Advices that Morning from Oſtend, that the French Fleet ſail'd from Dunkirk, Tueſday, at Three in the Morning, Northward, with the Pretender on Board: That Sir George Byng had Notice of it the ſame Day, at Ten, and he being very much ſuperior to the Enemy, both in Number and Strength, her Majeſty made no Queſtion, but, by God's Bleſſing, he would ſoon be able to give a good Account of them. That ſhe had alſo Advice, That Ten Battalions of her Troops were embark'd at Oſtend, ready to ſail with their Convoy, as there ſhould be Occaſion: And that ſhe ſhould continue to take all proper Meaſures for diſappointing the Enemy's Deſigns. Hereupon the Courtiers eaſily procured an unanimous Vote in the Houſe of Commons, for a hearty Addreſs, which, on the 13th of March, was preſented to the Queen, by the whole Houſe, as follows:

The Queen's Speech to both Houſes.

Moſt Gracious Sovereign,

" WE your Majeſty's moſt Dutiful and Loyal Subjects, the Commons of Great " Britain, in Parliament aſſembled, humbly wait on your Majeſty, to " expreſs the great Senſe we have of your Grace and Favour, in communicating to " us from the Throne, the Account of the French King's perſiſting to invade your " Dominions, and to impoſe a Pretender upon theſe Realms, over which your " Majeſty is Rightful and Lawful Sovereign.

" The ſaid Number of Ships and Troops with which this Project is proſecuted, " notwithſtanding the great Naval Forces your Majeſty has fitted out with ſo much " Expedition, as it ought to be regarded with Contempt on the one Side, ſo on " the other, it gives us juſt Cauſe to believe, that their chief Dependance is upon " ſome of your Subjects, whoſe reſtleſs Paſſions, and arbitrary Principles, have, " for ſome Years, engaged them in forming Deſigns to undermine and deſtroy the " moſt happy Eſtabliſhment that the Government of this Iſland was ever founded " upon.

The Commons Addreſs to the Queen.

" The Defence of your Majeſty's Perſon and Government, and the Support of " the Proteſtant Succeſſion, are Things ſo ſacred to us, and your People, That as a " Demonſtration of our unfeigned Zeal to aſſiſt and ſupport your Majeſty, to the " utmoſt of our Power, we do, in the Name of the Commons of Great Britain, " give this Aſſurance, that whatſoever Charge you ſhall be at, by augmenting your " Troops at Home, and replacing thoſe you have recalled from Abroad, or for ſuch " other Services, as your Majeſty ſhall judge neceſſary upon this extraordinary " Occaſion, ſhall be effectually made good. And as we humbly recommend it to " your Majeſty, that the ſevereſt Puniſhments may be inflicted upon ſuch as ſhall " aſſiſt in ſo unnatural a Deſign, as that of betraying your Majeſty, and their Coun- " try, ſo we do not doubt but you will give ſuitable Encouragement to all thoſe " who ſhall ſhew their Fidelity, by oppoſing the Invader, and his Accomplices in " Scotland, or where-ever the Deſcent ſhall be.

" Your Majeſty wants no Incitement to a ſteady Proſecution of the War in which " you are engaged for the Common Cauſe; yet permit us to take this Opportunity " to intreat your Majeſty, that this Enterprize may no ways divert your conſtant " Vigor, that all the World may ſee, that both your Majeſty, and your People, " are determined to ſupport your Allies in all Parts, whatever Attempts are made " at Home.

May

A. D. 1708.

May it pleaſe your MAJESTY,

" There can be nothing ſo dangerous or fatal to the Safety of your Royal Perſon, " and the Security of the preſent happy Eſtabliſhment, as thoſe Perſons who en- " deavour to create Diviſions and Animoſities among your faithful Subjects, or by " any artful Methods, leſſen the juſt Eſteem your Majeſty has for thoſe, who have " ſo eminently, and in ſo diſtinguiſhing a manner, commanded your Armies, and " managed your Treaſure, to the Honour and Glory of your Majeſty Abroad, " and the entire Satisfaction of your People at Home: We therefore humbly beg " Leave to beſeech your Majeſty to diſcountenance all ſuch Perſons and Deſigns, " in the moſt remarkable Manner.

The Queen's Anſwer to this Addreſs was:

GENTLEMEN,

Her Majeſty's Anſwer.

I Give you hearty Thanks for this repeated Aſſurance and certain Proof of your Zeal for me, and for the Proteſtant Succeſſion.

I am glad your Thoughts of the War Abroad, ſo perfectly agree with my firm Reſolution upon that Subject.

You may depend, that no Apprehenſions (farther than are reaſonable) ſhall have any Influence on my Meaſures, while the Cauſe of Religion and Liberty, with the good Affections of my People, are on my Side.

I think all who endeavour to make Diviſions among my faithful Subjects, muſt be mine and the Kingdom's Enemies; and I ſhall never Countenance any Perſons who would go about to leſſen the juſt Eſteem which I have for thoſe who have done, and continue to do me the moſt eminent Services.

The ſame Day the Houſe of Lords waited on her Majeſty with the following Addreſs:

Addreſs of the Lords to the Queen.

" WE your Majeſty's moſt dutiful and obedient Subjects, the Lords Spiritual " and Temporal in Parliament aſſembled, return our moſt humble " Thanks to your Majeſty, for communicating to your Parliament the Intelligence " received of the Deſigns of the Pretender to your Crown, aſſiſted by the French " King, and for what you have already done towards fruſtrating this Attempt. We " humbly beg your Majeſty to purſue the moſt vigorous Methods, for the total Diſ- " appointment of this Deſign, in which we firmly aſſure your Majeſty of our moſt " hearty and unanimous Concurrence. We doubt not but your Majeſty will ſoon " ſee ſuch a Spirit, and ſo dutiful a Zeal amongſt your Subjects, as will entirely " daſh the Hopes of the Pretender, without diminiſhing the generous Aſſiſtance you " have ſo long given to your Allies, for Support of the common Liberty of Europe. " It is with Concern, and with juſt Indignation, we hear of a Purpoſe to invade " your Dominions with ſo inconſiderable a Force. This, as it muſt depend upon " ſome Invitation and Encouragement from hence, ſo it is an undeniable Proof, " that neither your Majeſty's Piety, nor the Mildneſs of your Government, nor " the Succeſſes of your Reign, can reconcile ſome Men to the preſent Eſtabliſhment, " the only ſure Foundation of our Liberties, and the Proteſtant Religion. We hope " your Majeſty will always have a juſt Deteſtation of thoſe Perſons, who, at a " Time when this helliſh Attempt was a-Foot, and ſo near breaking out, were " uſing their Endeavours to miſrepreſent the Actions of your beſt Subjects, and create " Jealouſies in your Majeſty, of thoſe who had always ſerved you moſt eminently " and faithfully: And we beſeech your Majeſty not to give ſo juſt a Cauſe of " Uneaſineſs to your People, as to ſuffer any ſuch hereafter, to have Acceſs to your " Royal Perſon. We hope, for this good Effect, from ſo unhappy an Occaſion, " That the univerſal Zeal which will appear for the Preſervation of your Majeſty's " Government, and the Proteſtant Succeſſion, will unite us to one another, and " cure our Miſtakes and Miſapprehenſions, which have been ſo induſtriouſly and " maliciouſly improved; But nevertheleſs, we moſt humbly offer it to your Maje- " ſty, as our Opinion, that your Majeſty ſhould principally depend upon, and en- " courage thoſe who have been, ever ſince the Revolution, moſt ſteady and firm " to the Intereſt of the late King, and of your Majeſty, during your happy " Reign.

Her Majeſty's Anſwer to this Addreſs was:

My

My LORDS,

I Am extreamly ſenſible of your Zeal and Concern for the Safety of my Perſon and Government, and very well pleaſed to find your Thoughts agree ſo exactly with mine, That no Attempt of our Enemies againſt us at Home, ſhould divert us from proſecuting the War Abroad, with the greateſt Vigor; the Hopes of which has probably been one of their principal Motives to ſo preſumptuous an Undertaking.

As I cannot but wiſh there were not the leaſt Occaſion of Diſtinction among my Subjects; ſo I muſt always place my chief Dependance upon thoſe, who have given ſuch repeated Proofs of the greateſt Warmth and Concern for the Support of the Revolution, Security of my Perſon, and of the Proteſtant Succeſſion.

The Queen's Anſwer.

Beſides the Ten Britiſh Battalions which Major-General Cadogan had embark'd at Oſtend, and which, ſailing from thence the 28th of March, N. S. under the Convoy of Admiral Baker, arrived, Three Days after, at Tinmouth; the First and Second Troop of Life-Guards, a Squadron of the Horſe-Grenadiers, the Duke of Northumberland's Regiment of Horſe-Guards, the Dragoons of Eſſex and Carpenter, a Detachment of Sixteen Men out of each Company of the First and Second Regiments of Foot-Guards, making a compleat Battalion, and ſeveral Regiments of Foot were order'd to march towards Scotland, whither the Earl of Leven, Commander in Chief of the Forces in that Part of Great Britain, and Governor of Edinburgh Caſtle, went Poſt betimes, to provide for the Security of that important Fortreſs, and to make all the neceſſary Diſpoſitions to baffle any Attempts the Enemy could make on that Side. Several Regiments that were in the South Parts of Ireland, were, at the ſame Time, commanded towards the North of that Kingdom, from whence, if Occaſion had required, they might, with Eaſe and Expedition, have been tranſported into Scotland: But all theſe wiſe Precautions by Land, proved altogether needleſs, by the Diſappointment of the Enemy's Deſign, at Sea: Of which Monſieur de Gacé, a Lieutenant-General, who commanded their Land-Forces, and was, for this bootleſs Service, made a Mareſchal of France, with the Title of Mareſchal de Matignon, gave afterwards an Account to Monſieur de Chamillard, in a Letter dated at Dunkirk, the 17th of April, N. S. which was as follows:

The Forces in England march towards Scotland.

The Enemy's Deſign upon Scotland diſappointed.

SIR,

Mareſchal de Matignon's Letter to Mr. de Chamillard.

" I Had the Honour to acquaint you with our Embarkation at Dunkirk, the " 17th paſt, and you ſhall ſee, by the following Journal, what has happen'd " ſince, till our Return.

" The 17th of March, at Four in the Afternoon, the Chevalier de Fourbin ſet " Sail with the Fleet; but about Ten in the Evening, the Wind proving contrary, " we were oblig'd to caſt Anchor in the Downs, off of Newport, where we were de- " tain'd the 18th and 19th. The Proteus, on board of which were Four Hundred " Landmen; the Guerrier, and the Barentin, with Two Hundred Men each, were " oblig'd, by the high Winds, to put back into Dunkirk. The ſame Day, 19th, at " Ten in the Evening, the Wind having chopp'd about, we ſet ſail again, and ha- " ving purſu'd our Courſe the 20th, 21ſt, and 22d, with a ſtrong Gale, we made " the Firth of Edinburgh the 23d, in the Morning, and in the Evening caſt Anchor " at the Mouth of it. The 24th, in the Morning, as we made ready to enter the " Firth, we diſcover'd a great Number of Ships, which we ſoon found to be the " Enemy's Squadron, to the Number of Twenty Eight Sail, whom we judg'd to be " the ſame that had appear'd off of Dunkirk; whereupon Monſieur de Fourbin re- " ſolv'd to bear off, by the Favour of a Land Breeze, which, very luckily, carry'd " us from the Enemy. The latter purſu'd us pretty cloſe all that Day, (24th) " and Four of their beſt Sailers being come up with our ſternmoſt Ships, the Ene- " my's foremoſt Ship attack'd, at Four in the Afternoon, the Auguſt, with whom " they exchang'd ſome Guns for ſome Time; after which the Engliſh bore down up- " on the Saliſbury, which was more a-Stern, and another Engliſh Ship that was com- " ing up to her. The Fight between thoſe Two Ships, and ſome others on both " Sides laſted 'till Night, during which Time, the Saliſbury made a great Fire with " their ſmall Arms.

" Our Fleet being diſpers'd, and the Enemy near us, Monſieur de Fourbin ſteer'd " falſe, during the Night, which had a good Effect; for the next Day, (the 25th) " we found our ſelves, with Twenty Sail, at a conſiderable Diſtance from the Ene- " my; whereupon, I diſcours'd Monſieur de Fourbin, to know of him, whether, " having miſs'd our Landing in the Firth of Edinburgh, we might not attempt it in

A. D. 1707.

" another Place? He propos'd to me Inverneſs, which is a very remote Port, in the " North of Scotland, and we went immediately to ſpeak of it to the King of Eng- " land, who entertain'd the Motion with Joy, and told us, We ought to concert toge- " ther the Meaſures that were to be taken, and he would purſue our Reſolutions.

" The Queſtion now was, to get Pilots to conduct us thither, and give us the " neceſſary Notices: But there being none in our Squadron that were acquainted " with that Port, Monſieur de Fourbin detach'd a Frigat, with the Sieurs Caron and " Bouyn, to fetch ſome from the Cape of Buccaneſs. All that Day (25th) we " ſteer'd, with a pretty favourable Wind, towards the North of Scotland; but about " Eleven at Night, there aroſe a ſtrong contrary Wind, which having continued " the next Day with Violence, Monſieur de Fourbin told me, it was high Time to " acquaint the King with the Inconveniencies of purſuing our Courſe, which were " the inevitable Diſperſion of our Fleet; the Danger the Ships that ſhould be ſepa- " rated would be in, either of falling into the Enemy's Hands, or of periſhing on " the Coaſt, if they were driven thither; and even the wanting of Provi- " ſions.

" The Impoſſibility the Sieurs Caron and Bouyn found, of approaching the Shore, " by reaſon of the ſtormy Weather, and, conſequently, of bringing Pilots to guide " us; the Uneaſineſs and Dangers of Landing in a Port we were Strangers to, and " where the Enemy might come up again with us, together with other Hazards and " Difficulties, having been repreſented to the King by Monſieur de Fourbin, in the " Preſence of the Duke of Perth, my Lord Middleton, Mr. Hamilton, my Lord " Galmoy, and Meſſieurs de Beauharnois, and d' Andrezel, the King of England, with " the unanimous Advice of all thoſe Gentlemen, reſolv'd to return to Dunkirk, " where we could not arrive before this Day, by reaſon of the Calms, and con- " trary Winds. I am, &c.

Sir George Byng's Accounts of the Enemy's Diſappointment.

To this Account, we ſhall ſubjoin thoſe that were written by Sir George Byng, from on Board the Medway, the 13th and 15th of March, O. S. the Firſt whereof is as follows: " According to the Opinion we had fram'd, when we left the Sta- " tion off Dunkirk, it has prov'd that the Enemy was deſign'd for Edinburgh. This " Morning we ſaw the French Fleet in the Mouth of the Firth, off of which Place " we anchor'd in the laſt Night, and ſent a Boat aſhore to the Iſle of May, from " whence we had an Account, That the French came to an Anchor Yeſterday in the " Afternoon. They ſent one Ship up into Leith-Road, which had a Flag at the " Main-topmaſt-Head. They report it a Blue one; but we are rather of Opinion, " that it is the Standard. The People of the Iſland ſay, That by the Time that " Ship could get up before the Town, they heard ſeveral Guns fire, which were in " the Manner of Salute. The Ship that went up Yeſterday, came down this Morn- " ing, and is now within Two Leagues of us. She appears to be a Ship of Sixty " Guns, but has now no Flag on Board. We ſaw this Morning, when they weigh- " ed, a Flag at the Main-topmaſt-Head, on Board of one of their Ships. They " ſtand from us, and we after them, with all the Sail we can.

The Second Letter, dated from Leith-Road, was as follows: " We chaſed the " Enemy to Northward of Buccaneſs, ſometimes with reaſonable Hopes of coming " up with them. The Dover, and Ludlow-Caſtle, being the only clean-ſailing Ships " we had, they were the firſt which came up with part of the Enemy's Squadron, " paſſing by ſome of the ſmaller, to engage ſome of the larger Ships, and ſtop " them, 'till they could be relieved. They attack'd Two or Three of their Ships, " among which was the Saliſbury; they did not part with 'em, 'till more of our " Ships arriv'd, but work'd their Ships in a handſome Manner, to cut 'em off from " the reſt of the Fleet; but in the Darkneſs of the Night, they all got out of Sight, " except the Saliſbury, who falling in amongſt our headmoſt Ships, the Leopard en- " ter'd Men on Board her. We were inform'd by the Officers who were taken, " that there were Twelve Battalions on Board their Squadron, commanded by the " Count de Gacé, a Mareſchal of France. The pretended Prince of Wales, Lord Mid- " dleton, Lord Perth, the Mac-Donalds, Trevanion, and ſeveral other Officers and " Gentlemen, were on Board the Mars, in which, alſo, was Monſieur Fourbin, who " commanded the Squadron. The Number and Strength of their Ships, are very " near the Account we lately receiv'd from Dunkirk; nor were they join'd by the " Breſt Men of War; and they further aſſure us, that the Ships our Out-ſcouts ſaw " off Calais, were Privateers, and their Prizes, going into Dunkirk. The Morning " after this Chace, we ſaw but Eighteen of the Enemy's Ships, as far as we could " perceive them from the Maſt-head, in the Eaſt North-Eaſt of us. Having no " Proſpect of coming up with them, we lay off and on Buccaneſs all Day Yeſter- " day, to gather our Ships together; and this Day, it blowing hard at North-Eaſt, with

" with a great Sea, judging the Enemy could not ſeize the Shore to make any At" tempt, we bore up for this Place; which was thought moſt reaſonable, not only " to ſecure, but to give Countenance and Spirit to her Majeſty's faithful Subjects,
" and diſcourage thoſe that could have Thoughts of being our Enemies."

Sir George Byng, who, notwithſtanding the Reports the Enemy had ſpread of their ſtrong Party in the North of Scotland, judg'd rightly of the Matter, and concluded, that their true Deſign was upon the Caſtle of the Capital City, continued in Leith-Road, till he was inform'd of the French Fleet's Return to Dunkirk; by which Time, thro' the indefatigable Care and Vigilance of the Earl of Leven, of the Scotch Privy-Council, and of the Magiſtrates of Edinburgh, Glaſgow, and other Cities, the Tranquillity of that Part of Great Britain was preſerv'd, and thoſe who were ſuſpected of having Inclinations to diſturb it, ſecured.

It having been ſuggeſted by ſome ill-deſigning Perſons, that Sir George Byng might have deſtroy'd the whole Dunkirk Squadron, had his Ships been clean; the Commons * reſolv'd to preſent an Addreſs to her Majeſty, " That ſhe would be " pleas'd to give Directions, that an Account might be laid before the Houſe of the " Number of Ships which went in the Expedition with Sir George Byng, and when " the ſame were cleaned:" Which Account having accordingly been laid before the Houſe, and examin'd, it was † reſolv'd, " That the Thanks of this Houſe be gi" ven to his Royal Highneſs, the Lord High Admiral, for his great Care in ſo
" expeditiouſly ſetting forth ſo great a Number of Ships, whereby the Fleet un" der the Conduct of Sir George Byng, was enabled ſo happily to prevent the in" tended Invaſion: And order'd, that Sir Richard Onſlow, Mr. Secretary Boyle, Mr. Compton, Mr. Scobell, Col. Byerley, the Lord William Powlet, the Earl of Hertford, Mr. Heyſham, Admiral Churchill, Mr. Bromley, Sir Godfrey Copley, Sir Thomas Hanmer, Sir Thomas Littleton, Sir David Dalrymple, Mr. Montgomery, Mr. Moriſon, Mr. Brewer, Sir John Swinton, Sir John Erſkine, Mr. Haddon, Mr. Cockburne, Sir John Holland, and Mr. Wortley, ſhould give his Royal Highneſs the Thanks of the Houſe accordingly.

* March 24.

† April 1. The Commons return Thanks to the Lord High Admiral.

Some Days before, the Commons came to an unanimous Reſolution, " That who" ever deſignedly endeavour'd to deſtroy or leſſen the Publick Credit, eſpecially at a " Time when the Kingdom was threaten'd with an Invaſion, was guilty of an " High Crime and Miſdemeanor, and was an Enemy to her Majeſty and the " Kingdom." And indeed, the moſt dangerous Effect of the Enemy's intended Invaſion, was, the occaſioning great Demands upon the Bank of England; which viſibly tending to the Ruin of its Credit, (with which that of the Exchequer was cloſely twiſted) the Miniſtry prudently thought fit to apply a ſpeedy Remedy to that growing Evil. In order to that, the Lord Treaſurer ſignify'd to the Directors of the Bank, That her Majeſty would allow, for Six Months, an Intereſt of Six per Cent. upon their Bills, which before bore only Three per Cent. And, at the ſame Time, his Lordſhip offer'd them a conſiderable Sum of Money; as did alſo ſeveral Peers, particularly the Dukes of Marlborough, Newcaſtle, and Somerſet. On the other hand, the Directors of the Bank having ‖ reſolved to call in Twenty per Cent. upon their Capital Stock, they were in a Condition to anſwer the Demands of the moſt importunate; among whom were reckon'd, firſt, the Diſaffected, who improv'd that Conjuncture, to diſtreſs the Government with Impunity: Secondly, The timorous Uſurers, who were unreaſonably alarm'd at the intended Invaſion: And, laſtly, the Goldſmiths; who having, in great meaſure, loſt the advantageous Trade they drove with the Money which private Perſons lodg'd in their Hands, before the Eſtabliſhment of the Bank of England, had ever ſince endeavour'd to ruin its Credit. One of theſe, Sir Richard Hoare, was ſo concern'd at his being reflected on, as having contributed towards the Run upon the Bank, that he was very ſollicitous to vindicate himſelf, as to that Particular: But it was obſerv'd, to the Honour of the French, Dutch, and Jewiſh Merchants, that they were ſo far from calling in the Money they had in the Bank, that, on the contrary, they carry'd more into it, to ſupport its Credit.

On the 20th of March, the Queen gave the Royal Aſſent to ſeveral publick and private Acts; and on the 29th, the Commons reſolved to addreſs her Majeſty, to " return her Thanks for communicating to them the Eſtimate of the Charge of put" ting the Docks of Portſmouth and Chatham into a Poſture of Defence; and to
" deſire, that they might be forthwith proceeded upon: As alſo, that the Caſtles
" of Edinburgh, Sterling, and Inverlochy, might be put into a Poſture of Defence. Two * Days after, the Commons reſolv'd to preſent another Addreſs to the Queen, " That the Laws relating to the Fiſhery and Trade of Newfoundland, might be ef-

Greg's Treaſon ſtrictly examin'd into by the Lords.

All this while, the Lords were buſy about an Affair of a very nice Nature: Mr. Greg's pleading guilty to his Indictment, when he might have made a tolerable Defence, and deny'd his Hand-writing, increas'd the Suſpicion of Mr. Harley's being privy to his foul Practices; and raiſed a Surmize, that Greg was prevail'd with to confeſs his Crime, upon a ſecret Promiſe of Pardon. Hereupon Mr. Harley's Enemies took this favourable Opportunity, (when an open Attempt was made from abroad, to diſturb the Government) to lay Greg's Treaſon before the Houſe of Peers; who appointed a Committee of Seven Lords, among whom the Earl of Sunderland was the Chief Manager, to examine into that Matter. It was then, and has ſince been ſuggeſted by Mr. Harley's Friends, that no Arts were left untry'd, to involve him in Greg's Treaſon: But whatever Ground there may be for ſuch an invidious Report, 'tis certain, that Greg (in his ſeveral Examinations) took the whole Guilt to himſelf. After the Hearing of Witneſſes, and Peruſal of ſeveral Papers relating to this Affair, the Lords Committees made their Report to the Houſe; who preſented an † Addreſs to the Queen, importing, " That having " been inform'd, that William Greg, a Clerk in the Office of the late Secretary, " Mr. Harley, had been indicted for High Treaſon, in holding Correſpondence with " her Majeſty's Enemies, and betraying to them Secrets of the higheſt Importance; " and that upon his Tryal he had confeſs'd the Indictment, and, by that means, had " prevented the Examinations, whereby the Publick might have been truly in- " form'd of the particular Nature and Circumſtances of his Crime: They thought " themſelves indiſpenſibly oblig'd, in Duty to her Majeſty, and for the future Safe- " ty of the Kingdom, to do all in their Power to find out the Riſe and Progreſs of " this dangerous Correſpondence. That in order thereto, they addreſs'd her Ma- " jeſty for all Papers relating to the Charge againſt William Greg; and her Majeſty " having been pleaſed to give Orders that the ſaid Papers ſhould be laid before " them; they referr'd thoſe Papers to a Committee, and directed them to examine " Greg, and to report the ſaid Examination to the Houſe; as alſo what they obſer- " ved upon the Papers, together with ſuch other Matters as they ſhould think proper, " upon their Inquiry into the ſaid Affair: And the Report having been made, and " taken into Conſideration by the Houſe, they humbly conceived it to be very " highly for her Service, to lay the ſame before her Majeſty. That being alſo in- " form'd, that one Alexander Valiere, otherwiſe called John Clark, was in Cuſtody " for holding Correſpondence with her Majeſty's Enemies, they thought themſelves, " in like manner, obliged to direct the ſaid Committee to examine Valiere, and to " inquire into the Particulars and Circumſtances of his Offence: That this being ac- " cordingly perform'd by the ſaid Committee, it was reported to them; but the " ſaid Report conſiſting of very many Examinations, they thought it would be of " uſe to appoint a Committee to digeſt and put the ſame into ſome Method, to the " intent they might be able to form a clearer and more diſtinct Judgment of the " whole Affair; and that Report being made and approv'd by the Houſe, they con- " ceived it would be of Importance to her Majeſty's Service, for them to preſent " the ſame to her Majeſty; and, for her Majeſty's more entire Satisfaction, they " begg'd Leave to annex all the ſaid Examinations at large to this Addreſs. " That having enter'd into a ſerious Conſideration of the ſaid ſeveral Reports, they " had unanimouſly come to the following Reſolutions thereupon; Viz. 1. That " the Crime of which William Greg ſtood attainted, was of ſo heinous a Nature, and at- " tended with ſuch extraordinary Circumſtances, that it might prove of very pernicious " Conſequence, if he ſhould not be made an Example. 2. And that it plainly appear'd to " them, as well by what Alexander Valiere and John Bara had inform'd againſt each " other, as by the many Examinations taken concerning them, that they were both in " the French Intereſt, and unfit to be truſted or employ'd by any Perſons in her Majeſty's " Service. And that the open and publick Manner of the Correſpondence managed by " them, with the Governors and Commiſſaries of Calais and Bologne, could tend only " to carry on an Intelligence to the Advantage of her Majeſty's Enemies; and that it " was highly probable thereby, the Stations of our Cruizers, the Strength of our Con- " voys, and the Times of Sailing of our Merchant-Ships, had been betray'd to the French. Their Lordſhips added, " That it was her Majeſty's Glory, and the Happineſs " of Europe, that ſhe was at the Head of one of the greateſt Confederacies that " ever was known in Hiſtory; and it was the Common Concern of the whole " Alliance, that her Counſels ſhould be kept with the ſtricteſt Secrecy: But that, " in the Papers now laid before her, her Majeſty would be pleaſed to obſerve, " that ſome of her Reſolutions of the greateſt Moment, and that requir'd the " utmoſt Secrecy, had been ſent to her Enemies by the ſame Poſt they were

" diſpatch'd

A. D. 1708.

" diſpatch'd to the Allies: That all the Papers in Mr. Secretary Harley's Office, " had, for a conſiderable Time, been expoſed to the View even of the meaneſt " Clerks in that Office; and that the Peruſal of all the Letters, to and from " the French Priſoners, was chiefly truſted to Greg, a Perſon of a very ſuſpici- " ous Character, and known to be extreamly indigent. That it was not eaſily " to be known, what ill Conſequences might have attended ſuch Negligence: " But their Lordſhips depended upon it, that theſe Matters being thus plainly " laid open to her Majeſty, they ſhould be well ſecur'd againſt any Dangers of " this Nature for the future. That they were further in Duty bound to beſeech " her Majeſty, That all poſſible Methods might be uſed, to put a Stop to that dan- " gerous and (which might ſoon prove) fatal Intercourſe between her Majeſty's " Subjects and France, which had of late received ſo great an Encouragement by the " Countenance and Protection given to Valiere and Bard; ſince, unleſs that were " effectually done, her Majeſty's Enemies would continue to have what Intelligence " they pleaſed; her Majeſty's Men of War and Merchant-Ships would be in Dan- " ger of being betray'd to the French; and that moſt deſtructive Trade of ſending " Wool to France, which had been with much Charge and Trouble interrupted, and " in good meaſure ſuppreſs'd, would be reviv'd to a greater Degree than ever.

To this Addreſs, the Queen return'd an Anſwer; That ſhe was ſorry that any who had been employ'd by thoſe in her Service, ſhould have prov'd falſe to their Truſt, and injurious to the Publick. That ſhe doubted not, the Examples laid before her by their Lordſhips, would be a ſufficient Warning to keep all Matters of Importance as ſecret as might be; and to employ ſuch only, as there ſhould be good Grounds to believe would be faithful. The Queen's Anſwer.

To make an End of this ungrateful Affair, we muſt take notice, That after the preſenting the Addreſs before-mention'd, Greg was reſpited about a Month longer; during which Time, neither Threats nor Promiſes were wanting, to engage him to make a Diſcovery; but as he ſtill deny'd the having any Accomplices in his Trea- ſon, he was executed at * Tyburn. He left a † Paper with the Sheriffs, wherein, in particular, he entirely clear'd Mr. Harley: But, notwithſtanding this Teſtimony of a dying Man, ſome were apt to ſuſpect that cunning Stateſman of being the Con- triver of that very Paper; and aſcrib'd the Compoſedneſs which viſibly appear'd in Greg's Countenance, till he came to the Place of Execution, to a firm Expectation (which he was made to entertain) of a Reprieve. Others gave out, that he com- plain'd, That there was no Truſt in Man: But theſe being only vague Conjectures and Reports, no wiſe Man will lay any Streſs upon them: Nor is it, after all, rea- ſonable to believe, that ſo great a Politician as Mr. Harley, whatever Deſigns he had in his Head, would employ an Under-Clerk in his Office, to carry on a Cor- reſpondence with the Enemy.

† See Appen- dix.

On the 1ſt Day of April, the Queen came to the Houſe of Peers, and the Com- mons attending, the Royal Aſſent was given to Sixteen publick, and Seventeen private Bills: After which, her Majeſty made the following Speech to both Houſes: Acts paſs'd, April 1.

My LORDS and GENTLEMEN,

" I Cannot conclude this Seſſion, without acknowledging the wiſe and ſpeedy Pro- " viſions which you have made for the publick Security. The Queen's Speech to both Houſes.

Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons,

" I am alſo to thank you in particular, for the large and timely Supplies, which " you have provided for the effectual Proſecution of the War: I aſſure you, they " ſhall be carefully and punctually apply'd to the Uſes for which they are ap- " pointed.

My LORDS and GENTLEMEN,

" I take theſe (eſpecially at this Juncture) to be ſuch undeniable Proofs of your " Zeal and Affection to my Service, as muſt fully convince every body of your do- " ing Me the Juſtice to believe, that all which is dear to you, is perfectly ſafe un- " der my Government; and muſt be irrecoverably loſt, if ever the Deſigns of a " Popiſh Pretender, bred up in the Principles of the moſt Arbitrary Government, " ſhould take place.

" I am ſatisfy'd, that very falſe Repreſentations of the true Inclinations and In- " tereſts of my People, muſt have been made by ſome of my Subjects, who have " given Encouragement to this deſperate Attempt; ſince, without ſomething of " that Nature, it ſeems very little conſiſting with the uſual Precaution of our " Enemies, to hazard the Expence and Diſappointment of ſo vain and ill-grounded " an Undertaking.

" However, it is certain, we muſt be all inexcuſable, if we do not take Warn- " ing from this Attempt, to compleat what may be neceſſary for our Security at " Home, and the diſcouraging the like for the future; to which, by GOD's Bleſſing, " nothing ſhall be wanting on my Part.

" And to the ſame End, I muſt recommend to you, at your Return into your ſe- " veral Counties, to uſe your utmoſt Care and Diligence, in putting the Laws in " Execution againſt Papiſts, and all others diſaffected to my Government; and in " making them pay towards the publick Taxes, to the full of what the Law re- " quires from them: Nothing being more reaſonable, than that they, who by their " Principles and Practices, encourage, if not actually foment ſuch Diſturbances, " ſhould doubly contribute to the Charge of quieting them, and ſecuring the King- " dom's Peace; and ſhould know themſelves, on all ſuch Occaſions, to be reſpon- " ſible, in the firſt Place, for the many Inconveniencies that may enſue.

The French King's circular Letter about the intended Invaſion.

The Court of France was ſo fondly ſecure of Succeſs in their late Enterprize againſt Scotland, that their King wrote a Circular Letter to his Miniſters in Rome, Swiſſerland, Geneva, and other Neutral Places, directing them to declare in his Name, " That he had long been of Opinion, That the aſſiſting the King of England to " poſſeſs the Throne of his Anceſtors, would be for the general Good of all Europe. " That he believed, that a Peace would be the Conſequence of its Succeſs, and that " this Prince's Subjects would eſteem themſelves equally happy, in contributing to " reeſtabliſh him in the Place of his Predeceſſors, and in being themſelves deliver'd " from thoſe continual Impoſitions, wherewith they were overwhelm'd, to maintain " a War altogether foreign to them. That as the Scotch had yet more Reaſon " than the Engliſh, to be diſſatisfy'd with the preſent Government of England, it ap- " pear'd to him a convenient Opportunity to reſtore to that Nation their lawful " Sovereign, and to enable the Prince to deliver it from the Oppreſſion it had ſuf- " fer'd ſince the Revolution, which happen'd under the late King of England, James " the Second. That theſe were the Reaſons which had determin'd him to equip " a Squadron of his Ships at Dunkirk, and to furniſh the King of England with a " conſiderable Number of his Troops, to accompany him to Scotland, to ſupport " thoſe his faithful Subjects, who ſhould declare for him. That he (the pretended " King of England) left Verſailles the 7th of March, N. S. to go to Dunkirk, in or- " der to embark, and get, with all Expedition, to Scotland. That his Intention " was not to enter the Kingdom by Right of Conqueſt, but to oblige them to re- " ceive him as legal Poſſeſſor of it. That he would behave himſelf in like man- " ner, with reſpect to all his other Dominions, who ſhould pay that Obedience " they owed him; and his Subjects would only be diſtinguiſh'd, according to the " Zeal and Affection they ſhew'd for him, without examining what Religion they " profeſs'd, in which he left them to their entire Liberty." The French King con- " cluded, that he had no Thoughts of enlarging his Power, by aſſiſting to re-eſta- " bliſh this Prince: That 'twas ſufficient, that he did an Act of Juſtice, in vindi- " cating the Honour of crown'd Heads, highly affronted in the Perſon of the late " King, his Father; and his Wiſhes would be entirely accompliſh'd, if (by GOD's " Bleſſing on his Endeavours) the Succeſs became the Means of procuring a laſting " Peace, ſo neceſſary to all Europe.

Reaſons that induced the French Court to attempt an Invaſion.

State of Scotland.

It ſeem'd ſo little conſiſting, (as the Queen obſerv'd in her laſt Speech) with the uſual Precaution of the Court of France, to hazard the Expence of ſo great an Undertaking, without ſome Encouragement from Great Britain, that 'twill not be amiſs to enquire upon what Grounds they entertain'd thoſe fond Hopes of Succeſs. As ſoon as the Union took Place, Two Commiſſions were appointed, for managing the Cuſtoms, and Exciſe of Scotland, being partly Engliſh, and partly Scotchmen; but, at the ſame Time, vaſt Numbers of Surveyors, Collectors, and other Officers, being ſent down from England, and executing the new Laws with all Rigor, were ſo grievous to the People, that Men of all Ranks and Perſuaſions, reſented the Loſs of the Sovereignty, and were eaſily perſuaded, by the Pretender's Friends, That nothing but the Reſtoration of the Royal Family, by the Means of Scotchmen, could reſtore them to their natural Rights. Nor were many of the Nobility and Gentry leſs deſirous to ſee the Pretender amongſt them; and therefore had, for ſome Time paſt, preſs'd his coming over, as the luckieſt Opportunity for reſtoring him, and advancing the Intereſt of France, by giving a Diverſion to the Engliſh. Upon the repeated Inſtances of the Court of St. Germains, and the ill Succeſs of the French Arms in 1706, the French King began to reliſh the Propoſal, and ſeem'd in Earneſt to do ſomething for the Pretender; but before he proceeded any further, he ſent over Colonel Hookes to get Intelligence, and treat with the Scotch. It was the Opinion of many, that Hookes was pitch'd upon by the Court of France, as one that would follow their Directions; and pretend that he was more ſollicitous to raiſe a Civil War, than to promote the Pretender's Service and Intereſt. Be that as it will, 'tis certain, that he rather widen'd, than made up the Diviſion he found among the Scotch Jacobites, and which was occaſion'd by a Miſunderſtanding between the Dukes of Hamilton and Athol. The firſt claim'd Merit, upon Account of his paſt Actions, his Intereſt, and Qualifications; and the other valued himſelf on the Intereſt he had got of late with the North-Country Gentry, and the great Number of Men he could raiſe. Many being diſguſted with the Duke of Hamilton, for his equivocal Behaviour in the laſt Scotch Parliament, inclined to think the Duke of Athol would venture further for the Pretender; which, as it piqued the one, ſo it elevated the other; and this Jarring went ſo far, that ſome of the Duke of Athol's Partizans, railed openly at the Duke of Hamilton, and pretended to do all themſelves. Others, again, reflecting on the Duke of Athol's Conduct, on ſeveral Occaſions, were afraid he was not ſtanch, but acted rather from a Deſire of revenging himſelf of the Courtiers who had ſlighted him, than a true Principle of Loyalty to the Pretender; and conſidering, that he was by no Means qualify'd to be the Head of a Party, thought he was not to be humour'd ſo far, as to diſguſt the Duke of Hamilton. For though the latter's cautious Behaviour in concerting Meaſures, was not approved, yet the Jacobites being perſuaded of his intire Affection to their Cauſe, and convinc'd, at the ſame Time, that he was abſolutely neceſſary to be with the Pretender, by reaſon of his Intereſt, Courage and Conduct, and particularly his Dexterity in managing the different Parties: Upon all theſe Conſiderations they thought, he was to be reſpected, and adviſed with; and therefore recommended him to the Earl of Middleton, who agreeing with them, repreſented him to the Pretender, as the fitteſt Perſon to ſerve him in Scotland. But the Duke of Perth, who entirely differed from the Earl of Middleton, ſoon cloſed with the Duke of Athol; and having more Intereſt with the Prieſts and Roman Catholicks than Middleton, prevail'd ſo far with the Court of France, or at leaſt with Hookes, that the latter, upon his Arrival in Scotland, (in the beginning of March, 1707) made his chief Application to, and concerted Meaſures with his Correſpondent, the Duke of Athol. Beſides his Credentials from the Pretender and French King, empowering him to treat with the People of Scotland, in order to bring about the King's Reſtoration, and to recover the Nation's Sovereignty, and ancient Privileges; Colonel Hookes produced a Paper, containing ſeveral Queries drawn by the Marquis de Torcy, relating to the Number of Men that could be raiſed in Scotland; the Conveniencies for ſubſiſting and quartering Troops, and carrying on a War; and the Number of Forces, Sums of Money, and Quantities of Arms and Ammunition, neceſſary to be ſent from France. A diſtinct Anſwer being made to each Query, containing a full Account of the State of Affairs, particularly the Inclination of the People to venture all for the Pretender's Service, and earneſtly intreating him to come over as ſoon as poſſible: That Paper was ſigned by the Duke of Athol, Lord Drummond, Earl of Errol, Earl of Strathmore, Viſcount of Stermount, Lord John Drummond, Lord Nairn, Fatheringhame of Powrie, Lyon of Auchterhouſe, Graham of Fintree, Drummond of Logie, Ogilvy of Boyne, and a few others; and ſo deliver'd to Hookes, who carried it to France in May, 1707. It is to be obſerv'd, that he had brought over Letters from the Pretender to the Duke of Hamilton and the Earl Mariſchal, but before he tranſmitted thoſe Letters to them, he had ſo cloſely attach'd himſelf to the Duke of Athol, and made ſuch Advances in the Treaty, that the Duke of Hamilton, and Earl Mariſchal, highly reſented their being thus diſregarded, and did not think fit to ſend their Anſwers by Hookes, but choſe another Hand to communicate their Thoughts to the Earl of Middleton. Hereupon Hookes ſent them impertinent threatning Letters; and when he arrived in France, fluſh'd with the Succeſs of his Embaſſy, he triumph'd over the Earl of Middleton, whom, and his Friends in Scotland, he accuſed of Barkwardneſs to ſerve the Pretender. Before he embark'd for France, he had aſſured the Jacobites, that their King would be with them by the Month of Auguſt next, but before that Time came, Notice was ſent to Scotland, that the Attempt could not be made ſo ſoon. There being afterwards little Appearance of its being executed, People began to ſuſpect, that the French King's Affairs being ſomewhat retrieved by the Battel of Almanza, he reſerv'd the Deſign in Favour of the Pretender, to another Occaſion; which Surmiſe proceeded from a well-grounded Jealouſy, that the Court of France regarded him no farther, than they thought him ſubſervient to their own Intereſt, and private Views. Of this Opinion was the Duke of Hamilton, who having waited 'till the end of January, 170$\frac{7}{8}$, without ſeeing any Effect of the French King's Promiſes, and his Affairs requiring his Preſence in England, he ſet out from Kenriel, with his Dutcheſs and Family, towards Lancaſter. The Third Day he was on his Journey, an Expreſs from Captain Straton inform'd him, That he had certain Advice, that the Pretender would proceed on his Expedition before the middle of March, whereupon the Duke ſeem'd extreamly puzzled, what to do? But, after ſome Conſideration, he reſolv'd to proceed on his Journey, as a Blind to his true Deſign. And, in the mean Time, his Grace directed Mr. Lockhart of Carnwath, who had accompanied him ſo far, inſtantly to repair to the Shire of Lanerk, to raiſe their Friends, and lead them to Dumfries, where he promiſed to meet him, and where he was ſure to be join'd with a great Number of Horſe and Foot. Beſides the good Diſpoſitions and ſolemn Aſſurances of the Pretender's Friends, the Court of France had Reaſon to expect Succeſs in Scotland: For the regular Troops there did not exceed Two Thouſand Five Hundred Men, moſt of whom were diſaffected, and ready to join the Pretender; the Gariſons being unprovided with Warlike Stores, muſt have yielded at the firſt Summons; a good Part of the Equivalent Money being in the Caſtle of Edinburgh, would have help'd to carry on the War: And a Fleet of Dutch Ships had, ſome Time before, run a-ground on the Coaſt of Angus, in which was a vaſt Quantity of Ammunition, beſides Cannon and ſmall Arms, and a great Sum of Money, which the Jacobites of that Country would have ſecured: So that all Things ſeem'd to concur to give Succeſs to the Attempt upon Scotland. The Appearance of the French Fleet in the Firth, as it wonderfully elated the Spirits of the Jacobites, ſo did it ſtrike no ſmall Terror and Conſternation among the Well-affected. But, nevertheleſs, the Magiſtrates and Corporations of the City of Edinburgh, ſhew'd ſuch Zeal and Readineſs to aſſiſt the Government; and ſuch great Care and Diligence were uſed, in obſerving and ſecuring ſuſpected Perſons; that, together with the ſpeedy March of ſome Engliſh Forces Northwards, and Sir George Eyng's continuing in Leith-Road, 'till certain News came of the Pretender's Return to Dunkirk, the Peace of Scotland was happily preſerv'd. Moreover, we may obſerve, that by a remarkable Turn of Fortune, or rather Decree of over-ruling Providence, not only the Enemy's Projects dwindled into nothing; but both the Britiſh Nation, and the whole Confederacy, reap'd no ſmall Advantages from that Diſappointment. In the firſt Place, that fruitleſs Attempt ſhew'd, that the Courts of Verſailles and St. Germains, had not ſo many Friends in Scotland, as they either had fancied, or were made to believe; ſince, bating ſome Great Men, whoſe Diſcontents were already ſufficiently known, the main Body of that Part of Great Britain, gave ſignal Proofs of their Affections to the preſent Government, and of their Zeal in maintaining the Proteſtant Succeſſion. Secondly, That Enterprize furniſh'd the Government with juſt Reaſons to ſecure the Leading-Men among the Diſaffected Scotch; and with an Act of Parliament to detain their Perſons, and check their ſiniſter Practices. Thirdly, That Conſpiracy open'd the Eyes of the Scotch Preſbyterians, moſt of whom having been ſeduced by the Pretender's Partizans, had, 'till then, appear'd abſolutely averſe to the Union; but who, at this Juncture, in Imitation of their Fellow-Subjects of England, ſent up a Loyal Addreſs, wherein, among other Particulars, they congratulated her Majeſty upon that happy Event of her auſpicious Reign. Fourthly, That Attempt turn'd to the Diſadvantage of the diſcontented Party in England, ſome of whom being ſuſpected of wiſhing well to the Pretender, loſt thereby their Elections for Members of the enſuing Parliament. In the Fifth Place, The wonderful Expedition with which the Government put out a Fleet, that baffled the Enemy's Deſign, not only ſilenced the Murmurings and Complaints that were raiſed, and induſtriouſly fomented, againſt the Miniſtry, particularly againſt the Admiralty, but alſo procured to the latter, the ſolemn Thanks of the Houſe of Commons. And Laſtly, That Diſappointment, as it broke the Enemy's Meaſures, and diſtracted their Counſels; ſo it gave freſh Vigor and Spirit to the whole Confederacy.

The Peace of Scotland preſerv'd.

The Diſappointment of the intended Invaſion, proves advantageous to the Britiſh Nation, and to the Allies in General.

The Marquis de Puiſieux, the French Ambaſſador in Swiſſerland, having communicated * to the Regency of the Canton of Baſil, the before-mention'd Letter of the King, his Maſter, with this Addition, "That his moſt Chriſtian Majeſty having found in Scotland, the People ready to receive their lawful King with open "Arms, he ſent thither, by the Marquis de Nangis, the neceſſary Arms for that Expedition; who, upon his Return, reported, That the Scotch had publiſh'd by "Placarts, both at Edinburgh, and every where elſe, That they were ready to ſacrifice all for their Lawful King, James the Eighth." Mr. Stanyan, the Britiſh Envoy Extraordinary in Swiſſerland, fail'd not, ſome Time † after, to contradict, and expoſe thoſe falſe Repreſentations and Rumours, in a Letter to the laudable Evangelick Cantons; wherein, among other Reaſons, to ſhew the Preſumption of the the Attempt, he urged, " That a Nation, which, at all Times, had ſhew'd ſo much " Zeal and Reſolution for the Defence of their Liberties, which they had the Happineſs to preſerve, at the Expence of ſo much Blood and Treaſure, muſt, in an " Inſtant, have been ſo baſe, as to ſubmit to the Loſs of them; to ſet up Tyranny " and deſpotick Power, at a Time when the miſerable Condition, to which the " Kingdom of France was reduced by thoſe Maxims, ought to be a ſtanding Example and Warning to all future Ages. That, in ſhort, Contradictions muſt have been reconciled, to favour the Succeſs of that noble Enterprize: That, out of Gaiety, " an Enemy ſhould be ſuffer'd to paſs, when the Means to prevent it were at " Hand: That Men ſhould forget the moſt Sacred Duties, the Allegiance they " owed to the beſt of Queens, the Zeal they ought to have for their Religion, and " the Reſolution they ought to ſhew for the Liberties of their Country. That bating theſe Difficulties, that Enterprize was well contriv'd, and better digeſted; " and, accordingly, its Succeſs anſwer'd the Expectation of all ſenſible Men: The " French Fleet appear'd on the Coaſts of Great Britain, without daring to land, or " any one Man in the Kingdom ſtirring in their Favour; whereupon they bravely " took the Reſolution to retire to their Harbour, with their Twelve miſerable Battalions; which, inſtead of conquering the Kingdom of Great Britain, were now " in the Hoſpitals of Dunkirk, diſabled for Service." About this Time, the French Court receiv'd another notable Mortification in Swiſſerland; for after a long Controverſy, their Agents were obliged, in their Maſter's Name, to accept the Proteſtant Cantons Ratification of the Project of Neutrality, drawn up in the Diet at Baden, wherein the Inhabitants of Neufchatel and Valengin were mention'd as Comburghers of Bern, and included in the Treaty of perpetual Peace and Alliance, made in the Year 1663, whereby they were intitled to the Free Trade, Peace, and other Advantages ſtipulated in that Treaty, as Members of the Helvetick Body. Thus ended an Affair, which in the whole Courſe of it, made as great Noiſe, as any particular Tranſaction that had happen'd for many Ages paſt, to the entire Satisfaction of the King of Pruſſia, and to the immortal Honour of his great Supporters, the Queen of Great Britain, the States-General, and the Proteſtant Cantons of Swiſſerland, particularly that of Bern, who exerted their Zeal and Vigor, in a manner almoſt unknown to their Predeceſſors. On the other Hand, France receiv'd ſuch a Foil and Repulſe on this Occaſion, as viſibly manifeſted the Declenſion of her Power, and expoſed her Impotency to the Deriſion of all the reſt of Europe; ſince, after all her Threats, that haughty Crown was, at laſt, glad of any Pretence, (ſuch as her Affection to the laudable Cantons) to drop a Diſpute, wherein the violent Counſels of ſome inconſiderate Miniſters, had prepoſterouſly engaged her.

The Affair of Neufchatel ſettled to the Satisfaction of the King of Pruſſia, and of his Allies.

To return to Great Britain: On the 15th of April, the Queen in Council, order'd a Proclamation to be publiſh'd, for diſſolving the preſent Parliament, and declaring the ſpeedy calling of another; which was accordingly done a Week * after, by another Proclamation, whereby the " Lord Chancellor of Great Britain was order'd " to iſſue out Writs, for the Summoning and Holding a new Parliament; which " Writs were to bear a Teſte, the 26th Day of that Month of April, and to be re- " turnable on the 8th of July, next following." Three Days † before, Edward Griffin, Eſq; late Lord Griffin, John Lord Clermount, and Charles Middleton, Eſq; Two Sons to the Earl of Middleton, and Colonel Francis Wauchope, who were taken on board the Saliſbury, were brought up to London, and having been examin'd by a Committee of the Privy-Council, were committed Priſoners to the Tower, for High-Treaſon, by Warrant of the Earl of Sunderland, one of her Majeſty's Principal Secretaries of State: And Two Days after, the following Iriſh Officers, taken alſo on board the ſaid Ship, were, for the ſame Crime, committed to Newgate, viz. Edward Fitzgerald, Oliver Bourk, Daniel Eaily, Stephen Conner, Conſtance Kiefe, Michael Pendergaſt, Edmund Fitzgerald, Teague Mackmahon, Cleary, ——— Fitzmorris, ——— Oſullivan, ——— Macarty, —— Fannon, —— Denovan, —— Hymes, and Anthony Stanburker.

Before Sir George Byng ſail'd from Lieth-Road, for the Downs, he was ‖ viſited by Sir Patrick Johnſton, Repreſentative in the late Parliament, for the City of Edinburgh, in the Name of that Magiſtracy; and preſented with an Inſtrument, whereby he was made a Citizen of Edinburgh. This Inſtrument was incloſed in a Golden Box, accompanied with a Letter from Sir Samuel Maklellan, Lord Provoſt of that City, wherein he deſired the Admiral to accept of it, as a Mark of their high Reſpect to him, who had been the happy Inſtrument of ſo ſeaſonable a Deliverance to this Iſland, for which his Memory would be honour'd by future Ages. Not many Days after, Sir George Byng arriv'd at Court, and was receiv'd, both by the Queen, and her Royal Conſort, with thoſe gracious Marks of Favour, his late eminent Services had deſerv'd. And admitted to Bail.

The Lord Belhaven dies.

On the 10th of May, at the Court at Kenſington, the Queen being preſent; his Royal Highneſs Prince George of Denmark having been admitted to take his Place, as uſual, at the Council-Board; the Lords, and others hereafter mention'd, were, by her Majeſty's Command, ſworn of her Majeſty's moſt Honourable Council, purſuant to an Act of Parliament, in that behalf, paſs'd the laſt Seſſion, intituled, An Act for rendring the UNION of the Two Kingdoms more entire and compleat; which Lords, and others, her Majeſty declared to be the Lords of her Privy-Council of Great Britain: Viz. The Lord Archbiſhop of Canterbury; William Lord Cowper, Lord Chancellor of Great Britain; Sidney Earl of Godolphin, Lord High-Treaſurer; the Earl of Pembroke, Lord Preſident; John Duke of Newcaſtle, Lord Privy-Seal; William Duke of Devonſhire, Lord Steward; James Duke of Ormond; Henry Marquis of Kent, Lord Chamberlain; James Earl of Derby; Thomas Earl of Stamford; Charles Earl of Sunderland, Principal Secretary of State; Charles Bodvile, Earl of Radnor; Charles Earl of Berkley, Francis Earl of Bradford; Hugh Earl of Coolmondley; Henry Lord Biſhop of London; William Lord Dartmouth; Henry Boyle, Eſq; Principal Secretary of State; Thomas Coke, Eſq; Vice-Chamberlain; Sir John Trevor, Maſter of the Rolls; Sir Thomas Trevor, Lord Chief-Juſtice; Sir Charles Hedges; James Vernon, Eſq; John How, Eſq; and Thomas Erle, Eſq;. At the ſame Time, John Povey, Eſq; Edward Southwell, Eſq; and Chriſtopher Muſgrave, Eſq; were ſworn Clerks of the Council.

New Privy-Council ſettled according to the late Act of Parliament, May 10.

A Week after, Baron Spanheim, the Pruſſian Ambaſſador, notify'd to the Queen the Death of the young Prince of Orange, Grandſon to the King his Maſter; whereupon the Britiſh Court went into Mourning the * Sunday following.

The Court goes into Mourning for the young P. of Orange, * May 23.

About this Time, the Lord Griffin, (one of the Priſoners taken on Board the Salisbury) being attainted by Outlawry for High-Treaſon, committed in the Reign of the late King William, was brought to the Bar of the Queen's-Bench, by Virtue of her Majeſty's Writ of Habeas Corpus, directed to the Lieutenant of the Tower of London; and, after the reading of the Outlawry, being aſk'd, What he had to ſay, why Execution ſhould not be awarded againſt him? He ſaid, in his Defence, "That he was neither in Arms, nor in Council with the Enemy; but was forc'd, "by the French Court, upon the Expedition, entirely againſt his Judgment and In- "clination; notwithſtanding he had expreſs'd his Diſlike of it, as a raſh and fooliſh "Attempt: Adding, He threw himſelf at the Queen's Feet for Mercy, and hop'd "the Favour of the Court." His Defence being judg'd entirely foreign to the Outlawry, upon which he was brought to the Bar, the Court made a Rule for his Execution, as is uſual in ſuch Caſes. But tho' the Queen, not without ſome Struggle between her inbred Clemency and Juſtice, was prevail'd with to ſign the Warrant for Sentence to paſs upon him the 16th of June; yet, his advanc'd Age ſtill pleading for him, he found Mercy in the Royal Breaſt; ſo that a Reprieve (for a Fortnight) was ſent, the Night before, to the Tower; and that expiring the laſt Day of June, was then renew'd, and afterwards continued from Month to Month, till he died naturally in the Tower.

The Lord Griffin brought to the Queen's-Bench Bar, upon his former Outlawry, May 15.

A Rule made for his Execution.

He is repriev'd from Month to Month.

On the 20th of May, Maynhard Duke of Schomberg, and John Smith, Eſq; late Speaker of the Houſe of Commons, (and who, about this Time, was conſtituted Under-Treaſurer, and Chancellor of the Exchequer, in the Room of Mr. Secretary Boyle) were ſworn of her Majeſty's Privy-Council; and, the ſame Day, William Blaithwaite, Eſq; was ſworn one of the Clerks of the Council in Ordinary; and James Vernon, Eſq; Clerk Extraordinary. The 26th of the ſame Month, Charles Duke of Somerſet was likewiſe ſworn of her Majeſty's Privy-Council; and in that Interval, was publiſh'd her Majeſty's Proclamation, appointing the Diſtribution of Prizes taken, and the Bounty for taking Ships of War or Privateers of the Enemies, according cording to an Act paſs'd the laſt Seſſion, for the better ſecuring the Trade of this Kingdom, by Cruizers and Convoys. Towards the latter End of May, the Queen was pleas'd to grant to James Duke of Queenſberry, the Dignities of a Baron, Marquis and Duke of Great Britain, by the Name, Stile, and Title of Baron of Rippon, and Marquis of Beverley, in the County of York, and Duke of Dover, in the County of Kent.

The Duke of Queensberry made Duke of Dover.

All this while, the Elections for the enſuing Houſe of Commons ſucceeded, in moſt Places, according to the Wiſhes of the Miniſtry: But, at the great Meeting of the Nobility of North Britain, held at Edinburgh the 17th of June, ſome were choſen among the (a) Sixteen that were to repreſent that illuſtrious Body, who were juſtly ſuſpected of Diſaffection to the preſent Settlement. Towards the latter End of that Month, the Queen, with her Royal Conſort, went from Kenſington to Windſor, to paſs there the Summer Seaſon. And having thus taken a View of Domeſtick Occurrences, let's now attend foreign Affairs.

Elections for Members of Parliament.

The Storm that threaten'd Great Britain being happily diſpell'd, and the neceſſary Meaſures for the Security of the Government, taken; the Duke of Marlborough ſet out from London on Monday the 29th of March, embark'd at Margate that Evening; and, the next Day, arriv'd (late at Night) at the Hague. Prince Eugene of Savoy being come there Two Days before, they went the next Day together, to the Great Penſionary Heinſius; and then were entertain'd at Dinner by the Baron de Bothmer, Envoy from the Elector of Hanover; whither vaſt Crowds of People reſorted to ſee thoſe Two great Generals, particularly Prince Eugene; who having never before been in Holland, raiſed, in all the Inhabitants of that Country, an eager Curioſity to behold him. The next * Day, in the Evening, there was a great Conference between Prince Eugene, the Duke of Marlborough, the States Deputies for private Affairs, and the Great Penſionary, in the Chamber of Triers; the uſual Place for Conferences, in the States Apartment; which was pitch'd upon, to avoid the Trouble of the Ceremonial. Prince Eugene open'd the Conference with a Speech; wherein he gave a particular "Account of the Emperor's Forces in Naples, Lombardy, and Piedmont, and of thoſe "deſign'd for Spain: And having mention'd the Troops which his Imperial Majeſty "intended to employ in Germany, he deliver'd, in very modeſt Terms, his own O-"pinion of the Operations of the next Campaign, both on the Upper-Rhine, and "the Low-Countries: Concluding, That he had Inſtructions from his Imperial Ma-"jeſty, to uſe his Endeavours to engage the Queen of Great Britain, and the States-"General, to approve the Scheme he had propos'd, and to ſecond, on their Parts, "his Imperial Majeſty's Efforts, both to reduce the exorbitant Power of France, and "to reſtore his Brother, King Charles the Third, to the whole Monarchy of Spain." The nervous Eloquence with which Prince Eugene expreſs'd himſelf, was admir'd by all that were preſent; and after he had ended his Diſcourſe, the Duke of Marlborough acquainted the Aſſembly with the Inſtructions he had received from the Queen his Miſtreſs, in relation to the Buſineſs before them: And, at laſt, mention was made of a ſeparate Army, to be commanded by Prince Eugene. This Conference, which laſted above an Hour, was but a kind of Preliminary; for the States Deputies were not empower'd to make any Anſwer, either to Prince Eugene's, or the Duke of Marlborough's Propoſals, but only (according to the uſual Method obſerv'd by that wiſe Republick) to receive them, and report the ſame to their High Mightineſſes; which they did Four † Days after. Several other (tho' more private) Conferences were held between the Duke of Marlborough, Prince Eugene, and the States Deputies; the Reſult of which being kept ſecret, afforded Matter of Speculation to all Europe, for ſome Time; but it appear'd afterwards, that it was therein reſolv'd, That moſt of the Imperialiſts, employ'd the Year before on the Upper Rhine, with the Saxons and Heſſians, in the Pay of Great Britain and Holland, and the Troops which the Elector Palatine was to furniſh, in Conſideration of his Imperial Majeſty's reſtoring him to the Poſſeſſion of the Upper Palatinate, with the Prerogatives enjoy'd by his Anceſtors, ſhould march into the Netherlands, to act there under Prince Eugene, in Concert with the Britiſh and Dutch Forces. Whether Prince Eugene, who took Hanover in his Way to the Hague, communicated to the Elector of that Name, the Scheme before-mention'd, and found him averſe to it; or propos'd other Meaſures to his Electoral Highneſs; it was thought fit, that both Prince Eugene, and my Lord Duke of Marlborough, ſhould wait on his Electoral Highneſs, in order to obtain his Concurrence to the Reſolutions taken at the Hague. The Duke of Marlborough deſign'd, indeed, to have gone back to England; but Prince Eugene earneſtly intreated his Grace to meet him at Hanover: And the States-General having repreſented to the Queen of Great Britain, how neceſſary his Preſence was on that ſide, and how uncertain the Winds might make his Return, now the Seaſon was ſo far advanc'd; his Grace reſolv'd upon the Journey to the Court of Brunſwick. Hereupon Prince Eugene ſet out the 20th of April, N. S.; arriv'd the 22d at Duſſeldorp; ended his Buſineſs, the next Day, with the Elector Palatine; purſued his Journey to Hanover the 24th, and being (on the 26th) met Two Leagues from that Place by the Duke of Marlborough, their Highneſſes arriv'd there together the ſame Evening, and alighted at the Britiſh Envoy's. The Duke of Marlborough went firſt to Court, and was ſoon follow'd by Prince Eugene; and the reſpective Audiences of Ceremony, which they had of the Electoral Family, being over, they had, together, a long Conference with the Elector, who gave Orders for their Accommodation in his own Palace. They continued their Conferences (at which aſſiſted the Count de Rechteren, on the Part of the States-General) the 27th, 28th, and 29th, and met, at firſt, with ſome Difficulties; which the Duke of Marlborough and Prince Eugene very dextrouſly removed: And tho' his Electoral Highneſs was ſenſible, that by the Scheme agreed on at the Hague, for making vigorous Efforts in Flanders, the Army on the Upper Rhine was to be extreamly weaken'd, and himſelf therefore obliged to ſtand on the Defenſive; yet he, at laſt, condeſcended to part with ſeveral Regiments, and, ſatisfy'd with the Laurels he had formerly gain'd, ſacrific'd to the Common Cauſe the Glory he might have reap'd by acting offenſively. And here it is to be obſerv'd, That tho' it was agreed, that Prince Eugene ſhould come into the Netherlands; yet it was induſtriouſly given out, that he was to act with a ſeparate Body on the Moſelle; which obliged the Enemy to ſend a conſiderable Number of Forces that way, under the Command of the Duke of Berwick.

P. Eugene and the D. of Marlborough arrive together at Hanover, and confer with that Elector.

On the 29th of April, N. S. Prince Eugene ſet out for Leipſick, to confer with King Auguſtus, who was come thither on purpoſe, from Dreſden, Two Days before: And his Highneſs arriving there the Firſt of May, and having in a few Hours finiſh'd his Negotiations, purſued his Journey, the next Day, to Vienna. The Duke of Marlborough made no long Stay after Prince Eugene at Hanover; for his Grace ſet out from thence the 30th of April, and arriv'd the 3d of May at the Hague; where he communicated to the States-General the Reſult of the Conferences held at Hanover; and having concerted with their High Mightineſſes further Meaſures for the opening of the Campaign, he ſet out the 7th for Ghent; where having review'd the Britiſh Forces, he went to Bruſſels the 11th. His Grace having conferr'd with Velt-Mareſchal d' Auverquerque, (who, in an infirm State of Health, preſerv'd a vigorous Mind, and ſeem'd reſolv'd to die, like a Hero, in the Field) gave Orders to the Troops to march to Anderlecht, near Bruſſels; where, accordingly, the Dutch, Pruſſians, and Hanoverians, began to form the Army, the 23d of May, N. S. Three Days * after, they march'd to Billinghen; where the Duke of Marlborough took up his Quarters in the Abbey of that Name, and the Velt-Mareſchal fix'd his at Hall, a little Town that lay in the Front of the firſt Line. The Britiſh Forces that were deſign'd to make the Campaign, without any Loſs of Time, repair'd to this Camp; as did a conſiderable Body of Troops, in the Service of the States-General, drawn from their reſpective Gariſons in Flanders.

* May 26.

The Confederate Army form'd.

Upon Notice of theſe Motions, the Duke de Vendoſme aſſembled his Army the 25th, between Mons and St. Giſlain, and took up his Head-Quarters at St. Sepronien; poſting his Right at Naiſt, and his Left at Canchie-Nôtre-Dame, within Three Leagues of the Confederate Camp: And there he was join'd, the ſame Day, by the Duke of Burgundy, who had the Chief (at leaſt the Titular) Command of the French Army; the Duke of Berry, his Brother, and the pretended Prince of Wales, who (under the Romantick Name of the Chevalier de St. George) thought to retrieve the Diſgrace he had lately receiv'd on the Coaſt of North-Britain; but who made ſo inconſiderable a Figure among the Enemy, that they never took notice of him, in any of their publick Accounts of the ſeveral Actions that happen'd during this long and memorable Campaign. Upon a Suſpicion that the French might have a Deſign upon Louvain, the Confederate Generals march'd their Army to Terbank, near that City, and the Enemy advanc'd to Genap and Braine-la-leu.

As is alſo the Enemy's.

The Pretender amongſt them.

Tho' the French had ſtill in View the Recovering of the Places they had loſt after the Battel of Ramellies, in 1706, yet they judiciouſly expected to ſucceed in their Deſigns, rather by Stratagem and Surprize, than by open Force. Nor were their Hopes altogether groundleſs: For the Elector of Bavaria having been continued precarious Governor of the Catholick Provinces in the Netherlands, upon the Clandeſtine Practices of the Elector of Bavaria and Count de Bergheyck, on the Inhabitants of the Spaniſh Netherlands.

A. D. 1708.

French invading the whole Spaniſh Monarchy, had (by his clandeſtine Intrigues) preſerv'd, if not increas'd, the Intereſt he had formerly gain'd, among People of all Ranks, by his profuſe Way of Living and Popularity; ſo that Count de Bergheyck, a Perſon of great Credit, and no leſs Activity, with other Sticklers for the Houſe of Bourbon, eaſily found Means to practiſe upon the Levity and reſtleſs Spirits of the chief Inhabitants of the Cities of Ghent, Bruges, and Antwerp; who being impatient of the Dutch Government, promiſed to open their Gates to the Troops of the Two Crowns, as ſoon as a fair Opportunity ſhould offer: And 'tis not improbable, that ſeveral other Places had likewiſe entertain'd the ſame Thoughts.

The French and Confederate Armies had now continued a conſiderable Time in their reſpective Camps; the Allies waiting for Prince Eugene's taking the Field, with an Army that was to be compos'd of the Troops of Pruſſia and Heſſe, Ten Thouſand Palatines, and ſome Imperialiſts: But the Motion of this Body was retarded by ſeveral Difficulties, about the March of the Palatine Forces; of which the French having Intelligence, and concluding that the Confederates would hardly venture to force them in the Paſſes and Defilées they were poſſeſs'd of, commanded a Detachment to march towards Ghent and Bruges, in order to ſurprize thoſe Towns; which they did in this manner: On the 5th of July, N. S. a Party of the Enemy's Troops, commanded by the Brigadiers la Faille and Paſteur, advanc'd (before Break of Day) towards Ghent; and, at the opening of the Gates, Five or Six Soldiers, that were ſent before, (pretending to be Deſerters) were admitted into the Town, by the Watch of Burghers, whom they amuſed with Stories of the March of the French Army, and their own Deſertion. Immediately after, another ſmall Company of pretended Deſerters appear'd, and entertain'd the Watch with the like frivolous Relations; till Brigadier la Faille, who had ſome Time before been High-Bailiff of that City, and had ſtill a great Intereſt there, coming in Perſon, commanded the Burghers that guarded the Gates, to lay down their Arms, and admit the French Troops; which they did without any Reſiſtance. As ſoon as the Enemy were Maſters of the Town, they ſummon'd the Governor of the Caſtle to ſurrender; but Major de Labene, of Sir Richard Temple's Engliſh Regiment of Foot, who commanded in that Fortreſs, with about Three Hundred Men, expecting either to be reinforc'd by Major-General Murray, or relieved by the Approach of the Confederate Army, return'd an Anſwer, That he would defend himſelf to the laſt Extremity. Hereupon the French began their Preparations to attack the Caſtle: And Major-General Murray, who, with Two Engliſh Regiments of Foot, and one of Spaniſh Dragoons, was poſted at Marienkerk, having in vain attempted to throw a Reinforcement into the Place; Major de Labene, upon a Second Summons, held a Conſultation with the Officers under him; who having maturely conſider'd the Strength of the Enemy, the ſmall Number of the Gariſon, conſiſting (beſides Recruits) of weak, ſickly Men; a large old Breach, unrepair'd; the Moat being fordable, and the Cannon (in a manner) uſeleſs, for want of Neceſſaries thereto belonging, and by the Abſence of the Storekeeper and Gunners; the vaſt Number of Women and Children, amounting to upwards of Nine Hundred; and the Scarcity of Proviſions; thought it proper to accept a very honourable Capitulation, which was granted them, and which, however, was to be void, in Caſe the Commander of the Caſtle were relieved between the 6th and 8th of July: Rightly judging, That if they received no Relief in that Time, they could not reaſonably hope for any at all.

Ghent deliver'd up to the French, July 5. N. S.

Major de Labene, Commander of the Caſtle of Ghent, obtains an honourable Capitulation.

Some Hours after the Enemy had ſurprized Ghent, Count de la Motte appear'd with a ſtrong Detachment before Bruges; which ſurrender'd the next Day, without offering the leaſt Reſiſtance; and only, for Decency Sake, made a Sort of Capitulation: But the whole Air of that Tranſaction, ſhew'd, that the Articles were agreed upon long before, by other Perſons, than they that pretended to grant and accept them. Major-General Murray having found it impoſſible to reinforce the Caſtle of Ghent, retir'd to the Sas-van-Ghent; where he found Meſſieurs Tullecken, Quint, Steenberghem, and Nieveen, the Deputies of the States-General for the Affairs of Flanders; with whom he concerted Meaſures to put the Frontiers in a Poſture of Defence, and for ſecuring ſuch Poſts as were moſt expoſed.

Bruges ſurrender'd, July 6. N. S.

Two Days before the ſurprizing of Ghent, the Duke of Marlborough had Notice, at his Camp at Terbank, that the Enemy had laden their heavy Baggage; and receiving farther Intelligence, the 4th of July, about Noon, that a conſiderable Detachment was march'd towards Tubiſe; and, in the Night, that their whole Army had follow'd, at Nine in the Evening, his Grace gave, thereupon, Orders for the Confederate Troops to be immediately in a Readineſs to march; and, accordingly, about Three of the Clock the next Morning, the Army march'd from the Camp at Terbank;

Terbank; paſs'd the Canal, in Four Columns; and encamp'd, with the Left, at Anderlecht, and the Right at the Mill of Tomberg. Here the Duke hearing of the Enemy's Intelligence in Ghent, and that their Detachment was advanc'd as far as Aloſt, and had broke down the Bridge there, over the Dender, his Grace order'd Major-General Bothmer, with Four Regiments of Horſe and Dragoons, to march, and paſs over at Dendermond, to obſerve the Enemy, and prevent their Deſign upon Ghent; but the Major-General came too late. The ſame Day, the French paſs'd the Senne, at Hall, and Tubiſe, and were paſſing at the Mill of Goicke, 'till Night, within a League of the Right Wing of the Allies, which came very late into its Camp; and the Army having made a very long March, through difficult Ways, it was not thought practicable to attack the Enemy that Night. Early the next † Day, the Confederate Army was form'd in Order of Battel, the greateſt Part of the Horſe and Foot having been brought to the Right, in the Night, in order to engage the Enemy; but the French having, the whole Night, paſs'd the Dender, with all poſſible Expedition, through the Town of Ninove, and over ſeveral Bridges, the Detachment ſent to attack their Rear-Guard, came too late, and found nothing, beſides their ſmall Baggage, attended by a ſtrong Guard, which Major-General Schuylemberg, and Sir Richard Temple, with Ten Squadrons, and Five Battalions, ſoon defeated, and took a great deal of Baggage. That Night the Confederate Army encamp'd at Aſche, where Prince Eugene of Savoy arrived the ſame Evening, having made a ſwift March from the Moſelle, and left his Cavalry at Maeſtricht. His Highneſs's Arrival, not only revived the Spirits of the Soldiers, but was very grateful to the Generals themſelves, who were under no ſmall Concern, both for the Enemy's ſuprizing of Ghent, and for their ſtealing a March from the Confederate Army. The Duke of Marlborough happening, at this very Time, to be ill of a Fever, 'twas natural enough to aſcribe his Diſtemper to his Uneaſineſs; but whatever was the Cauſe of it, it is certain, that Prince Eugene's Preſence, and the Approach of his Troops, contributed not a little to his Recovery. From the Moment the Prince and the Duke met, they acted with ſuch a perfect Harmony, as if one Soul had inform'd Two Bodies; and, the next * Day, a Council of War being held, wherein the Prince propoſed the marching, with all poſſible Speed, to the Camp of Leſſines, as the moſt effectual Means to baffle the Enemy's farther Deſigns, that wholeſome Counſel was unanimouſly approved; and Eight Squadrons, with as many Battalions, were order'd ‖ to make the Ways, under the Direction of Major-General Cadogan, and the Quarter-Maſters. The ſame Day, Four Battalions march'd from the Confederate Army, to reinforce the Gariſon of Bruſſels, whither Prince Eugene went to pay a Viſit to his Mother, the Counteſs of Soiſſons.

The Governor of the Caſtle of Ghent's not delivering that Fortreſs 'till the 8th of July, had this good Effect, that it kept the Enemy Three or Four Days at a Bay, in their Camp, from above Aloſt, to Schilebille, on the Scheld, which Delay proved moſt fatal to them. For the French Generals having Notice, that Prince Eugene, with incredible Celerity, was bringing up a Reinforcement of above Thirty Thouſand Imperialiſts and Palatines from Germany, into Brabant; and that his Highneſs was already come to Bruſſels, they bethought themſelves of retiring towards their Lines, and ſtrong Towns, before the Conjunction of the Confederate Forces; hoping, that being reinforc'd with a good Body of Troops, which was coming up to them from Alſace, (though not with equal Speed with the Germans) under the Command of the Duke of Berwick, they might afterwards be able to cope with the Confederates, and at leaſt, preſerve their late eaſy Conqueſts. But the Duke of Marlborough, and Prince Eugene, prevented the Enemy's Deſign: And having, by a wonderful ſwift March, gain'd ∴ the Camp of Leſſines, and then, with continu'd Diligence, paſs'd the Dender, and the Scheld at Oudenard, came up with the Enemy's Army, near this laſt Place, which the French fondly thought either to have ſurprized, or reduced in their Retreat, before the Confederates could give them any Diſturbance.

The Confederates poſſeſs themſelves of the Camp of Leſſines.

∴ July 10. N. S.

'Twould have been an eaſy Matter for the French, either to have cut off the Detachment of the Allies, which had advanc'd, and laid Bridges over the Scheld, or, at leaſt, to have ruin'd thoſe Bridges, before the whole Confederate Army could come up; and if, even then, they had ſupported their Left at Heynem, poſted their Horſe behind the Caſtle of Beveren, towards the Mill of Oycke, and placed their Center to the Height, between Wertigem and Heurne, they would certainly have had all the Advantage of a moſt difficult Ground, and, perhaps, the Choice, whether to engage in a general Action, or not? But the Dukes of Burgundy and Vendoſme, having been at Variance for ſome Days paſt, differ'd ſtill in their Opinions, and were both ſtrangely puzzled what Meaſures to reſolve upon, and what Diſpoſitions to make, 'till about Three a Clock in the Afternoon, when moſt of the young young Commanders in the French Army, who to make their Court to the Duke of Burgundy, thwarted all that was ſuggeſted by the Duke of Vendoſme, declaring for an Engagement; Major-General Grimaldi was order'd, with the Horſe of the King's Houſhold, to begin the Attack, and diſlodge Major-General Rantzau from the Eminence on which he was poſted; but finding the Rivulet marſhy, they did not think fit to venture to paſs it, and ſo retired towards their own Right. Hereupon Major-General Cadogan, who, between Three and Four, had paſs'd the River, with Twelve Battalions, attack'd the Village of Heynem with ſuch Bravery, (Brigadier Sabine, with his Brigade, being at the Head) that they ſoon made themſelves Maſters of the Village, in which were Seven French Battalions, Three of which were taken intire, as was the greater Part of the other Four. Immediately after, Major-General Rantzau, with Eight Squadrons, and the Quarter-Maſters, paſs'd the Rivulet, and advancing into the Plain, where the French Horſe had been drawn up, between the Villages of Singhem and Mullem, charg'd their Rear-Guard with great Vigor, and drove them into the cloſe Ground, and the Highway. Here the Electoral Prince of Hanover, * who ſerved as Volunteer, gave diſtinguiſh'd Proofs of his youthful Valour and Briſkneſs, charging, Sword in Hand, at the Head of a Squadron of Bulau's Dragoons; his Highneſs's Horſe being ſhot under him, and Colonel Luſcky, that commanded the Squadron, kill'd, fighting bravely by him.

* Now Prince of Wales.

In the mean Time, the Confederate Troops continued paſſing the Bridges with great Diligence: The Pruſſian Horſe form'd themſelves upon the Right, in the Plain where the advanced Guard was poſted, and the reſt of the Horſe follow'd the Pruſſians through the Village of Heurne; but the Foot, by reaſon of the length of the March, arriv'd later at their Bridges; ſo that 'till Five a Clock, there were but Sixteen Battalions. Prince Eugene and the Duke of Marlborough, perceiving the great Need there was of Infantry, ſent Orders to the Battalions that had been employ'd in the Attack of the Village, to fling themſelves into the Hedges on the other Side of the Plain, towards which, the Enemy were marching with great Diligence. There were, on that Side of the Plain, only the Two Battalions of Major-General Collier's, and Brigadier Grumckau's, which were attack'd with great Fury, but maintain'd their Poſt with equal Bravery, 'till the Duke of Argyle came up with Twenty Battalions; which the French attack'd very briſkly, and drove ſome Pruſſian Foot from their Poſts: But, notwithſtanding the Inequality of Numbers, they retook the ſame again, Sword in Hand, about Six in the Evening. Count Lottum, by this Time, was marching up with the reſt of the Foot of the Right to ſuſtain this Attack; and the Duke of Marlborough finding that the great Effort was like to be made on the Right, ſent for Twenty Battalions from the Left Wing, which having paſs'd, their Horſe through Oudenard, and the Foot on Bridges below the Town, had form'd themſelves in Two Lines, with the Village of Moreghem behind them. The French Generals obſerving the Succeſs at the Engagements near the Villages of Heynem, Mullem, and Heurne, and being ſenſible that the Confederates would ſoon attack them on all Sides, found themſelves under a Neceſſity to make a Stand; for which Purpoſe they poſted their Foot very advantageouſly, before the Villages of Wanighen, Lede, and Huyſe, having in their Front ſeveral Defilées, fenc'd with Incloſures of Hedges, Ditches, or Thickets, and placed moſt of their Cavalry on their Right, near the Villages of Oycke and Wertegem. As ſoon as the Confederate Foot arriv'd, they form'd themſelves into Two Lines before the Horſe, and then attack'd in very good Order, the Incloſures and Villages in their Front, wherein the French were poſted; ſo that by Seven a Clock, the Fire grew univerſal, both on the Right and Left; and though in moſt Places the Enemy gave Way, yet being ſuſtain'd with freſh Troops, the Action was maintain'd very obſtinately a good while after. Before the Left of the Confederates Left Wing, there was a kind of an Opening, through which run a Road that led into the Plain, which the Prince of Orange-Naſſau clear'd, at the Head of the Dutch Foot, with great Vigor and Reſolution: And at the ſame Time, the Duke of Marlborough ſent Orders to Velt-Mareſchal d' Auverquerque, and the Count de Tilly, on the top of the Hill, near Oycke, to preſs the French as much as they could, on that Side. Accordingly, Monſieur d' Auverquerque order'd Major-General Weck to march, with the Brigades of Waſſenaer and Oudenburgh, which being ſupported by the Daniſh Cavalry, under the Command of Count de Tilly, they paſs'd through a narrow Defilée, into a Field, where all the French Houſhold were drawn up. At the Approach of the Confederate Troops, the French retir'd, and ſhelter'd themſelves under the Hedges, between Wertegem, and the Caſtel of Beveren, or Broan, towards the main Body of their Army, where the Fire was very hot. But the Prince of Orange-Naſſau, with Count Oxenſtiern, coming up with Four Brigades of Infantry, led them on with great Gallantry; attack'd the Enemy in Flank, and oblig'd them to give Way. Thoſe that were retiring, being forc'd back into the Incloſures, in great Diſorder; and it growing dark, many French Battalions, and more Squadrons, flung themſelves out in a deſperate Manner: Some of them piercing through others, were cut in Pieces; ſome paſs'd through unperceiv'd, and others ask'd to capitulate. While this happen'd on the Left, the Duke of Marlborough arriv'd there, having committed the Care of the Right to Prince Eugene, who had the Pleaſure and Satisfaction to lead on the Engliſh Troops, and to ſee them perform Wonders; ſo that, at laſt, the Enemy finding themſelves charg'd and born down on all Sides, by the Confederate Forces, retired in the utmoſt Confuſion, leaving many Priſoners behind them. Their Dragoons favour'd their Retreat, and to ſave the Troops of the Houſhold, receiv'd ſeveral Diſcharges of the Infantry of the Allies, and were moſt of them either ſlain, or taken. Night coming on, and the Fire being directed ſo many different Ways at once, that it was impoſſible to diſtinguiſh Friends from Foes, poſitive Orders were given to the Confederate Troops to give over firing, and rather to let the Enemy eſcape, than venture putting themſelves into Diſorder: Which put an End to the Slaughter, and ſaved the Remainder of the French Army: For had there been but Two Hours more of Day-Light, in all probability, their whole Body of Foot, and their Right Wing of Horſe, had been entirely cut off, being near ſurrounded on all Sides. During this memorable Action, the Duke of Marlborough, and Prince Eugene, gave their Orders with wonderful Compoſedneſs, and Clearneſs of Judgment, and expoſed their Perſons in the greateſt Dangers, when Neceſſity required it, though without receiving the leaſt Hurt. Nor did the young Electoral Prince of Hanover, (Great Britain's diſtant Hopes) come far ſhort of their Glory, charging, at the Head of his Father's Cavalry, the renown'd Troops of the French King's Houſhold, and bearing down all that oppos'd his noble Career; and next to him, Hiſtory muſt commemorate the juſt Praiſe of the young Prince of Orange-Naſſau, Stadtholder of Friezland, who diſtinguiſh'd himſelf, both by his Martial Ardour and Conduct. Monſieur d' Auverquerque, though worn out by the Fatigues of above Thirty Campaigns, and now in a languiſhing Condition, exerted his expiring Vigor, and was on Horſeback at the Head of the Troops, in the hotteſt of the Fire; Count de Tilly, the Prince of Wirtemberg, Lieutenants-General Rantzau, and Natzmer, Majors-General Webb and Cadogan, Brigadier Sabine, and, in ſhort, all the Generals and Officers animated the Soldiers every where, by their own Example. Though all the different Troops, of which the Confederate Army conſiſted, fought with unparallell'd Galantry, and with a generous Emulation of each other; yet it was obſerv'd, that the Pruſſian Gens d' Armes ſignaliz'd themſelves, in ſeveral vigorous Charges, wherein they loſt near half of their Number. Some French Writers gave out, That the Dukes of Burgundy and Berry, and the Pretender, had a great Share in this Battel; but if we may believe the Dutch Accounts, they only beheld the Engagement from a Steeple in an adjacent Village; and conſulted, betimes, their Safety, by their Retreat: And as for the other Generals in the Enemy's Army, whether for want of Unanimity, or Judgment, they committed ſeveral Faults, both before, and during the Action; but it muſt be acknowledg'd, that their Troops, in the general, fought better on this, than they had done on other Occaſions. The French endeavour'd, by their partial Relations, to leſſen their Defeat into a Drawn-Battel; but the Field where the ſame was fought, of which the Allies remain'd Maſters, with Six or Seven Hundred of the Enemy's Officers, and about Six Thouſand Private Soldiers that were made Priſoners, with Ten Kettle-Drums, and above One Hundred Colours and Standards taken, made the Victory indiſputable on the Side of the Two Heroes, who had already gain'd never-fading Laurels at Bleinheim. As for the Enemy's ſaving their Baggage, 'twas becauſe they had left the ſame behind, as well as their Artillery, having only made Uſe of Four or Five Pieces in all the Action. By the favour of the Night, they retir'd by the Road from Oudenard to Ghent, leaving only ſome Foot, and Twenty Five Squadrons, for their Rear-Guard; whilſt the Allies continued under Arms, expecting to renew the Engagement the next Morning. In order to that, as ſoon as it was Light, the Duke of Marlborough order'd Forty Squadrons from the Right, commanded by the Lieutenants-General Bulau, and Lumley, with a conſiderable Body of Foot, to attack the Enemy's Rear-Guard, which they did with great Vigor; but ſeveral Companies of French Grenadiers being advantageouſly poſted along the Highway, kill'd and wounded ſeveral of the Confederate Officers, and private Men, and obliged them to give over the Purſuit; there being but one Road, ſecur'd by Hedges and Ditches, lined with the Enemy's Grenadiers, and no Place for the Cavalry of the Allies to form in.

The Victory indiſputable on the Side of the Duke of Marlborough and Prince Eugene.

gathering the broken Remains of their Army, and intrenching themſelves behi the Canal, between Ghent and Bruges, the Duke of Marlborough, and Prince E having firſt caus the Enemies Lines in French Flanders to be levell'd, before Duke of Berwick could ſecure the ſame, reſolv'd to go upon an Enterprize of and at laſt agreed upon the Siege of Liſle, rightly judging they could not attac the Enemy in a more ſenſible Part; that great City being the Capital of a lar and rich Diſtrict; the Staple of all the Trade between France and the Netherland whoſe Merchants generally ſupply'd the Wants of the French King's Armies; an whoſe Cuſtoms were a conſiderable Part of his Revenue, Add to theſe, that (a the French King us'd to ſay himſelf) Liſle being the firſt and faireſt of all his Con queſts, and one of the principal Keys of France, on the Fortifications whereof, thei famous Ingineer, Monſieur de Vauban, had exerted his utmoſt Skill: The Glory which would redound to the Confederate Arms, from the Reduction of a Place every way ſo important, was no ſmall Incentive to the Undertaking. On the other hand, the French us'd all human Means for the Preſervation of that Town; for beſides the Preſence of the Mareſchal de Boufflers, Governor of all French Flan ders, and of the Lieutenants-General de Surville, Lee, and other Officers of Diſtinction, they threw into the Place Twenty One Battalions of the beſt Troops of France, Six Squadrons of Dragoons, One Hundred and Forty Horſe, and Seven or Eight Hundred Invalids, yet in a Condition to ſerve. But notwithſtanding the Difficulties that muſt naturally attend the Siege of ſo ſtrong, and ſo well provided a Place, beſides other, occaſion'd by the Confederates being cut off from their Magazines in Antwerp, and Sas-van-Ghent: All which made the Duke of Ven doſme ſay, He did not think ſo wiſe a Captain as Prince Eugene, would venture upon ſo raſh an Enterprize: Yet nothing was able to deter the Confederate Generals from their Reſolution. A great Convoy of Proviſions and Ammunition, and other war like Stores, being brought from Bruſſels to Menin, Liſle was inveſted on the 13th of Auguſt, N. S. on one Side by Prince Eugene, and on the other Side, by the Prince of Orange-Naſſau; and the Trenches were open'd the Night between the 22d and 23d of the ſame Month: The Duke of Marlborough lying encamp'd at a convenient Diſtance, to cover the Siege with the main Army.

The Siege of Liſle reſolv'd upon.

Liſle inveſted, Aug. 13. See the Plan.

The French Court, not a little ſurprized to ſee Liſle attack'd, ſent poſitive Order to the Dukes of Burgundy and Vendoſme, to raiſe the Siege at any Rate; and, at the ſame Time, the Duke of Berwick was order'd to drain the Gariſons of Namur, Mons, Charleroy, Valenciennes, and other Places, to reinforce thoſe Two Generals. It was not poſſible for the Duke of Marlborough to hinder this Conjunction, without leaving the Beſiegers too much expos'd; but however the Enemy got nothing by it: For, notwithſtanding the great Superiority of their Numbers, after one or two faint Advances, as if they deſign'd to attack the Duke of Marlborough, who, upon theſe Occaſions, was ſeaſonably reinforc'd by Prince Eugene; they never durſt venture upon the Attempt; but repaſs'd the Scheld, and intrench'd themſelves along that River, to cut off the Allies Communication with Bruſſels. Hereby they hoped to diſtreſs the Confederate Army to ſuch a degree, as to oblige Prince Eugene to give over his Enterprize, in which he had met with greater Difficulties than had been expected, both from the vigorous Defence of the Gariſon, the Miſunderſtanding between the Chief Ingineers, and the want of Ammunition, which had been ill huſbanded at the beginning of the Siege. But under a viſible Protection of Heaven, which favour'd the Confederates with an unuſual Continuance of fair Weather, the Valour, Vigilance, Activity, conſummate Skill, and Unanimity of the Generals, together with the Reſolution, Courage, Diligence, and indefatigable Labour of the Troops, did, at laſt, overcome all Difficulties.

Prince Eugene wounded, * Sept. 21. N. S.

The greateſt being occaſion'd by the want of Ammunition, and all the Paſſages between the Confederate Armies and Bruſſels, being obſtructed, the Duke of Marlborough, who upon Prince Eugene's having receiv'd * a Wound in the Head, ſuſtain'd, for ſome Days, the Weight of both Commands, wiſely bethought himſelf of ſending for the Britiſh Battalions, which, under the Command of General Erle, had been employ'd in alarming the Coaſt of France. Upon their Arrival at Oſtend, and taking Poſt at Oudenburgh and Leffinghem, a new Communication was open'd with the Army of the Allies, and a conſiderable Convoy of all Neceſſaries ſent thither with great Expedition. Aſtoniſh'd at this unexpected Reſource, the French endeavour'd to deprive the Allies of this Supply, for which Purpoſe Count de la Motte march'd from Ghent, in order to intercept it, with above Twenty Two Thouſand Men, and came up with Six Thouſand of the Confederate Troops, that were order'd to guard the Convoy in the Plain of Wynendale: But Major-General Webb, who commanded this ſmall Body, aſſiſted by Count Naſſau-Woudenburg, (one of Velt-Mareſchal d' Auverquerque's Sons) and Count Lottum, though vaſtly inferior rior in Numbers, made ſuch a bold Stand, poſted his Men ſo advantagiouſly, and ſuſtain'd the Enemy's repeated Attacks with ſuch Bravery, Firmneſs and Vigor, that Monſieur de la Motte, was, at laſt, oblig'd to retire with great Loſs. This gave the Convoy an Opportunity to arrive that Night at Rouſſelaer, the next Day at Menin, and ſo was brought ſafe to the Confederate Camp: But it is to be obſerv'd, that the London Gazette of the 20th, and 23d of September, O. S. having, from a wrong and partial Information tranſmitted by Mr. Cardonnel, the Duke of Marlborough's Secretary, given the Honour of that great Action, to Major-General Cadogan, his Grace's Favourite, who had no Share in it, without ſo much as mentioning Major-General Webb, to whom it was entirely due; the latter juſtly reſenting the Affront, left the Army in Diſguſt; came over into England, and gave the Queen a true Relation * of the Affair at Wynendale, which was alſo made Publick in the Gazette. And, indeed, as that critical Victory, which prevented the raiſing of the Siege of Liſle, was principally owing to General Webb's good Conduct, and other Military Abilities, ſo that eminent Service was afterwards deſervedly acknowledg'd, not only by the unanimous Thanks of the Commons of Great Britain, but alſo, in a diſtinguiſhing Manner, by the King of Pruſſia, who beſtow'd upon him the Order of GENEROSITY.

General Webb vindicates his Honour; and his eminent Service is acknowledg'd.

* See the Appendix. N°. V.

To return to Flanders: Enraged at Count de la Motte's ſhameful Defeat, the Duke of Vendoſme march'd in Perſon to Oudenburg, with the beſt Part of the French Army; and order'd the Dykes between Bruges and Newport, to be cut in ſeveral Places, in order to lay the Country under Water, and hinder the Communication between Oſtend, and the Duke of Marlborough's Army: But notwithſtanding the great Inundation, Major-General Cadogan, favour'd by the Britiſh Troops at Leſſinghem, found Means to carry through the Water conſiderable Quantities of Ammunition, and other Neceſſaries. Hereupon the Duke of Vendoſme bent his Efforts againſt the Village of Leſſinghem, which Seven or Eight Hundred Men, after ſeveral warm Repulſes, and Eight Days open Trenches, carried at laſt, through the Supineneſs of ſome Officers, and made the Gariſon Priſoners of War. This Succeſs proved no great Advantage to the Enemy; for Two Days † before, the Mareſchal de Boufflers capitulated for the Town of Liſle, (though by a bold and ſucceſsful Attempt, lately ſupply'd with Powder) and then retired into the Citadel. The Siege of that Fortreſs was begun the 29th of October, N. S. and carried on by Saps, not only out of a juſt Tenderneſs for the Lives of valiant Men, who had already gone through incredible Fatigues, and innumerable Dangers; and for want of ſufficient Stores of Ammunition; but alſo with a View to preſerve entire ſo excellent and perfect a Piece of regular Fortification.

Leſſinghem taken by the French.

The Town of Liſle ſurrendred.

† Oct. 23. N. S.

In the mean Time, the Enemy preſum'd to have taken ſuch infallible Meaſures for diſtreſſing the Allies, both by their Inundations between Bruges and Newport, and their Intrenchments along the Scheld, that their publick Miniſters in Rome and Venice, did not ſtick confidently to give out, That the Confederate Army was ſo coop'd up, that they would ſoon either be famiſh'd, or oblig'd to abandon the Siege of Liſle. But the Two Great Generals of the Allies being indefatigably intent upon their proper Buſineſs; the Duke of Marlborough in providing Corn out of the Country of Artois, and the Diſtricts of Furnes and Dixmuyde; and Prince Eugene, in huſbanding what was ſent him by the Duke of Marlborough; both Armies liv'd in parſimonious Plenty; and the Siege of the Citadel was carried on with all the Vigor which was conſiſtent with the cautious Method of Sapping. Hereupon the Enemy open'd a new Scene: Their Parties made Incurſions into the Diſtrict of Boiſleduc, burning and ravaging Part of the open Country; which recall'd to the Remembrance of the Dutch, the great Loſs they ſuſtain'd Three Months before, by the Irruption of the French into Cadſant; and the Elector of Bavaria approaching Bruſſels at the ſame Time, with a Body of about Fifteen Thouſand Men, reminded them of the Loſs of Ghent and Bruges by Intelligence; which it was reaſonable to imagine, the Elector could not want, in a Place where he had formerly reſided, and undoubtedly ſecur'd a great Party, at leaſt among the Fair Sex, who, in all Governments, have a ſhare in the ſecret Turns of State. Nor were the Hollanders without Apprehenſions, leſt the Elector of Bavaria's clandeſtine Projects, might ſucceed as well in Antwerp, as in Bruſſels, to the infinite Prejudice of the Affairs of the Allies, not only in the Spaniſh Netherlands, but likewiſe in Italy and Spain.

No ſooner had the Elector of Bavaria made a Shew of attacking Bruſſels, than the Duke of Marlborough concerted Meaſures with Prince Eugene to paſs the Scheld; and, at the ſame Time, diſpatch'd Orders for ſeveral Britiſh and Dutch Regiments, to be tranſported from Oſtend to Antwerp; and ſent a Meſſage to Monſieur Paſcal, the Governor of Bruſſels, to aſſure him, that he would certainly come to his Relief:

The Elector of Bavaria attacks Bruſſels.

Upon

A. D. 1708.

Upon which Encouragement, the States Deputies reſolved to ſtay in Bruſſels; and, by the vigorous Meaſures they took, both with the Council of State, and the Governor, were very inſtrumental in the Preſervation of that important Place. Nor were the States-General leſs ſollicitous for Antwerp, whither they diſpatch'd ſome of their own Members, with General Freiſheim, an experienc'd Officer; and order'd Troops to haſten thither from Naerden, Hetſden, Grave, and other Places. On the 22d of November, N. S. the Elector of Bavaria inveſted Bruſſels, and, the next Day, ſent a Summons to General Paſcal; who anſwer'd it like a Man of Honour, and made the neceſſary Diſpoſitions for a reſolute Defence, in Concert with Major-General Murray, Baron Wrangel, the States Deputies, and the Council of State. On the 26th, in the Morning, the Enemy began to fire from their Batteries againſt the City and Out-Works, and (about Nine in the Evening) made ſeveral Attacks, which continued with great Obſtinacy and Slaughter on both ſides, till Ten a Clock the next Morning, when the Enemy, daunted by the ſtout Reſiſtance and ſuperior Bravery of the Confederate Troops, (who were animated by the Preſence and Example of their Generals) retreated on all ſides in great Confuſion. However, it had not been poſſible for Monſieur Paſcal to defend himſelf much longer, with a Gariſon ſcarce Five Thouſand Men ſtrong, in a Place ſo large, and unfortify'd; and therefore the Preſervation of it was, under GOD, principally owing to the Duke of Marlborough and Prince Eugene, who, with incredible Expedition and Secrecy, paſs'd the Scheld the 27th of November, in the Morning, with very little Oppoſition: The French, in a pannick Fear and Diſtraction, abandoning thoſe Lines and Intrenchments, which they had been caſting up for Three Months before. Upon Intelligence of their Flight, and of the Confederate Army's paſſing the Scheld, the Elector of Bavaria march'd off from before Bruſſels, with the utmoſt Precipitation and Confuſion, leaving all his Artillery and wounded Men behind him. And the Deliverance of that important City, was ſoon after attended with the Reduction of the Citadel of Liſle: For Mareſchal Bouffiers being inform'd, that the Communication between thoſe Two Cities was free and open, thought fit (to prevent his being taken Priſoner of War, with his Gariſon) to ſurrender that Fortreſs the 9th of December, N. S. upon honourable Terms, before the Allies had fir'd one Cannon againſt it.

The D. of Bavaria repuls'd in ſeveral Attacks.

He retires from Bruſſels.

Citadel of Liſle ſurrenders, Dec. 9.

The French Generals, deeply mortify'd to ſee all their Counſels and Attempts miſerably baffled, either thro' Deſpondence, or fondly believing that the Confederates would have been contented with the important Conqueſt of Liſle, ſeparated their Army, and return'd to Paris: But the Duke of Marlborough and Prince Eugene having reſolv'd not to end their Campaign before the Recovery of Ghent, inveſted it the 20th of December, N. S. and open'd the Trenches the 24th. As ſoon as the Batteries were ready to fire, Monſieur de la Motte demanded an honourable Capitulation; which was granted him; and, purſuant to which, one Gate of the City, and another of the Caſtle, were deliver'd to the Troops of the Allies, on the 31ſt of December, N. S. And Two Days after, Count de la Motte march'd out with his Gariſon, conſiſting of above Thirty Battalions, and Nineteen Squadrons. The Reduction of Ghent (the laſt great Effort of this glorious and critical Year) was attended with the Enemy's abandoning Bruges, Plaſſendael, and Leffinghem; ſo that, to uſe the Expreſſions of both Houſes of the Britiſh Parliament, in their Addreſs to the Queen; The unuſual Length of the Campaign, the Variety of Events, and the Difficulty and Importance of the Actions, gave many Opportunities to her Majeſty's General, the Duke of Marlborough, to ſhew his conſummate Ability, and all the great Qualities neceſſary for ſo high a Truſt; whereby, in Conjunction with the Renowned Prince Eugene of Savoy, ſuch conſiderable Progreſs was made, and her Majeſty's Conqueſts ſo far advanc'd, that there was Reaſon to hope, the Enemy, in ſpite of all their Preſumption, would ſoon find themſelves under an abſolute Neceſſity of ſubmitting to a ſafe and honourable Peace.

Ghent inveſted;

And ſurrender'd to the Allies.

Part of the Addreſs of both Houſes to the Queen.

Theſe Hopes will appear to have been the better grounded, if we take but a curſory View of the Advantages gain'd in the other Parts of the Confederate War. The Duke of Savoy, whoſe Country lies moſt convenient to annoy France, gave her this Year very ſenſible Blows: For tho' the bad Weather could not ſuffer him to take the Field till the Month of July, yet the Lateneſs of the Campaign was ſoon made up by the Rapidity of his Royal Highneſs's Conqueſts; which the Vigilance and Activity of the Mareſchal de Villars (whom the French uſed to call their Fortunate General) could neither foreſee, nor prevent. His Royal Highneſs, the better to cover his Deſign, had firſt (with great Labour and Fatigue) bent his March towards Savoy, over Mount Cenis, as if he had intended to penetrate into Dauphiné, through Fort des Barreaux; but having, by this Feint, drawn the Enemy's Forces on that ſide, his Royal Highneſs turn'd ſhort, towards Sezane and Culx;

Campaign on the ſide of Savoy.

A. D. 1708.

Oulx; prevented the Mareſchal de Villars's quick March; and took ſuch right Meaſures, that from the 12th to the 31ſt of Auguſt, N. S. he compaſs'd his true Deſign; which was, to make himſelf Maſter of the important Fortreſs of Exilles, Fort La Perouſe, and the Valley of St. Martin and Feneſtrelles: By which Conqueſts, he ſecur'd his own Dominions againſt France, and gain'd a free Entrance into the Enemy's Country; the French having built a ſtrong Citadel at Feneſtrelles, after the blowing up of the Fortifications of Pignerol, in order to cover that Frontier.

Beſides theſe Advantages, it may be obſerv'd, that the Duke of Savoy made a Diverſion in Favour of King Charles the Third; obliging the Enemy to ſend a great Detachment from Rouſſillon, to the Mareſchal de Villars's Support and Aſſiſtance.

Affairs in Spain.

This leads us now to the Affairs of Spain; where the Two United Crowns had Three Bodies of Troops; one in Rouſſillon, another in Eſtremadura, and the moſt conſiderable in Catalonia. But tho' King Charles did not receive Succours from Italy, either in Time, or ſtrong enough to enable him to face the Enemy every where, yet the Conſequences were not ſo bad as had been apprehended. The Prince of D'Armſtadt, (who trod in the glorious Footſteps of his Brother) with a ſmall Body of Regular Troops and Militia, hinder'd the Duke de Noailles from undertaking any Thing of Moment on the ſide of Gironne; and that Duke's Army being afterwards weaken'd, by a great Detachment for Provence, he was obliged to ſit ſtill.

Campaign in Portugal.

The ſmall Portugueze Army, reinforc'd by ſome Britiſh Battalions, fac'd the Body commanded by the Marquis de Bay, who did not think fit to hazard an Engagement; ſo that the Portugueze, without any Diſturbance, put Moura and Serpa (which the Enemy had before abandon'd) into a Poſture of Defence, and made a ſucceſsful Irruption into Andaluſia. The Duke of Orleans, who commanded the Enemy's main Body, had the Mortification to ſee his Operations in Catalonia retarded, by the taking and diſperſing a great Number of Tartanes, (laden with Proviſions, and Cloathing for his Army) which fell in among the Confederate Fleet, commanded by Sir John Leake, and Admiral Waſſenaer; ſo that all he was able to do, before King Charles received Reinforcements from Italy, was, to lay Siege to Tortoſa; which made a more vigorous Defence, than might have been expected from its unfiniſh'd Fortifications, and, at laſt, ſurrender'd upon an honourable * Capitulation; which, however, was but ill obſerved by the Enemy. After this Conqueſt, the Duke of Orleans deſign'd to have taken Winter-Quarters on this ſide the Segra, but was prevented by General Starembergh; who, ſome Months after that Prince had left the Army, went near, to retake Tortoſa by Surprize. On the other hand, the Chevalier d'Hasfeldt made himſelf Maſter of Denia, and of the Town of Alicant: But all theſe Loſſes were abundantly made up to the Allies, by the Reduction of the fertile Iſland and Kingdom of Sardinia, and of the famous Port-Mahon, and whole Iſland of Minorca; which happen'd in this manner: Sir John Leake having taken on Board the Fleet, at Barcelona, a few Troops commanded by the Marquis of Alconzel, (better known by his former Title of Conde de Cifuentes) arrived before Cagliari, the Capital of Sardinia, the 12th of Auguſt, and immediately ſummon'd the Marquis of Jamaica, the Viceroy, to ſubmit to King Charles the Third. The Marquis inſiſted, at firſt, upon extravagant Terms; but, on the throwing of a few Bombs into the City, the Inhabitants reſolved to compel him to ſurrender, with his Gariſon, at Diſcretion: Whereupon, both He, and the Magiſtrates, accepted ſuch Articles as the Admiral was pleaſed to grant. The greateſt Part of the Spaniſh Gariſon readily liſted themſelves in King Charles's Service: Beſides which, near Two Thouſand Horſes were found there, ready to be tranſported to Spain, for remounting the Enemy's Cavalry; Part of which were diſpoſed of to the diſmounted Dragoons, who were employ'd in this Expedition. The Marquis d'Alconzel, who was conſtituted Viceroy and Captain-General of that Kingdom, having held an Aſſembly of the Deputies of the ſeveral States, they gave Aſſurances of their Affection and Fidelity to King Charles the Third, and (for a Proof) offer'd to furniſh Thirty Thouſand Sacks of Corn, for his Majeſty's Service.

The Conqueſt of the Iſland of Minorca, which follow'd ſoon after, was entirely owing to Major-General † Stanhope; ſince he was the firſt Projector, and had the principal Share in the Execution of the Deſign. Having propoſed it to Sir John Leake, and finding him backward to engage in it; Mr. Stanhope prevail'd upon King Charles to exert his Power, and to command Three Ships of War to whatever Service the Britiſh General ſhould think proper; with which the Admiral readily comply'd. Port Mahon and the Iſland of Minorca reduc'd by General Stanhope, Sept. 30. N. S.

Barcelona, with about Two Thouſand Six Hundred Men on Board, (One Thouſand Two Hundred of whom were Britiſh, including the Marines, Six Hundred Portugueze, and the reſt Spaniards) having join'd Sir John Leake, who was cruizing off of Port Mahon; Major-General Stanhope landed, the ſame Day, with Part of the Forces, and the next, the reſt of the Troops were ſet on Shore. Hereupon, all the Inhabitants declar'd for King Charles: But the Enemy had Three Places in their Hands; viz. Ciudadella, to the Weſtward of the Iſland, and the Capital of it; Fort Fornells, to the Northward; and Three ſtrong Forts, defending the Entrance into Port Mahon. The Two moſt conſiderable of theſe, are on the Weſt Side of the Mouth of the Harbour; Fort Charles, cloſe to the Sea-ſide; and Fort Philip, above it, a little more into the Harbour; being a Square, with Four Baſtions, Three Ravelins, and a large and very deep Ditch. Theſe Two Forts were cover'd by a ſtrong Line, reaching from Sea to Sea, made by dry Stones, near Nine Foot high; and Four Towers or Redoubts, within Gun-ſhot of one another, each having Four Guns upon it; and the Gariſon conſiſted of a Thouſand Men. The 17th, Sir John Leake, with the Dutch, ſail'd for England; and left Sir Edward Whitaker, Rear-Admiral of the Red, with his Squadron, before Port Mahon: Having order'd Cruizers all round the Iſland, to cut off any Supplies from France or Spain; and Captain Butler, in the Dunkirk, and Captain Fairborne, in the Centurion, to go and batter Fort Fornells, that the Tranſports might ſafely ride into the Harbour of that Name. Accordingly, the 20th, they anchor'd before it; and, after a long Reſiſtance, obliged the Gariſon, conſiſting of about Fifty Men, to ſurrender Priſoners of War. The 22d, at the Sight of a Detachment from the Army, Ciudadella ſurrender'd; the French being made Priſoners of War, the Spaniards to continue at Diſcretion.

All this while, Preparations were making for the Attack of the Forts at Port Mahon; and tho' the Allies found great Difficulties in landing and tranſporting their heavy Artillery and Stores, through a Country very rocky, in which there are but few Beaſts of Burthen; yet, with continual Labour, they did, in Twelve Days, bring up all their Artillery, conſiſting of Forty two Pieces of Cannon, and Fifteen Mortars. On the 28th, at Break of Day, they mounted Nine Pieces of Cannon in Battery, againſt the Two Middlemoſt Towers, which ſupported the Line; and, within few Hours, beat them down, and made ſome Breaches in the Line it ſelf, which General Stanhope deſign'd to have attack'd the next Day: But Brigadier Wade, being poſted on the Right with Two Battalions, at ſome Diſtance from the Major-General; ſome of his Grenadiers, without Orders, advanc'd to the Line, and got into it; whereupon the Brigadier march'd, with what Men he could immediately get together, to ſupport them. As ſoon as the Fire was heard, the Major-General himſelf took the ordinary Guard of the Battery, and advanc'd to that Part of the Line which was next to him. The Enemy were in ſo great a Conſternation at this ſudden Approach of the Allies, that they abandon'd the Two other Towers, which could not otherwiſe have been taken without Cannon. Notwithſtanding the briſk Fire from the Three Forts, both with great Shot and Bombs, the Loſs of the Confederates did not amount to above Forty kill'd or wounded; and in the actual taking of the Line, none was kill'd, but Captain Stanhope, of the Milford Galley, (the Major-General's Brother) a young Gentleman of great Hopes. The Beſiegers lodg'd themſelves, the ſame Evening, at the Foot of the Glacis of the main Caſtle; and traced their main Battery, to play upon it: But, the next * Morning, the Enemy beat a Parley; and the Capitulation being agreed to, and ſign'd at Five a Clock in the Afternoon, on the 30th of September, N. S. in the Morning, the Britiſh General took Poſſeſſion of one Gate, and of all the Outworks. The Beſiegers found in the Caſtles and Forts, about a Hundred Pieces of Cannon, Three Thouſand Barrels of Powder, and all Things neceſſary for a good Defence: And, in order to ſecure this important Conqueſt to the Crown of Great Britain, General Stanhope appointed Brigadier Petit (a ſkilful Ingineer in the Queen's Service, and a French Refugee) Governor of the Iſland, in the Name of King Charles; who confirm'd him in that Poſt, in Conſideration of his eminent Services, both in this Expedition, and at the Taking and Defence of Barcelona.

Capt. Stanhope kill'd.

The French in Port Mahon ſtopt, as Reprizals for the Gariſon of Xativa.

According to the Capitulation, the Gariſon (conſiſting of about a Thouſand Men) was to be tranſported, in the Ships of the Allies; the French, into their own Country, and the Spaniards into Spain; which was punctually perform'd with reſpect to the latter: But General Stanhope detain'd the French, having (as he acquainted the Chevalier d' Hafeldt, by Letter) received the ſtricteſt Orders from the QUEEN, his Miſtreſs, to uſe Reprizals (the firſt Opportunity he had) for the Gariſon of Xativa; which, by the Capitulation, ſhould have been reſtor'd to the Allies:

Allies: And therefore, General Stanhope demanded, that the Engliſh and Dutch, who made up that Gariſon, ſhould be ſent back to him in Catalonia, armed and cloathed: Which was, in ſome Meaſure, comply'd with. As by the Reduction of Sardinia, King Charles was ſeaſonably ſupply'd with vaſt Quantities of Corn, and great Numbers of Horſes; ſo by the taking of Port Mahon, the Maritime Powers, and Great Britain in Particular, gain'd a moſt ſafe and ſpacious Harbour for their Fleets in the Mediterranean. Theſe Conqueſts (a) brought a further Advantage to the Allies, by defeating the French King's Project, of uniting the Princes and States of Italy, in a League againſt the Emperor, in order to rekindle War in that Country: And the Confederate Fleet was ſeaſonably at Hand, to aſſiſt the Imperialiſts, who made a conſiderable Progreſs in the Eccleſiaſtical State, and threatned to march to Rome, in order to force the partial and refractory Pope, to acknowledge King Charles, and give Satisfaction to the Emperor.

Advantages of the Conqueſts of Sardinia and Minorca.

As for the Campaign on the Rhine, it was, as uſual, very inconſiderable; both Parties having remain'd on the Defenſive: For though upon the Elector of Bavaria's Arrival in Alſace, to take upon him the Command of the Enemy's Army, it was thought he had ſome great Project in View, towards the retrieving his broken Fortune; yet being oblig'd to make a ſtrong Detachment to reinforce the French Army in the Low-Countries, as Prince Eugene did the Confederates, with the Imperialiſts, Palatines, and Heſſians, he was not in a Condition to undertake any Thing: And the Elector of Hanover, (though with very indifferent Troops, ill paid, and ill provided) baffled his Deſign of penetrating into Germany; and hindred him from ſending further Reinforcements to the Dukes of Burgundy and Vendoſme. We may add to the Enemy's Loſſes, the Galleons which were either taken, or deſtroy'd in the Weſt-Indies, by Commodore Wager; and among the other remarkable Occurrences of the Year 1708, we may take notice, That the Muſcovites gain'd ſeveral Advantages over the Swedes; the Elector Palatine was reſtor'd to the Poſſeſſion of the Upper Palatinate, with the Title and Rank that had been veſted in the Houſe of Bavaria, by the Treaty of Munſter; the Elector of Brunſwick Lunenburgh, was, at laſt, acknowledg'd as ſuch by the Electoral College: The Duke of Savoy receiv'd the Inveſtiture of the Mantuan, Montferrat, and other adjacent Countries: And the Ban of the Empire was, on the 30th of June, N. S. publiſh'd againſt the Duke of Mantua, which probably haſten'd his Death, which happen'd Five Days after. The Remarkable Events in the Year 1708.

(a) A Letter from the Earl of Sunderland, to Major-General Stanhope, upon the Reduction of Minorca.

SIR, Whitehall, October 20. 1708.

I Received on Monday, the Favour of yours, of the 30th of September, N. S. by Captain Moyſer, with the welcome News of your having taken Port-Mahon; which, though it came at the ſame Time as the News of the taking of Liſle, yet was not at all leſſen'd by it: Every body looking upon our being in Poſſeſſion of Port-Mahon, as of the laſt Conſequence to the carrying on the War in Spain; beſides the other Advantages which, if we are wiſe, we may reap from it, both in War and Peace. I cannot expreſs to you, the Senſe the Queen, and every body here, has of your Zeal and Conduct in this Affair; to which this very important Succeſs is ſo much owing. I heartily condole with you, for the Loſs of your Brother, which indeed is a publick Loſs to us all, he was ſo deſerving a young Man. As ſoon as we heard of your being gone upon this Expedition, Orders were ſent to Sir George Byng, as ſoon as he ſhould come to Lisbon, to carry with him into the Mediterranean, a ſufficient quantity of Stores for a Squadron to Winter there; and upon the good News Captain Moyſer has brought, thoſe Orders are renewed: So that you may depend upon that being effectually provided for. I don't ſay any Thing to you of what you mention, in relation to the Troops from Naples, becauſe you will receive by Mr. Craggs, the Queen's Approbation of what you have done, in relation to it. I ſend you incloſed, a Letter of the Queen's to the Counteſs de Oropeſa, writ with her own Hand. You will receive Directions from my Lord Treaſurer, to give her, at the ſame Time, from the Queen, the Thouſand Pounds you have ſo often mentioned. I muſt not omit telling you, that the Queen does entirely approve of your leaving an Engliſh Gariſon in Port-Mahon, for the Reaſons you mention, though ſome of them muſt be kept very ſecret. Her Majeſty does approve alſo of the Governor you have named, and is very well ſatisfied with your having the Commiſſion you mention from the King of Spain; being ſatisfied you make no Uſe of it, but what is for the publick Service. I have nothing more to trouble you with, but to aſſure you that I am, with the greateſt Truth and Eſteem,

SIR,

Your moſt Faithful, Humble Servant,

SUNDERLAND.

P. S. Beſides the Orders that are gone to Sir George Byng, Captain Moyſer carries with him Orders from the Prince to Sir Edward Whitaker, in relation to the Squadron's wintering at Port-Mahon: You will receive with this Pacquet, a Letter of the Queen's to the King of Spain, in Favour of the Conde de Salazar, at the Deſire and Recommendation of ſeveral Spaniſh and Canary Merchants.

Mediation

A. D. 1708.

Mediation of Great Britain did not a little contribute towards the pacifying of the inteſtine Diviſions of the City of Hamburgh; but, though at the Deſire of the King of Sweden, the Queen had readily accepted the Guaranty of the Treaty of Alt-Ranſtadt, yet the Reformed in Sileſia, receiv'd no Benefit from her Majeſty's earneſt Interpoſition in their Favour; the Court of Vienna, now freed from the Dread of the King of Sweden's Reſentment, pretending, that the Lutherans only, and not the Calviniſts, were included, both in that Treaty, and in that of Weſtphalia.

The Queen's Interpoſition in Favour of the Reformed in Sileſia, unſucceſsful.

Differences between the Emperor and the Pope.

The Court of Vienna ſhew'd more Condeſcenſion to the Deſires of the Britiſh Nation, in another Inſtance. The Emperor, and his Brother, King Charles, had, for ſeveral Years, impatiently born the Pope's Partiality, which was of great Prejudice to their Affairs, and, in Conſequence, to the Common Cauſe: But his Holineſs having openly own'd his Engagements with the Houſe of Bourbon, and his Deſigns againſt that of Auſtria, and the whole Confederacy, by his Proceeding, in Relation to the Pretender's Expedition to Scotland, which, if attended with any Succeſs, would have ruin'd the Grand Alliance, and given a fatal Blow to the Liberties of Europe: The ſame did not only moſt ſenſibly affect thoſe Two Potentates, and the Duke of Savoy, againſt whoſe juſt Pretenſions in Eccleſiaſtical Affairs, the Pope had fulminated his Cenſures; but was reſented, with due Indignation, by her Britannick Majeſty. Hereupon the Eccleſiaſtical Revenues in the Kingdom of Naples, and Dutchy of Milan, belonging to Perſons reſiding out of thoſe Countries, who had neglected to take the Oaths to King Charles, were put under Sequeſtration by the Imperial Officers. And not many Days after *, while the Pope held a Congregation about that Affair, Cardinal Grimani not only notify'd to him the Diſappointment of the Pretender's Expedition; but as Viceroy of Naples, and a Grandee of Spain, ſignify'd to the old Father, That King Charles expected he ſhould ſend a Nuncio to Barcelona, to acknowledge him as King of Spain; deſiring his Holineſs to conſider the fatal Conſequences of his delaying that Recognition, and continuing to own his Competitor. Moreover, at the Sollicitations of the Court of Great Britain, the Emperor was determin'd, in Concert with the Duke of Savoy, to revive his old Pretenſions to Comacchio, and other Places in the Ferrareze, in order to check the Petulancy of the Roman Pontiff, and oblige him to enter into ſuch Meaſures, with reſpect to the Rights, and late Acquiſitions of King Charles, as Equity, and the Peace and Welfare of Naples and the Milaneze, with the firm Eſtabliſhment of their preſent Sovereign, did neceſſarily require. The politick Court of Rome, perceiving from what Corner this ill Wind blew, endeavour'd to conjure the gathering Storm, by cauſing their Miniſter at Vienna, to communicate to the Emperor a Letter from Signior Piazza, Secretary of the Memorials to the Pope, wherein he endeavour'd to extenuate what his Holineſs was tax'd with, on Occaſion of the late French Expedition againſt Great Britain: But whatever Arts they uſed to cover their Remittances of Money into France, they could not palliate the Pope's appointing publick Prayers, for the Succeſs of the intended Invaſion. On the other Hand, the Pope's Refuſal to ſend, according to King Charles's Demand, a Legate à Latere, to compliment his Royal Conſort, in her Paſſage through Italy, and to treat her as Queen of Spain, having given a freſh Diſguſt to the Courts of Vienna, and Barcelona, the Imperial Troops, commanded by Monſieur de Bonneval, in Conjunction with thoſe of the Duke of Modena, invaded the Dutchy of Ferrara, and took Poſſeſſion of Comacchio, (a Sea-Port Town on the Adriatick Sea) Lugo, Argenta, Canale, Preſnaro, Magnavacca, Codegoro, Pompoſa, Bagnacavallo, and ſome other ſmall Places, on Pretence of their being allodial States, belonging to the Duke of Modena, and Fiefs of the Empire, to which the Holy See had no lawful Claim, and which were expreſly excepted in the Treaty between Clement the Eighth, and Cæſar of Eſte. At the ſame Time, the Viceroy of Naples did forbid, on Pain of Death, or Baniſhment, the remitting any Money to Rome, or any other Part of the Territories of the Church; and the Council of that Kingdom drew up a long Memorial of the Pretenſions of his Catholick Majeſty againſt the Court of Rome, which ſtruck at the very Foundation of the Temporal Power of the Pope. Upon the firſt Alarm of the Imperialiſts marching into the Ferrareſe, the Pope wrote a Letter to the Emperor, wherein he remonſtrated, "That theſe Things were attempted by "an Abuſe of his Imperial Majeſty's Name, againſt all Juſtice, Equity, the Reve- "rence and Reſpect due to the Roman Pontiff, and the Rights of the Church; that "they were contrary to the Divine and Human Laws, and repugnant to the Title "of Defender of the Church, which his famous Anceſtors had taken as a great "Honour and Glory." The Pope declared withal, "That he would aſſert this "Cauſe, though he ſhould be ſure to loſe his Life upon that Account: But before his Letter reach'd Vienna, General Bonneval had put his Orders in Execution; and, when received, it rather exaſperated than allay'd the Reſentment of the Emperor, who who thereby plainly ſaw, that the Pope was ſo far from offering any Satisfaction, that, on the contrary, he threatned him both with his Spiritual and Temporal Arms. And, indeed, the miſled and obſtinate Pope, truſting more to the latter, than to the former, of which the Holy See had often experienced the Impotence, reſolv'd to repel Force by Force; and for that Purpoſe, began to raiſe an Army, of which he committed the Command to Count Marſigli, who was formerly diſmiſs'd the Emperor's Service, for not performing his Duty at the Siege of Briſac. At the ſame Time, the Pope's Miniſters reviv'd the Project they had ſet on Foot Three Years before, of a League of the Princes and States of Italy, for their mutual Security, which, (as was hinted before) was defeated by the Terror of the Confederate Fleet. Nor had his Holineſs's earneſt Application to the French King for Succours, better Succeſs; that Prince having, at this Juncture, both too much Work upon his Hands; and his Country lying, beſides, at too great a Diſtance from the Eccleſiaſtical State. Notwithſtanding theſe Diſappointments, the Court of Rome went on with their new Levies, which were increas'd by the Troops ſent for from Avignon; but though the Pope's Subjects drew the firſt Blood in the Ferrareze, and forc'd the Germans to quit ſeveral Poſts, yet the Emperor chuſing rather the way of Negotiation, than of the Sword, ſent Orders to the Marquis de Prié, a Piedmonteze Lord, to purſue his Journey to Rome, to know from the Pope himſelf, whether he would have Peace or War? In the mean Time, his Imperial Majeſty, and the Duke of Savoy, by their Interceſſion with the Queen of Great Britain, ſuſpended the Execution of the Orders ſent to Sir John Leake, of Bombarding and Deſtroying Civita-Vecchia.

The Pope raiſes an Army.

The Marquis de Prié ſent to Rome.

The Pope's Coffers being exhauſted, his Holineſs held a Conſiſtory, * at which aſſiſted Forty Two Cardinals, whom he acquainted, "That he was obliged to have "Recourſe to extraordinary Means; and therefore thought, that part of the Three "Millions of Golden Crowns, depoſited by Sixtus the Fifth, in the Caſtle of St. "Angelo, ought to be employ'd in theſe preſſing Neceſſities of the Church." His Propoſal appeared extraordinary to ſome Cardinals, who repreſented, That this Treaſure was Sacred, and never to be made Uſe of, but when all other Means fail'd. That the preſent Caſe of the Church, was, indeed, difficult enough, yet far from being deſperate, ſeeing they had to deal with the firſt Chriſtian Prince, who could not have in View the Deſtruction of the Church; that this Diſpute might be made up in a friendly Way, and not decided by the Sword: And therefore, they exhorted the Holy Father, ſeriouſly to conſider the fatal Conſequences of a raſh Rupture with the Emperor; and to ſtand on his Guard againſt the Suggeſtions of ſome fiery Perſons, who were altogether for War, in hopes to better their Fortunes, during the Confuſion of it. But this judicious Repreſentation, had little Effect upon the Holy Father, who was too partial to hearken to any Advice that was not for the Intereſt of France; and moſt of the Cardinals there preſent, being of the French and Spaniſh Factions, they reſolv'd to take out of the Treaſury of the Caſtle of St. Angelo, Five Hundred Thouſand Golden Crowns, upon a ſolemn Promiſe made by the Pope, That the like Sum ſhould be again depoſited in the ſame Place, as ſoon as the War was over. The Pontiff was ſo puffed up with the Facility he had met with in this nice and important Debate, that he declar'd, he would not hearken to any Propoſals made on the Part of the Emperor, nor receive any Envoy or Miniſter from him, 'till the Imperial Forces were withdrawn from Comacchio, and other Parts of the Eccleſiaſtical State: Which raſh Reſolution, was probably ſuggeſted to him by the Mareſchal de Teſſé, who was lately † come to Rome, with the Character of the French King's Ambaſſador Extraordinary. But the old Father ſoon changed his Opinion; and the Abbot of Caunitz was ſurprized, when he was informed, on the Part of his Holineſs, that he was ready to receive the Marquis de Prié, and hear what he had to propoſe. This ſudden Alteration of Meaſures, was aſcrib'd to the Repreſentations of the Cardinals Acciajoli, Mareſcotti, and ſome others; but many thought, with more probability, that the News of the taking of Port-Mahone, and the reducing of the whole Iſland of Minorca, was the only Conſideration which inſpired the Pope with moderate Sentiments. However, many Days paſs'd, after the Marquis's Arrival at Rome, before the Pope would admit him to his Audience, upon a Punctilio about the Ceremonial; becauſe he had no other Character, than of Plenipotentiary of the Emperor, which, 'twas pretended, was not admitted at the Papal Court. This Difficulty being, at laſt, removed, by the Pope's ſignifying to the Marquis, that he would receive him with the ſame Ceremonies, as were obſerv'd at the Audience of Count Martinitz, when he went through Rome, for Naples, to take Poſſeſſion of the Dignity of Viceroy of that Kingdom, that Miniſter went to his Audience the 10th of November, N. S. and a few Days after, deliver'd his Propoſals for an Accommodation, importing in Subſtance, 1. "That the Pope ſhould diſ-"band his new Levies: 2. To back theſe Demands, General Thaun being come up from Piedmont, with a ſtrong Body of Imperialiſts, oblig'd the City of Bologna to give him Paſſage, and furniſh him with Proviſions; block'd up Ferrara; extended his Forces into the Romagna, and the Dutchy of Urbino; and would have march'd directly to Rome, had not the Pope amuſed the Marquis de Prié, with the Draught of a Treaty, whereby he promiſed to give full Satisfaction to the Emperor, and acknowledge King Charles. The Marquis de Theſſé, who, all this while was, or feign'd himſelf indiſpos'd, endeavour'd, in Conjunction with the other Miniſters and Emiſſaries of France, to obſtruct the Progreſs of that Negotiation; but neither his comminatory, nor his ſoothing Letters, had any Effect: The Pope, being fix'd in his Reſolution to prevent the Storm that threaten'd Rome, began to reduce his Troops; appointed Signior Piazza to go his Nuncio to Vienna, to endeavour to adjuſt ſome Articles, about which the Marquis de Prié had no Inſtructions: And, at laſt, a Treaty of Accommodation was concluded, * between the Imperial and Papal Courts.

* Jan. 15. 1709, N. S.

Among the many ſignal Services which the Britiſh Nation perform'd for the Houſe of Auſtria, we may here take Notice, that, together with a Reinforcement of Two Thouſand Two Hundred Horſe, and Three Thouſand Six Hundred Foot, Sir John Leake convoy'd, this Summer, King Charles's Royal Conſort to Catalonia. That Princeſs, Daughter to the Duke of Wolfembuttle, and who was born a Proteſtant, having, at the Inſtigation of ſome Relations, (and by the private Connivance of Dr. Fabricius, a Profeſſor in the Univerſity of Helmſtad,) been perſuaded to change her Religion for a Crown, the Marriage Ceremonies were ſolemnized † near Vienna, the Emperor ſtanding Proxy for the Catholick King, his Brother; as he did, ſome Months after ‖, for the King of Portugal, who married the Arch-Dutcheſs Mary-Anne of Auſtria, his Imperial Majeſty's Second Siſter. Two Days after the Eſpouſals, King Charles's Bride, ſet out for Italy, with a numerous Retinue; and upon her Arrival at Dezenzano, was complimented by the Duke of Modena, and the Prince of Tuſcany. The cautious Republick of Venice, having appointed the Proveditor-General Delphino, to receive and entertain her as Queen of Spain, in their Territories, he diſcharg'd that Office with a great deal of Gallantry and Magnificence: And when ſhe came to Breſcia, ſhe was complimented by the Duke of Parma, Prince Gaſton de Medicis, Prince Ercolani, the Imperial Ambaſſador at Venice, and other Perſons of Diſtinction. On the 1ſt of June, ſhe arrived incognito at Milan, where, on the 11th, ſhe made her publick Entry, and then receiv'd the Compliments of the neighbouring Princes and States, particularly from the Duke of Savoy: But the Republick of Genoa's Envoy was not admitted to her Audience, becauſe his Maſters were ſo over-awed by France, that they durſt not give the Title ſhe expected, of Catholick Majeſty. On the 28th of June, N. S. Sir John Leake waited on that Princeſs, who receiv'd him with all imaginable Marks of Eſteem; and, upon his preſſing Inſtances, ſhe ſet out the 5th of July, for San Pietro d' Arena, where, on the 13th, ſhe embark'd on board the Albemarle, and, on the 25th, arrived ſafe at Mataro, not far from Barcelona, to the great Joy of King Charles, who could boaſt of having the faireſt Bride of any Prince in Chriſtendom.

The Queen of Spain's Journey to Italy.

She embarks for, and arrives in Catalonia.

As Admiral Leake had the Honour to convoy the Queen of Spain ſafe to her Royal Conſort; ſo Admiral Byng had the ſame Advantage, in relation to the Queen of Portugal; who, after a tedious ſtay in Holland, for a fair Wind, embark'd, towards the End of September, O. S. on board the Britiſh Squadron, which was ſent into the Maeſe, for her Tranſportation to Portſmouth, under the Command of Rear-Admiral Baker. Upon her Arrival at Spithead, on the 24th of September, her Portugueze Majeſty went on Board the Royal-Anne, where Sir George Byng receiv'd her, with the Diſcharge of the Cannon; her Majeſty being, at the ſame Time, ſaluted from the Town of Portſmouth. The next Day, her Majeſty landing there, Colonel Godfrey, whom the Queen of Great Britain had ſent to the Hague, to compliment her Portugueze Majeſty, and take Care of her Accommodation, during her Voyage, provided the beſt Lodgings for her Majeſty, and her numerous Retinue, which the Place could afford; and gave her a Royal Entertainment. Upon her Majeſty's coming aſhore, ſhe was attended by the Imperial and Portugueze Envoys, who had, for ſome Days, waited her Arrival: And the ſame Day, ∴ the Duke of Grafton, and the Lord Delaware, Groom of the Stole to the Prince of Denmark, went from Windſor to Portſmouth, to compliment her Portugueze Majeſty, the firſt in her Britannick Majeſty's Name, the other on the Part of his Royal Highneſs: Which Compliments her Portugueze Majeſty return'd Four Days after,  by Don Louis d' Acuna, the Portugueze Envoy. On the 6th of October, the Queen of Portugal went on board the Royal Anne: The next Morning, the Fleet, commanded by Admiral Byng, ſail'd from Spithead; and being favour'd by the Winds, came to an Anchor the 25th of that Month, N. S. at Caſcais; and on the 27th went up the River of Liſbon. The King of Portugal, with ſeveral ſtately Barges, went on Board the Royal Anne, to welcome the Queen; and returning from thence, their Majeſties landed at the Bridge of the Palace, under a Magnificent Triumphal Arch; from whence they proceeded through a vaſt Crowd of People to the Royal Chapel, where they received the Nuptial Benediction, and heard Te Deum ſung. Sir George Byng having receiv'd a handſom Preſent from the Court of Portugal, ſailed, ſome Weeks after, from the River of Liſbon, to go and take upon him the Command of the Confederate Fleet in the Mediterranean.
